poisoned her felf. But he followed their to the sword 5 but before Egefta he lost a pononce her and firing a Gate of the heels apace; and firing a Gate of heels apace; and ming of the Citizens. In the mean while Himileo arrives; City by night, entred from enough to take Citizens. In the mean while Himileo arrives; Cary of making a speedy riddance of but, ere he took land, he lost in a fight at revenge, by maning a present shown, from For he foared none of his known, them. For he foared none of his known, them. For he pattern and nor of his suspected enemies. After five thousand Souldiers, besides many ships no nor or ms angelest and fine that, he grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that, he grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. This notwith tanding, he recoverable that the grew to doubtful of his life, as he of burden. tnat, ne grewith Barber to trim him, nor red again Motya upon his first descent. From never durit trans and the same as his brother, thence marching towards Mefana, he took any penon, no his chamber, unftript and Lipara, and (foon after) Messaga, ne took to enter into his chamber, unftript and to ence the was the greatest Robber razed it to the ground. Now began Dionysof the people that ever reigned in any w greatly to doubt his eftate. He therefore or the people that state, and withal the most unrespectively fortified all the places he could, in the Territory of the Leontines, by which he suppo-After this, he separated with fortification sed that Himileo would pass toward syrathat part of the City, called the Island, from cufe; and he himself took the field again, the rest; like as the Spaniard did the Cita- with four and thirty thousand foot; and del of Antwerp: therein he lodged his Trea- one thousand horse. Now, hearing that Himileo had divided his Army into two parts, He then began to make war upon the marching with the one half over-land, and rebelled against him; so, as with great difficulty he recovered his Citadel: from Carthaginians; twenty thousand of his men whence, having allured the old Souldiers of were flain, and an hundred of his Gallies mastery over the Syracustans. And when a dred sail of ships, and two hundred Gallies: multitude of them were bussed in gathering (for, so many did Syracuse arm in this war) in their harvest, he disarmed all the Towns- and more strange it is, that in a battail at men remaining, and new strengthened the Sea, without any great Artillery, or Mus-Fort of the Island, with a double wall. He ket-shot, twenty thousand should be slain inclosed that part also, called Epipoles; which, in one fight. In all our fights against the with threescore thousand labourers, he fini- Turks, of which that at Lepanto was the fhed within three weeks, being two leagues | most notable, we hear of no such numin compass. He then built two hundred new | ber lost; nor in any other fight by Sea, Gallies; and repaired one hundred and ten that ever happened in our age, nor before of the old; forged one hundred and forty us. When Charles the fift went to befrege thouland Targets, with as many fwords, and Algier, he had in all his fleet, transporhead-pieces, with fourteen thousand cor- ters and others, but two hundred and fifflets, and all other futable arms. Which done, ty fail of thips, and threefcore and five he sent word to the Carthaginians (greatly Gallies: for the furnishing of which fleet, infeebled by the plague) That except they he fought help from all the Cities and would abandon the Greek Towns, which Ports of Spain, Naples, and the rest of Itathey held in Sicil, he would make war upon 19. But in old times it was the manner to them : and, not ftaying for answer, he took | carry into the field, upon extremity, as mathe spoil of all the Phanician ships, and ny as were needfull, of all that could bear merchandize, within his Ports; as King arms, giving them little wages, or other Philip the second did of our English, be- allowance: in our dayes it is not so; neither fore the war in our late Queens time. He indeed, it is often requifite. Upon this overthrow, Dionysius posts away to Syracuse, to fand foot, and three thousand horse, and strengthen it: Hamileo follows him, and besends his brother Leptines to sea, with siegeth the Town by Land and Sea. But the two hundred Gallies, and five hundred Tyrant, having received aid from the Lacethips of burden. Most of the Towns demonians under the conduct of Pharacidas, which held for Carthage yielded unto puts himself to Sea, to make provision for his him; faving Panormus, Segesta or Egesta, Citizens, who, in his absence, take twenty Ancyra, Motya, and Entella. Of these, the first of the Carthaginian. Gallies, and fink four. ill, having also at the present weapons in from Carthage to Mago, but these take eggs their hands, they confult how to recover for their money, and make peace with Dintheir liberty. And this they had done, had nysus, leaving the Sicilians in Tauromenot Pharicidas the Lacedamonian refifted nium, to shift for themselves: whom them. It also fell out to his exceeding advantage, that the plague was fo increased, and gave their City to his mercenary Souland fo violent among the Carthaginians, as diers. it is faid, that above an hundred thousand of them died thereof. He therefore, with the victories there, brought the Rhegians on power that he could gather together, fets up. their knees, forced them to pay him one on them both by Sea and Land; and having hundred and fourfcore thouland crowns, to flain great numbers of them, forceth Himileo furnish him with threefcore Gallies, and put to delire peace. This peace Dionysus fold him in an hundred pledges, for assurance of their for a great fumm of money; on condition, future observance of covenants. This he that he should steal away with his Carthagi- did, not with any purpose to performunto mians only: which he basely accepted, betraying the rest of the Africans and Spani- bought; but that having taken from them ards. Yet no faith was kept with him: for their Galleys, he might befiege them, and he was purfued, and left many of his Cartha- ruine them utterly, with the more ease. ginians behind him. The rest of the Afri- Now to the end he might not, without some cans fell under the fwords of their enemies; colour, falfifie the faith that he had given only the Spaniards, after they had a while to them; he pretended to want vidual for bravely defended themselves, were (after his Army, at such time as he seemed ready their submission) entertained, and served to depart out of Italy, and sent to them to the Conquerour.

ing having I noted in other places, and can to syracuse. hardly forbear to deliver unto memory the like practices, when they meet with their furnish him, he would then make their refumatches: That which hapned unto Monfieur fal the cause of his quarrel: if they yieldde Piles, was very futable to this treachery, ed to aid him with the proportion which he wherewith Dionyfus purfued Himilco. I was defired, that then they should not beable, present when De Piles related the injury for want of food, to endure a siegeany long done unto him. He had rendred S. John d'An- time against him. For, to ruine them he had gelie to the French King Charles IX. who be- fully determined, at what price soever. And fieged him therein. He rendred it, upon pro- great reason he had to take revenge of mile made by the faith of a King, that he them, if he had done it fairly, and withshould be suffered to depart in safety, with our breach of faith. For when in the beginall his followers. Yet in presence of the ning of his reign, he defired them to bellow King himself, of the Duke of Anjou his Bro- a daughter of some of their Nobility upon ther, General of his Army, of the Queen him for a wife; they answered, that they Mother, and of divers Dukes and Marshals had not any one fit for him, save the Hangof France, he was fet upon and broken in mans daughter. Princes do rather pardonill his March; spoiled of all that he had, and deeds, than villanous words. Alexander forced to fave his life by flight; leaving the the great forgave many sharp swords, but most of his Souldiers dead upon the place; never any sharp tongues; no, though they the Kings hand and faith warranting him told him but truly of his errors. And to march away with enfigns displaid and certainly, it belongs to those that have withall his goods and provisions, no whit warrant from God, to reprehend Prinavailing him. It needs not therefore feem | ces; and to none else, especially inpubstrange, that an Heathen Tyrant should thus lick. break his faith, fince Kings, profeffing Chriflianity, are bold to do the like, or command had his heart more inflamed against the their Captains to do it for them.

Dionysius after this great victory, took care to re-edifie Meffena. Mago, who stayed Amiens, than for his confpiracy with thesty in Sicil, to hold up the Carthaginians there niard or Savoyan: for he had pardoned in, is again beaten by Dionysius; who is alfo beaten by the Tauromenians. A new fup- their swords against him. The contemp sperous, and that of the Tyrant exceeding ply of fourscore thousand Souldiers is sent

He then past into Italy, obtained divers furnish him therewith, promising to return Many fuch examples of perfidious deal- them the like quantity at his coming home

His resolution was that if they resuled to

It is faid, that Henry the fourth of France, Duke of Biron, for his over-bold and biring taunts, that he used against him before tuous words that Sir John Parret used of our faid) had two Wives; Doris of Locis, and tuous words that on John were his ruine; and Ariftomache a Syracufian, the fifter of Dion, late Queen Elizabeth, were his ruine; and Ariftomache a Syracufian, the fifter of Dion, not the counterfeit letter of the Romifb which Brother-in-law of his he greatly en-Priest produced against him. So fared it riched. with some other, greater than he, that foon after.

on all fides, which he continued to do fines; the younger, called Areta, he befrowed on an index, till he won it by force. on his Brother Theorides: after whose death He used his victory without mercy, spe- Dion took her to wife, being his Neece. cially against Phyton, who had commanded within it.

thaginians, after the taking and razing of to sensuality, prevailed so much with Plato, this City; and those with variable fuccess. whose Disciple he had been, as he drew him For, as in one encounter he flue Mago, with into Sicil, to instruct the young King. And ten thouland Africans: fo the fon of Mago having perswaded the King to entertain beat him, and flew his brother Leptines, with him, he wrought fo well with him, as Diofourteen thousand of his Souldiers. After nysus began to change condition; to change which he bought his peace of the Carthagi- Tyranny into Monarchy; and to hold the and Adversity, as all Kings and States do.

World will love her own.

he remitted unto his Citizens divers pay- their State. ments, by his Father imposed upon them. Which done, and thereby hoping that he offer which he made, to ferve the King with had fastned unto himself the peoples affe- so great a preparation, at his own charge, ctions; he cast off the sheeps skin, and put begot him many enemics. For they that on that of the wolf. For being jealous of had ferved the King for none other end than his ownBrethren, as men of more vertuethan to raile and enrich themselves, and had alhimself, he caused them all to be slain; and all ready been raised & enriched, thought themthe kindred that they had by their Mothers felves bound to make the same offer that Di-

By Doris he had this Dionysius, who fucwith joine cone; gand a worse fortune, ceeded unto him: and by Aristomache he had To be flort, he made them know new elder, called Sophrofine, he gave in marriage bread from old. He affaulted their Town to his eldeft fon, and her half-brother Diony-

This Dion a just and valiant man, finding that Dionysius had abandoned all exercise of Some other wars he made with the Car- vertue, and that he was wholly given over nians, as they had formerly done of him; Principality that he had, rather by the love following therein the advice of Prosperity of his People, and his National Laws, than by the violence of his Guards and Garri-When he had reigned eight and thirty lons. But this goodness of his lasted not years, he died: some say in his bed, peace- long. For Philitus the Historian, and other ably, which is the most likely, though others his Parasites, that hated Dions severity, report it otherwise. Alcruel man he was, and wrought him out of the Tyrants favour, a faithless; a great Poet, but a foolish one. and caused him soon after to be banished He entertained Plato a while, but afterward, out of Sicil, to the great grief of the for speaking against his tyranny, he gave or- whole Nation. For whereas Dion had made der to have him flain, or fold for a flave. For offer to the King, either to compound the he could endure no man that flattered him quarrels between him and the Carthagininot beyond measure. His Parasites therefore ans, of whom Dionysius stood in great fear; filled his cruelty, The hate of evil men; and or (at least) if they refused it, to furnish his lawless flaughters, The ornaments and ef- | him with fifty Gallies at his own charge, dufetts of his justice. True it is, that flatterers | ring the war against them : his enemies are a kind of vermine, which poylon all the found means, by finisfer interpretation, to Princes of the World; and yet they prosper | convert his good will into matter of Treabetter than the worthiest and valiantest men on. They told Dionysus, that all the great do: and I wonder not at it, for it is a world: commendations, given of Plato, had tendand as our Saviour Christ hath told us, The ed to none other end, than to soften his mind, and to make him neglect his own af-To this Dionysius his son of the same name fairs, by the study of Philosophy; whilest fucceeded, and inherited both his King- Dion in the mean time having furnished domand his Vices. To win the love of the fifty Gallies under colour of the Kings fer-People, he pardoned, and released out of vice, had it in his own power either to deprison, a great number of persons, by his liver to the Syracustans their former liberty, Father lockt up and condemned. Withall, or to make himself Lord and Soveraign of

It is likely, that the honest and liberal side. For Dionysius his Father (as hath been on had made, if the King had had the grace to conceive it aright. But the covetous and to death by torment. But Dion, for the ignorant cowards, that had neither the recovery of his Countries liberty, had the knowledge, nor the daring that Dion had, fame reward that all worthy men have had were bold to file his Love and Liberality, from popular Estates. He was disgraced Pride and Prefumption; and heartned the affaulted, and forced to abandonthe City. young King in his oppressing, and eating up He retired himself to the Leontines, who rehis own people, of whose spoils they themfelves shared no small portion. I have heard departure from Syracuse, new troops enter it. That when Charls the fifth had the rethe Castle: they sally out, assail, spoil, and pulse at Algier, in Africa, Ferdinando Cortese, burn a great part of the City. Dion is sent one of the bravelt men that ever spain for, with humble request: yet, ere he could brought forth, offered unto the Emperour, arrive, Dionysius his Souldiers were retired; to continue the fiege at his own charge. But and the Towns-men thinking themselves sehe had never good day after it. For they cure, thut the gates against Dion. But the that envied his victories, and his conquest next night they of the Castle sally out again. of Mexico in the West-Indies, perswaded the with greater fury than ever they kill Man. Emperour, that Cortese fought to value Woman, and Child, and set fire in all parts himself above him; and to have it said, that of the Town. In this their extremity Dion what the Emperour could not, Cortese had comes the second time to their succour; the effected, and was therefore more worthy of love of his Country furmounting all the inthe Empire, than he that had it.

Fffff.2

rant was contented at first to fend him the of his Army; and quencheth the fire every revenues of his Lands, and permit him to where kindled, with the other part. Incondispose of his moveables at his own pleasure: clusion, after he had conquered both the not without giving hope to recall him in fire and the fword, that had well near burnt thort time. Had he continued in this good to ashes, and depopulated Syracuse, he recomood, like enough it is, that Dion would vered the Castle, with the munition and have been well pleased to live well, as he did, surniture thereof, and sent Apollocrates after at Athens. But after some time, Dionysius made Port-sale of this Noble-mans goods, and thereby urged him to take another course, even to feek the restitution of his end to his dayes. For he was soon after his Country to liberty. The vertues of Dion, victory, murdered by Gylippus; who after especially his great Liberality, had purchased he had with ill success, a while governed much Love in Greece. This Love made him fuspected and hated of the Tyrant: but it with which he had murdered Dion. ftood him in good ftead, when he fought to raise men, with whose help he might return | sus, with the affistance of his friends in Haly, into Sicil. Yet he got not above eight hun- recovers his estate; and returns to Syracuse, dred (for he carried the matter closely) to driving Nyseus thence, whom he found Gofollow him in his adventure. But many of vernour therein. The better fort of the them were men of quality, and fit to be Citizens, fearing more than ever, his cruelty, Leaders. Neither did he doubt of finding fice to Icetes, a Syracusian born, and then ruin Syracuse, as many as should be needful, ling the Leontines. Icetes enters into confethat would readily affift him. Therefore deracy with the Carthaginians, hoping by he landed boldly in sicil, marched to syra- their affiltance, not only to prevail against cuse, entred the City without resistance, Dionysius; but by the hatred of the syracuarmed the multitude, and won all, fave the fians towards Dionystus, to make him also quickly had advertisement of this danger- Corinthians for succour. Icetes also sends ous accident. Wherefore he returned ha- thither, and dissipated the Corinthians, as stily to Syracuse: whence, after many vain well as he can, from intermedling in the butreaties of Peace, and fome forcible attempts fines. He tells them, by his Messengers, to recover the Town, he was fain to depart; That he had entred into league with the leaving yet a Castle to the Custody of Apol- | Carthaginians, who were so strong by Sea, locrates his eldest Son. Yet ere he went, his that it was not in the power of Corinth, to Minion Philiftus, coming with a strength of land an Army in Sicil. But the Corinthians, men to affift him, was beaten, taken, and put being by this treason of Icetes, more inraged juries that he had received. He fets upon When Dion was newly banished, the Ty- the Garrison of the Castle, with the one part Dionylius his Father into Italy. But their malice, of whom he had best deserved, and whom he had loved most, gave an untimely syracuse, was flain with the same Dagger,

Ten years after the death of Dion, Diony-Lord of their City. The Syracusians, being Dionysius was then absent in Italy, but he descrivedly afflicted on all sides, send to the fieged him.

him, if he would not be perswaded. Time- Acradina, which he fortified. leon, finding himself over-mastered, makes Corinth.

ceived by Andromachus the Governour. other parts of the Island. From thence he marched toward Adranum, where furprifing Icetes his Army, he flew a Amilear, Carthaginians, arrive about Lilybapart thereof, and put the rest to run. It is the | um, with threescore and ten thousand Soulnature of victory to beget friends. The diers, transported (with all their provisions) Adranitans joyned with him, and so did Ma- in a thousand ships of burden, and two hunmercus, the Tyrant of Catana. Dionysius also dred Gallies. Timoleon marcheth thither, fent to Timoleon, offering to furrender the and chargeth this great Army upon the Castle of syracuse into his hands, as thinking it better to yield up himself, and the pla-

than diffwaded, fent Timoleon with nineteen | ply of two thousand foot, and two hundred than universely stratufe from tyranny. In horse, which are stayed in Haly by soul weathe mean while, Lettes had entred Syracyfe, ther. Lettes is strengthened with threescore and with the help of the Carthaginians, dri- thouland Africans, brought unto him by Maand with the Caftle, where he be- go (all which he lodgeth within Syracuse) and with an hundred and fifty Gallies, to keep Iceter, being himself a Tyrant in Leontium, the Port. This was the first time that ever rather fought how to enlarge his power, than the Carthaginians had dominion within the how to deliver his Country. Therefore, walls of that City, With this great Army hearing that Timoleon was arrived at Rhe- Icetes affaileth the Castle Timoleon sends gium, he fent to perswade him, to return his them victuals, and succour, in small boats, his Fleet; for that all things were (in effect) by night, from Catana. Mago and Icetes do established in Sicil. The Carthaginian Gal- therefore resolve to besiege Catana; but lies were also in the same Port of Rhegium, they were no sooner on their way towards whose Captains advised Timoleon to get him it, with part of their forces, than Leon, Capgone in peace. They had far more Gallies tain of the Corinthians, fallied out of the there than he had, and were like to compel Castle, and took that part of Syracuse, called

In the mean while, the two thousand corequest to the Carthaginian Captains, that rinthians arrive: with whom, and two they would be pleased to enter into Rhegi- thousand other Souldiers, Timoleon marchum, and there, in an open assembly of the ed towarp Syracuse. Mago abandoneth Icetes people, to deliver unto him those arguments | being frighted out of Sicil (which he might for his return, which they had used to him easily have conquered) with an idle rumour. in private; that he might, by publick testi- of treason. This made him return to Carthage; mony, discharge himself to the Senate of where the general exclamation against his cowardize, did so much affright him, that The Carthaginians, perswading themselves, for fear of further punishment he hanged that a victory obtained by a few fair words, himself. Timoleon enters the City, and beats was without loss, and far more easie, than down the Castle (which he called The Nest that of many blows, and wounds, yielded to of Tyrants) to the ground. But he found the Timoleons defire. But while the Orations City, when the strangers were fled, in effect were delivering, Timoleon, favoured by the defolate; fo as their horses did feed on the Rhegians, stole out of the prease; and ha- grass growing in the Market-place. Thereving set fail, before the Gates were opened | fore he writes to Corinth for people to reto the Carthaginians, he recovered the Port | inhabit it. Ten thousand are sent out of of Tauromenium, where he was joyfully re- Greece, many come from Italy; others from

> But a new frorm arifeth. Afdrubal and paffage of a River.

A tempest of rain, hail, and lightning, with ces which he could not defend, unto the co. boysterous winds, beating upon the faces rinthians, than either to Icetes, whom he of the Carthaginians, they are utterly brodistained, or to the Carthaginians, whom he ken, ten thousand slain, five thousand taken, hated. Now Timoleon, who, within fifty with all their carriages and provisions: dayes after his arrival, had recovered the among which there were found a thousand Castle of Spracuse, and sent Dionysius to Corloss guilt and graven. After this, Timorinh, to live there a private man, was still leon gave an overthrow to Icetes, and followinvaded by the Armies, and molested by the ling his victory, took him, with his Son Eupopractices of Icetes. For he belieged the lemus, and the General of his horse, priso-Corinthians within the Castle of syracuse, ners; whom he caused all to be slain: and and attempted (but in vain) the murder of afterwards (which was imputed to him for great cruelty) he suffered Icetes his wives The Corinthians fend unto Timoleon a fup- and daughters to be put to death. But this

785

(after the marter of Dions wife, and a young child of felf by promife and oath to remain a friend his, with Ariffomache his Sifter, to be cast and servant to the State of Carthage, for

mercus fied to Hippon Tyrant of Messena: but Timoleon, purfuing him, won the Town; delivering Hippon to his Citizens, who tormented him to death. The same end had Mamereus, and all other the Tyrants in Sicil.

Finally, he made peace with the Carthapasthe River of Lyeus. After this, he lived Senators, kills all his enemies and oppoin great honour among the spracuffans, till fites; divides the spoil of the rich among his death; and was folemnly buried by them the poor; and gives liberty to his Souldier, in the Market place of their City: the day to rob, to ravilh, and to murder, for two of his Funerals being for ever ordained to whole dayes and nights, without controle be kept holy among them.

brought reace to the whole Illand; the In- fes, befides those that had broken their habitants injoyed their liberty in peace, necks over the walls 5 their fury had no furabout twenty years. The Cities and Temples ther subject to work on. were repaired; the Trade renewed; the Merchant failed in fafety; and the Labouring man enjoyed the fruits of the earth in quiet. But it was impossible that a Nation which neither knew how to govern, nor how to obey; which could neither endure Kings, nor men worthy to be Kings, to govern them; should any long time subsist.

Twenty years after the death of Timoleon. there started up one Agathocles among them, a man of base birth, and of baser condition: governed, from the sirst institution, with so who from a Beggar, to a common Souldier; great glory and prosperity. This he did to from a Souldier to a Captain; and so from have the Crown clapt on his head (as it degree to degree, rifing to be a Prætor : fi | were) perforce. For, as he knew that he had nally, became Lord and Soveraign of the left none living, within the City, fit or able to Syracusans. Many fortunes he ran, and exercise the office of a Magistrate: so knew under-went as many dangers, ere he obtain- he right well, that all they which had affiled the principality. For he had more than ed in the murder and spoil of their fellowonce attempted it, and was therein both Citizens, had no other hope of defence, than beaten and banisht. A passing valiant man the support of a lawless Lord, who had been he was, and did notable fervice, as well for partaker with them in their villanies and those by whom he was employed, as also cruelties committed. So as this rable, his for the Syracuftans, and against them. For Oration ended, proclaimed him King: again in their Wars against those of Enna, and and again saluting and adoring him, by that the Campanes, he did them memorable fer- name, as if it had been given to him by some vice: and on the contrary, as memorable lawful election. Hence had our King Richard fervice for the Murgantines against the syracustans. For being entertained by the people was of base, the other of Kingly Parents; of Murgantia, and made General of their the one took liberty from a Common-weal, forces, he fackt Leontium; and belieged syrathe other fought only to succeed in a Monarcufe fo straightly, that the Citizens were chy; the one continued his cruelty to the driven to crave aid, even from their ancient end, the other, after he had obtained the and natural enemies, the Carthaginians. Amil- Crown, fought, by making good Laws, to car was fent by the Carthaginians to relieve recover the love of his people. Syracuse. With him Agathocles wrought so The life of this Tyrant is briefly written was the revenge of God upon Icetes, who well that he got him to make peace between (after the murder of Dion) had caused himself and the Syracuscans; binding himself an He again prevailed against Mamercus Ty-ness, and compounded the quarrels berant of Catana, and won Catana it felf. Ma-tween Agathocles and the Syracufus; Agathocles is chosen Prætor; he entertains five thousand Africans, and divers old Souldiers of the Murgantines, under colour of a purpose to besiege Herbita. With these. and with the affiftance of the poor and difcontented Syracusians (the City also being ginians, on condition that they should not divided into many factions) he assails the ment: the third day, when they had blunt-After fuch time as Timoleon had delivered ed their barbarous appetites, and frewed Syracuje from the tyrauny of Dionysius, and the streets with ten thousand dead carksf

Agathocles, in an affembly of the people (being an eloquent knave)perswaded them. that, for the violent fickness, by which the Common-wealth was utterly confumed, he found no better than the violent remedies which he had administred; and that he affected no other thing than the reducing of the state from an Oligarchy, or the rule of a few tyrannous Magistrates, to the ancient and indifferent Democraty, by which it had been

CHAP. I. (somuch taunted by the Romans, as no better return into Africk. than meer fallhood) shewed it self very howith the syracustan, as gave him not only means to weaken others, but to strengthen against the Carthaginians. Such is com-

by Juline; more largely and particularly own life in what fort he thought best. This by pipolorus siculus: the fumm whereof is desperation of Amilear served to inform by Division The fame Amilear that had brought Agathoeles of the Carthaginians intent. He this syracuse, and that had lent him faw they would not be deluded with words, five thousand men to help in the Massacre of and therefore resolved to get the start of the Citizens, was also content to wink at mathem in action. He diffembled no longer; ny wrongs that he did unto the Confede- but, instead of spoil and robbery, made open ny wises of the Carthaginians. It was the pur- War upon all their Adherents. He had made pole of Amilear, to fettle Agathoeles in his the better part of Sicil his own, ere the Carryanny, and to let him vex and wafte the thaginian Forces arrived: which thinking to whole filand; because it was thereby like to have incountred an ill-established Tyrant. rome to pass, that he should reduce all sieil found him ready, as a King, to defend his into fuch terms as would make it become own, and give them sharp entertainment. an easie prey to Carthage. But when the They were beaten by him; and their Navv chits, confederate with the Carthaginians, tentiheir Emballadours, with complaint of ther dogood by Land, nor Sea, but were this ill dealing, to Carthage; the Funick faith glad to leave their business undone, and

The Carthaginians prepare a new Fleet: roundlein taking order for the redrefs.Em- which being very gallantly manned and furhalladours were fent to comfort the Sieili- nished, was broken by foul weather, and the ans, and to put Agathocles in mind of his Co- best part of it cast away, even whilst it was venants; Amilear was recalled home into yet within kenning of their City. But Amil-Africk, and a new Captain appointed to fue- car, the Son of Gifco, gathering together ceed in his charge, with fuch forces, as might the remainders of his shipwrack, was bold compel Agathocles to reason, if otherwise he to pass over into Sicil, and landed not far would not hearken to it. All this tended from Gela; where Agathocles was foon reato fave their Confederates, from fuffering | dy to examine the cause of their coming. fuch injuries in the future. For that which Many skirmishes passed between them, in was past (since it could not be recalled) they | which (commonly) the Syracusian had the took order to have it severely punished. better. But his good success begat pre-Amilear was accused secretly, and by way sumption; whereby he lost a battel more imof scrutiny: the suffrages being given, but portant than all the other fights. One adnot calculated; and so reserved until he verse chance is enough to overthrow the should return. This was not so closely hand- state of a Tyrant if it be not upheld by great led, but that Amilear had foon notice of it. | circumspection. The War was soon transfer-In managing his business with Agathocles, it is red to the walls of Sgracuse; within which likely that he had an eye to his own profit, Agathocles was closed up, and driven to make as well as to the publick benefit of his Coun- his last defence by their help, who may be try. For he had made fuch a composition | judged to have loved him not very greatly. But the Inhabitants of Syracuse, after that great Massacre of the principal men, made himself, both in power and authority, even in the beginning of this new Tyranny, were (for the most part) such, as had been either monly the custom of those, that hope to mercenary Souldiers, infranchised flaves, or work their own ends by cunning practices, base and needy people; helpers in establishthinking to deal fubtlely and finely, they ing the present Government, and Executiopintheir threads fo small, that they are bro- ners of the murders, and spoil committed in ken with the very wind. Amilear faw, that that change. If there were any other (as his Carthaginians had a purpose to deal sub- some there were) they were so well obserfantially; and that therefore it would be ved, and (withall) fo fearful, that they durft hard for him, to make them follow his crook- not ftir. But it was enough that they all ed devices: which if he could not do, it agreed in the common defence of themselves Was to be expected, that their anger would and their City; Famine was likely to grow break out into fo much the greater extremiby how much the more they had contheir resolution. In this necessity Agathocles ccaled it. Therefore he followed the ex- adventured upon a frange course, which ample, which some of his fore goers had the event commended as wise. He imbarqued taught him; and, for fear of fuch a death as as many as he thought meet, in those vesiels the Judges might award him, he ended his that rode in the Flaven; and committing the Government of the City to his Brother to lock upon their walls. Their Townsare Antander, willed the people to be of good ill ferrified, their people untrained, and courage, for that (as he told them) he had experienced in dangers; the mercenary bethought himself of a mean, both to raise the fiege, and to repair all other losles. A Carthaginian Fleet lay in the mouth of the Haven, both to hinder the entrance of victuallers, and to keep the befieged from isluing letting them have some share with usin all to depart, advertisement came, that many thips of burden, laden with Corn, and other already Master of all the riches in Africk; provisions, were drawing near unto Syracufe. To intercept these the Carthaginians men so well, that they were contented to se hoise fail, and lanch forth into the deep. fire on all their ships (reserving one or two They were not far gone, when they might to use as Messengers) to the end that no behold Agathocles illuing forth of the Port, hope should remain, save only in vistory, with purpose (as they thought) to give In this heat of resolution, they winby some convoyunto his victuallers. Hereupon they two Cities; which after they had throughly wheel about, and make amain toward him, facked, they burnt to the ground: as a mark as thinking him the better booty. He nei- of terrour to all that should make resissance ther abode their coming, nor fled back into The Carthaginians hearing this, are amazed; the City, but made all fpeed towards Africk; thinking that Amilear is broken, and his and was purfued by the Carthaginians, as whole Army destroyed in Sicil. This imlong as the day would give them light. In pression so dismayes them, that when they the mean feason the victuallers were gotten know the truth of all, by such as had sato Syracuse; which was the more plentiful- ped in the late Sea-fight, yet still they fear, ly relieved by their coming, for that Agathocles had unburdened the place of no small | cars faith, who had suffered Agathocks to number. When the Carthaginian Admiral land in Africk: they suspected their principerceived, first, that by pursuing two Fleets | pal Citizens at home, of a meaning to be at once, he had milied of them both: and tray Carthage unto the enemy; they railea fecondly, that Agathocles returned not again, but was gone to feek his fortune elfewhere, he thought it good to purfue those that were fled, and to attend fo well upon them. that they should not have leisure to do mischief in some other part.

786

The Carthaginian Navy followed Agathocles (whether by chance, or by relation of fuch as had met with him at Sea) directly towards Africk, and overtook him after fix dayes. He had (at the first) a great start of them; fo that (belike) they rowed hard, and wearied themselves in seeking their own misfortune: for he fought with them, the Carthaginians, made easie the victory and beat them; and, having funk or taken against the one half of them. For Bomilmany, drave the reft to flye which way they | car would not flir, but suffered Hanno tobe could, laden with fuch strange tydings of cut in pieces.

his voyage. Africk, then did he discover unto them his the Carthaginian society, to take part with project, letting them understand, that there Agathocles: who pursuing his Victory, win was no better way to divert the Carthagini- neth many Towns, and fends word to 87 ans, not only from syracuse, but from all the racuse of his good success. The Cartheir Ille of Sicil, than by bringing the war to their nians also fend unto Sicil, willing dail own doors. For here (aid he) they have ma- car, their General, to fuccour the state of ny that hate them, and that will readily take Africk, which was in danger to be lolt, Arms against them, as soon as they perceive whilst he was travelling in the Conquest of that there is an Army on foot, which dares Sicil Amilear fends them five thouland men:

forces that they levy in these parts, will rather follow us than them, if we offer greater wages than they can give: which we may better promise and make good, by the wealth of the Carthaginians, than our Now, as such time at 'Agathocles was ready chemies can do, by making some addition to their stipends. Thus he talked, as one and with many brave words encouraged his and know not what. They suspect Amilgreat Army, and know not to whole charge they may lafely commit it.

There were at that time two famous Captains in the City, Hanno and Bomilear, great enemies, and therefore the more unlikely to conspire against the Common-wealth. These are made Generals of the Army levied, which far exceeded the forces of hythocles. But it seldom happens, that diffention between Commanders produceth any fortunate event. Necessity drave Agathocles to fight: and the courage of his men, resolved to deal with the whole multitude of

The reputation of this great Victory, When Agathocles had landed his men in brought over a King of the Africans, from althor forces he thought it not needful to cified the tumult, by the accustomed proalthis recess thorough rather to draw Agatho-mifes of great booty and spoil. It hadnow

Agathocles.

CHAN.I.

been time for him to offer peace to the Carby one, that could fearce retain his own thaginians: which to obtain, they would But these good hopes had a bad (questionless) have given to him both monv Hefrent fome time in winning a few chough to pay his Army, and all that they Towns that adhered unto the Syracustans: then held in Sicil. For their City had been and having brought his matters to some distressed, not only by this his war, but by and parties the conceived a fudden hope of the treason of Bomilear, who failed not much raking Spractuse by surprise. It was a pret- of making himself Tyrant over them. But ry (though tragical) Accident, if it were ambition is blind. Agathocles had all his The as Tully relates it. Amilear had a dream thoughts fixed upon the conquest of Carwhich fold him that he should sup the next thage it felf: out of which dream he was day within Syracuse. His fancy begot this awaked, by the loss of a battel, not so medream, and he verily believed it. He made morable in regard of any accident therein, more hafte then good speed toward the Ci- as of the strange events following it. The tv: and coming upon it on the fudden, had Carthaginians, after their great misfortunes good hope to carry it. But his enemies were in this war, had renewed their old facrifices prepared for him, and had laid an ambush of children to Saturn: from which they to intraphim, whereinto he fell. So he was had abstained ever fince they made peace carried prisoner into the City 5 in which it with Gelon. And now they made choice was likely that he had no great chear to his of some, the goodliest of their prisoners, tasupper: for they struck off his head, and ken in the battel, to offer unto the said Idol. fent it into Africk (a welcome present) to in way of thankfulness for their victory. The fire, with which these unhappy men were This good fuccess of things at home, did confumed, caught hold upon the lodgings put such courage into the Sicilian Army, nearest unto the Altar, and spreading it that Agathoeles was bold to wear a Crown, felffarther through the Camp, with the deand file himself King of Africk. He had al- ftruction of many men, caused such a tumult lured Ophellas, King of the Cyrenians, to take as is usual in the like cases. At the same his part, by promises to deliver the Country time, the like accident of fire burnt up the into his hands : for that (as he faid) it was Pavilion of Agathocles. Hereupon both the fufficient unto himfelf to have diverted the Armies fled away, each of them believing, Carthaginians from Sicil, wherein (after this that the noyle in the adverse Camp, was a warended) he might reign quietly. Ophellas | fign of the enemies coming to invade it. But came with a great Army, and was friendly the Carthaginians had a fafe retrait: Agaentertained. But the traiterous Sicilian, thocles, by a second errour, fell into a new taking an advantage, did murther this his calamity. In the beginning of this his flight affiffant; and afterwards by good words, in the dark, he met with his own African and great promifes, drew all the Cyrenian Souldiers, and thinking them to be enemies, Army to follow him in his Wars. Thus his (as indeed the one half of them had revoltvillany found good fuccess; and he so pre- ed from him, to the Carthaginians, in the vailed in Africk, that he got leasure to make last battel) he began to assail them, and was after into sicil. Many Towns in sicil had fo ftoutly refifted, that he loft in this blind embraced a defire of recovering their liber- fight above four thousand of his men. This ty; thinking it high time to fight at length did so discourage his proud heart, that, befortheir own freedom, after that they had ing fallen from the near hope of taking the follows been exposed, (as a reward of victo- City of Carthage, unto some distrust of his ry) either unto Aliens, or to Tyrants of own fafety, he knew no more how to modetheir own Country. These had prevailed rate his present weak fears, than lately he far, and gotten many to take their parts, as had known how to govern his ambition. in a common cause: when the coming of Therefore he took the way that came next Aguithocles abated their high spirits, and his into his head; which was, to steal closely good fucces in many fights, compelled them aboord his ships, with his younger son (the to Obedience. Out of Sicil he returned elder he suspected of Incest, and of Ambitiinto Africk, where his affairs stood in very on and so to flye into Sicil; thinking it the bad terms. Archaeathus, his fon had loft a best course to shift for himself, as wanting battel; and (which was worse) had ill vessels wherein to transport his Army. His means to help himself: his Army being in elder son Archagathus, perceiving his drift, mutiny for lack of pay. But Agathocles pa- arrested him and put him under custody:

Ggggg

but by means of a tudden tumult, he was let his name than by any force, for they yielded loofe, escaped, and fled alone, leaving both at his first coming. This done, he went to the his fons behind him. His flight being noyfed life of Lipara, and made the Inhabitants buy through the Army, all was in an uproar; and peace with one hundred talents of gold, But extremity of rage caused not only the comextremity or rage cauted not only the com-mon Souldier, but even fuch as had been would needs exact a greater; and finding friends to the Tyrant, to lay hold upon his two sons, and kill them. That this flight of Agathocles was extreamly base, I need not Herein (me thinks) he did well enough of Agathocles was extreamly base, I need took for how could he believe those tobe god, use words to prove: That his fear was For how could he believe those tobe god, truly, as all fear is faid to be, a passion, depriving him of the fuccours which reason horrible perjuries? Then he returned ichoffered, the fequel doth manifest. His forfaken Souldiers, being now a headless company, and no longer an Army to be feared, were cast away by foul weather at Sea; one obtained nevertheless a reasonable compofition from the Carthaginians: to whom they fold those places, whereof they had possession, for ninetcen talents. Likewise, Agathocles himfelf, having loft his Army, did nevertheless, by the reputation of this late war, make peace with Carthage upon equal wife that he had taken out of Egypt) and from forain enemies, discovered his bloody younger fon of his own, began to control nature, in most abominable cruelties, among about the Kingdom. Neither did they the Sicilians. His wants and his fears, urged him so violently, that he was not satisfied rants decision; they regarded him not so with the spoils of the rich, or the death of much. But each of them laid wait for the those whom he held suspected: but in a others life: wherein the Nephew sped so beaftly rage depopulated whole Cities. He well, that he flew his Uncle, and got his devised new engines of torment; wherein Grandfathers Kingdom, without alking any ftriving to exceed the Bull of Phalaris, he leave. These tydings wounded the heart of made a frame of brafs, that should serve to Agathoeles with fear and sorrow. He aw fcorch mens bodies, and withall give him himfelf without help, like to become a prey leave to behold them in their milery. . So to his ungracious Nephew, from whom he devilish is the nature of man, when reason, knew that no favour was to be expeded, that should be his guide, is become a flave either by himself, or by those, whom only to his brutish affections. In these mischies he now held dear, which were Theogenia he was focutragious, that he neither spared and her children. Therefore he advised her Sex, nor Age; especially, when he was in- and them to fly before they were surprised: formed of the flaughter of his children in for that otherwise they could by no means Africk. But this was not the way to preserve avoid, either death, or somewhat that his cstate: it threw him into new dangers. would be worse. He gave them all his trea-They whom he had chafed out of their fures and goods, wherewith he even com-Country took arms against him, and drave pelled them (weeping to leave him defolate him into fuch fears, that he was fain to feek in fo wretched a case) to imbark themselves that love at Carthage, which by ruling well hastily, and make speed into Egypt. After he might have had in sicil. He freely delivered into the Carthaginians hands, all into the fire, or whether his difease confithose Towns of the Phenicians in Sicil, bemed him, there was none lest that cared to longing unto them, which were in his poffession. They requited him honourably, with great store of corn, and with four hundred talents of gold and filver. So (though not without much trouble and hazard) he prevailed against the Rebels, and setled his cil, he made a voyage into Italy. There he ans begin to renew their attempts of confidence of the conf Subdued the Erutians, rather by terrour of quering all Sicil. What the Nephew of Age plainly that they had no more left, he was bold to spoil the Temples of their gods. that had continually given deaf earstohis ly home, with eleven ships loaden with gold: all which, and all the rest of his fleet, Gally excepted, in which he himself elcaped, to fuffer a more miferable end. A grievous fickness fell upon him, that rotted his whole body, spreading it self through all his veins and finews. Whilft he lay in this cafe. all desiring his end, save only Theogenia (a her fmall children: his Nephew, the son of After this, the Tyrant being delivered Archagathus, before mentioned, and a their departure, whether he threw himself attend him but he ended his life as basely, as obscurely, and in as much want as he first began it. After the death of Agathocles it was, that the Mamertines, his Souldiers, traiteroufly occupied Messana, and infested a great part of the Island. Then also did the Carthaginiman Confuls, M. Valerius, and C. Octacilius made unable to compass its foundhim, and readily embraced the offer of his friendship. Yet they made use of their present advantage, and fold him peace for an hundred (some say two hundred) Ta- How the Romans beliege and win Agrigentum.

These Consuls had brought a great Army into sicil; yet did they nothing else in effect than bring over Hiero to their fide. If the Syraculian held them busied (which I find not, otherwise than by circumstances, as, by that should have received all the profit of nition. the victory: feeing they did expose him to thorte did, I cannot find. Likely it is that firength of Syracufe, in the dayes of Agathothe quickly perillied. For the Sicilians were less and therefore knew, that it was able hequically permitted to help them, who directioned for Pyribus to help them, who directioned for Pyribus to help them, who directioned for the help them with a daughter of daughter to be an a very frong fiege. And hereupon it directions the help them with a daughter of daughter to be a superior of the help them. directions and adapter of Agatho-had marryed with a daughter of Agathohad many was foon weary of the ing help: if (perhaps) it were not fome pare der. pat (as hath been shewed before) and of their defire, that both Rome and Syracuse Country (Control of the Control of t there agoodly champion field, wherein own work might be the eafier against them hexage and Carthage flould fight for superio-both. Yet indeed, the case of the besieged Romans In which bulines, how these two great City was not the same, when the Romans lay Gies did speed, the order of our story will before it, as it had been when the Carthaginians attempted it. For there was great reason to try the uttermost hazard of war against the Carthaginians, who sought no other thing than to bring it into flavery: arccontinuation of the Roman War in Sicil. not to against the Romans, who thought it How Hieron, King of Syracuse, for fook the fufficient if they could withdraw it from the Carrhaginians, and made his peace with party of their enemies. Besides, it was not all one to be governed by Agathocles, or by Hiera. The former of these cared not what When Appius Clandius, following the dadvantage of his victory gotten at preferve his own tyranny: the latter, as a Mollana, brought the War unto the Gates Just and good Prince, had no greater defire of spraule, and befreged that great City 5 than to win the love of his people by feek-Hieron found it high time for him to feek ing their commodity; but including his own peace: knowing that the Carthaginians had felicity within the publick, laboured to unneither any reason to be offended with him, hold both, by honest and faithful dealing. for helping himself by what means he Hereby it came to pas that he enjoyed a could, when they were not in case to give long and happy reign, living dear to his own him affiftance; and forefeeing withall, that Subjects, beloved of the Romans, and not when once he had purchased his quiet from greatly molested by the Carthaginians; the Romans, it would be free for him to fit whom, either the confideration, That they fill, without fear of molestation, whilft had left him to himself, ere he left their society, Rome and Carthage were fighting for the made unwilling to feek his ruine; or their maltery. In this good mood the new Ro- more earnest business with the Romans,

ø. VI.

Their beginning to maintain a fleet. Their first loss, and first victory by sea. Of sea-fight in general.

Iteron, having fided himself with the Romans, aideth them with victuals the fum of mony imposed upon him, and by and other necessaries: so that they, pretheir performing none other piece of fer- fuming upon his affiltance, recall fome vice) all the whole time of their abode in part of their forces. The Carthaginians the island; than was his departure from find it high time to bestir them; they the friendship of Carthage, no less to his ho- fend to the Ligurians, and to the troups nour than it was to his commodity. For they had in Spain, to come to their aid 5 by no reason could they require, that he who being arrived, they made the City of thould fuffer his own Kingdom to run into Agrigentum the feat of the War, against the manifelt peril of subversion, for their sakes Romans, filling it with all manner of mu-

The Roman Confuls, having made peace thewhole danger, without ftraining them with Hieron, return into Italy; and, in Cless to give him relief. But the Carthaginitheir places, Lucius Pofthumus and Quinans had lately made good proof of the tus Mamilius arrive. They go on towards Gggg 2

CHAP.

* Agrigen  Agrigentum: and finding no enemy in the as broken, till they came to the body of the * Agrigen- * Agrigentum : and mining to them were ftuf- Army, that lay shadowed behind some rising goodly Held, they benege it, thousand Souldiers. After a ground. The Numidians performit accor. by the while, the time of harveft being come, a dingly; and while the Roman purfied the Godes, unwhile, the time of narven being coins, a dingry, and the time of the Roman Army range the Country Numidians, Hanno gives upon then, and der the conduct of to gather corn, and those at the siege grow having slaughtered many, beats the reliance of the Roman Army range the Country Numidians. Arifon and negligent; the Carthaginians fally furiously, their Trenches. Pylifus, negligent; the Carring Army, but are in the end repelled into the Town with great made no other attempt for two months, but ten miles los; but by the smart felt on both sides, the lay strongly encamped, waiting until some and Affailants redoubled their guards, and the opportunity should invite them. But An. is had forestimes befreged kept within their covert. Yet the nibal that was befreged in Agrigentum, as initeight Romans, the better to affure themselves, cut well by figns as messengers, made Hamno hundred a deep trench between the walls of the Ci-know how ill the extremity which heenthousand a deep trenet between the analysis and another on the outty and their Camp: another outty anoth Cay, by indetnereo; that neither the carbagonian course. Lanno the tempon, a lecond time, might force them fuddenly, by a fally; nor provoked the Confuls to fight: But his Elereason to the Country without, break upon phants being disordered by his own Vam. ty of the unawares : which double Defence guard, which was broken by the Roman, be foll, and them unawares : which double Defence guard, which was broken by the Roman, be foil, and the unawares while the receiving loft the day: and with such as escaped, he bour-hood any relief of victuals, and munitions, whilst recovered Heracles. Annibal perceiving this, of car-ibage, grew the Syracustan supplies the assaultants with and remaining hopeless of succour, resolved to make his own way. Finding therefore frace from fuccour to Carthage, after they had been in that the Romans, after this dayes vidory, gianings, this fort pent up five months. The Cartha- wearied with labour, and fecured bytheir to great ginians imbark an Army, with certain Elegood fortune, kept negligent watch in the gory and control of Hanno; who night; he rusht out of the Town, with all the plenty and arrives with it at Heraelea, to the West of remainder of his Army, and past by the Ro-Agrigentum. Hanno put himself into the man camp without resistance. The Confuls field, and furprifeth Erbefus, a City wherein | purfue him in the morning, but in vain: fure great, as it the Romans had bestowed all their provisi- they were, that he could not carrythe City Empedacies on. By means hereof, the famine without with him, which with little a-do the Roto fay, that grew to be as great, as it was within Agrithe Agrimans entred, and pitifully spoiled. The Rothe Agrimans proud of this victory, pushed rather the Agric gentum; and the Roman Camp no less mans, proud of this victory, pursued rather built Pala- Traightly affieged by Hanno, than the City to follow the direction of their prefentgood ces of such was by the Romans: infomuch, as if Hieron fortunes, than their first determinations. ty, as if had not supplyed them, they had been They had resolved in the beginning of this they meant forced to abandon the fiege. But feeing War, only to fuccour the Mamertinu, and to live for the strength of the field of the strength of the streng to live for that this diffress was not enough to make to keep the Carthaginians from their own made such them rise, Hanno determined to give them coasts: but now they determine to make realts, as if battel. To which end departing from He- themselves Lords of all Sicil; and from they meant to dye the raclea, he makes approach unto the Roman thence, being favoured with the wind of Camp. The Romans resolve to sustain him, greatest and put themselves in order. Hanno directs the disease of Kings, of States, and alloof pomp and the Numidian horsemen to change the Vantmagnin-cence, was guard, to the end to draw them further on;

Temples, and Theatres, Water-conduits, and Fish-ponds: the ruines tempers, and inearers, water-conducts and rim-points: the follow whereof at this day are fufficient arguments, that Rome is left could never boaft of the like. In the Portch of the Temple of Jupiter Olympius, (by which we may judge of the Temple it felf) there was fee our on one fide which we may judge of the temple fitter). These was teven to not only the full proportion of the Glands, fighting with the gods, all cut out in polithed marble of divers colours; a work the meft magnificent and rare that ever hath been feen; on the other fide, the war of Twy, and the encounters which happed at that fige; with the perfonages of the Heroes. that were doers in that war; all of the like beautiful stone, and of equal stature to the bodies of those men in ancient times: In comparison of which, the latter works of that kind, are but petty things, and meer trifles It would require a volume to express the magnificence of the Temples of Hercules, Afculapius, Concord, Juno Lucina, Chaffitie, Proferpina, Caftor and Pollux, wherein the Master-pieces of those exquisite Painters and Carvers Phidias, Zeuzu, Myron, and Polycleus, were to be feen. But in process of time it ran the same fortune that all other great Cities have done, and was ruined by divers calamities of war : whereof this war prefent brought unto it not the leaft.

After this encounter, the Carthaginians good fuccess, to fail over into Africk. It is private men, to covet the greatest things, but not to enjoy the least; the defire of that which done, he commands them to return which we neither have nor need, taking from us the true use and fruition of what we have already. This curse upon mortal men, was never taken from them fince the beginning of the World unto this day.

To profecute this War, Lucius Valerius and Titus Octacilius, two new Confuls, are sent into Sicil. Whereupon, the Romans being Mafters of the field, many in land Towns gave themselves unto them. On the contrary, the Carthaginians keeping still the Lordship of the Sea, many maritimate places became theirs. The Romans therefore, as welto fecure their own coasts, often invaded by the African nim Gallies, of five banks, to the shore.

they were directed by the Master, that so Majesties great ships, and a London-Barge. they might learn the stroke of the Gally, and how to mount and draw their Oares.

not easily beaten by fifty.

fleets, as to equal themselves in every Gallies, whereby they might fasten or grapneces, and of warfare with their enemies, deter- ple themselves with their enemies, when mine to make a flect. And herein fortune they were (as we call it) boord and boord, favoured them with this accident, that be- that is, when they brought the Gallies fides layouted the ignorant in ship-wrights craft, together. This done the weightier ships had ing anogaring and thrust one of the Carthagi- gotten the advantage, and the Africans lost it. For neither did their swiftness serve Now had the Romans a pattern, and by them, nor their Marriners craft; the veffels irthey began to fet up an hundred Quinque- wherein both Nations fought, being open: remes which were Gallies, rowed by five on fo that all was to be carryed by the advanevery bank; and twenty, of three on a bank: tage of weapon, and valour of the men. Beand while these were in preparing, they ex- sides this, as the heavier Gallies were acciand wante defined their men in the feat of rowing. This dentally likely to crush, and crack the sides ther did after a strange fashion. They placed of the lighter and weaker, so were they by mon the Sea-fands many feats, in order of the reason of their breadth, more steady; the banks in Gallies, whereon they placed and those that best kept their feet, could also their water men, and taught them to beat best use their hands. The example may be the fand with long poles, orderly, and as given between one of the long boats of his

791

Certainly, he that will happily perform a fight at Sea, must be skilful in making choice When their fleet was finished, some rig- of Vessels to fight in: he must believe, that ging and other implements excepted, C.Cor, there is more belonging to a good man of melius, one of the new Confuls (for they War, upon the waters, than great daring; who being more in love with this new kind difference, between fighting loofe or at ofwarfare, than well advised, past over to large, and grappling. The Guns of a slow Mellana with seventeen Gallies, leaving the ship pierce as well, and make as great holes, rest to follow him. There he stayed not, but as those in a swift. To clap ships together. would needs row along the coast to Lipara, without consideration, belongs rather to a hoping to do some piece of service. Hannibal mad man, than to a man of War: for by such a Carthaginian was at the same time Gover- an ignorant bravery was Peter Stroffie lost at nour in Panormus; who being advertised of the Azores, when he fought against the Marthis new Sea-mans arrival, fent forth one quest of Santa Cruz. In like fort, had the Boodes, a Senator of Carthage, with twenty Lord Charles Howard, Admiral of England, Gallies to entertain him. Boodes, falling been lost in the year 1588. if he had not upon the Consul unawares, took both him been better advised, than a great many maand the fleet he commanded. When Hanni- lignant fools were, that found fault with his bal received this good news, together with demeanour. The Spaniards had an Army the Roman Gallies, and their Conful; he aboord them; and he had none: they had grew no less foolith hardy than Cornelius more ships than he had, and of higher buildhad been. For he, fancying to himself to | ing and charging; so that, had he intangled furprize the rest of the Roman fleet, on their himself with those great and powerful Vefown coast, ere they were yet in all points sels, he had greatly endangered this Kingprovided; fought them out with a fleet of dom of England. For twenty men upon the fifty fail; where with falling among them, he defences, are equal to an hundred that boord was well beaten, and leaving the greater and enter; whereas then, contrariwile, the number of his own behind him, made an | Spaniards had an hundred, for twenty of hard escape with the rest: for of one hun- ours to defend themselves withall. But our dred and twenty Gallies, the Romans under Admiral knew his advantage, and held it: Cornelius had lost but seventeen, so as one which had he not done, he had not been hundred and three remained, which were worthy to have held his head. Here to speak in general of Sea-fights (for particulars are The Romans, being advertised of Corneli- fitter for private hands than for the Press,) "hisoverthrow, make haste to redeem him, I say, that a fleet of twenty ships, all good but give the charge of their fleet to his Col- failers, and good ships, have the advantage, league, Duilius. Duilius, considering that the on the open Sea, of an hundred as good ships Roman vessels were heavy and slow, the and of slower sailing. For if the fleet of an African Gallies having the speed of them, de- hundred sail keep themselves near together, viled a certain Engine in the prow of his in a gross squadron; the twenty ships, chargCHAP 1

give ground, and to fall back upon their own whereby they hoped, not only to get sid. next fellows: of which to many as intangle, but all the other Ifles between Haly and are made unserviceable or lott. Force them africk, beginning with sardina, whither they may cafily, because the twenty ships, soon after they sent a sleet for that purpose. they may carry, because the first have On the contrary fide, Amilear, the Carthagi which give themselves scope, after they have given one broad tide of Artillery, by clap- nian, lying in Panormus, carefully waited ping into the wind, and flaying, they may for all occasions, that might help to recomgive them the other : and fo the twenty flips pence the late misfortune: and being ad. batter them in pieces with a perpetual volly; vertifed, that some quarrel was grown be. whereas those that fight in a troop, have no tween the Roman Souldiers, and their Auxi. room to turn, and can alwayes use but one liaries, being such as caused them to incamp and the same beaten side. If the seet of an apart, he sent forth Hanno to set upon them; hundred fail give themselves any distance, who taking them unawares, buried four then that the letter fleet prevail, either against thousand of them in the place. Now during those that are arear and hindmost, or against the continuance of the Land-war in sial, those, that by advantage of over-failing Hannibal, who had lately been beaten by their fellows keep the wind: and if upon a Sea, but escaped unto Carthage, meaning Lee-thore, the thips next the wind be con- to make amends for his former errour, obftrained to fall back into their own fquadron, tained the trust of a new fleet, wherewithhe then it is all to nothing the whole feet must arrived at Sardinia: the conquest of which fuffer thipwrack, or render it felf. That fuch illand, the Romans had entertained for their advantage may be taken upon a fleet of un-next enterprife. Now it fo fell out, that the equal fpeed, it hath been well enough conceived in old time; as by the Oration of Her- in the Port where Hannibal with his new mocrates, in Thueyelides, which he made to fleet anchored. They fet upon him unawars, the Syranfians, when the Athenians invaded and took the better part of the fleet which them, it may easily be observed.

a Treatife, for the Lord Henry, Prince of escaped from the Romans. His good friends and a treatife, Wales; a subject, to my knowledge, never the Carthaginians, were so ill pleased with ites, and handled by any man, ancient or modern : but this his fecond unfortunate voyage, that Ferrita Prince; of which like an Eclipse of the Sun, peccare; In War it is too much to offend twice thing we shall find the effects hereafter. Impossible it is to equal words and forrows: I will there-portance was done by the Confuls, till * Par merch fore leave him in the hands of God that hath him. Cura leves loquuntur, ingentes stupent.

But it is now time to return to the beaten

ing them upon any angle, shall force them to ragement, to proceed in their Wars by Sea. he conducted; himself hardly escaping the It to Of the Art of War by Sea, I had written danger. But it little availed him to have myst

God hath spared me the labour of finishing they hanged him up for his diligence for as winer. it, by his loss, by the loss of that brave it hath been faid of old) Non of bit in bello und lit is one of the first Cities that hath been built in all Emptwhereas Thueydides feems to make it a Colony of the Physician I z mus, in libello de Panormo, lib 6. affirms that it was fift and long bers Carthaginians; who by lofing their advan-the time which Thursdades fet down founded by the distant, all sales and selections and the sales and tage of fivift boats, and boarding the Romans, have loft fifty fail of their Gallies: as on the other fide, their enemies by commanding the Seas, have gotten liberty to fail about the Seas, have gotten liberty to fail about the life of the blocks or grante in Idumes, alone in oult Danillons, 1979.

After this, it was long ere any thing of im-sal.

Welf part of sicil; where they raifed the life line line resistance in the long of Marella with former manus, quibus adjustif just useful blocks are similarly like proposed and the life works with the life and with low amountains of the line of the life and the life words is love if dains been present assume that are found thele words is love if dains been present assume that the life words in love if dains been present assume that the life words in love if dains been present assume that the life words in love if dains been present assume that the life words in love if dains been present assume that the life words in love if dains been present assume that the life words in love in the life words in th and won the Town of Macella, with some pages prate enden Deum, & C. Hijst Turis Perfett away town other places. nomen ef Bayeh; fed Tarri buic proxime nomen ef Bhayeh; fed dutainle tion (lath Fazellus) was found intire in the Calledaphia the partifi-Now whether thele inferiptions were truly as ancient, as the length live who were I leave a second and the length live who were I leave a second as the length live who were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were I leave a second as the length live were lengt lieve they were, I leave every man to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the Colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith, Buthat the colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith and the colling of an annual to his own faith and the colling of angel singer in an annual to his own faith and the colling of an annual to his own faith and the colling of an annual to his own faith and the colling of an annual to his own faith and the colling of an annual to his own faith and the colling of the colli Divers Enterfeats of War, between the Romans and Carthaginians, with variable success. and Carthaginians, with variable fuces.

The Romans prepare to invade Africk: and obtain a great Vidory at Sea.

fift into sixil, that then the Thankie was 3 to wife, in the interpolation was 5 to wife, in the interpolation was 5 to wife, in and 5 constant of the Romans prepare to invade Africk: and obtain a great Vidory at Sea.

first into sixil, that then the Thankie was 3 to wife to exhibit the interpolation was 1 to wife the paint was 1 to wife and it is it is to she wife the source of the source for the source of the source for the sou

CHAP. I. and Atessana.

The year following, C. Atilius the Conful who commanded the Roman fleet, discoverey Out and Quinqueremes.

draw it: the Quadriremes had four to an Oar: and the Trivemes hisbeen fo, they must then have had five decks each over other: which whileldome been feen in thips of a thousand tuns; neither could the id fourth, and fifth ranks, have reached unto the water with the Oars.

> fleet was divided into four parts, of which thaginians on that part also to running. the three first made the form of a Wedge or squadron, together with the corner of the parts that were oppress. So as in conclusion,

norms was befreged; where, when the Ro- first and second. The order of the Carthanorms was being in vain to draw the Carman had fought in vain the Carman had fough mani man of the field; being unable to but, by the manner of the fight afterwards, thogrammas, and City, because of the strong I conjecture, that the front of their Fleet force that great City, because of the strong I conjecture, that the front of their Fleet Garrifortherein bestowed: they then de- wasthin, and stretched in a great length, Garmon derice, and took certain In-parted from thence, and took certain Inpartee months, as Mycistratum, Enna, Cameri-Combat en haye, a long front of horse, and na, lippana, and others, between Panormus thin: which form, fince the Pistol prevailed over the Lance, they have changed. Behind this first out-stretched front, their Battalions were more folid: for Amilear, Admiral of ed a company of the Carthaginian Gallies, the Carthaginians had thus ordered them of ranging the coaft: and, not staying for his purpose, (his Gallies having the speed of the wholenumber, purfued them with ten of Romans) that, when the first Fleet of the his. Buthe was well beaten for the hafte he Romans hafted to break through the first made, and lost all, fave the Gally which Gallies, they should all turn tail, and the Rotransported him: wherein himself escaped mans pursuing them (as after a victory)diswith great labour. But ere all was done, the order themselves, and, for eagerness of tareft of Atilius his fleet was gotten up: who king the Run-awayes, leave their own three renewing the fight, recovered from the Car- squadrons far behind them. For so it must thaginians a double number of theirs; by needs fall out; feeing that the third fquawhich the Victory remaining doubtful, both dron towed their horse-boats and victualchallenge it. Now to try at once, which of lers; and the fourth had the Rearward of thee two Nations should command the all. According to Amilears direction it suc-Seas, they both prepare all they can. The ceeded. For when the Romans had charged, Romans make a fleet of three hundred and and broken the thin front of the Carthagithirty Gallies; the Carthaginians, of three nian first Fleet, which ran away, they forthhundred and fifty, * Triremes, Quadriremes, with gave after them with all speed possible, not so much as looking behind them for the second squadron. Hereby the Romans were drawn near unto the body of the Cara Sunchave thought, that the Quinquerement had five ranks of were drawn near unto the body of the Car-s, one over another; and the other Gallies (cateably) fewer. But thaginian Fleet, led by Amilcar, and by him (at the first) received a great loss, until their fecond fquadron came up, which forced Amilear to betake him to his Oars. Hanno The Romans refolve to transport the also who commanded the right wing of the War into Africk; the Carthaginians, to ar Carthaginian Fleet, invaded the Roman refithem on the coast of sicil. The num- Rearward, and prevailed against them. But bers, with which each of them filled their | Amilear being beaten off, Marcus Atilius fell fleet, was (perhaps) the greatest that ever back to their succour, and put the Carthagifought on the waters. By Polybius his cfti- nians to their heels; as not able to fustain mation, there were in the Roman Gallies an both squadrons. The Rear being relieved, hundred and forty thousand men; and in the Consuls came to the aid of their third those of Carthage, an hundred and fifty thou- Battalion, which towed the victuallers, land: reckoning one hundred and twenty which were also in great danger of being Souldiers, and three hundred Rowers to beaten by the Africans: but the Confuls, every Gally, one with the other. The Roman joyning their squadrons to it, put the Car-

This victory fell unto the Romans, part-Triangle; the two first squadrons making ly by the hardiness of their Souldiers; the Flanks, and the third fquadron, the but principally, for that Amilear, being first Base: the point thereof (wherein were the beaten, could never after joyn himself unto two Confulsas Admirals) looking toward any of his other fquadrons, that remained, the enemy, and the middle space lying as yet, in a fair likelihood of prevailing, so empty. Their Vessels of carriage were long as they fought upon equal terms, and towed by the third fquadron. After but fquadron to fquadron. But Amilear all came up the fourth, in form of a Crefcent; for laking the fight, thereby left a full fourth very well manned, but exceeding thin: fo part of the Romane fleet uningaged, and that the horns of it inclosed all the third ready to give succour to any of the other for they loft but four and twenty of theirs; about fifty English mile from it. There tor they fold out four and twenty that were they dif-embarked and prepared to befiege whereas the Africans lost thirty that were they dif-embarked and prepared to befiege whereas the apression and three that were Chypea; which, to cale them of labour, was

than the Romans, had also divided his Fleet all invasions are foolish. By this time were into four fquadrons, (besides those that he the Africans also arrived at their own Carranged in the front to draw on the enemies, thage, fearing that the Roman Fleet and Arranged in the from and that, whilft he him-my had directed themselves thither; but beand to magge them, and to be perfel fought with one foundron that charged in gadvertifed that they had taken Chpea, him, all the rest of the enemies Fleet had they made provisions of all forts, both by Sea been at the same time entertained, he had and Land, for their defence. The Romans prevailed: but the fecond fquadron, being fend to Rome for directions, and in the mean free, came to the refere of the first, by which while waste all round about them. The or-Amilear was oppress: and Amilear, being op-der given from the Senate, was, That one of preft and feattered, the Confuls had good the Confuls should remain with the Army, leifure to relieve both the third and the and that the other should return with the fourth foundron, and got the victory.

advited him concerning War against the fand African Captains, with all the Roman Turks, tells him, that in all battels be Fleet and Army; except forty thips, fifteen tween them and the Christians, he should shouland foot, and five hundred horse, that never fail to charge the Janifars in the beginning of the fight, and to ingage them at With these forces, Regulus easily wan once with the reft. For (laith he) the Jani- fome Towns and places that were unwalled, fars, who are alwayes referved intire in the and laid siege to others. But he performed Rear of the battel, and in whom the Turk no great matter before he came to Adir. reposeth his greatest confidence; come up Yet I hold it worthy of relation, that near in a gross body, when all the troops on both unto the River of Bagrada, he encountred fides are disbanded and in confusions where with a Serpent of one hundred and twenty by they carry the Victory before them with foot long, which he flew, not without loss out reliftance. By the same order of fight, of many Souldiers, being driven to use and refervation, did the Romans also pre- against it such engines of War, as served provail against other Nations. For they kept perly for the assaulting of Towns. At Adia their Triarii in store (who were the choice he met with the Carthaginian Army, where of their Army) for the up-shot and last of the Captains were Hanno and Bostar, toblow. A great and victorious advantage gether with Amilear, who had brought over it hath ever been found, to keep some out of Sieil five thousand foot, and five hunor two good troops to look on, when all dred horse to succour his Country. These else are disbanded and ingaged.

ø. VIII.

utterly beaten and made prisoner.

former refolution, after they had re- ftrongly(as they think) on the top of an hill: paired and re-victualled their Fleet, fet fail but thereby they lofe the fervices both of for Africa, and arrived at the Promontory their Elephants, and of their horsemen. This of Hercules, a great Head land, fomewhat disadvantage of theirs, Regulus discovers, and to the East of the Port of Carthage, and makes use of it. He allails them in their fome forty leagues from Heraclea in Sicil, strength, which they defend a while, but in where Amilear himself as yet staid. Eron finethe Romans prevail, and force them from this Head-land (leaving the entrance into the place, taking the spoil of their Camp Fol-Carthage) they coasted the East-side of the lowing this their good fortune at the heels, the Romans got the honour of the day: Promontory, till they came to Clypea, a Town vielded unto them. Now had they a Port Now, if Amilear, who had more Gallies of their own on Africa fide; without which Fleet into Italy. According to this direction. Charls the fifth, among other his Pre- Manlius the Conful is fent home to Rome; cepts to Philip the second his Son, where he whither he carried with him twenty thou(belike) had an intent, rather to weary him out of Africa, by wary protraction of time, than to undergo the hazard of a main fight. They were careful to hold them-The Romans prevail in Africk. Atilius the felves free from necessity of coming to Canful , propoundeth intolerable condi- blows: yet had they a great defire to fave tions of Peace to the Carthaginians. He is the Town of Adis out of his hands. Intending therefore to follow their general purpose, and yet to disturb him in the siege OW the Romans, according to their of Adis, they incamp near unto him, and and take.

gain the year 1536, and was one of the three Keyes, which he gain the year 1536, and was one of the three Keyes, which he sandsuffer of Philip the fecond his fon to keep fafe; to wit, this industry of disast Full prays, the Key of the Netherlands: and the two for the Netherlands: the Key of Afrika: Fingining, the Key of the Netberlands: and the Key of $2400. But two of these Philip so lost, that he never the key of Sam. Dut two or incue rouse to the construction of the

By the loss of this battail at Adis, and of their enemies might grow: but confimore especially by the loss of Tunis, the dent they were, that it should soon be Carthaginians were greatly difmayed. The abated. Their chiefcare was, how to refift Numidians, their next Neighbours towards the violence of the Elephants. Against the West, insult upon their missortunes; them they placed the Velites, or light-armed invade, and spoil their Territory, and force Souldiers, as a forlorn hope; that these those that inhabite abroad, to forsake their might either with darts and other castingvillages and fields, and to hide themselves weapons, drive back the beafts upon the within the wals of Carthage. By reason here- enemies, or at least break their violence, and of a great famine at hand threatens the Ci- hinder them from rushing freely upon the tizens. Aillius finds his own advantage, and Legions. To the same end, they made assures himself that the City could not long their battails deeper in file, than they had hold out : yet he feared left it might defend | been accustomed to do. By which means, it self, until his time of Office, that was near as they were the less subject unto the imexpired, should be quite run out, whereby pression of the Elephants; so were they the new Confuls were like to reap the ho- lo much the more exposed unto the vionour of obtaining it. Ambition therefore, lence of the horse, wherein the enemy did that hath no respect but to it felf, per-fixedeshim to treat of peace with the Car-shaginians. But he propounded unto them fourworthy and base conditions, as there- sonable distance: his horsemen, and some

The Grand that the proceed to * Tunis a City within fix- fand were it not commonly found that they miles of Garthage, which they affault they which use the service of mercenary own doors.

Xantippus, taking the field with this Army, marched directly towards the Romans; and wondred much, whence this new courage by their hearts, formerly possessed with fear, light-armed foot, of the Carthaginians Auxibecame now fo couragious and disdainful, liaries, were in the wings. The first onset that they resolved, either to defend their was given by the Elephants, against which liberty, or die to the last man. To strengthen the Velites were so unable to make resithis their resolution, there arrived at the stance, that they brake into the battalions fametime a great troop of Greeks, whom following, and put them into some disorthey had formerly sent to entertain. Among der. In this case, the depth of the Roman these was a very expert Souldier, named battail was helpfull. For when the beasts Xuntippus, a Spartan: who being informed had fpent their force, in piercing through a of what had passed, and of the overthrow few of the first ranks; the squadrons neverwhich the Carthaginians received neer unto theless persisted in their order, without Adis, gave it out publickly; that the same opening. But the Carthaginian horse, havewas occasioned by default of the Comman- ing at the first encounter, by reason of their ders, and not of the Nation. This bruit, ran advantage in number, driven those of Atitill it came to the Senate; Xantippus is sent lius out of the field, began to charge the for; gives the reason of his opinion; and in Roman battalions in flank, and put them conclusion, being made General of the in great distress; who being forced to turn African forces, he puts himself into the field. face every way, could neither pass forward The Army which he led, confilted of no nor yet retire; but had very much ado to were than twelve thousand foot, and four make good the ground whereon they stood. thousand horse, with an hundred Ele- In the mean while, such of the Romans, Phants. No greater were the forces where- as had escaped the fury of the Elephants, with the Carthaginians fought for all that and left them at their backs, fell upon the they had, Liberties, Lives, Goods, Wives, Carthaginian Army, that met them in veand Children: which might well make it ry good array. It was no even match. The suspected, that the Armies by Sea, before one were a disordered Company, wearied fpoken of, were mif-numbred; the one con- with labour and hurt; the other, fresh, fifting of an hundred and forty thousand, and well prepared, to have dealt with and the other of an hundred and fifty thou- the enemy upon equal ferms. Here was therefore the Romans halfily receiled to the body of others, by yielding to fuch an office of humatheir Army, which being furrounded with nity, as is common in all wars (not groundthe enemy, and pent with travail, fell all ed upon deadly hatred) only in regard of to rout, upon the defeat of these troops, some small advantage. Whatsover the to rout, upon the decate of the earth of the chat open the way to a general overthrow. Carthaginians thought of him; fure it is, that open the way to a general solution of that his faithful observance of his word defroying the whole Roman Army, fave given, cannot be too much commended. But two thouland, and taking five hundred pritwo thousand, and taking the Conful. nate, againft the exchange of priloners, ap-Of their own they loft no more than eight pears, in all reason, to have proceeded from hundred Mercenaries, which were flain a vain-glorious forwardness, rather than when the fight began, by two thouland of from any necessity of State. For the Extended the Romans: that wheeling about to avoid change was made soon after his death; the Elephants, bare down all before them 3 wherein the Romans had the worse bargain, and made way even to the Carthaginian by fo much as Regulus himfelf was worth. As trenches. These were the two thousand for the authority of all Historians, that that cleaped, when the whole Army behind magnifie him in this point; we are to conthem was routed. All the reft were either fider, that they lived under the Roman Emtaken or flair. Hereby fortune made the pire: Philimis, the Carthaginian, perhaps did Romans know, that they were no lefs her cenfure it otherwife. Yet the death which valials, than were the Carthaginians: how in- he fuffered with extrem torments, could not folent foever they had been in their propofition of peace, as if they had purchased from nourable to Carthage. Neither do I think her the inheritance of their prosperity which the never gave nor fold to any mortal man. With what joy these newes were tion: saying that the Romans deserved to be welcommed, when they came to Carthage, we may easily conjecture; and what great things the vertue of one man hath often brought to pass in the world, there are many rantable, but rather more odious, by being examples to prove, no less than this of Xantippus: all of them confirming that sentence of Eurypedes, Mensuna fapiens, plurium vincit the Captains of their enemies whom they manus; Many mens bands equal not one wife

After this great service done to the Carwhether for that he was more envyed than | folency in others, as if it were lawfull only honoured, or for what other cause, it is un- in themselves.

The death of Atilius Regulus the Conful, was very memorable. He was fent from Carthage to Rome, about the exchange and ransome of prisoners on both sides: giving his faith to return if the business were not effected. When he came to Rome, and plainly faw that his Country thould lofe by the bargain: fo far was he from urging the Senate unto compafficu of his own milery, that he it impertinent, to add unto one, more teffiearneftly perswaded to have the prisoners in Africk left to their ill destinies. This done, pains taken, he was rewarded with an hor- fast upon the Venetians, as they not only rible death. For this his conftancy and drave their Gallies out of the Sea, but they faith, all Writers highly extoll him. But the brought their own fleet within two miles of Carthaginians feem to have judged him an Venice it felf. This bred fuch an amazement obstinate and malicious enemy, that neither in the Citie of Venice, that they offered unto in his prosperity would hearken to reather the Genomaies (their state reserved) whatsomer the Genomaies (their state reserved) where the Genomaies (their state reserved) whe the Genomaies (their state reserved) where the Genomaies (their fen, nor yet in his calamity would have ever they would demand. But Peter Dorid, therefore a great flaughter with little fight; the natural care, to preferve himfelf and that the Carthaginians could excuse themfelves herein; otherwise than by recriminano better intreated, for as much as it is their ordinary practice to use others in the like fort. Cruelty doth not become more warcustomary. It was the Roman fashion, to whip almost to death, and then to behead, took, yea although they were such as had alwayes made fair wars with them. Wherefore it feems not meet, in reason, that they thaginians, Xantippus, returned into Greece; | should cry out against the like tyrannical in-

The confideration both of this misfortune, that rewarded the pride of Atilius his intolerable demands; and of the fudden valour, whereinto the Carthaginians fear was changed by meer desperation; calls to remembrance, the like infolency of others in prosperity, that hath bred the like resolution in those, to whom all reasonable grace hath been denyed. In fuch cases I never hold monies; approving the true rules, from which our passions carry us away.

In the year 1378. the Genowaies won fo

CHAP. I. hearken to no composition; save the yield- an hundred and fourteen of their fleet, and near and state to his difference drew them after them to Chipea; where ing or men to by the Venetians, being filled with they staid no longer, than to take in their didain, thruft out to Sea with all their remaining power, and affail Doria with fuch done, they made amain toward Sicil, in deperate fury, that they break his fleet, kill hope to recover all that the Carthaginians desperate run state of the stat priloners, recover chiozza, and all the plathem to find harbour in time, for that the es taken from them; and following their feafon threatned fome violent forms, which victory, enter the Port of Genoa, enforcing ever hapned between the rifing of Grion, and of Infolency.

ø. IX.

How the affairs of Carthage prospered after mans, having loft their fleet by tempeft, refolve to forfake the Seas: The great advantages of a good fleet in war, between Nations divided by the Sea.

DY the reputation of this late victory, Dall places that had been loft in Africk, return to the obedience of Carthage. Only clypea stands out ; before which the Carthaginians sit down, and affail it, but in vain: For the Romans, hearing of the commanded by M. Æmilius, and Ser. Fultheir coming, encounter them: but greatly surround it by Land and Water: after a

blown up with many former victories, would to their cost. For the Romans took by force the Genowaies basely to beg peace, to their of the *Dog-flarr. Now although the Pi-'There is extream dishonour and diadvantage, being beaten; which, being victorious, they might beaten; which, being victorious, they might beaten; which, being victorious, they might beaten which being victorious, they might be with the state of t ocates, which have commanded, to their greatest honour field them withall, that the South coast of which hash and advantage. The like happed to the sieil had no good Ports, wherein to fave certain Earl of Flanders, in the year 1380, when themselves upon such an accident: yet this times of having taken a notable, and withal victorious Nation was perfeaded, that the outragious anover-cruel revenge upon the Gantois, he wind and seas feared them no less, than did beside an over-cruci revenge upon the samon, in all humi-refused mercy to the rest, who in all humi-lity, submitting themselves to his obedience, offered their City, goods, and effacts, to to fray within some Port, as they were ad-have upon be disposed at his pleasure. This when he vised, they would needs put out to Sea 3 a Medical and made undivised to refused and was resolved thinking a matter much believe their had unadvifedly refused, and was refolved thinking a matter much helping their mas flaw nad unadvincedly retined, and was to extinguish them utterly; they islike our reputation, after this victory against the shar self-dome or Carthaginian sleet, to take a few worth-never sales. and armed with a desperate resolution, they less Towns upon the coast. The merciles in the and armed with a desperate resolution, they less 10wns upon the coath. The merches in the charge the Earl, break his Army, enter winds in the mean while overtake them, desinthe Bruges (pell-mell) with his vanquished fol- and near unto Camerina, overturn and thrust moneths lowers; and enforce him to hide himself headlong on the rocks, all but fourscore of Augst under an heap of straw, in a poor cottage; of three hundred and forty ships, to as their tember, out of which with great difficulty he elea- former great victory was devoured by the thole most out or writen writen great admitted by the excellent ped, and faved himfelf. Such are the fruits Seas, before the fame thereof recovered winds, Rome call the Nortes, or North winds, are very featfal: and therefore they that navigate in those parts, take harber till those moneths take end. Charles the int being as ill advited, in passing the Seas towards Algors, in the Winter quanter contrary to the console of A. Doria, as he was in like unseefinable times to continue his steps before. Mex; in Larratius lost an hundred and form thins be remedite, and fifteren Gallies, with all is. the vidgory against Actilius: How the Roan hundred and fryn this by templets, and fifteen Gallies, with all in fifth in them, of men, yiduallers, horfes, and municion: a lois no lefs fifth in them, of men, yiduallers, horfes, and municion: a lois no lefs great, than his retreat, both from before the one and the other, was extreme difhonourable.

The Carthaginians, hearing what had hapned, repair all their warlike vessels hoping once again to command the Seas: they are also as consident of their land-forces fince the overthrow of Attilus. They fend Afdrubal into Sicil with all their old Souldiers, and an hundred and forcy Elephants imbarked in two hundred Gallies. With this Army and fleet he arrives at Lilybaum; where and withall, that Clypea was befigged, make he begins to vex the Partifans of Rome. But ready a gross Army, and transport it in a adversity doth not discourage the Romans: fleet of three hundred and fifty Gallies, They build in 3. moneths (a matter of great note) one hundred and twenty ships; with vius, their Consuls. At the Promontory of which, and the remainder of their late ship-Mercing, two hundred Carthaginian Gal-wrack, they row to Panormus, or Palerna, lies, fet out of purpole, upon the bruit of the chief City of the Africans in Sicil, and Hhhhh 2 while they take it, and leaving a Garrison vail against London, suddenly imbarqued: therein, return to Rome.

 $C_{H A P. I}$

ing in Africk: to which purpose they imploi- There sinding ill entertainment, he again ing in Africk: to which put por the state of this men, and entred the Severn, making od C. Servilius, and C. Sempronius, their Con-thipt his men, and entred the Severn, making fuls. But these wrought no wonders. Some Edmond to march after him, to the succour spoil they made upon the coasts of Africk: of Worcester-shire, by him greatly spoiled. but Fortune robbed them of all their gettings. For in their return, they were first back again to London: by means whereof, fet upon the fands, and like to have perished, neer unto the lesser syrtes, where they where he pleased, ere succour could arrive. were fain to heave all over-boord, that fo And this was not the least help, which the they might get off: then, having with much Netherlands have had against the Spaniards. ade doubled the Cape of Lilybaum, in their in the defence of their liberty, that being paliage from Panormus towards Haly, they Masters of the Sea, they could pass their loft an hundred and fifty of their thips by Army from place to place, unwearied, and foul weather. A greater discouragement entire, with all the Munition and Artillery never Nation had; the god of the wars fa- belonging unto it, in the tenth part of the voured them no more, than the god of the time, wherein their enemies have been able waters affilied them. Of all that Mars to do it. Of this an instance or two. The enricht them with upon the Land, Neptune Count Maurice of Nassau, now living, one of robbed them upon the Seas. For they had the greatest Captains, and of the worthiest now loft, besides what they lost in fight, Princes, that either the present or preceding four hundred and fix Ships and Gallies, with Ages have brought forth, in the year 1590. all the munition and Souldiers transported carryed his Army by Sea, with forty Canons in them.

tion, and their fight by Sea, and to fend diers, and victuals. But as foon as the wind only a Land-army into Sicil, under L. Cecili- ferved, he fudenly fet fail, arriving in the us, and F. Furius, their Confuls. These they mouth of the Menze, turned up the Rhine, transport in some threescore ordinary pai- and thence to Isell, and sate down before fage boats, by the straights of Meffana, that Zutphen. So before the Spaniards could are not above a mile and a half broad from march over land round about Holland. land to land. In like fort, the overthrow which Atilius received in Africa, occasioned Rivers, with their Cannon and carriage, chiefly by the Elephants, made them less Zutphen wastaken. Again, when the Spanish cholerick against the Carthaginians, than be- Army had overcome this wearisome march, fore; so that for two years after, they kept and were now far from home, Prince the high and woody grounds, not daring to fight in the fair and champion Countries.

Maurice, making countenance to fail up the Rhine, changed his course in the night; and But this late resolution of for saking the Seas sailing down the stream, he was set lasted not long. For it was impossible for down before Hulst in Brabant, ere the them to fuccour those places which they spaniards had knowledge what was become held in Sicil, without a Navy, much less of him. So this Town he also took, before to maintain the War in Africa. For, where- the Spanish Army could return. Lastly, the as the Romans were to fend forces from spanish Army was no sooner arrived in Bra-Messanato Egesta, to Lilybaum, and to other bant, than the Prince Maurice, well attendplaces in the extreme West parts of sicil, ed by his good fleet, having fortified Hull, making sometime a march of above an hun- let fail again, and presented himself before dred and forty English mile by land, which Nymegen in Gelders, a City of notable imcould not be performed without an Army, portance, and maftered it. and the provisions that follow it, in less than And to say the truth; it is impossible for advantage of transporting Armies by water, of the Sea. Hereof I had rather, that spain between Canutus, and Edmund Ironfide. For than England should be an example. Let it Camtus, when he had entred the Thames therefore be supposed, that King Philip the with his Navy and Army, and could not pre- fecond had fully refolved to hinder Sir John and failing to the West, landed in Dorset-shire, Very desirous the Romans were to be do- so drawing Edmund and his Army thither. to Breda: making countenance either to The exceeding damage hereby received, befiege Boifledue, or Gertreviden Berg; which perswaded them to give over their Naviga- the enemy (in prevention) filled with Soul-

14. dayes; the Carthaginians would pass it any maritime Country, not having the with their Gallies, in eight and forty hours. An old example we have, of that great against a powerful enemy, that is master Don Antonio, King of Portugale, before the tive. This he holds only upon supposition: oates of Lysborne; and that he would have in absence of our shipping: and comparativekept off the English, by power of his land- | ly, as that it is a more safe and easie course. forces; as being too weak at Sea, through to defend all the coast of England, than to the great overthrow of his mighty Armado, fuffer any enemy to land, and afterwards to by the fleet of Queen Elizabeth, in the year light with him. Surely I hold with him. foregoing. Surely, it had not been hard for that it is the best way, to keep our enemies him, to prepare an Army, that should be from treading upon our ground; wherein, able to refift our eleven thousand. But if we fail, then must we seek to make him where should this his Army have been be- wish, that he had stayed at his own home. flowed? If about Lisborne; then would it In such a case, if it should happen, our have been easie unto the English, to take, judgements are to weigh many particular ransack, and burn the Town of Croin, and circumstances, that belongs not unto this to waste the Country round about it. For discourse. But making the question general, the great and threatning preparations of and positive, Whether England, without the the Earle of Altemira, the Marquels of Se- help of her fleet, be able to debarr an enemy ralba, and others did not hinder them from from landing; I hold that it is unable fo to performing all this. Neither did the hasty do: and therefore I think it most dangelevy of eight thousand under the Earle of rous to make the adventure. For the in-Affociates: confidering that the English the invaded, may draw after it a most pericharged these, at Puente de Burges, and paf- lous consequence. fing the great Bridge, behind which they lay, that was flanked with fliot, and barricadoed at the further end, routed them, by his wanting forces, wherewith to have took their camp; took their General standard with the Kings Arms, and pursued them | Protestant Religion, after the battail of Monover all the Country, which they fired. If a | contour, entred that Country, and gathered Royal Army, and not (as this was) a Company of private adventurers, had thus begun King (faith he) would have given me but the war in Galicia; I think it would have reasonable means, j'ensse bien garde à Monmade the Spaniards to quit the guard of fieur l'Admiral de fair boire ses Chevaux en Portugale, and make hafte to the defence of la Garonne; I would have kept the Admiral their St. Jago, whose Temple was not far from watering his horses in the River of Gafrom the danger. But, had they held their ronne. Monfeur de Langey, on the contrary first resolution, as knowing, that Sir John side, prefers the not fighting upon a fron-Norris his main intent was, to bring Don An- tier with an invading enemy, and commends tenio, with an Army into his Kingdom, whi- the delay; which course the Constable of ther coming strong, he expected to be rea- France held against the Emperour Charles, dily and joyfully welcomed: could they have hindred his landing in Portugale? Did | I know there is, and a diverse consideration not he land at Penicha, and march over to be had, between such a country as France the Country to Lisborn, fix dayes journey? is, strengthened with many fortified places; Did not he (when all Don Antonio his pro- and this of ours, where our Rampars are miles failed) pass along by the River of but of the bodies of men. And it was of in-Lysborne to Cascaliz, and there, having won vasions upon firm land, that these great the Fort, quietly imbarque his men, and de- | Captains spake: whose entrances cannot be part? But these, though no more than an uncertain. But our question is of an Army handful, yet were they Englishmen. Let us to be transported over Sea, and to be landconfider of the matter it felf; what another ed again in an enemies countrey, and the Nation might do, even against England, in place lest to the choice of the invader. landing an Army, by advantage of a fleet, if Hereunto I fay, That fuch an Army cannot we had none. This question, Whether an be resisted on the coast of England, without imunding Army may be relifted at their land- | a fleet to impeach it; no, nor on the coast of ing upon the coaft of England, were there no France, or any other Countrey : except evefleet of ours at the Sea to impeach it; is alrea- ry Creek, Port, or fandy Bay, had a powdy handled by a learned Gentleman of our erful Army, in each of them, to make op-

Norris in the year 1589, from prefenting | Commentaries, that maintains the affirma-Andrada, ferve to more effect, than the increase of honour to Sir John Norris, and his

It is true, that the Marshal Monluc, in his Commentaries, doth greatly complain, that kept the frontier of Guyenne, they of the great strength and relief thence; for if the when he invaded Provence. Great difference Nation, in his observations upon Cesars position. For let his whole supposition be fand be layed in the three best landing will at length sit down in the mid-way; and places within that Country, to wit, three leave all at adventure. But fay it were thousand at Margat, three thousand at the otherwise; that the invading enemy will Nesse, and 6000 at Foulkston, that is some-offer to land in some such place, where there what equally diffant from them both; as also shall be an Army of ours ready to receive that two of these troops (unless some other him; yet it cannot be doubted, but that order be thought more fit) be directed to when the choice of all our Trained Bands, \ frengthen the third, when they shall fee and the choice of our Commanders and the enemies fleet to bend towards it: I fay, Captains, shall be drawn together (as they that notwithstanding this provision, if the were at Tilbury in the year 1588.) to attend enemy, fetting fail from the Ille of Wight, the person of the Prince, and for the dein the first watch of the night, and towing fence of the City of London: they that retheir long boats at their fterns, shall arrive by dawn of day at the Nesse, and thrust force, as to encounter an Army like unto that their Army on fhorethere; it will be hard wherewith it was intended that the Prince for those three thousand that are at Margat, of Parma should have landed in England. (twenty and four long miles from thence) to come time enough to re-enforce their perience, what to think in fuch a cafe. There fellows at the Nofe. Nay, how shall they are not many Islands in the world, better at Foulkstone be able to do it, who are nearer by more than half the way? feeing that the enemy, at his first arrival, will either no good harbour wherein to shelter a Navy make his entrance by force, with three or of friends, and upon every cove or watering four hundred shot of great Artillery, and place a Fort erected, to forbid the approach quickly put the first three thousand, that were intrenched at the Nesse, to run; or else give them so much to do, that they shall be glad to fend for help to Foulkston and perhaps to Margat: whereby those places will be left bare. Now let us suppole, that all the twelve thouland Kentilb Souldiers arrive at the Nesse, ere the enemy can be ready to dif-embarque his Army, fo face of fo many, prepared to withfrand ficur de Chatter, running thither in vain, him; yet must we believe, that he will play could come to hinder him. The example of that he will find it unfafe, to land in the the best of his own game; (having liberty to go which way he lift) under covert all regard of his worth, and of threehunof the night, fet fail towards the East, dred, French prisoners murdered in cold where what shall hinder him to take blood; had instructed de Chattes, and his ground, either at Margat, the Downes, or followers, what they might expect at that elsewhere, before they at the Nesse can be Marquess his hands: Therefore it is not like, well aware of his departure? Certainly, that they were flow in carrying in relief to there is nothing more easie than to do it. Fort des Moles. Whether our English would be Yea, the like may be faid of Waymouth, Pur- persuaded to make such diligent haste, from beck, Foole, and of all landing places on the Margat to the Nesse, and back again, it may South Coast. For there is no man ignorant, be doubted. Sure I am, that it were a greaters that coast them. Les armees ne volent the one half when they found themselvsprepoint emposite; Armies neither size, nor run vented by the more nimble Ships of spain. post saith a Marshal of France. And I know be feen at Sun-fet, and after it, at the Li-horfe is able to follow, cannot be denyed to fard; yet by the next morning they may re- land where it lift, in England, France, or elfecover Fortland, whereas an Army of foot where, unless it be hindred, encountred, and shall not be able to march it in fix dayes. Inuffled together, by a fleet of equal or an-Again, when those troops lodged on the swerable strength, granted; That Kent is able to furnish twelve Sea-shores, shall be forced to run from place thousand foot, and that those twelve thou- to place in vain, after a fleet of ships; they

The Isle of Tercera hath taught us by exbeing every where hard of access; having Sylva, and Monsieur de Chattes, that held it to the use of Don Antonio, with five or fix thousand men, thought to have kept the Marquess of Santa Cruz, from setting foot on ground therein; the Marquels having shewed himself in the Road of Angra, did fet sail, ere any was aware of it, and arrived at the Port des Moles, far distant from thence; where he wan a Fort, and landed ere Monthat thips, without putting themselves out er march than all the length of Tercera; of breath, will easily out-run the Souldi- whereof the French-men had not measured

This may suffice to prove, that a strong Army, in a good fleet, which neither foot, nor CHAP. I. our Prince and Nation, that a few Islanders and betake themselves to an hasty trot. should not think any advantage great enough, against a Fleet set forth by Q. Eliafew other Gentlemen, voluntaries, whom Sea, and not trust to any intrenchment up-I could not refuse; as, Sir William Brook, Sir on the shore. William Harvey, Sir Arthur Gorges, Sir John Skot, Sir Thomas Ridgeway, Sir Henry Tinnes. Sir Charls Morgan, Sir Walter Chute, Marcellus Throckmorton, Captain Laurence Kemis, Captain William Morgan, and others fuch as well understood themselves and the enemy: by whose help, with Gods favour, I made good the enterprize I undertook. As for the working of the Sea, the steepness of the cliffs, and other troubles that were not new to us, we overcame them well enough. And these (notwithstanding) made five or

The difficult landing of our English, at fix companies of the enemies, that fought to Figd, in the year 1597, is alledged against impeach our landing, abandon the wall, this: which example moves me no way to whereon their Mulketiers lay on the Rest think, that a large Coast may be defended for us, and won the place of them without against a strong Fleet. I landed those English any great loss. This I could have done with in Fajal my felf, and therefore ought to take less danger, so that it should not have served notice of this infrance. For whereas I find for example of a Rule, that failed even in an Adion of mine cited, with omiffion of this example: but the reasons before alan autou of man, by a civil interpretation, ledged, (together with other reasons well think, that there was no purpose to defraud known to some of the Gentlemen aboveme of any honour; but rather an opinion, named, though more private than to be here that the enterprize was fuch, or foill man-laid down) made me rather follow the way aged, as that no honour could be due unto of bravery, and take the shorter course; hait, There were indeed some which were in ving it still in mine own power to fall off that voyage, who advised me not to under- when I should think it meet. It is easily said, takeit: and I hearkened unto them fome- that the Enemy was more than a Coward; what longer than was requisite, especially, (which yet was more than we knew) neither whilft they defired me to referve the title of will I magnifie fuch a small piece of service. fuch an exploit (though it were not great) by feeking to prove him better: whom had for a greater person. But when they began I thought equal to mine own followers, I rotell me of difficulty; I gave them to un- would otherwise have dealt with. But for so derstand, the same which I now maintain, much as concerns the proposition in hand; that it was more difficult to defend a coast, he that beheld this, may well remember that thanto invade it. The truth is, that I could the same enemy troubled us more in our have landed my men with more ease than I march towards Fayal, than in our taking the did; yea without finding any refistance, if shore; that he sought how to stop us in I would have rowed to another place; yea place of his advantage, that many of our even there where I landed, if I would have men were slain or hurt by him, among whom taken more company to help me. But, with Sir Arthur Gorges was shot in that march; out fearing any imputation of rashness, I and that such, as (thinking all danger to be may say, that I had more regard of reputa- past, when he had won good footing) would tion in that business, than of fafety. For I needs follow us to the Town, were driven thought it to belong unto the honour of by him, to forfake the pace of a man of war,

For end of this Digression, I hope that this question shall never come to tryal; his zabeth: and further, I was unwilling, that Majesties many movable Forts will forbid fome Low-Country Captains, and others, not the experience. And although the English of mine own squadron, whose affistance I had will no less disdain, than any Nation under refused, should please themselves with a Heaven can do, to be beaten upon their own iweet conceit (though it would have been ground, or elsewhere by a forein enemy; yet fhort, when I had landed in some other to entertain those that shall assail us, with place) That for want of their help I was driven their own Beef in their bellies, and before is turn tail. Therefore I took with me none, they eat of our Kentish Capons, I take it to but men affured, Commanders of mine own be the wifest way. To do which, his Majesty, fquadron, with some of their followers, and after God, will imploy his good ships on the

802

ø. X.

How the Romans attempt again to get the Mathe Roman Conful at Panormus : The fiege of Lilybæum. How a Rhodian Gally enared Lilybæum at pleasure, in despisht of to Rome; the whole State filled with coutheir Consuls, abandon the Seas again.

Hen, without a strong Navy, the held in sicil; and all (indeed) save preparation of the p fible, either to keep what they had already down before it, and posses themselves of all gotten in Sicil, or to enlarge their Domi- the places of advantage near unto it, espenions in Africa, or elfewhere; they refolved cially of fuch as command the Haven, which once again, notwithstanding their late mish had a very difficult entrance. They also beat adventures, to frengthen their Fleet and to the ground fix Towers of defence; and Ships of war. So cauting fifty new Gallies by forcible engines weaken fo many other to be built, and the old to be repaired, they gave them in charge (together with certain to despair. Yet Himileo, Commander of the Legions of Souldiers) to the new Confuls, place faileth not in all that belongs to a man C. Attilus, and L. Manlius. On the other of War. All that is broken he repaireth side, Asdrubal perceiving that the Romans, partly by reason of the shipwrack which they had lately suffered, partly by reason of all the affronts that possibly could be made. the overthrow which they received by Xantippus in Africa, were less daring than they ten thousand Souldiers; among which there had been in the beginning of the war: and withall, that one of the Confuls was returned into Italy, with the one half of the Army, the Town. But the matter is revealed by an and that Cacilius, with only the other half, remained at Fanormus; he removed with danger of the like treason, saved Agrigorum. the Carthaginian forces from Lilybaum towards it, hoping to provoke Cacilius to fight. the hired Souldiers, and imploys Hannibal to But the Consul was better advised. For when appeale the troops of the Gaules, which did Afdrubal had made his approaches fomewhat near the Town, Cacilius caused a deep my. All, promise constancy and truth; so trench to be cut, a good diffance without that the Traitors, being unable to perform the ditch of the City: between which and what they had undertaken, are fain to live histrench he left ground sufficient, to em- in the Roman Camp as sugitives, that had battel a Legion of his Souldiers. To these he gave order that they should advance them-felves, and pass over the new trench, till such their own foot-men, and utterly difordered great flaughter on both fides. But the Rothern Cariffring Communication of the state of the them. Cacilius effying his advantage, fallied mans, being more in number, and having with all the force he had; and charging the other troops, that stood embattailed, he utterly brake them, and put them to their flery of the Seas. The Victory of Carcilius heels; making a great flaughter of them, and taking all their Elephants.

The report of this Victory being brought the Roman Fleet. That it is a matter of rage, prepared a new Fleet of two hundred great difficulty to flop the puffage of good fail, which they fent into sicil, to give end flips. The Romans, byreafon of grievous to that war, that had now lasted fourteen loffes received under Claudius and Junius years. With this Fleet and Army the Romans resolve to attempt Lilybaum, the only place of importance which the Carthaginians parts of the City, as the defendants begin with admirable diligence; he makethmany furious fallies, and giveth to the Romans He hath in Garrison (besides the Citizens) are certain Lieutenants, and other petty officers, that conspire to render and betray Achean, called Alexon, who had formerly in Himilco useth the help of Alexon, to affure waver, and had fent their agents to the enewrought no good whereby to deserve their time as the African Elephants were thrust their relief, having Hannibal the Son of Amilear for their Conductor: who, indeed them to retire by flow degrees till they spight of all resistance, entred the Port and City, to the incredible joy of the belieged. the new trench, which they could by no The old Souldiers, together with the new means pass. This they performed accordingly. For when the Elephants were at a stand, they were forward and beater. Let be they were forward and beater. they were so gawled and beaten, both by upon the Romans in their trenches, and elthose Souldiers that were on the inside of ther force them to abandon the segge, or at the trench, and by those that lay in the least) to take from them, or set on fire their trench it felf, that being inraged by their malengines of battery. The attempt is prefently ny wounds, they brake back furioully upon made, and purfued to the uttermost, with CHAP. I.

their engines. They of Carthage defire greatly to underknow not how to fend into the Town. A and finding no possibility to master it, other-Gally to Egusa, a little Island near Lilyba-

either fide. vert of the dark night, nor dreading to be Dukes Cannon, in despight of it; when a his return, he set fail, and shipped his Oars favoured them; as also with a contrary the Sca, in despight of all the pursuit made the River, to his marvellous trouble and after him. Then, finding himselfout of danger | charge. of being encompassed by many, he turned again towards the mouth of the Haven, the year 1596 when we entred the Port of challenging any one, if any one durft come Caliz, neither did the Fort at Puntal, when

In the beginning of our late Queens time, our East-land Flect, bound for Leif-land, was He arrives in fafety at Carthage, and makes Part of the Fort of Elfenour; which at that ment, ran her felf aground thereon, and the advantage of the ground, hold still their time was not so well rampard, as now perthe auvanian and with extreme difficulty defend haps it is: and the Fleet of Merchants that wound received. Neither was it long, fince fland the state of things at Lilybaum; but that the Duke of Parma, besieging Antwerp, Know not now to distance the fervice; and wife than by famine, laid his Cannon on the certain acceived his dispatch, fails with one bank of the River, so well to purpose, and um. Thence, taking his time he steered di-thought it impossible for the least boat to really with the Port; and having a passing pass by. Yet the Hollanders and Zelanders, fwift Gally, he past through the best of the not blown up by any wind of glory, but Channel, and recovered the water-gate ere coming to find a good market for their Butany of those which the Romans had to guard ter and Cheese, even the poor men, attendanyounce could thrust from the shores on ing their profit when all things were extreme dear in Antwerp passed in boats of The next day, neither attending the co-ten or twelve Tun, by the mouth of the boorded by the Roman Gallies, who waited strong Westerly wind, and a Tide of flood (his Gally being exceeding quick of freer- wind, and an ebbing water, they turned age, and himself expert in all parts of the back again: so as he was forced, in the Channel) recovered the Havens mouth, and end, to build his Stockado overthwart

The Fort Saint Philip terrified not us in forth, to undertake him. This enterprife, and we were entred, beat us from our anchoring the well performing of it, was very remark- by it; though it plaid upon us with four able, and much wondred at in those dayes: demi-cannons within point-blank, from fix and yet, where there was no great Artillery, in the morning till twelve at noon. The fiege nor any other weapons of fire, to kill afarr of Oftend, and of many other places, may be off, the adventure which this Rhodian made given for proof, how hard a matter it is to was not greatly hazardous. For in this Age, stop the passage of a good ship, without anoa valiant and judicious man of war will not ther as good to encounter it. Yet this is fear to pass by the best appointed Fort of true, that where a Fort is so set, as that of Europe, with the help of a good Tide, and Angra in Tercera, that there is no passage a leading gale of wind: no, though forty along beside it, or that the ships are driven pieces of great Artillery open their mouths to turn upon a bow-line towards it, wanting against him, and threaten to tear him in all help of wind and tide; there, and in such wife not.

But to return to our adventrous Rhodian: forbidien by the King of Denmark to trade them know the estate of Lilybeum. Others with the subjects of his enemies, and he also, after this, take upon them to do the threatned to fink their ships if they came like, and perform it with the same sucthrough the straights of Elfenour. Not with- ccss. The Romans therefore labour to choak standing this, our Merchants (having a ship the Channel; and, for that purpose, fill maof her Majesties, called the Minion to de- ny Merchants ships with great stones, and fend them) made the adventure, and fu- fink them therein. The force of the Tides staining some Vollies of shot, kept on their clears it again in part: but they grounded course. The King made all the provision so many of those great bellied-boats in the he could to stop them, or fink them at their best of the entrance, as at last it made a return. But the Minion, commanded (as I manifest rising and heap, like a ragged Island take it) by William Burrough, leading the in the passage. Hereby it came to pass, that way, did not only pass out with little loss, a Carthaginian Gally, taking her course by but did beat down, with Artillery, a great night, and not suspecting any such impediwas taken. Now comes that brave Rho- and for want of Sea-room, fo ftraightned dian, thinking to enter, as he had done be- as he could not turn himlelf any way from fore: but this Carthaginian Gally, a little his enemies, nor range himself in any order. before taken, gave him chase, and gathered Therefore when he found no hope of reupon him: he finds what she is, both by her form, and by her swittness; and being not he thrust out of the Bay with thirty Galable to run from her, resolved to fight with lies, besides his own, and so fled away: all her. But she is too well manned for him, so that he is beaten and taken.

the Souldiers being worn with labour and greatly honoured at Carthage; and Clauwatching. But in this despair there rose so diss, for his indiscretion and flight, as much violent a tempest, as some of the Romans disgraced at Rome. Wooden-Towers, by which they over-topt the walls of Lilybeum; were over-turned. loss, arm threescore Gallies, with which A Greek Souldier undertakes to fire those they fend away L. Junius, their Conful, to that were fallen, and performs it: for the take charge of their business in Sicil. Junius fire was no fooner kindled, but being blown arrives at Messana, where he meets with the unto by the bellows of a tempest, it increa- whole remainder of the Roman Fleet, those fed to fast, as it became refittless, and in the excepted which rode in the Port of Liliend burned all to ashes, and melted the beum. One hundred and twenty Gallies he brazen heads of the battering Ramus, had; and besides these, he had gotten to-Hereupon, despair and weariness hinder the gether almost eight hundred ships of bur-Romans from repairing their Engines: fo then, which were laden with all necessary the defendants.

of ten thousand Souldiers is sent from wait for some that were too slow of salto Rome, under M. Claudius, the Conful. He keep company with him along from Mofarrives at Messana, and marcheth over Sana. In the mean time he dispatchethaway Land to Lilybeum: where having re-infor- towards Lilybeum his Questors or Treaced the Army, and supplied the Gallies with surers; to whom he commits the one half of new Rowers, he propounds the furprife of his victuallers, with some Gallies for their Drepanum, a City on the other fide of the Convov. Bay of Lilybaum. This service the Captains and Souldiers willingly embrace. So the victory: but studied how to use it to the best Conful embarques his troops, and arrives on advantage. The ships and prisoners that he the fudden in the mouth of the Port. Ad- had taken, he fent to Carthage. Of his own herbal is Governour of the Town, a vali Gallies he delivered thirty to Carthalb, who ant and prudent man of war, who being had threefcore and ten more under his own ignorant of the new supply arrived at Lily- charge; and sent him to try what good might beum, was at first amazed at their sudden ap- | be done against the Roman Fleet in the Haproach; but having recovered his spirits, ven of Lilybeum. According to his direction, he perswades the Souldiers rather to fight | Carthalo suddenly enters the mouth of that abroad, than to be enclosed. Herewithall he Haven, where he finds the Romans more atpromifeth great rewards to fuch, as by tentive to the keeping in of the belieged Cartheir valour shall deserve them; offering to thaginians, than to the desence of their own lead them himself, and to fight in the head against another Flect. So he chargeth them, of his Fleet. Having fufficiently encouraged | boords, and takes some, and fires the rest. his men, he thrust into the Sea towards the The Roman Camp takes alarm, and hastens Romans. The Conful, deceived of his ex- to the refeue. But Himileo, Governour of the pectation, calls back the foremost Gallies, the Town, is not behind hand, who fallies out that he might now marshall them for de- at the same time, and putting the Romani to fence. Hereupon some row backward some great distress, gives Carthalo good lessure to forward, in great confusion. Adherbal finds go through with his enterprise. and follows his advantage, and forceth the Conful into a Bay at hand, wherein he the South coast of sicil, devising how to rangeth himself, having the Land on his work mischief to the enemy; wherein forback: hoping thereby to keep himlelf from tune prefented him with a fair occasion, being incompassed. But he was thereby, which he wisely managed. He was adver-

fistance, keeping the shore on his left hand. the rest of his Fleet, to the number of nine. ty and four fhips, were taken or funk by the Lilyboum, after this, is greatly diffressed, Carthaginians. Adherbal for this service is

The Romans, notwithstanding this great that they refolve, by a long fiege, to starve provisions for the Army. With this great the defendants. Upon relation of what had past, a supply a while; partly to take in Corn, partly to

Adherbal was not careless after his late

After this exploit, Carthalo ran all along manner of Vessels. These were the victual ons upon firm ground. But such a resolution manuel of the Conful Junius, more hastily cannot long hold. Either they must be then providently, had fent before him to- ftrong at Sea, or elfe they mult not make wards Ligheum. Carthalo was glad to hear war in an Island, against those that have a of their coming: for he and his men were mightier fleet. Yet are they to be excused, of the full of courage, by reason of their late victo in regard of the many great calamities ries. Accompting therefore the great mul- which they had fuffered through their want titude of Roman Hulks, approaching, to be of ikill. Here I cannot forbear to comrather a prey than a ficet likely to make mend the patient vertue of the spaniards. from opposition, he hastens to encounter We seldom or never find, that any Nation them. It fell out according to his expectati- hath endured fo many misadventures and on. The Romans had no mind to fight: but miferier, as the Spaniards have done, in their were glad to feek thelter in an open Road, Indian Discoveries. Yet perfitting in their full of Rocks under a covert of a poor enterprifes with an invincible conflancy, Town, belonging to their party; that could they have annexed to their Kingdom fo helptofave them only from the prefent dan- many goodly Provinces, as bury the rememger, by lending them engines and other aid, brance of all dangers paft. Tempefts and wherewith to beat off the Carthaginians that hipwracks, famine, overthrows, mutinies, affailed them. Carthalo therefore, having heat and cold, peftilence, and all manner of taken a few of them, lay waiting for the diseases both old and new, together with Roman fleets; where he watcheth, to fee hinder not the like vertue in others, which which of them would first stir, with a refo- (perhaps) will not be found. lution to affault that, which should first dare to put it felf into the Sea. So as now all the three fleets were on the South coast of sicil, between the Promontory of Pachinus and The City of Eryx is surprised by the Romans, Lilybeum; a Tract exceeding dangerous, when the wind ftormed at South. The Carthaginians, who knew the times of tempest, and their figns, finding (belike) some iwelling billow (for fo we do in the West of England, before a Southernly ftorm) hafted to double the Cape of Pachinus, thereby to cover themselves from the rage at hand. But the Romans, who knew better how to fight than how to Navigate, and never found any against the rocks, and utterly wrackt.

tifed by his Scouts, that they had discryed, that they resolved again to forsake the Seas, near at band, a great fleet, confifting of all and trust only to the service of their Legireft, that could not long ride under those extream poverty, and want of all things Rocks, but would be forced by any great needful, have been the enemies wherewith change of wind, either to put out into the every one of their most noble discoverers, deep, or to fave their men, how they could, at one time or other, hath encountred. Many by taking land, with the loss of all their years have passed over some of their heads in flipping. Whilft he was bufied in this care, the Conful Janius drew near, and was discovered. Against him Carthalo makes out, and their wealth, and their lives, in search of a characteristic or the conful Janius drew near, and was discovered. Against him Carthalo makes out, and finds him altogether unprepared to fight as golden Kingdom, without getting further being wholly ignorant of that which had notice of it, than what they had at their first hapned. The Conful had neither means to fetting forth. All which notwithstanding, fly, nor ability to fight. Therefore he like the third, fourth, and fifth undertakers, wife ran into a very dangerous Creek 3 have not been disheartned. Surely, they are thinking no danger to great as that of the worthily rewarded with those Treasuries enemy. The Carthaginian seeing this, be- and Paradises which they enjoy; and well takes himfelf to a Station between the two they deferve to hold them quietly, if they

ø. XI.

and recovered by Amilcar, who stoutly holds war with them five years. The Romans, having emptied their common treasury, build a new fleet at the charges of private men. The great victory at Sea of Luctatius the Consul; whereby the Carthaginians are forced to crave peace. The conditions of the peace between Rome and Carthage.

THE Romans were careful to supply with all industry, by land, the want their Sooth-layers being all land-Prophets, of strength at Sea. Therefore they conwere fuddenly overtaken with a boifterous tinue the fiege of Lilybeum, and feek to South-wind, and all the Gallies forced make fure to themselves all places, whither the enemies ships could not bring relief. This calamity to difcouraged the Romans, The Conful Junius, to cure the wound of thought him what enterprifes to undertake. about two years more; hoping still to wea-In the end he resolved to attempt the ry out those that lay over his head, as they Mountain and City of Eryx, with the Tem- on the contrary did their best, to thrush him ple of Venus Ergeina: which was the fairest out of those quarters. and richeft of all the Island; and of these, At this time, all the care, both of the Raby cunning or treason, he got possession. mans and of the Carthaginians, was bent unto Errx was commodioully feated between the profecuting of this business at Errx. Drepanum and Panormus; fo that it feemed Wherein it feems true (as Hannibal, in Livie, a fit place for a Garrison, that should re- spake unto scipio) that the affairs of carfrain the Carthaginians from making roads thage never frood in better terms, fince the into the Country. Wherefore Junius for- beginning of the war, than now they did. tified both the top of the Mountain, and the For whereas the Romans had utterly forfafirst entrance of the passage from the bottom, (both of which places, were very delosses, partly upon confidence of their landfensible) with a good strength of men. But forces, which they held resistles; Amilear, thortly after, in the eighteenth year of this with a fmall Army, had fo well acquitted war the Carthaginians let forth Amilear, fur- himself, to the honour of his Country, that named Barcas, Father of the great Hannibal, by the tryal of five years war, the Carthagiwith a Fleet and Army, who failing to the nian Souldier was judged equal, if not funewith a rice and rimy, who laming to the coafts of Haly, did throughly repay the fools which the Romans made in Africa. From the first of all wasted and destroyed the the dislogding of this obstinate Warriour: Territories of the Locrians, and of the Bru- no way feemed better to the Senate of Rome, tians, that were dependants of Rome. Then than once again to build a fleet; whereby, entred he into sicil, and finding there no if the maftery of the Sea could once be gotwalled City in the Carthaginians power, that ten, it was likely that Amilear, for lack of ferved fitly to infest the Romans, he occu- supply, should not long be able to hold out, pied a piece of ground of great advantage, But in performing this, extream difficulty and lodged his Army thereon; to confront was found. The common treasury was exas well the Romans, that were in Panormus, haufted: and the coft was not little, that was as those that kept about Ergx, putting him- requisite unto such an enterprise. Wherefore felf between both Armies with admirable there was none other way left, thantolay refolution.

was not only very strong by situation, but (each at his own charges) one Quinquehad the command of a Port: whereby it reme, which example wrought fo well, that gave him opportunity to fcour all the coast they, whose ability would not serve to do of Italy with his Fleet, wasting all along as the like, joyned with some others, and layfar as to Cuma. In the Ille of sicil he held ing their mony together, concurred two or the Romans to hard work, lying near unto three of them, in building of another; with Panormus: where, in three years abode, he condition to be repayed, when the war was did many notable acts, though not of much | finished. By this voluntary contribution, confequence, for that the enemy could ne- they made and finished two hundred new ver be drawn to hazard the main chance. Quinqueremes: taking for their pattern, that Having wearied himself and the Romans excellent swift rowing Gally which they had long enough about Panormus, he undertook gotten from the Rhodian, in the Port of Lia ftrange piece of work at Eryx. The Roman Jobens, as was flewed before. The charge of this fleet was committed to C. Luddains were very strongly lodged. Nevertheless the Spring following, and entred the Porton of the Mountain, were very strongly lodged. Nevertheless the Spring following, and entred the Porton of the Spring following, and entred the Porton of the Spring following. Amilear found a way, lying towards the Drepanum; indeavouring by all means to Sea-fide, by which he conveighed his men have forced the City. But being advertised into the City of Eryx, that was about the that the Carthaginian fleet was at hand, and midst of the ascent, ere the enemy knew of being mindful of the late losies which his it. By this it came to pass, that the Romans Predecessors had received; he was carewhich kept the top of the mountain, were ful to put himself in order, against their arstraightly held (as it were) befieged. And rival. no less was Amilear himself restrained, by Hanno was Admiral of the Carthaginian both of these Garrisons, and such as came to sleet; a man (as his actions declare him) wife dishonour, which he had received, be relieve them. There he found them passime the burden upon private purses. Divers of The place that Amilear had seized upon, the principal Citizens undertook to build in the art of feeming reverend. How his re- was a good course, if it could have been perputation was first bred, I do not find; but formed. But Catulus used all possible diliit was upheld by a factious contradiction, of gence, to prevent the execution of this dethings undertaken by men more worthy fign:not because he was informed of the enethan himself. This quality procured unto mies purpose, but that he knew it to be the him (as it hath done to many others) both best for them, and for that he feared no dangood liking among the ancient fort, whose ger fo greatly, as to encounter with Amilear. cold comper is adverle from new enterprifes, Wherefore although the weather was very and therewithall an opinion of great fore- rough, and the Seas went high, when the Carfight, confirmed by every lofs received. thaginian fleet was descried; yet he rather He had ere this been imployed against the he had lightned his Gallies of all unnecessary when, having shewed himself an unworthy Captain, he betook himself to the long Robe. Yet is he much commended in Roman Histomended.

with all needful provisions for the Souldiers ing all conclusions to his election and sole at Fryx (for dexterity in making prepara- counsel. tion was the best of his qualities): but he car himself, by whose help he doubted not, otherwise, than if the Senate and People of but that he should be able to make his enein picture, exceedingly formal, and skilful my repent of his new adventure to Sea. This More particularly, he was gracious among chofe to fight with the enemy, that had the the people, for that he was one of the most wind of him, than to suffer his convoy to pass grievous oppressors of their subject Provin- along to Eryx, upon unlikely hope of better ces; whereby he procured unto the Cartha- opportunity in the future. All that Hanno ginians much wealth, but therewithall fuch should have done, Catulus had performed. He hatred, as turned it all to their great loss, had carefully exercised his men in Rowing; Numidians and wild Africans, that were burthens; & he had taken aboord the choise more like to Rovers than to Souldiers, in men of the Roman Land-Souldiers. The making War. Of those fugitive Nations he Carthaginians therefore, at the first encounlearned to neglect more manly enemies, to ter were utterly broken and defeated, hahis own great dishonour, and to the great ving sifty of their Gallies stemmed and sunk, hurt of Carthage; which loft not more by his bad conduct, than by his malicious counfel,

The state of Carthage, utterly discouries, as a temperate man, and one that stu-raged by this change of fortune, knew not died how to preserve the League between whereon to resolve. Means to repair their Carthage and Rome. In which regard, how fleet in any time, there were none left; well he deserved of his own Country, it will their best men of war by Sea were conappear hereafter: how beneficial he was to fumed; and Amilear, upon whose valour the Romans, it will appear, both hereafter, and judgment the honour and lafety of the and in his present voyage; wherein he re-|Common-weal rested, was now surrounded duced the Carthaginians to a miserable ne- by his enemies in sicil, where he could ceffity of accepting, upon hard conditions, not be relieved. In this extremity, they that peace which he thence-forth com- make dispatch unto Amilear himself, and authorized him to take what course should Hanno had very well furnished his Navy, seem best unto his excellent wisdom, leav-

Amilear, whom no adverfity, accompahad neither been careful in training his nied with the least hope or possibility of re-Marriners, to the practice of Sea-fight, nor covery, had ever vanquished, looking over in manning his Gallies with front fellows. He every promise, true or false, that the present thought, that the fame of a Carthaginian time could make him, (for to attend any fleet was enough, to make the unexpert Ro- thing from the future he was not able) remans give way: forgetting, that rather the folved to make trial, whether his necessity refiltles force of tempelts, than any other might be compounded upon any reasonable flrength of opposition, had made them to terms. He therefore sent to Lust atime the forfake the Seas. Yet in one thing he had ei- Conful an overture of peace: who confiderther conceived aright, or else was sent forth ing it well, gathered so many arguments well instructed. It was his purpose, first of all from the present poverty of the Roman to fail to Errx, and there to discharge his State, wasted beyond expectation in the this of their lading : and having thus light | former war, that he formerly hearkned unto ned himself, he meant to take aboord some it. So, in conclusion, an accord was made, but Part of the Land-army, together with Amil- with provision, That it should hold none

CHAP. HI.

Carthaginians (bould clearly abandon the ment. Further also they took order, that The of sicil. Secondy, that they should the Carthaginians should not only depart never undertake upon Hieron King of Syra- out of Sicil it felf, but should also withdraw never undertance openate of his Territories, their Companies out of all other Islands benor the Territories of any of his Friends tween it and Italy, renouncing their whole and Allies. Thirdly, that they should fet at interest therein. liberty, and iend back into Haly, all the Ro- Such was the end of the first Punick War, mans, whom they held prisoners, without that had lasted about twenty four years ransome. Lastly, that they should pay unto without intermission; in which time the the Romans two thousand and two hundred Romans had loft, by fight or shipwrack, talents; which make, as the French reckon about feven hundred Quinqueremei; and the talent, thirteen hundred and twenty the Carthaginians about five hundred the thousand crowns: the same to be delivered greatness of which losses, doth serve to prove within twenty years next following.

Commissioners were sent into sicil, to make in general, did shew themselves the braver perfect the agreement. These Commission Nation; and Amilear, the most worthy ners added a thouland talents to the former Captain.

The conditions were: First, that the fum; and required a shorter time of pay.

the greatness both of these two Cities, and These Articles were sent to Rome, where of the War it self; wherein I hold good the they were not throughly approved : but ten judgement of Polybins, That the Romans,

CHAP. II.

()f dirvers actions passing between the first and second Punick Warrs.

6. I.

of the cruel War begun between the Carthaginians and their own Mercenaries.

Islands thereunto adjacent, speech of a manly and free man; for who could gave them rather means and leisure to help believe, that any people, or indeed any one man, themselves in a following war, than cause to would continue longer in an over-burdened hold themselves contented with the present estate, than meer necessity did ensorce? Now, peace. It is an ancient and true rule, Quod if the Romans themselves could make this leges à victoribus dicuntur, accipiuntur à victis; judgement of those Nations, who had little That laws are given by the Conquerors, and else besides their manly resolution, to dereceived of the conquered. But the Romans fend their liberty; furely, they grolly flathad either forgotten the answer that was tered themselves, in prefuming that the Carmade unto them, by one of the Privernates; thaginians, who neither in power nor in or else had forgotten to follow it in this pride, were any way inferiour unto them weighty business. For when one of Priver- selves, would fit down any longer by the num, after a rebellion, defending in the Se-loss and dishonour received, than until nate the cause of his City, was demanded by a Senator, What peace the Romans might hope ftrength which had a while failed them, to for, or assure themselves of, if they quitted their take revenge. But occasion, by which (while present advantage over them; he answered well entertained) not only private men, in these words, Si bonam dederitis, & sidam but Kings and publick States, have more & perpetuam; simalam, hand dinturnam; If prevailed, than by any proper prowes or the peace be good and faiteful that you give us, vertue, with-held the tempest from the Roit will be perpetual; if it be ill, then of little mans for a time, and turned it most fearfulcontinuance. To this answer the Senate, at ly upon Africa, and the Carthaginians themthat time gave such approbation, that it was felves.

HE Romans having partly by faid, Viri & liberi vocem auditam; Ancredi force, and partly by composi- posset, ullum populum, aut hominem denia; in tion, thrust the Carthaginians ea conditione, cujus eum pæniteat, diulius out of Sicil, and all the little quam necesse fit mansurum? That it was the polition, as the present emptiness of the com- tion by some unordinary largess. mon Treasury did require : so that the his charges in the mean while.

all, when they came back for their pay. But them. the Carthaginians have no fancy to their returning into the Town; and therefore com-

For after the first Punick war was ended, for news of their fellows arrival, and their Amilear, leaving Eryx, went to Lilyboum, own pay. Business they had none to do, and from whence most conveniently the Army therefore might easily be drawn to mutinv: might be transported into Africk: the care the whole argument of their discourse inof which business he committed unto Gesco, clining them to nothing esse. Their daily to whom, as to a man of approved sufficien- talk was, how rich they should be when all cy, he delivered over his charge. Gefco had their mony came in how much would fall to an effectial confideration of the great furnins, every fingle fliare, and for how long time the wherein Carthage was indebted unto these City was behind hand with them in reckon-Mercenaries; and withall, of the great dif- ing. They were all grown Arithmeticians: ability to make payment. Therefore he and he was thought a man of worth, that thought it the wifest way, to send them over | could find most reason to increase their de-(asitwere) by handfuls a few at a time; mands, to the very higheft, even beyond that so the first might have their dispatch , their due. No part of their long service was and begone, ere the fecond or third Com- forgotten; but the comfortable words and panies arrived. Herein he dealt providently. promifes of their Captains, leading them For it had not been hard to perswade any forth to any dangerous fight, were called to fmall number, lodged within to great a City | mind, and fo many obligations, not to be as Carthage, unto some such reasonable com- cancelled without satisfying their expecta-

809

Thus the time patieth away, until the first might have been friendly discharged, whole Army being arrived, and lodged in and agood prefident left unto the fecond Sicca, Hanno comes thither to clear the acand third, whilst their dif junction had made compt. Now is the day come, wherein they them unable to recover their whole due by shall all be made rich; especially if they can force. But the Carthaginians were of a con- hold together, in maintaining floutly the trary opinion. They thought to find, in the common cause. So think they all; and afwhole Army, some that would be contented | semble themselves to hear what good news to gratifie the Publick State, by remitting this mellenger had brought: with a full rea great part of their own due: and hoped, by flouring to help his memory, in case he by such an example, to draw all the multi-school happen to forget any part of the matude to the like agreement and capitulation. | ny promifes made to them; all which were So they detained the first and second com- to be considered in their Donative. Hanno mers; telling them, that they would make | begins a very formal Oration; wherein he an even reckoning with all together. Thus bewails the poverty of Carthage, tells them every day the number increased, and many how great a summ of mony is to be paid disorders (a thing incident among Souldiers) unto the Romans; reckons up the excessive were committed; which much disquieted charges whereat the Common-wealth had the City, not accustomed unto the like. In been in the late War; and finally desires this regard it was thought fit, to remove them to hold themselves contented with themall to some other place, where they part of their pay, and out of the love which might be less troublesome. This must be they bare unto the City, to remit the rest. done by some colourable words of perswa- Few of them understood his discourse: for sion: for their number was already to great, the Carthaginian Army was composed of sunthat it was not fafe to offend them too far. dry Nations, as Greeks, Africans, Gaules, Ligu-Wherefore it is devised, that they should all rians, spaniards, and others; all of different attend the coming of their fellows at Sicca: languages. Yet they stared upon him, and receiving every one a piece of gold, to bear were (as I think) little pleased with his very gesture. But when such as conceived the This motion is accepted, and the Soul- whole tenour of his speech, had informed diers began to dif-lodge; leaving behind the rest what cold comfort he brought; they them their wives, their children, and all their were all inraged, and fared like mad-men, baggage, as meaning shortly to fetch away so that nothing would serve to appeale

Hanno would fain have affwaged their fury, but he knew not how: for he less underpel them to trus up their fardels, that they stood their dissonant loud noises, than they might have none occasion left to make any did his Oration. An Army collected out of errands thither. So to Sicca they removed, so many Countries, that have no one lanwith all their goods; and there lay waiting guage common to all, or to the greater part ny, nor eafily pacified, when once it is bro- of their Senatours into the Camp; who hy, not carry particles, that Hanno can promife to fatisfie all demands, as far forth do, is to use the help of Interpreters and as it should be possible. And thus by shifting Mellengers. But these Interpreters mistake from one extreme to another, they make his meaning; fome for want of skill; others the Souldiers understand into what fear the of fet purpose; and such as deliver his er- City was driven; which cannot chuse but rands in the worst sense, are best believed. add much insolency to the passions already Finally, they think themselves much abused stirred up. by the Carthaginians, and resolve to demand their own in peremptory terms, at a nearer true cause of it, is quickly found by the Ardistance. In this mood they leave Sicca, and march as far as Tunis, that is within a very little of Carthage, and there they encamp. own errour. It is a good Rule, Curandum inprimis ne magna injuria fiat Fortibus & miseris.

810

Have special care, that valiant poverty Be not opprest with too great injury.

But this proud City, having neglected the fecure her felf against the inconvenience fetch it? But this would not ferve. They Rule, hath also been careless in providing to that might follow. She had fuffered the faid that they had been sometimes driven to whole multitude, whereunto fhe was like buy; and that (fince they could not rememto give cause of discontent, to joyn it self into one body, when the feveral troops might eafily have been dispersed: she hath turned ring the whole time, and according to the out of her gates the wives, children, and goods of these poor men, which, had she retained in flew of kindness, the might have of these Mutiners; who might easily have and by imploying a milerable penny-father, more honour, by receiving their due at the in her negotiation with men of War, she hath weakned the reputation of her bravest Captains, that might best have served to free her from the threatning danger. Yet to be used as an instrument in defrauding his all regard of shame. Since therefore no good likely it is, that Amilear had no desire own Souldiers of their wages: especially confidering, that as he best could bear witness of their merits, so was he not ignorant, that means to content them were not wantunto. Hereunto may be added a probable ferences. Hereunto the Army condescend conjecture, that Hanno, with his complices, ed, and made choice of Gefco: partly out of who at this very time was a bitter enemy to good liking to him, who had shewed himself Amilear, had the boldness to impose the at all times, afriendly man to them, and care Timit; for the Souldiers; whom they fuffer barren eloquence had done to the negotian to buy what they lift, and at what price | parren eloquence had done to the negrotation of Hanno. He calls unto him fift of all of them, is neither easily stirred up to mutilithey list. They send ever and anon some

This fudden change of weather, and the my, which thereupon grows wife, and finding the feason fit, labours to make a great harvest. Mony must be had, and without Now begin the Carthaginians to find their any abatement. This is granted. Many have lost their horses in publick service of the State. The State shall pay for them. They had lived some years by making hard fhift, without receiving their allowance of victuals from Carthage. If they had lived. they wanted not meat; therefore what was this to the Carthaginians? Was it not all one, whether the ships did bring in provision, or their Captains direct them where to they would be paid for their provision dudearest price that Wheat had born, whilst the War lasted. Such are now the demands been satisfied with far less charges, and far ving. For whilst the Carthaginians are perplexed about this Corn-mony; the Souldiers have devised many more tricks, whereby to extort a greater fumm of mony, without end could be found of these controversies which daily did multiply, it was thought convenient, that one of the Carthaginians, which had commanded in sicil, should be chosen by the Souldiers to reconcile all difblame of his own wretched counfel upon ful of their good, efpecially when they were the liberal promises made by the Captains. to be transported into Africk: partly out Amilear therefore did wifely, in fuffering of a dillike which they had conceived of those that maligned him, to have the managing of their own plot, and to deal the in all this buffe time. So Gofco comes among cards which themselves had shuffled. This them; and to please them the better, comes they continue to do as foolifhly as they had not without mony: which might give better the foolignment of th at first begun. They furnish a market at ter countenance to his proceedings, than not flood against it.

CHAP. If.

flurdy fellow, and audacious, but a flave; The best Army that ever served them, whereof menthe Africans; telling them, that they own liberty. were in tar worse condition, than either By such persuasions Matho wins the Afrievery danger of war, as any other men, me (though perhaps to the same purpose) can fooded now frand quaking like flaves, and not be heard fave only Throw, Throw.

the Captains, and then the several Nations dare to open our months, when others take liapatt, rebulking them gently for that which berty to require their due. This notwithstandapait, lad passed; advising them temperately con- ing ye may assure jour selves, that we are like had paned; and exhorting them to to be taught better manners, as foon as our felcontinue their love unto the State, which lows are gone: in regard of whom they are had long entertained them, and would content to shadow their indignation with a needs alwaies be mindful of their good fer- good, but a forced countenance. Let us therevices. After this he began to put hand to his fore be wife, and confider that they hate and pure, offering to give them their whole pay fear us: their batred will few it felf when in hand; and then after to confider of other their fear is once past: unless we now take our reckonings at a more convenient time. This time, and whilst we are the stronger, ensemble had been well accepted, and might have them fo greatly, that their hatred shall not be ferved to bring all to a quiet pals, if two le able to do un rerong. All their strength confiftditious Ring-leaders of the multitude had eth in mony wheremithall they have bired others against us, and us against others. At There was in the Camp one spendius, a the present they have neither mony nor friends. that in the late war had fled from a Roman, we are no small part, lyes at their gates, ready whom he served, and therefore stood in to help w if we be men. A better opportunity fear, lest he should be delivered back to his cannot be expected; for were our swords once Mafter; at whose hands he could expect no drawn, all Africk would rife on our side. As les, than to be whipt and crucified. This for the Carthaginians, Whither can they fend wretch could find no better way to prolong for help? The case it self is plain. But we must his own life, than by raifing such troubles as quickly resolve. Either we must prevent the dimight serve to withdraw men from care of ligence of Gesco, by incensing these Gaules and private matters, and make his own relittu Spaniards, and procuring them to draw blood; tion impossible, were his Master never so or else it behoveth us to please our good Maimportunte. With Spendius there affociated | fters, by joyning with them against our fellows, himselfone Matho, an hot-headed man, yea by offering to forgive unto them all our that had been to forward in ftirring up the mages, if so (peradventure) they may be won tumult, as he could not chuse but sear, lest to forgive us, or not over-cruelly to punish our his own death should be made an example, faults committed. He is most worthily a to deterrothers from the like feditious be- nretched flave, that neither hath care to win haviour. This Matho deals with his Country- his Masters love, nor the courage to attempt his

the Gaules, the Greeks, the Spaniards, or any can Souldiers to his own purpose. They forein Mercenaries. For (faith he) These our are not now so greedy of mony, as of quarcompanions have no more to do, than to rerel, which he that feeketh will not mis to ceive their wages, and fo get them gone: but find. When Gefeo therefore offered to pay wethit are to flay behind in Africa , flall be them their whole stipend presently, but recalled to another manner of accompt, when we ferred their other demands, for horses and are left alone; so that me shall have cause to victuals, to some other more convenient wish that we had returned home beggars, ratime; they brake into great outrage, and ther than loaden with the mony, which (little fay, that they will have all, even all at once, though it be) Shall brake our backs. Te are and that out of hand. In this tumult, the not ignorant, how tyrannically those our haugh whole Army flock together about Matho ty Masters of Carthage do reign over us. They and Spendius; whose diligence is not wantthink it reasonable, that our lives and goods ing to add more fuel to the fire already Sould be at their diffosition; which they have blazing. Matho and spendius are the only at other times been accustomed to take from men to whom the Souldiers will hearken: us even without apparent cause, as it were to if any other stand up to make a speech, a declaretheir soveraignty: What will they now showre of stones, slying about his cars, puts do , seing that we have demeaned our selver him to filence, that he shall never afterwards as free-men, and been bold to fet a good face speak word more. Neither stay they to conon the matter, demanding our own, as others fider what it is that any man would fay: have done? Te all do know, that it were a chough hath been faid already by those verysbame for us, if having been as forward in good spokes men; so that no other word

Now the rebellion begins to take form. | Carthaginians themselves have forgotten: Matho and Spendius are chosen Captains; but the people, that have suffered so much who, followed by a desperate crue of Ruf- retain all in perfect memory. Wherefore not fians, will fuffer no man to make his own only fuch as can bear arms, are ready todo peace, but puriue their own ends, under fair fervice in this great commotion; but the vepretence of the common cause. All which ry women bring forth their Jewels, and pretence or the common cause. An indication of the protection of the common cause. An indication cause are caused an indication of the common cause. An indication of the common cause. An indication cause are caused an indication cause. An indication cause are caused an indication cause are caused an indication cause. An indication cause are caused an indication cause are caused an indication caused and indication caused an indication caused an in felf upon their fury. One while he deals great forwardness, and liberal contribution. with the Captains, and other principal men; Matho and Spendius are supplied with a taking them by the hand, and giving gentle ftrong aid of threefcore and ten thousand words: another while, he works with the Africans: and are moreover furnished with feveral Nations; putting them all in hope of mony, not only to fatisfie the present appetheir own hearts desire, if any reason would tite of their men; but sufficient to continue content them. None of them are so sullen as the war begun, though it should be of long the Africans: indeed none of them had so endurance. good cause. They require him peremptorily to give them their own, and not to feed them with words. The truth is, that they are not so covetous as they seem: but will be more glad of an ill answer, than of a good payment. This is more than Gesco knows: he fees not that Matho hath any more than bare words to bestew upon them. Wherefore, as rebuking their inconfiderate heat. he tells them, That they may do well, if they stand in want of mony, to feek it of their Captain Matho. This is enough. Shall he both defraud them and deride them? They stay no longer, but lay violent hands upon the treasure that he had brought; yea upon him also, and all that are with him: as intending to take this in part of payment, and, for the rest, to take another course. Matho and Spendius are glad of this. It had little pleased cenary forces: it is common that Mercenathem to fee their fellows begin to grow ries should be false: and it is common that calm, by his fair language: wherefore they all war made against Tyrants, should be excast into bonds both him, and all the Carthaginians that they can find; that so the Army may be freed from danger of good ad- is procured or fought by those that were monition, which they call Treason. After hired to maintain the power of it: and selthis follows open war. Matho folicites all dome or never do we read of any war that Affick, and his Embaffadors are every where hath been profecuted with fuch inexpiable well entertained. Neither is it needful to hatred, as this that is now in hand, use perswasion: the very same of this rebellion sufficeth to draw the whole Country into A violent form of Government, not respecting it. Now must the Carthaginians be plagued the good of the subject, but only the pleasure of for those oppressions, with which they have the Commander. I purposely forbear to say plagued others. It is true that advertity hath that it is, the unjust rule of one over many: never been untold of her errours: and as for very truly doth Cleon in Thuesdides tell the is ever affured to hear her own, fo com- the Athenians, that their dominion over monly with her own she undergoes those of their subjects, was none other, than a meer other men. The Africans finding the Carthaginians hang under the wheel, tell them felves were a great City, and a popular efface. boldly, that their Impositions were merciless; that they took from them the one half that I should call this form of commandof their Corn; that they doubled their triling, violent: fince it may well and eafily be butes in all things elfe; and that they inflicted upon their vallals the greatest punishment for the leaft offences. Thefe cruelties the welfare; unless himself be either a mad

ø. II.

Divers Observations upon this War with the Mercenaries.

†. I.

Of Tyranny, and how Tyrants are fain to use the help of Mercenaries.

TEre let us rest a while, as in a convenient place, whence we may take a prospect of the subject, over which we travel. Behold a tyrannical City, persecuted by her own Mercenaries with a deadly war. It is a common thing, as being almost necessary, that a tyranny should be upheld by Merceeding full of hate and cruelty. Yet we feldome hear, that ever the ruine of a tyranny

That which we properly call Tyranny, is, tyranny, though it were fo, that they them-Neither is it peradventure greatly needful, conceived, that no man willingly performs obedience to one regardless of his life and CHAP. II. man, or the form of love rob, to ravish, to murder, and to satisfie their selfed with some extreme passion of love. The practice of tyranny is not alwayes of a own appetites, in most outragious manner, like extremity: for fome Lords are more being thought to much the more affured to gentle than others, to their very flaves; and their Mafter, by how much the more he fees he that is most cruel to some is mild enough them grow hateful to all men else. Considerne man to the target of the state of the sta advantage. Nevertheless, in large Dominions, wherein the Rulers discretion cannot extend it felf unto notice of the difference which might be found between the worth of several men, it is commonly seen, discourse to be but little better. This is to that the tafte of fweetness drawn out of op- shew, both how tyranny grows to stand in preflion, hath fo good a rellith, as continual need of mercenary Souldiers, and how those ly inflames the Tyrants appetite, and will mercenaries are, by mutual obligation, firmnot fuffer it to be restrained with any limits ly assured unto the Tyrant. of respect. Why should he seek out bounds to prescribe unto his desires, who cannot endure the face of one so honest, as may put himin remembrance of any moderation? It is much that he hath gotten by extorting from some few : by sparing none, he should have riches in goodly abundance. He hath taken a great deal from every one: but every one could have spared more. He hath wrung all their purfes, and now he hath enough: but (as Covetousness is never fatif | jects; it may appear some wayes to be more fied) hethinks that all this is too little for a moderate, than that of one man; but in maftock, though it were indeed a good yearly ny things it is more intolerable. A City is jea-Income. Therefore he devifeth new tricks of lous of her Dominion; but not (as is one robbery, and is not better pleased with the man) fearful of her life: the less need bath gains, than with the Art of getting. He is ha- she therefore to secure her self by cruelty. ted for this, and he knows it well: but he A City is not luxurious in confuming her thinks by cruelty to change hatred into treasures, and therefore needs the less to fear. So he makes it his exercise, to torment pluck from her Subjects. If War, or any and murder all whom he suspecteth: in which other great occasion drive her to necessity course, if he suspect none unjustly, he may be of taking from her Subjects more than orfaid to deal craftily; but if Innocency be not dinary fumms of mony; the fame necessity ny lusty Souldiers as shall be thought suffia desperate rabble of strangers, the most un-

man, or (which is little better) wholly pol shall all be permitted to do as he doth; to write; I must be fain to say, that these are not dreams: though some English-man perhaps that were unacquainted with History, lighting upon this leaf, might suppose this

t. II.

That the Tyranny of a City over her Subjects is worse than the tyranny of one man: and that a tyrannical City must likewise use mercenary Souldiers.

70W concerning the tyranny wherewith a City or State oppresseth her subfafe, how can all this make any conspirator makes either the contribution easie, or the tofland in fear, unce the Traitor is no worfe taking exculable. Indeed, no wrongs are fo rewarded, than the quiet man? Wherefore grievous and hateful, as those that are insohe can think upon none other fecurity, than lent. Remember (faith Caligula the Emperor, to difarm all his Subjects; to fortifie him to his Grand-mother Antonia that I may do felf within some strong place; and, for defence of his Person and State, to hire as mano harm. And Juvenal reckons it, as the cient. These must not be of his own Country: complement of all torments, inslicted by a for if not every one, yet some one or other cruel Roman Dame upon her slaves, that may chance to have a feeling of the publick whilft she was whipping them, she painted milery. This confidered, he allures unto him her face, talked with her Goffips, and used all figns of neglecting what those wretches honest that can be found; such as have neither wealth nor credit at home, and will ces wherewith a domineering State offentherefore be careful to support him, by deth her Subjects, are free from all sense of whole only favour they are maintained indignity; likely it is, that they will not ex-Now, lest any of these, either by detestation tremely hate her, although desire of liberty of his wickedness, or (which in wicked men make them weary of her Empire. In thele is mof likely) by promife of greater reward respects it is not needful that the should keep than he doth give, should be drawn to turn a Guard of licentious cut-throats, and mainhis fword against the Tyrant himself: they tain them in all villany, as a Dionysius or Kkkkk 2

able to terrifie and to hold perforce in obe- lading of wax and honey. Thele fly into all dience, all male-contents. These things, quarters, and are quickly acquainted with confidered alone by themselves, may serve to every mans wealth, or what sever else, in all prove, That a City is scarce able to deserve the Province, is worthy to be desired. They the name of a Tyranness, in the proper fig- know all a mans enemies, and all his fears: nification.

that the miseries, wherewith a Tyrant load into acquaintance with these masterful eth his people, are not so heavy, as the bur- guests, in hope to win their friendship, were dens imposed by a cruel City. Not with- an endless labour, (yet it must be underout some appearance of truth, it may be gone) and such as every one hath not means faid, that Luft, and many other private paf- to go about: but were this effected, what fions, are no way incident to a City or Cor- availethit? The love of our Governour is poration. But to make this good, we shall purchased with gifts: the Successiour of this have need to use the help of such distincti- man, he is more loving than could be wished ons as the Argument in hand doth not re- in respect of a fair Wife or Daughter, then quire. Was not Rome lascivious, when Cato comes the third, perhaps of the contrary fawas fain to rife and leave the Theater, to the ction at home, a bitter enemy to both his end, that the reverend regard of his gravity fore-goers, who feeks the ruine of all that might not hinder the people from calling for have been inward with them. So the milea flew of naked Courtifans, that were to be ries of this tyranny are not simple, but interbrought upon the open stage? By common laced (as it were) with the calamities of civil practice, and general approved cuftom, we War. The Romans had a Law De Repetundis, are to censure the quality of a whole State; | Gr., of Recovery, against extorting-Maginot by the private vertue or vice of any one strates: yet we find, that it served not wholman, ner by metaphyfical abstraction of lyto restrain their Provincial Governours; the univerfal from the fingular; or of the who prefuming on the favour of their own Corporation, from those of whom it is compounded: I fav therefore (as I have faid elfewhere) That it were better to live under one work all these enormities rehearsed; though pernicious Tyrant, than under many thoufands. The reasons proving this, are too many judgment. If the Subjects of Rome grouned to fet down, but a few may suffice. The de- under such oppressions, what must we think fires of one man, how inordinate foever, if of those that were Vassals unto Carthage? they cannot be latisfied, yet they may be The Romans imposed no burthensome triwearied; he is not able to fearch all cor- butes; they loved not to hear, that their ners; his humour may be found, and footh- | Empire was grievous; they condemned maed; age or good advice, yea, or fome unex- ny noble Citizens for having been ill Gopected accident may reform him: all which vernours. At Carthage all went quite confailing; yet is there hope, that his fuccef trary: the rapines newly devised by one four may prove better.

worthy Kings: and many have ill used their like, when it should fall to his turn; and he ill-gotten Dominion, which, becoming here- was held a notable States-man, whole robditary to their posterity, hath grown into beries had been such, as might afford a good the most excellent form of Government, share to the common treasure. Particular even a lawful Monarchy. But they that live examples of this Carthaginian practice are under a tyrannical City, have no such hope: not extant: the Government of Verres the their Miltress is immortal, and will not Romanin Sicil, that it is lively set out by flacken the reins, until they be pulled out Tully, may ferve to inform us, what was the of her hands, and her own mouth receive demeanor of these Punick Rulers, who stood the bridle of a more mightier Chariotter. in fear of no fuch condemnation, as Fores This is woful: yet their prefent fufferings underwent. By profecuting this difcourfe, make them less mindful of the future. New I might inferr a more general proposition; flies, and hungry ones, fall upon the fame That a City cannot govern her fubject Profore, out of which others had already sucked vinces so mildly as a King: but it is enough their fill. A new Governour comes yearly to have shewed, That the tyranny of a City among them, attended by all his poor kin- is far more intolerable, than that of any dred and friends, who mean not to return one most wicked man.

Agathocles must do: her own Citizens are home empty to their hives, without a good becoming themselves, within a little space. All this notwithstanding, it shall appear, the enemies that he feareth most. To grow Citizens, and of their kindred and friends at home, were bold in their Provinces, to somewhat the more sparingly, for fear of Magistrate, served as presidents to instruct Many Tyrants have been changed into another; every man resolved to do the Suitable the harred of their fubjects: and again, fu- into the hands of the King of Aragon. jealousie of their Lords. Hence it followed, first of that race, Duke of Millan, who being that, in wars abroad, the Carthaginians durft entertained by the Millanois, forced them to use the service of African souldiers in Africk become his slaves, even with the very same it felf they had rather be beholding to army which themselves had levied for their others, that were farther fetcht. For the own defence. But Lodowick Sforza, the fon of same purpose did Hannibal, in the second this Francis by the just judgement of God, Punick war, shift his Mercenaries out of their was made a memorable example unto posteown countries; Ut Afri in Hispania, Hispa- rity, in losing his whole estate by the treani in Africa, melior procul ab domo futurus chery of fuch faithless Mercenaries, as his were obliged by mutual pledges. It is diffruta- the Castle of Loches unto his dying day. ble, Iconfess, whether these African and The like inconvenience is found, in using Spanift hirelings, could properly be termed the help of forrain Auxiliaries. We fee, ter than Mercenaries.

t. III.

Souldiers, and forrain Auxiliaries.

places and Countries, whereinto they are two kingdoms. drawn; as being held by no other bond, they have often, and in time of greatest exof Napler, abandoned her service on the maintained the War; and therefore could

Sutable to the cruelty of such Lords, is sudden, and forced her to put her self table to the hatred of the subjects, is the Like unto his father was Francis Sforza, the ulera; miles, velut mutuis pignoribus obligati own Father had been For having waged an sipendia facerent; that the Africans might army of Smitzers, and committed his Dutchy, fore in Spain, the Spaniards in Africk, being together with his person, into their hands, he each of them like to prove the better Souldiers, was by them delivered up unto his enemy the farther they were from home, as if they the French King, by whom he was inclosed in

Mercenaries: for they were subject unto that when the Emperour of Constantinople Carthage, and carried into the field, not on- had hired ten thousand Turks against his ly by reward, but by duty. Yet feeing their neighbour Princes; he could never, either duty was no better than enforced, and that by perswasion or force, set them again over it was not any love to the State, but meer the fea upon Afra fide; which gave bedefire of gain, that made them fight; I will ginning to the Christian servirude, that soon not nicely frand upon propriety of a word, after followed. Alexander the fon of Cafbut hold them, as Polybius also doth, no bet- Sander, sought aid of the great Demetrius: but Demetrius, being entred into his Kingdome, flue the same Alexander, who had invited him, and made himfelf King of Macedon. Syracon the Turk was called into Egypt by The dangers growing from the use of mercenary Sanar the Soldan, against his opposite: but this Turk did fettle himself so surely in Egypt, that Saladine his successor became Lord The extream danger, growing from the thereof; and of all the holy Land, foon afimployment of fuch Souldiers, is well ter. What need we look about for examobserved by Machiavel: who sheweth, that ples of this kind? Every Kingdom, in effect, they are more terrible to those whom they can furnish us. The Britains drew the Saxons ferve, than to those against whom they into this our Countrey; and Mac Murrough ferve. They are feditious, unfaithfull, dif-drew the English into Ireland, but the one obedient, devourers, and destroyers of all and the other soon became Lords of those

Against all this, may be alledged the than their own commodity. Yea, that which good fucces of the United Provinces of the is most fearful among such hirelings, is that Netherlands, using none other than such kind of Souldiers, in their late war. Indeed tremity, not only refused to fight, in their these Low-Countreys have many goodly and defence, who have entertained them, but re- | ftrong Cities, filled with Inhabitants that are volted unto the contrary part; to the utter wealthy, industrious, and valiant in their ruine of those Princes and States that have kind. They are front Sea-men, and therein is trusted them. Those mercenaries (faith Ma-their excellency; neither are they bad at chiasel) which filled all Italy when Charls the the defence of a place well fortified : but in eighth of France did pass the Alpes, were open field they have seldome been able to the cause that the said French King won the stand against the Spaniard. Necessity there-Realmof Naples with his Buckler without a fore compelled them to feek help abroad: Sword, Notable was the example of oforsa, and the like necessity made them for bear to the Father of Francis Sforza, Duke of Milarm any great numbers of their own. For, lan, who being entertained by Queen Joane with money raifed by their Trade, they CHAP, II.

ill spare unto the Pike and Musket, those Soveraignty of their Country, which they hands, that were of more use in helping to offered, yet being provoked by the spafill the common purse. Yet what of this? niard their enemy, pursued him with contithey sped well. Surely they sped as ill as mual war; when the heir of England reigned might be, whilft they had none other than in Scotland, a King too just and wise (though mercenary Souldiers Many fruitless at not ingaged in any quarrel) either to make mercenary sounders. Drany Hunders at tempts, made by the Prince of Orenge, can profit of his neighbours miferies, or to help witness it : and that brave Commander those that had attempted the conquest of his Count Lodowick of Naffau, felt, to his grief, own inheritance: then might the Netherin his retrait from Græningham; when, in the very instant that required their service forces of these their Neighbour Countries. in fight, his Mercenaries cried out aloud for The Souldiers that came unto them from money, and fo ran away. This was not the hence, were (to omit any other commendaonly time, when the hired Souldiers of the tions) not only regardful of the pay that States, have either fought to hide their co- they should receive, but well affected unto wardize under a flew of greedines; or at the cause that they took in hand: or, if any leaft, by meer covetousness, have ruined in were cold in his devotion, unto the side one hour the labour of many moneths. I whereon he fought, yet was he kept in orwill not stand to prove this by many examples: for they themselves will not deny it. Neither would I touch the honour of Monfieur the Duke of Anjou, brother to the French King; save that it is folly to conceal what all the world knows. He that would lay open the danger of forrain Auxiliaries, needeth no better pattern. It is commonly found, that fuch Aiders make themselves Lords over those, to whom they lend their fuccour: but where shall we meet with such at one time, shall agree so well, to maintain another as this Monsieur, who, for his protection promifed, being rewarded with the at the least so seeming) to them all, a Neigh-Lordship of the Country, made it his first bour-Country of the same religion, and to work, to thrust by violence a galling yoak which they all are lovingly affected: then upon the peoples neck? Well, he lived to may fuch a Country be fecure of her Auxilirepent it, with grief enough. Even whilft aries, and quietly intend her Trade, or other he was counterfeiting unto those about business, in hope of like success. But these cirhim, that were ignorant of his plot, an imaginary forrow for the poor Burghers of Antmerpe, as verily believing the Town to be raign auxiliary forces are no less dangerous, than furprifed and won; the death of the Count the enemy against whom they are entertained. St. Aignan, who fell over the wall, and the Cannon of the City, discharged against his own troups, informed him better what had hapned; shewing, that they were his own That the moderate government of the Romans French who frood in need of pity. Then was his feigned passion changed into a very bitter anguish of mind, wherein, smiting his breast, and wringing his hands, he exclaimed, Helas, mon dieu, que veux tu faire de moy? Alas, my God, what wilt thou do with me ? So, the affairs of the Netherlands will not ferve to prove, that there is little danger in using Mercenary Souldiers, or the help of to use the service of other Souldiers in their forrain Auxiliaries. This notwithstanding, many great wars, but performed all by their they were obedient unto necessity, and own Citizens? for if it were their manner fought help of the English, Scott, and French: to arm their own subjects, how hapned it, wherein they did wifely, and prospered. that they feared no rebellion? if strangers, For when there was in France a King, partaker with them in the same danger; when ences above rehearsed? The answer is, that the Queen of England refused to accept the their Armies were compounded ulually of der, by remembrance of his own home, where the English would have rewarded him with death, if that his faith had been corrupted by the spaniard. They were therefore trufted with the custody of Cities; they were held as friends, and patrons; the necelfity of the poorer fort was relieved, before the pay-day came, with lendings, and other helps, as well as the ability of the States could permit. When three fuch Princes, reigning against the power of a fourth, injurious (or cumstances meet so seldom, as it may well hold true in general: That mercenary and for-

t. IIII.

gave them assurance to use the service of their own subjects in their wars. That in mans nature there is an affection breeding tyranny, which hindreth the use and benefit of the like moderation.

Here it may be demanded, whether also the Romans were not compelled equal number: to which they added, as oc- Such love purchased these mild Goverequal number of the companies of camnours, without impairing their Majefty panes, Hetrurians, Sammites, or other of their thereby. The fum of all is; they had, of panes, as were either interessed in the their own, a strong army; they doubled it intipetts, "support of the trusted. They had about these times, (though seldom they did they further increased it, as need required, imploy so many) ten Roman Legions; a good with other help of their own subjects: all, thrength, if all other help had been wanting; or the most of their followers, accounting which ferved to keep in good order their the prosperity of Rome to be the common fubjects, that were alwaies fewer in the army good. than themselves. As for the Latines, if contime it was granted unto many Cities, and those far off removed, even to Tarfus in Cilicia, where St. Paul was born, that all the

their own Citizens, and of the Latines in good, as having been faithful to the utmoft.

The moderate use of soveraign power befanouinity were not a sufficient obligation; ing so effectual, in assuring the people unto vet many priviledges and immunities, which their Lords, and confequently in the eftathey injoyed, made them assured unto the blishment or inlargement of Dominion : it State of Rome: under which they lived al- may feem strange, that the practice of Tymost at liberty, as being bound to little else, | ranny, whose effects are contrary, hath been thantoferveit in war. It is true, that a yoke fo common in all ages. The like, I know. howeasie soever, seems troublesome to the may be said of all Vice and Irregularity, neck that hath been accustomed to freedom. whatsoever. For it is less difficult, (who-Therefore many people of Italy have taken foever think otherwise) and more safe, to occasion of several advantages, to deliver keep the way of Justice and Honesty, than themselves from the Roman Subjection. But to turn aside from it ; yet commonly our fill they have been reclaimed by war, the passions do lead us into by-paths. But where Authors of rebellion have fharply been pul Luft, Anger, Fear, or any the like Affection, nilhed, and the people by degrees have ob- feduceth our reason; the same unruly appetained such liberty, as made them esteem tite, either bringeth with it an excuse, or, at none otherwise of Rome, than as the com- least-wise, taketh away all cause of wonder. mon City of all Italy. Yea, in process of In tyranny it is not so: for as much as we can hardly descry the passion, that is of force to infinuate it felf into the whole tenour of a Government. It must be confessed, that Burgesles should be free of Rome it self. This lawless desires have bred many Tyrants: favour was conferred absolutely upon some; yet so that these desires have seldom been upon some, with restraint of giving voyce in hereditary, or long-lasting; but have ended election of Magistrates, or with other such commonly with the Tyrants life, sometimes limitation as was thought fit. Hereunto | before his death; by which means the gomay be added, that it was their manner, af- vernment hath been reduced to a better ter a great conquest, to release unto their form. In such cases, the saying of Aristotle new subjects half of their tribute which they holds, That tyrannies are of a short continu- Aris. pol. had been wont to pay to their former ance. But this doth not fatisfie the question 1.5.6.22. Lords, which was a ready way to bring the in hand. Why did the Carthaginians exermultitude into good liking of their present cise tyranny? Why did the Atherians? condition, when the review of harder times | Why have many other Cities done the like? palt, should rather teach them to fear a re- If in respect of their general good; how lapse, than to hope for better in the future, | could they be ignorant, that this was an ill by feeking innovation. Neither would it be course for the safety of the Weal publick? forgotten, as a special note of the Romans If they were led hereunto by any affection; good Government, That when some, for what was that affection wherein so many their well-deferving, have had the offer to thousand Citizens, divided and subdivided List Die Libe made Citizens of Rome, they have refused within themselves by factions, did all conit, and held themselves better contented curr, notwithstanding the much diversity of with their own present estate. Wherefore temper, and the vehemency of private hait is no marvel, that Petellia, a City of the tred among them? Doubtless, we must be Brutians in Italy, chose rather to endure all fain to say, That Tyranny is, by it felf, a extremity of war, than, upon any condition, vice diffinct from others. A Man, we know, to for ake the Romans; even when the Romans themselves had confessed, that they command or to obey; every one in his prowere unable to help these their subjects, and per degree. Other desires of Mankinde, therefore willed them to look to their own are common likewife unto brute beafts;

and some of them, to bodies wanting sense: cruelty doth help to shadow. Therefore but the desire of rule belongeth unto the nobler part of reason; whereunto is also name. Tyranny is more bold, and feareth answerable an aptness to yield obedience. not to be known, but would be reputed ho-Answerante au aputets to yieu do you nourable: for it is prosperum & fælix selus, nourable: for it is prosperum & fælix selus, ture not only to Man and Beast, but unto all a fortunate mischief, as long as it can subsilt. forts of Vegetables, for the sustentation of There is no reward or honour (faith Peter their life: as Fear, Anger, Lust, and other Charron) affigned unto these, that know how affections are likewise natural, in conveni- to increase, or preserve humane nature: all ent measure, both unto Mankind, and to all honours, greatness, riches, dignities, Empires. Creatures that have sense, for the shunning triumphs, trophees, are appointed for those shat or repelling of harm, and feeking after that know how to afflict, trouble, or deftroy it casar which is requifite: even so is this defire of and Alexander, have un-made and sain, ruling or obeying, ingraffed by Nature in each of them, more than a million of men: the race of Man, and in Man only as a rea- but they made none, nor left none behind fonable creature, for the ordering of his life, them. Such is the errour of Mans judgein a civil form of Justice. All these in-bred ment in valuing things according to the qualities are good and useful. Nevertheless, Hunger and Thirst are the Parents of Gluttony and Drunkenness, which, in reproach, are called beaftly, by an unproper term: fince they grow from appetites, found in less indeed all other vices, iffuing from the pasworthy creatures than beafts, and are yet not so common in beasts, as in men. The effects of Anger, and of such other Passions like horrible crimes, exceed in villany, the as descend no lower than unto brute beasts, faults of Gluttony and Drunkenness, that are held less vile; and perhaps not without good reason: yet are the more pernicious. But as no corruption is worse by sharper Laws, as being in general more horrible, and of Mankinde, are not better examples, than punished more grievously, that of that Phalaris, Dionysius, and Agathocles, whose which is best; there is not any passion, that mischievous heads were affisted by the nourisheth a vice more hurtful unto Mankind, than that which issuerh from the most | barbarous desire of Lordship, transported noble root, even the depraved Affection of those old examples of Feritie, and these lat-Ruling. Hence arise those two great mis- ter Tyrants, beyond the bounds of reachiefs, of which hath been an old question fon : neither of them knew the use of Rule, in dispute, whether be the worse; That all nor the difference between Freemen and things, or that nothing should be lawful. Of slaves. these, a dull spirit and overloaden by fortune with power, whereof it is not capable, and of Parents over their children, is natuoccasioneth the one; the other proceedeth | ral, and appointed by God himself; so that from a contrary diftemper, whose vehemen- it is alwayes, and simply, allowable and cy the bounds of Reason cannot limit. Un- good. The former of these, is as the doder the extremity of either, no Country is minion of Reason over Appetite; the latter able to subsist, yet the defective dulness, that is the whole authority, which one Freeman permitteth any thing, will also permit the can have over another. The rule of a King execution of Law, to which meer necessity is no more, nor none other, than of a comdoth enforce the ordinary Magistrate; mon Father over his whole Country : which whereas Tyranny is more active, and pleaf he that knows what the power of a Father eth it self in the excels, with a falle colour of is, or ought to be, knows to be enough. Justice. Examples of stupidity, and unapt- But there is a greater and more Masterly fuch natures are every where to be found : faid; Have dominion over the fifth of the Sea, for this quality troubles not it self in seeking and over the fowl of the aire, and every living

318

common opinion. But the true name of Tyranny, when it grows to ripeness, is none other than Feritie: the same that Aristotle faith to be worse than any vice. It exceedeth less, than Perjury, Murder, Treason, and the grow from more ignoble appetites. Hereof Sciron , Procrustes , and Pityocamptes , that used their bodily force to the destruction hands of detestable Ruffians. The same

The rule of the husband over the wife, ness to rule, are not very frequent, though rule, which God gave unto Adam, when he Empire; or if by some errout of fortune, it thing that moveth upon the earth: which allo encounter therewithall, (as when Claudius, he continued unto Noah and his children, 00.19 hiding himself in a corner, found the Empire laying, The fear of you, and the dread of you, of Rome) some friend, or else a wise, is not hall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon wanting to supply the defect, which also every fowl of the aire, non all that moveth

CHAP. II. upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the

to oppress men with bondage: unless the wer, and of servile obedience, which is thereto oppose lawfulness thereof be sufficiently intimated, to correspondent. But it may be truly faid, where it is faid. That a man shall not be puthat fome Countries have substitted long nified for the death of a fervant; whom he without the use of any servility; as also it is hathflain by correction, if the fervant live a true, that fome Countries have not the use of day or two, because he is his mone; or else any tame Cattel Indeed the affections which in by the captivity of the Midiantiffh girls, uphold civil rule, are (though more noble). 16. by the capturary which were made bond-flaves, and the San not fo fimply needful, unto the fuftentation 40 duary had a part of them for the Lords tri- either of our kind, as are Luft, and the like; Gagas, ancient: for Noah laid this curfe upon Cana- which not with standing are the lowest in de-Fig. 10 coived that think fo. Saint Paul defired the should increase, by access of those, that are librity of One simus, whom he had won unto weary of their own more painful condition. 10ar, giveth unto servants: Let every man abide in logether with the pleasure which most men 10,11-the same calling wherein he was called: art take in flatterers, that are the basest of thou called, being a fervant? care not for it, but flaves. if thou maiss he made free, use it rather. It is This being so, we find no cause to marvel, true, that Christian Religion bath procured how Tyranny hath been so rife in all ages, liberty unto many; not only in regard of and practifed, not only in the fingle rule of piety, but for that the Christian Masters some vicious Prince, but ever by consent of flood in fear of being discovered by their whole Cities and Estates: since other vices flaves, unto the perfecutors of Religion. Ma- have likewife gotten head, and born a generhomet likewife, by giving liberty to his fol- al fway, notwithstanding that the way of lowers, drew many unto his impiety: but vertue be more honourable, and commodiwhether he forbade it, as unlawful, unto his ous. Few there are that have used well the fectators, to hold one another of them in inferiour Passions : how then can we expect,

But whether this kinde of dominion be upon the earth, and are they delivered, lawful, or not; Ariffole hath well proved, He who gave this dominion unto Man, that it is natural. And certainly, we finde He was also an aptitude to use it. The not such a latitude of difference in any creadid give also an aptitude to use it. give and this power hath fince ex- ture, as in the nature of man; wherein (to execution tended it felf, over a very great part omit the infinite diffance in effate of the of Mankinde. There are indeed no small elect and Reprobate) the wifest excel the or mainters of men, whole disability to go-most foolish, by far greater degree, than the numous, proves them, according most foolish of men doth surpass the wisest to Ariffolles doctrine, to be naturally of beafts. Therefore when Commiferation hath given way to reason, we shall find, that Yet find I not in Scripture any warrant nature is the ground even of Mafterly pobute. Doubtless the custom hath been very or of every one, as are Hunger and thirst; an, that he should be a fervant of fervants; and Abraham had of Pharaoh, among other and Abraham had of Pharaoh, among other gifts, men-fervants and maid-fervants, which ging in the freets, there may we more justly were none other than flaves. Christian wonder, how the dangerous toil of Sea-far-Religion is faid to have abrogated this old ing men can find enough to undertake them, kinde of fervility: but furely they are de than how the fwarm of idle vagabonds Christ: yet wrote for this unto rhilemon by This may suffice to prove, that in Mankind way of request, craving it as a benefit, not there is found, ingraffed even by Nature, a urging it as a duty. Agreeable hereto is defire of absolute dominion whereunto the the direction, which the same Saint Faul general custom of Nations doth subscribe; bondage, I cannot tell; fave that by the that the most noble affections should not be practice of the Turks and Moors, it feemshe difordered? in the government of wife and did not. In England we had many bond children, fome are utterly careless, and corfervants, untill the time of our last civil rupt all by their dull connivency: others, by wars 3 and I think that the Laws concern-mafterly rigour, hold their own blood uning Villenage are still in force, of which der condition of flavery. To be a good Gothe latest are the sharpest. And now, since vernour is a rare commendation; and to preflaves were made free, which were of fer the Weal publick above all respects great use and service, there are grown up whatsoever, is the Vertue justly termed Hea rabble of Rogues, Cutpurfes, and other roical. Of this Vertue many ages afford not the like trades; flaves in Nature, though not many examples. Heter is named by Ariffolic in L. as one of them; and deservedly, if this praise EIIII be due to extraordinary height of fortitude, | fuch a King is nevertheless a man, must dve. used in desence of a mans own Country, and may err: yet wisdome and fame shall But if we consider, that a love of the general set him free, from error, and from death, good cannot be perfect, without reference unto the fountain of all goodness: we shall Onething I may not omit, as a singular befind that no moral vertue, how great foever, nefit (though there be many other befides can by it felf, deserve the commendation of redounding unto this King, as the fruit of his can by treet, deterve the commendation more than Vertue, as the Heroical doth, Wherefore we must fearch the Scriptures, for patterns hereof; such as David, Josaphat, Soveraign Lord, but free of courage; and and Tollas were. Of Christian Kings, if there no greater in muster of men, than of sout were many fuch, the world would foon be fighters, if need require: whereason the happy. It is not my purpole to wrong the contrary, he that ruleth as over flaves, shall worth of any, by denying the praise where it be attended in time of necessity, by llavish is due, or by prefering a less excellent. But minds, neither loving his person, nor rehe that can find a King religious, and garding his or their own honour. Cowards zealous in Gods cause, without enforcement, may be furious, and slaves outragious, for a either of adversity, or of some regard of time: but among spirits that have once State; a procurer of a general peace and yielded unto flavery, universally it is found State; a procurer of a general percental quiet; who not only ufeth his authority, but true, what Homer faith, God bereaveth a man quiet; who not only ufeth his authority, but adds the travel of his eloquence, in admo- of half his vertue, that day when he casteth him l. 17. nishing his Judges to do justice; by the vi- into bondage. gorous influence of whose Government, civility is infused, even into those places, that seasonably have spoken, in the general difhave been the dens of favage Robbers and course of Government: but where so lively Cut-throat 30ne that hath quite abolished a an example of the calamity following atyflavish Brehon Law, by which a whole Nati- rannical rule, and the use of Mercenaries, on of his subjects were held in bondage; and thereupon depending, did offer it self, as is one, whose higher vertue and wisdom doth this present business of the Carthaginians; I make the praise not only of Nobility and thought that the note would be more effeother ornaments, but of abstinence from the ctual, than being barely delivered, as out of blood, the wives, and the goods of those a common place. that are under his power, together with a world of chief commendations belonging unto some good Princes, to appear less regardable: he,I fay, that can find fuch a King, findeth an example, worthy to add unto How the war against the Mercenaries was divertue an honourable title, if it were formerly wanting. Under fuch a King, it is likely, by Gods blefling that a Land shall flourish, with increase of Trade, i Countries before unknown: that Civility and Religion shall be propagated, into barbarous and heathen Countries; and that the happiness of his subjects, shall cause the Nations far off remov- gressed, I cannot readily find, by what ed, to wish him their Soveraign. I need not name henceforth I should call them. They add hereunto, that all the actions of fuch a are no longer in pay with the Carthagini-King, even his bodily exercises, do partake ans; neither care they to pretend, that of vertue; fince all things tending to the they feek their wages already due; fo that preservation of his life and health, or to the they are neither Mercenaries, nor Mutiners. mollifying of his cares, (who fixing his con- | Had they all been subjects unto Carthage, templation upon God, seeketh how to imi- then might they justly have been termed tate the unspeakable goodness, rather than Rebels: but Spendius, and others, that the inacceffible majefty, with both of which were the principal part of them, ought none himself is indued, as far as humane nature is allegiance to that State, which they endeacapable) do also belong to the furtherance voured to subvert. Wherefore I will bor of that common good, which he procureth. row the name of their late occupation, and Lest any man should think me transported still call them Mercenaries, as Polyhim also with admiration, or other affection, beyond | doth. the bounds of reason; I add hereunto, that | These, using the advantage of their present

CHAP. II

Of these things, I might perhaps more

'ø. III.

versty managed by Hanno and Amilcar, with variable success. The bloody counsels of the Mercenaries ; and their final destru-

CHAP. II. Circs of great importance, as being feated fall their shete-anchor; sending to the field whom they be a neck of land; Hippagreta furnished withten thousand foot of supply, in to It is divided by the state of the stat Transmission of further out upon the Sea. Neither was chough to do, before he should be able to re in all parts at once.

and by the African themfelves, Geral Mella. Were faith, that an it fell is mined, and the place whereon it flood, now called an it fell is mined, and the place whereon it flood, now called are it was very ancient, and built before Carthage faith Siliun. As re, it was very ancient, and built before carriage, statin stitution, hid before carbiage was feet up, fo did it after Carbiage was few the other family and family and the other family and Famous it was by the death of growing the partial family and family and family before the partial family and is the younger, who here it against ear are vision that worthy Divine, a share thereof in the time of Graferich the Arrian, who lived all the goldat Tyran, and hath written the flory of his crackites.

How the Carthaginians were amazed with this unexpected peril, any man may conceive. But the business it self awakes them halfily. They are hardly prest on all sides; and therefore travelled their brains the uttermost, how to shake off these furious dogs from their thoulders, who fometimes by night, fometimes by day, came unto the very wals of their City. In this exigent, Hanno was made their General: who failed not in his accustomed diligence of making all good preparation: but had gotten together whatfocver was needful, as well to relieve a Town besieged, as to batter and assail any place defended against him. With these provisions, and with an hundred Elephants, he came to Vtica, fo fuddenly, that the enemies as men furprifed, forfook their Trenches, and retired themselves unto a rising piece of woody ground, where they might be safe against the violence of his beasts. Hanno, thinking that he had to do with Numidians, whose custome was after any loss, to flie two or three whole days journey off; presently entred the Town; to shew himself after this his victory. But these good fellows, Amilear, to retire and to fight again, many times in one day, as need required. Therefore as foon as they perceived, that he knew Carthage to the firm land.

in firength, befreged * Olica and Hippagreta, exceedingly troubled, and did therefore let upon the weltern Haven of Carthage, where their great Captain Amilear, whom they the Camp at Timis abandoned, which lay meet with the enemy upon equal ground. the Camp and the Carthagimans from paf. For befides other places of advantage that fing up into the countrey: for Alatho and the Mercenaries had occupied. Hanno had ingui mad the description and separation will be only bridge, by spendins wanted not men to follow the war fuffered them to win the only bridge, by which the River Macra, or Bagadras, was paffable unto these, that were to travel into the Continent. This River had not many foords, nor those easie for a single man to get over: but upon them all was kept such guard, as gave to Amilear little hope of prevailing in feeking way by force. As for the Bridge it felf, Matho and his followers were there lodged: and had there built a Town, wherein to lye commodioufly, intentive only to the cuftody thereof. But Amilear had observed, that the very mouth of Bagradas used to be sometimes cloyed with fand and gravel, that was driven in by certain cuftomary winds, and could not be driven out again, by force of that flow river, till the wind failing, or changing suffered the weight of the waters, to disburden their channel. Hercof he made use; and taking his opportunity passed the River, contrary to all expectation, either of the enemy, or of his own Citizens.

There was no need to bid Spendius look about him, whence once it was heard, that Amilear was come over Bagradas: all the Mercenaries were troubled with the news; knowing that they were no longer to deal with the improvident gravity of Hanno, but with an able spirit, even with their own Master in the Art of War, whom they admired, though they hated him. But this fear was foon changed into prefumption; when more than fifteen thousand of their own society, were come from Otica, and other ten against whom he was to war, had learned of thousand from the guard of the Bridge Their Army was far greater, than that of Amilear; and they were in their own judgement, the better men; upon which connot how to use a victory; they affailed their | fidence, they resolved to charge him on all own camp, and with great flaughter, drave fides, and beat him down, in defpight of his the Carthaginians out of it, forcing them to worth and reputation. With this resolution hide themselves within Wica; and got pof they attend upon him, watching for some fession of all the store that Hanno had advantage, and still exhorting one another brought for the relief of the Town. This to play the men, and give the onfer. Especibad beginning Hanno followed with futable ally they that followed him in the Rear, had a great mind to begin the fight; whereunto fair opportunities, and fuffering the enemies their promptness was such, as took from the promptness was such, as took from the promptness was such, as took from the promptness was such as took from the promptness was such as the promptn to take policition of all the entrance from them their former circumspection. Amilcar held his way toward the Bridge, keeping The Carthaginians perceiving this, were himself on plain grounds; that were fit-LHIII 2

CHAP II

test for the service of his Elephants, which he much desired: and therefore cameunto he placed in front of his Army. Neither made Amilear fignifying his good affection to him. he shew of any desire to sight, but suffered with offer to do him all service. Amilear the rafiness of his enemies to encrease, till it joyfully entertained this friend, promised should break into some disorder. At length unto him his own daughter in marriage and perceiving, that with more boldness than so wan from the enemies 2000. horse, that good heed, they followed him so near, as following Naravasus turned unto the Carthawould be little for their good, if he should ginians side. With this help he gave battel turn unto them, he hasted his march, even unto Spendius: wherein the Numidian lato fuch a pace, as made a flew little diffe- boured to approve his own valour to his ring from plain flight. The Mercenaries new friend. So the victory was great; for presently fell upon his skirts; believing, that there were slain ten thousand of Spendius his for fear of them he was ready to run away. fellows, and four thouland taken priloners; But whilest they confusedly, as in sudden but Spendius himself, with Autarius the Gaul. opinion of victory, were driven at the heels escaped to do more mischief. Amilear dealt of those that had the Rear; Amilear wheel- very gently with his prisoners: pardoning ed about, and met them in the face, charg- all offences past, and dismissing as many as ing them hotly, but in very good order, fo were unwilling to become his followers: yet that amazed, with the apprehension of un- with condition, that they should never more expected danger, they fled without making | bear arms against the Carthaginians; threatany refiftance. In this overthrow there ning to take sharp revenge upon all that were fix thousand of the Mercenaries slain, should break this Covenant. and about two thousand taken, the rest fled, This humanity was vehemently suspected fome to the Camp at Otica, others to the by Matho, Spendius, and Autarius, as tend-Town at the Bridge; whither Amilear tol- ing to win from them the hearts of their lowed them fo fast, that he wan the place Souldiers. Wherefore they resolved to take eafily; the enemies being thence also fled such order, that no man among them should unto Tunis, as not having recollected their dare to trust in the good nature of Amilear, spirits to make it good.

the diligence of Amilear in pursuing it, caus- ted letters of advertisement, wherein was ed many Towns revolted, partly by fear, contained, that some of their company, repartly by force, to return to their former obedience. Yet was not Matho wanting to himself in this dangerous time. He lent about Numidia and Africk, for new supplies; admonishing the people, now or never, to it was needful to look well unto Gesco, and do their best, for the recovery of their free- his companions whom these traitors had a dom: he perswaded spendius, and Antarius, purpose to inlarge. Upon this Theme spenthat was a Captain of the Gaules, to wait dius makes an Oration to the Souldiers, exupon Amilear, and always to keep the high- horting them to fidelity; and shewing with er grounds, or at least, the foot of some hill, many words, that the seeming humanity of where they might be free from the Ele- Amilear, toward some, was none other than phants; and he himself continued to press | a bait, wherewith to intrap them all at once the Town of Hippagreta with an hard fiege. together; as alfotelling them what a dan-It was necessary for Amilear, in passing from gerous enemy Gesco would prove, if he might place to place, as his business required, to escape their hands. Whilest he is yet in the take fuch wayes as there were: for all the midst of his tale, were letters come to the Country lay not level. Therefore Spendius, Same purpose. Then steps forth Antarius, who still coasted him, had once gotten a and speaks his mind plainly: saying, that it notable advantage of ground; the Carthagi- were the best, yea, the only way, for the nians lying in a plain, furrounded with hils, common fafety, to cut off all hope of reconthat were occupied by the Mercenaries, with | ciliation with Carthage; that if some were their Numidian and African succours. In this deviling to make their own peace, it would difficulty, the fame of Amilcar his perfonal go hard with those that had a care of the worth did greatly benefit his Countrey. war 3 that it were better to make an end of For Naravassus, a young Gentleman com- Gesco his life, than to trouble themselves with this occasion, serving to get the acquain every one should be ingaged in the present tance and love of fo brave a man, which Action, as having none other hope left, than nor to hope for any fafety whilest Carthage The fame of this victory, together with was able to do him hurt. They counterfeispective only of their private benefit, and careless of the general good, had a purpose to betray them all unto the Carthaginians, with whom they held intelligence; and that manding over the Numidians, was glad of looking to his custody; that by such a course invictory alone; finally, that fuch as would | ted Traitors. This Antarius was in great cre- remedies. In neither of which Amilear failto alter his intended cruelty; but they were them unto wild beafts to be devoured. forthwith froned to death, as a Document that the subjects or friends of Carthage, terwards.

the hands of all that are with thee be strong. of Otica and Hippagreta, that had stood alding to the degree of their feveral crimes. were) bind the others hands A coward thinks all provision too little for

Against these inconveniences, Mercy and freak here-against, were worthy to be repu- Severity, used with due respect are the best dit with the Souldiers, and could speak sun- ed. For as long as these his old souldiers dry languages, in such fort, that he was un- were any way likely to be reclaimed by genderstood by all. According to his motion the courses, his humanity was ready to intherefore it was agreed, that Gesco, and all vite them. But when they were transported the other prisoners, should forthwith be put with beaftly outrage, beyond all regard of to horrible death, by torments Nevertheles | honesty and shame, he rewarded their vilthere were some, that for love of Gesco sought lany with answerable vengeance, casting

Until this time Hanno, with the Army unto others; and so the Decree was put in under his command, had kept himself apart execution. Neither were they therewith- from Amilear, and done little as may feem, all contented, but further ordained, that for that nothing is remembred of him fince all Carthaginian prisoners which they his late losses. Neither was Amilear forry to took, should be served in like fort: and want his help; as being able to do better without him. But when the war grew to should lose their hands, and so be sent such extremity, as threatned utter ruine to home which rule they observed ever af- the one or the other side: then was Hanno fent for, and came to Amilear, with whom he Of this cruelty I need fay no more, than | joyned his forces. By this accels of strength that it was most execrable ferity. As for Amilcar was not enabled to do more than in the counsel of using it, it was like unto the former times; rather he could now perform counsel of Achitophel; All Ifrael shall hear, nothing: such was the hatred between him that thou art abborred of thy father; then shall and his unworthy Colleague. The Towns Such are the fruits of desperation. He that wayes firm to the Carthaginian party, did is past all hope of pardon, is afraid of his now revolt unto the enemy, murdering all own fellows, if they be more innocent; the Souldiers that they had in Garrison, and and to avoid the punishment of less offen- calting their bodies forth, without suffering ces, committeth greater. The cowardize them to be buried. The provisions brought of offenders, and the revengeful spirits of by sea, for maintenance of the Army, were those that have been wronged, are breeders lost in foul weather; and Carthage it self of this desperation: to which may be ad- stood in danger of being besieged, about dediome deficiency of Laws, in diffinguish- | which Matho and Spendius consulted, whilest ing the punishments of malefactors, accor- one of the Carthaginian Generals did (as it

It hath in all Ages been used as the safest his own fecurity. If Phocas be a comard | course, to send forth, in great Expeditions, (faid the Emperour Mauritius) then is he two generals of one Army. This was the murderous. To be stedfast and sure, in common practice of those two mighty Citaking revenge, is thought a point of ho- ties Athens and Rome, which other States nour, and a defensative against new inju- and Princes have often imitated; perswading ries. But wrongfully: for it is opposite to themselves, that great Armies are not so well the rule of Christianity; and such a quality | conducted by one, as by two: who out of discovered, makes them deadly enemies, who emulation to excell each other, will use the otherwise would have repented, and sought greater diligence. They have also joyned to make amends, for the wrong done in pai- two chief Commanders in equal commiffision. This was it which wrought somuch on, upon this further consideration; the bet-Woe to the Carthaginians; teaching Matho, ter to restrain the ambition of any one, that and his Africans, to suspect even their should be trusted with so great a strength. gentleness, as the introduction to extream For hereof all Common-weals have been jearigour. Like unto the errors of Princes and lous, having been taught by their examples Governours, are the errours of Laws. Where that have made themselves Tyrants over one and the same punishment is awarded un- those Cities and States that have imployed to the less offence, and unto the greater, them. In this point the Venetians having been he that hath adventured to rob a man, is so circumspect, as they have, for the most eafily tempted to kill him, for his own fe- pair, trusted strangers, and not their own in all the wars which they have made. It is true, that the equal authority of two command- occasions are as often overflipt, as at other ing in chief, ferveth well to bridle the ambition of one or both, from turning upon the taken. I remember it well, that when the Prince or State that hath given them truft: Prince of Conde was flain after the Battel of but in managing the war it felf, it is com- Jarnac, (which Prince, together with the monly the cause of ill success. In wars made admiral Chastillan, had the conduct of the near unto Rome it felf, when two good Protestant Army) the Protestants did greatly friends were Confuls, or such two at least, as bewail the loss of the said Prince, in respect concurred in one delive of Triumph, which of his Religion, person, and birth 5 yet comhonour the greatest of any that Rome could forting themselves, they thought it rather an give) was to be obtained by that one years advancement, than an hinderance to their fervice; it is no marvel, though each of the affairs. For fo much did the valour of the Confuls did his best, and referred all his one out-reach the advisedness of the other. thoughts unto none other end than victory, as what soever the Admiral intended to win Yet mall dangerous cases, when the Consuls by attending the advantage, the Prince adproceeded otherwise than was defired, one ventured to lose, by being over-confident in Dictator was appointed, whose power was his own courage. neither hindred by any partner, nor by any great limitation. Neither was it indeed the the Carthaginians in this present busines: manner, to fend forth both the Confuls to who, though they were still fick of their illone war; but each went whither his lot cal- grounded love to Hanno, and were unwilled him, to his own Province; unless one ling to diffrace him; yet seeing that all ran bufiness feemed to require them both, and towards ruine, through the discord of the they also seemed fit to be joyned in the ad- | Generals, committed the decision of their ministration. Now although it was so, That | Controversies, unto the Army that served the Romans did many times prevail with under them. The judgment of the Army their joynt-Generals: yet was this never fo was, that Hanno should depart the Camp: feldom, without as much concord, as any which hedid, and Hannibal was fent in his other vertue of the Commanders. For their stead, one that would be directed by Amilmodesty hath often been such, that the less car, and that was enough. able Captain, though of equal authority. hath willingly submitted himself to the to prosper somewhat better. Matho and other, and obeyed his directions. This not- spendius had brought their Army near unto withstanding, they have many times by or- | the City; and lay before it, as in a siege, daining two Commanders of one Army, re- They might well be bold to hope and adceived great and most dangerous over- venture much, having in their Camp above throws; wherefore in the second Punick lifty thousand, besides those that lay abroad War we shall find examples. On the contra- in Garrisons. Nevertheles, the City was too ry fide, in their wars most remote, that were strong for them to win by assault: and the alwayes managed by one, they feldom fail- entrance of victuals they could not hinder, ed to win exceeding honour, as hereafter if any should be sent in by friends from thall appear. Now of those ten Generals, abroad. which ferved the Athenians at the battel of Marathon, it may be truly faid, that had not the wars in Sicil he affifted the Romans, and their temper been better than the judgment still continued in their alliance, yet now of the people that fent them forth, and had fent succours to the Carthaginians: fearing not they submitted themselves to the con- their fall, and consequently his own; beduction of Militades; their affairs had found cause if no other State gave the Romans the same success which they found at other somewhat to trouble their digestion, the times, when they coupled Nicias and Alci- Principality of Syracuse would soon be debiades together in sicil: the one being fo voured by them. The Romans also gave over-wary, and the other fo hasty, as all them some slender affishance, and, for the came to nought that they undertook: present, resused good offers made unto whereas Cimon alone, as also Ariftides, and them by the Mercenaries. This they did others, having sole charge of all, did their to shew a noble kind of disposition; which Country and Common-weal most remark- was indeed but counterfeit, as the sequel able service. For it is hard to find two great manifestly proved. Captains of equal discretion and valour; but that the one hath more of fury than of judg fily prefling the City, Amilear was as diliment, and so the contrary, by which the best gent in waiting at their backs, and cutting

824

But we need no better example, than of

After this, the affairs of Carthage began

Hieron King of Syracuse, though during

Whilft Matho and his followers were bu-

in plain battel: until at length he got them more, in number. into a straight, whence ere they should This was a famous exploit : and the news get out, he meant to take of them a good thereof exceeding welcome to Carthage; and account. Their judgment was enough to terrible to the revolted Cities of Africk. perceive their own disadvantage; and there- Henceforward Amilear, with his Naravasus, fore they had the lefs fromach to fight; and Hamibal, carried the war from Town but awaiting for help from Tunis. Amilear to Town, and found all places ready to prudently forefeeing, that necessity might yield: Utica & Hippagreta only standing out, teach them to dare impossibilities, used the upon fear of deserved vengeance; and Tunis, benefit of their present fear, and shut them being held by Matho, with the remainder of close up with Trench and Rampart. There his Army. It was thought fit to begin with they waited milerably, for fuccour that Tunis, wherein lay the chief strength of the came not: and having spent all their vi- enemy. Coming before this Town, they ctuals, were so pinched with hunger, that brought forth spending, with his fellows, in they fed upon the bodies of their prisoners. view of the defendants, and crucified them This they fuffered patiently, as knowing that under the walls; to terrifie those of his old they had not deferved any favour from Car- companions, that were still in Arms. With thage; and hoping that their friends at Tu- this rigour the fiege began; as if speedy vinis would not be unmindful of them. But ctory had been affured. Hannibal quartered when they were driven to such extremity, on that part of Tunis, which lay toward that they were fain to devour their own Carthage. Amilcar on the opposite side: too companions, and yet faw none appearance or far afunder to help one another in fudden off all that come to their supply: so that these three come forth to talk with Amilean finding themselves more straightly besieged in person. What they could say unto him. by him, than Carthage was by them, they it is hard to conjecture: yet by the condipurposed to desist from their vain attempt, tions which Amilear granted, it seems that and try some other course. Hereupon they they took the blame upon themselves, and issue into the field: when Spendins, and one craved pardon for the multitude. The con-Zarcas an African Captain affifting the re- ditions were, that the Carthaginians should bellion, take upon them to find Amilear chuse, out of the whole number of these work; leaving Matho in Tunis, to negotiate enemies, any ten whom they pleased, to rewith their friends, and take a general care of main at their discretion; and that the rest the business. The Elephants of Carthage, and should all be dismissed, each in his shirt, or horse of Naravasus, made Spendius fearful in one single coat. When the peace was thus to descend into the Plains. Wherefore concluded, Amilear told these Ring-leaders, he betook himself to his former method that he chose them presently, as part of the of war, keeping the mountains, and rough ten, and fo commanded to lay hands on grounds, or occupying the straightest pas- them: the rest he forthwith went to fetch tages, wherein the desperate courage of his with his whole Army in order. The Rebels, men might shew it felf, with little disadvan- who knew not that peace was concluded tage. But Amilear had more skill in this upon so gentle Articles, thought themselves Art, than could be matched by the labour betrayed: and therefore amazedly ran to of spendius. He drew the enemy to ma- Arms. But they wanted Captains to order ny skirmishes; in all which the success was them: and the same astonishment that made fuch, as added courage to his own men, them break the Covenants of Peace, whereand abated the strength and spirit of the of they were ignorant, gave unto Amilear Rebels. Thus he continued, provoking them both colour of Justice, in accomplishing renight and day: ftill intrapping some of them, venge and ease in doing the execution. They and sometimes giving them the overthrow were all flain: being forty thousand, or likelihood of relief: their obstinacy was accidents; and therefore it behoved each to broken, and they threatned their Captains be the more circumspect.

with what they deserved, unless they would Matho from the walls beheld his own dego forthto Amilear, and feek fuch peace as stiny, in the misery of his companion, and might be gotten. So spendius, Zarxas, and knew not how to avoid it otherwise than by Autarins, fell to consultation, wherein it a cast at dice with fortune. So he brake out was resolved to obey the multitude, and upon that part of the Carthaginian Army, yield themselves, if it were so required, unto that lay secure, as if all danger were past, unthe death, rather than perish by the hands der the command of Hannibal: and with so of their own companions. Hereupon they great and unexpected fury he fallied, that af fend to crave parlie, which is granted; and ter an exceeding flaughter, he took Hannibal

826

fently revenged the death of spendius by to prefume, fave their daring fpirits, which the same torture. Of this, Amilcar knew no- had been well cooled by the many late skirthing, till it was too late; neither had he mishes, wherein they had learned how to frength enough remaining, after this great run away. The Carthaginians had reason to los, to continue the siege; but was fain to dare, as having been often victorious: and break it up, and remove unto the mouth of in all points else they had the better of their the River Bagradas, where he incamped.

the joy of the late great victory. All that ther was it likely that the defire of liberty ould bear arms, were fent into the field, under Hanno; whom, it seems, they thought servitude; as the honour of their State the most able of their Captains surviving would, in Citizens, whose survive and present the late accidents of War. If there were good lay all at once ingaged in that advenany Law among them forbidding the imployment of one fole General near unto ctory, wherein most of the Africans their their City (for they are known to have trulenemies were flain; the reft fled into a fred one man abroad) the time did not permit, in this hasty exigent, to devise about refen by the Senate, to bring Hanno to Amilears victory, all the Africans that had rebelled, Camp, and by all good perswasions to reconcile them. This could not be effected in one ea only, and Hippagreta stood out, as knowday. It nearly touched Amilear in his honour, that the carelefness of Hannibal seemed to be imputed unto him, by sending his enemy to moderate his proceedings. Nevertheless after many conferences, the authority of the Senators prevailed; Amilear and Hanno were made friends; and thenceforth, whilft this war lafted, Hanno took warning by Hannibals calamities, to follow good directions, though afterwards he returned to his old and deadly hatred.

In the mean feafon Matho was come abroad, as meaning to use the reputation of his late success, whilst it gave some life unto his business. He had reason to do as he did: but he wanted skill to deal with Amilear. The skirmishes, and light exercises of war, wherein Amilear trained his Carthaginians, did fo far abate the strength, and withall diminish the credit of Matho; that he refolved to try the fortune of one battel: wherein either his own defire should be accomplished, or his cares ended. To this conclusion the Carthaginians were no less prone, than Matho: as being weary of these long troubles, and insupportable expences; confident in the valour of their own men, which had approved it felf in many tryals; and well affured of Amilcar his great worth, pole. According to his determination, each these, one Hanno was sent with a small Army viting their friends to help; and drawing confifting likewife of Mercenaries; levied. part was diligent in making provision: inprisoner, on whom, and thirty the most foretold, without help of witchcraft. Maprincine; oil whom; and thirty the noble of the Carthaginian prisoners, he pre-The terrour was no less within Carthage, rest) they had such a Commander, as was upon the fame of this lofs, than had been not eafily to be matched in that Age. Neitherefore they all yielded; and Matho himfelf was taken alive. Immediately upon this they were foon forced to take what conditions best pleased the victours. Matho and his fellows were led to Carthage in triumph; where they fuffered all torments that could be devised, in recompence of the mischies which they had wrought in this war. The war had lasted three years, and about four months, when it came to this good end: which the Carthaginians, whose subjects did not love them, should with less expence, by contenting their Mercenaries, have prevented in the beginning.

o. IV.

How the Mercenaries of the Carthaginians, that were in Sardinia, rebelled : and were afterwards driven ont by the Ilanders. The faithless dealing of the Romans with the Carthaginians, in taking from them Sardinia, contrary to the peace.

7 Hilst Matho and Spendius were ma-V king terrible combustion in Africks other Mercenaries of the Carthaginians had kindled the like fire in Sardinia: where murdering Boftar the Governour, and other Carthaginians, they were in hope to get, and hold that Island to their own use. Against forth into the field, all that lay in Garrison. On the sudden. But these companies that The iffue of this battel might have been followed Hanno, finding it more for their diffrust, they resolved to hang up their sused, upon reasons that follow. Commander Hanno, and performed it. A common practice it hath been in all Ages, tho and spendius with Corn: of whom the with those that have undertaken the quar. | Carthaginians took almost five hundred, and relof an unjust war, to enjoyn the perfor- held them in prison. Hereof was made á mance of some notorious and villainous act, great complaint: so that the Romans sent to those that come in to them as seconds, Embassadours to Carthage, requiring satisf with offer to partake, and to affift the im- faction. It was no time for the Carthaginians grateful Mantineans murder a Garrison of meddle with Sardinia, or to accept the City Achaians, sent unto them for their defence of Utiea, offering it felf unto their subjectiagainst the Lacedamonians, by Aratus; who, on. This might have served as a notable exwhen he had formerly pollest himself of ample of the Roman Faith, to all posterity: their City, by right of war, did not only had not the iffue proved, that it was meer spare the fack and spoil thereof, but gave regard of greater profit, which kept them so Cities united. These revolts are also com- thriving better thereby, than they should fafety, and present profit, to joyn themselves there was none other valuable reward, than with those that were already revolted, than possession and rule of the Country; the matto endanger themselves by battel, for the ter was not easily taken up. So they fell to good of that Common-weal; of which blows; which how they were dealt, I know they had no care; began to enter into not; but finally the Mercenaries were driven practice with the Sardinian Rebels, offer- out, and compelled to fave themselves in ing to run one course of fortune with them Italy. Before their departure out of Sardiin their enterprise. This their offer was nia, they had invited the Romans into it; kindly taken; but their faith was suspected. with as good right, as the Mamertines had Wherefore to take away all jealouse and called them into sicil. Yet this offer was re-

Some Italian Merchants had relieved Mapious purposes which they have in hand. It to dispute: they quietly yielded to release is indeed the best pawn, that desperate men them all. This was so kindly taken that they candeliver to each other, to perform some sorbad all their Merchants to trade thencefuch actions, as are equally unpardonable forth with the Rebels; admonifhing them to carry all provisions to Carthage. And up-By such a kind of cruelty did the un- on the same reason did they forbear to them equal freedom, with the rest of the temperate, no longer than the hope lasted of mon in our Court-wars; where, in the have done by open breach of Faith. The Conquests of new fortunes, and making of whole estate of Carthage depended at that new parties, and factions, without the de-time, upon the vertue of Amilear: who had pression or destruction of old friends, we he been overthrown by spendius or Matho, cannot be received and trusted by old ene- in one main battel, that mighty City must mies. Cesont les coups de vieille escrime. These either have fallen into the barbarous hands (faythe French) be the blows of the old Art of mercite's villains, or have humbled her felf under protection of the Romans, with These Mercenaries in Sardinia were no whom she had lately striven for superiowhit less violent in their purpose, than were rity. That extreme necessity, whereinto Spendius, and his affociates: only they want- Matho reduced the City, by the fortune ed a Matho among them, to negotiate with of one fally made out of Tunis, is enough the inhabitants of the Province. The Ilan- to prove, that Carthage was not far from ders were no less glad, than the souldiers, such a miserable choice. Wherefore it that the Carthaginians were expelled the was not unwifely done of the Romans, to Country: but they could not agree about make such demonstration of kindness, and the profit of the victory. The Sardinians honourable dealing, as might invite a rich, thought that it was enough, if they reward- but finking thip, to run her felf aground ed the fouldiers for their pains taken. Con-upon their shore. But when all was well trariwife, the fouldiers were of opinion, that ended in Africk, and the Carthaginians bethe title of the Carthaginians to that Isle, was gan to prepare for the recovery of Sardinia; devolved unto themselves, by right of Conthen did Ambition put off her goodly vizor. quest. The same quarrel would (in likeli- The Romans perceiving that Carthage, hood) have risen between spendius with his beyond their hope, had recovered her feet Mercenaries, and their African friends; if the again; began to strike at her head. They common defire of both had once taken ef- entertained the proffer of those Mercenafect: unless the riches of Carthage had served ries, that were fled out of Sardinia; and they to content them all. But in Sardinia, where denounced war against this enseebled and impoverished Mmmmm tence, that the preparations made for Sardinia, were made indeed against Rome it self. licity of Carthage did confist. By such die The Carthaginians knew themselves unable courses, harsh to the ears of good Citizens. to refift, and therefore yielded to the Romans demand; renouncing unto them all Common-weal, they got none other reputatheir right in Sardinia. But this was not tion, than of fingularity: which the ignoenough. They would have twelve hundred rant fort suspected to be wisdom. talents, in recompence belike (for I fee not what reason they could alledge) of the great fear which they had endured, of an vices that he did, to the fingular benefit of invasion from Carthage. It is indeed plain, his Country. He passed the straights of Herthat they impudently fought occasion of cules, (now called the straights of Gibralter) war. But necessity taught the Carthaginians patience; and the mony was payed, in which Country, during nine years that he how hardly soever it was raised. From this lived there, he subjected unto the State of time forward, let not Rome complain of the Carthage the better part of all those Provin-Punick faith, in breach of Covenants: she her felf hath broken the peace already, which Amilear purposeth to make her dear- tones, (defending himself a long time with ly repent; but what Amilear lives not to an admirable resolution) he was invironed perform, shall be accomplished by Hannibal his renowned Son.

828

ø. V.

expressing their desire to pick a quarrel; ferved to instruct the Carthaginians in thage: adding so many subjects and confea necessary lesion; That either they must derates thereunto, that the Romans began make themselves the stronger, or else re- to grow jealous again of this hasty increase. folve to be obedient unto those that were He built a goodly City upon a commodious more mighty. In a City long accustomed to Haven, in the Kingdom of Granado, oprule, the braver determination easily took posite to that of Oran in Africa, and gave it place: and the best means were thought up- the name of New Carthage, which to this on, for the increase of Puissance and Empire. day it nearly retaineth, being called now ruine.

worthy of command in all the City: only little help of force, that knoweth himselfto they commended peace and quietness; ad- be feared: it is enough if he request, since his impoverished City, under a shameless pre- vising men to beware of provoking the Romans, in whose amity they said, that the fewho had feeling of the wrong done to their

But the glory of Amilear was continually upheld and enlarged, by many notable ferand landed on the Western coasts of spain: ces. But finally in a battel that he fought with a Nation in Portugal, called the Vetand flain: carrying with him to the grave the fame great honour and fame, by which in many fignal victories, he had acquired the name of a second Mars.

After the death of Amilcar, Afdrubalhis How the Affairs of Carthage went, between the | Son-in-law was made General of the Car-African Rebellion, and the second Punick thagenian forces in Spain. This was a good man of war; but far better in practice and cunning than in deeds of arms. By his HE injurious dealings of the Romans, notable dexterity in matter of negotiation, he greatly enlarged the Dominion of Car-The strength, and the jealousie of the Romans, forbad all attempts upon the Mediterthaginians in Spain, the Romans were not force bill ranean Seas; but the riches of spain, that lay a little troubled; but began to accuse their a City of upon the Ocean, were unknown to Rome. wherefore that Province might serve both merly taken so much pains to beat them out the wife wherefore that Province might here both men y taken of much pains to exercise the Carthaginians in war, and to of the Isle of sicil, as suspecting their neight which is repair their decayed forces, with all needful fupplies. Of the Spanis Expedition, the charge and foveraign trust was committed tance, (whereof I shall speak anon) given the year unto Amilear: upon whom his Country did them leifure without interruption, to re-1512 wholly repose it self; in hope to recover upon their own Continent, a Domi- fact by ftrength by his means, that had faved it from nion by far exceeding, both in the bodies of in the men, and in revenue, that which the Ro-yerith Hanno, with some other envious men that mans had taken from them. But how to were of his faction, took little pleasure in the help this, at the present they know not; general love and honour, which daily in- for they daily expected to be invaded by the created towards Amilear and his friends. Ganles, their ancient enemies, and nearest Yet could they not deny him to be the most neighbours to the West. But he needth all good colour, that might help them to in thought) fellow-fervants with Carthage. all good colors. The Spaniards were But the Carthaginians will Cartnage termeddle in Spain. The Spaniards were But the Carthaginians will shortly teach termedicate the unacquainted with Rome, whereof (in them another lefton. The saguntines, a peoprobability) they scarce had heard the ple on the South-side of Iberus, entred into probability for the there were no Mamertines, confederacy with the Romans, and were name to the nor other fuch Rebels, to call in Roman fuc-gladly accepted. Surely it was lawful unto cours; but in the enterprise of Sardinia, the the Komans, to admit the Saguntines, or any Romans had learned an impudent pretence, other people (neither subject, nor open enemy that might also serve their turn in Spain. For in war to the Carthaginians) into their societhough it were apparent, that the spanish afty: and unlawful it was unto the Carthaginifairs had no relation to the peace between ans, to use violence towards any that should the two Cities; and though it were no thus once become confederate with Rome. thing likely, that Adrubal had any purpose Nevertheles, if we consider the late agreeto extend his victories unto the gates of ment made with Afdrubal, we shall find that Rome, or to any of the Roman frontiers: yet the Romans could have none other honest (as if some such matter had been suspected) colour of requiring it, than an implicit covethey fent unto him, requiring that he should and of making the River Iberts a bound, wayes contented, and fought no further.

CHAP. II.

composition made by Asiarubal; yet should it slave, whose Master he had put to death) and not have stood bound in honour, to observe the Great Hannibal, Son of the Great Amilthe same carefully, unless an oath had also car, was chosen General in his fread. been extorted to make all fure. But fince all passed quietly, under the bare authority of Asarubal, this Capitulation was none other ineffect than a fecond breach of peace; The estate of Greece from the death of whereof the Romans might be accused more jultly, than they could accuse the Carthaginians of perjury, (as they after did) for refuling to stand to it.

request shall have the vertue of a com- blows from a stouter Dame; there were soon Yet were the Romans utterly destitute of the protection of Rome, became (as they forbear to proceed any further, than to the over which they themselves would not pass, River of Iberus. In addressing their messen in any Discovery or Conquest by them ingers, rather to Afdrubal, than to the City of tended to be made upon spain: in which re-Carlage; they feem to have hoped, that gard, they might have some honest pretence howsoever the generality of the Carthagi- to require the like of the Carthaginians; nians had sweetly swallowed many bitter though Rome, as yet, had no foot on the one pills, to avoid all occasion of war with Rome, side of Iberus, whereas Carthage, on the other yet the bravery of one man might prove fide of that River, held almost all the Counmore faltidious, and refenting the injury, return fuch answer, as would intangle his focasily digested as former injuries had been whole Country in the quarrel, that they fo | For it was a matter of ill consequence, that much defired; and might embrace at lei- the Nations which had heard of no greater fure, when once they had found apparent power than the Carthaginian, should behold caule. But Adrubal finely deluded their ex- Saguntum refling securely among them, upon pedation. He pretended no manner of dif- confidence of help from a more mighty Cilike at all: and whereas they would have ty. Wherefore either in this respect, or for this infolent covenant inferted into the Ar- that the sense is most feeling of the latest ticles of peace; he took upon him to do it of injuries; or rather for that now the Carthahis own power, with fuch appearance of con- ginians were of power to do themselves formity to their will, that they went their right : war against saguntum was generally thought upon , let the Romans take it how If it had been to, that the State of Car- they lift. In fuch terms were the Carthaginithage, thereunto pressed by the Romans, for ans, when Astrubal died, after he had comfear of present war, had ratified this new manded in spain eight year. (being slain by a

ø. VI.

Pyrrhus, to the reign of Philip the Son of Demetrius in Macedon.

IN the long term of the first Punick war, and the vacation following, between it wan some reputation in Spain. For when and the second; the estate of Greece, after it was once conceived by the Spaniards, that the death of Pyrrhus, was grown somewhat the City which would needs be Mistress like unto that, wherein Philip of Macedon over them, stood in sear her self of receiving had found it; though far weaker, as the

after-foring. The whole Country had re- poisoned by this Antigonus, who deceived covered by degrees, a form of liberty: in his wife Nicea thereof, and got it from her petty tyrannies (bred of those inferiour by a trick. The device was this: Antigonus perty tyrannies (Dieta of general com-Captains, which in the times of general com-bultion, had feifed each upon fuch towns as ling him to court Nicea, and feek her marrihe could get) were, by force or accident, ex- age. The foolish old widow perceived nor tirpated, and reformed; and fome States how unfit a match fhe was for the young were rifen to such greatness, as not only ser- Prince, but entertained the fancy of marriwed to defend themselves, but to give protection to others. This conversion to the dy to consent, as was his son to desire, and better, proceeded from the like diffensions came thither in person to solemnize it. Hereand tumults in Macedon, as had been in upon all Corinth was filled with facrifices. Greece, when Philip first began to encroach feasts, plaies, and all forts of games: in the upon it. For after many quarrels and great midst of which, Antigonus watched histime. wars, about the Kingdom of Macedon, be- and got into the Caltle, beguiling the poor tween Antigonus the elder, Cassander, Deme- Lady, whose jealousie had been exceeding trius, Lysimachus, Seleucus, Pyrrhus, and the diligent in keeping it. Of this purchase he Gaules: Antigonus the son of Demetrius, fin- was so glad, that he could not contain himally got and held it, reigning fix and thirty felf within the gravity befeeming his old years; yet so, that he was divers times age. But as he had stollen it; so was it thence expelled, not only by the Gaules, and again stollen from him: neither lived he to by Pyrrhus, as hath been already shewed, but revenge the loss of it, being already shent by Alexander the Son of Pyrrhus the Epirot, with age. from whose father he had hardly won it. This happened unto him, by the revolt of ceeding unto his Father, reigned ten years. his Souldiers, even at fuch time, as having He made greater proof of his vertue before overthrown with great flaughter an Army he was King, than after. The Dardanians, of the Gaules, he was converting his forces | Atolians, and Acheans, held him continualagainst the Athenians, whom he compelled ly busied in war; wherein his fortune was to receive his Garrisons. But his young son variable, and for the more part ill. About Demetrius railed an Army, wherewith he these times the power of the Macedonians chased Alexander, not only out of Macedon, began to decay: and the Gracians to cast but out of his own Epirus, and restored his off their yoke. Father to the Kingdom.

By the help of this young Prince Deme- young child when his Father died; and trius (though in another kind) Antigonus therefore Antigonus, his Uncle, had the got into his possession the Citadel of Corinth; charge of the Kingdom, during the minoriwhich was justly termed the fetter of Greece, ty of the Prince; but he assumed the name This Citadel called Acrocorinthus, stood up- and power of a King, though he respected on a steep rocky hill on the North side of the Philip as his own son, to whom he left the Town, and was by nature and art fo ftrong, Crown at his death; This Antigonus, was that it seemed impregnable. It commanded called the Tutor, in regard of his Protestorthe Town; which was of much importance, ship; and was also called Doson, that is as as occupying the whole breadth of the much as, Will-give, because he was flow in Isthmus, that running between the Egean his liberality. He repressed the Dardaniand Ionique Seas, joyneth Feloponnesus to the ans and Thessalians, which molested his Main of Greece. Wherefore he that held Kingdom, in the beginning of his reignpossession of this Castle was able to cut off Upon considence of this good service, he all passage by land, from one half of Greece took state upon him, as one that rather unto the other; besides the commodity of were King in his own right, than only a the two Seas, upon both of which, this rich Protector. Hereupon the people fell to and goodly City had commodious havens. mutiny; but were foon appealed by fair Alexander, the fon of Polysperchon; and after words, and a seeming unwillingness of his his death, Cratespolis his wife, had gotten to meddle any more with the Government. Corinth in the great shuffling of Provinces The Achaians took from him the City of and Towns, that was made between Alex- Athens, soon after Demetrius his death; and anders Princes. Afterwards it passed from likely they were to have wrought himout hand to hand, untill it came, I know not of all, or most that he held in Greece, if their how, to one Alexander; of whom I find no- own estate had not been endangered by a thing elfe, than that he was thought to be nearer enemy. But civil diffention, which

Demetrius, the fon of this Antigonus, fuc-

Philip, the only fon of Demetrius, was a frength after a long fickness; and gave to this Antigonus no less authority therein, than philip the Father of Alexander, got by the like advantage.

These Achaians from small beginnings. had increased in short time to great frength and fame: fo that they grew the most redoubted Nation of all the Greeks. By the equality of their Laws, and by their were a long time held under by the Macedonians and Spartans) they did not only draw all others by their love and al- the fecond. liance, but induced, through their example, the rest of the Cities of Peloponnesus, to be governed by one Law, and to use one and the same fort of weights, measure, and trenses and the Dimai, united themselves, wherein the workmen of siegon excelled. and laid the foundation of the general ac-Kings; they began to fasten themseives in a the place, had practised to rob Antigomus

had overthrown the power of Greece, when | strong league of amity, partly, in the Olymhad overthed most, overthrew it easily piad before spoken of, and partly, at such time as Pyrrhus made his first voyage into Italy. Now after the uniting of the Patrenses and Dimei to whom also the Cities of Titrea, and Phara, joyned themselves; Ægira chased out her Garrisons: and the Burians, killing their Kings, entred with the Ceraunians into the fame Confederacy. These Cities, for twenty and five years, used the same form of Government with the Achaiaus; who by a Senatory and two Prætors, ordered all clemency (notwithstanding that they things in their Common-weal; and soon after by one Prætor, or Commander: of which Marcus Carynensis was the first, and Aratus

This Aratus was a noble young Gentleman of Sicyon, who, living at Argos in exile, whilst his Country was oppressed by Tyrants, found means, through the help of other banished men, to enter their own City Aratus, the Sicyonian, was the first that by night, with ladders; whence they chaunited them again; and gave them courage, | fed the Tyrant, and restored the people to after that they had been by the Macedonian liberty. This was in the time of Antigonus Captains divided into many Principalities. In Gonatas King of Macedon, a Prince more elder times they were governed by Kings, as | busie in watching what to get among the most of the great Cities of Greece were; to Greeks, than wife in looking to his own. For which kind of rule they first subjected them- fear of Antigonus, the Sicyonians enter into selves, after the descent of the Heraclida, the Achaian league: which though at that when Tifamenus the fon of Orestes posses the | time it received more increase by their acces-Territory of Achaia. In this estate they sion than it added strength to them; yet the continued to the time of Gyges; after whom, benefit of this conjunction ferved well when his fons fought to change the Legal enough against Antigonus, whose subtlety Government of their Predecessors into Ty- was somewhat greater than his valour. As ranny, they expelled them, and made their the industry and counsel of Aratus delivered State popular; as seeming most equal. This his Country from bondage, and fortified it form of Common-weal had continuance, by the Achaian league; fo further, by his with some small changes according to the great liberality, with the exceeding great diversity of times, till the reign of Philip and cost of 150, talents, he pacified the inexpli-Alexander Kings of Macedon: who tempest- cable controversies, between the banished like overturned all things in that part of the | sicyonians, which returned with him, and the world. For those twelve Cities, called the other Citizens that had poslession of these Cities of alliance (whereof, Helice, and Bura or mens Lands; as also with the same money he Olenus, the Sea had eaten up a little before drew many others to affift him in those enthe Battail of Lenteres) were, by diftur- terprifes following, that redounded to the bance of the Macedonians, divided from fingular good of all Achaia. The mony he obeach other, and trained into a war, no less tained of Ptolemy Euergetes King of Egypt; foolish than cruel, among themselves. But in who partly had a desire to hold some strong the one hundred and four and twentieth and fure friendship in Greece, partly was de-Olympiad (in which, or near it, Ptolemy the lighted with the conversation of Aratus himfon of Lagus, Lysimachus, Selencus, and Ptole- felf, that made a dangerous voyage to him my Ceraunus, left the world) two of ten re- into Egypt, and fed his pleasure in goodly pimaining Cities and people, namely, the Pa- ctures, with the gift of many curious pieces,

The first of Aratus his great attempts, was cord, and re-union, which after followed. the surprize of the Acrocorinthus or Citadel For having been, some of them Partisans of Corinth; which he wan by night, being with fundry Macedonian Captains, and thereinto guided by some theeves that he others having been governed by petry had hired for the purpole, who living in Kings the state of the purpole, who living in had hired for the purpole, who living in fight for it, ere he could get it: though in- but all fufficed not: until at length Ariftodeed Antigonus his Souldiers were rather machus the Tyrant was fo terrified, perfwaovercome by their own fear, than by any ded, and hired by Aratus, that he confented force of the affailants; as miltrufting left to refign his Estate. The like did Xenon the the Achaians were more in number, than in Tyrant of Hermione, and Cleonymus, that had truth they were, and having loft the advan- opprefied the Phiafans. tages of the place already, upon which they had prefumed, before they were aware of on foot, Lystadas the Tyrant of Megalopolis, very cunning, adventurous, and valiant: in whereby he got fuch credit, that he was open field, and plain battail, he was as timorous. By this strange mixture of cowardize yearly Office, and might not be held two and courage, he ministred argument of difputation, to Philosophers and others; Whether a valiant man (as he was esteemed, and in some cases approved) might look pale and tremble, when he began battail; and Whether the vertue of Fortitude were diversified, by the fundry natures of men, and in a manner confined unto several sorts of action. In resolving which doubts it may be said. that all vertue is perfected in men by exercife, wherein they are trained by occasion: though a natural inclination standeth in of Egypt was become Patron of their Allineed of little practice; whereas the defect ance, and (in title of honour) General of hereof must be supplyed with much instru- their forces by Sea and Land; made open ction, use, good success, and other help, yet War upon Demetrius the son of Antigonus hardly shall grow absolute in general. Such Gonatas, for the liberty of Athens. It is was Aratus in matter of War. In fincere affe- strange and worthy of noting, That when Ction to his Country he was unreprovable, Arains in this quarrel had loft a battail, the ons will truly testifie. Megarians revolted foon after from Antigonus, and entred into the same Corporation. the multitude, Aut humiliter servit, aut su-So did the Trazenians, and the Epidaurians: perbe dominatur; It is either base in service, whereby this new crected State grew so po- or insolent in command. Nevertheless when werful, that it adventured to take Athens, from the Macedonians, and Argos and Mega- by money, which he could not by force; lopolis, from tyrants that held them. The eneffect. For though Aratus wasted the Isle of Athenians, who thenceforth held good cor-Salamis, to shew his strength, and sent home respondence with the Acheans, loving the Athenian prisoners, without ransome, to them, and speaking well of them, which as being now grown honest slaves to the belike, in regard of their own out-worn Macedonians. Upon Argos the adventure glory. was carried more ftrongly. The Achaians came fometimes to the gates of the City, but own freedom; fundry times, and with diverse events, they fought with the Tyrants, without help of any other vertue. They had his treasury, passing in and out by a secret (who rose up one after another in Argos) in path among the rocks. Yet was he fain to open field, and flew one of them in battail;

Whilst this business with the Argives was In these kinds of night-services, ambush- out compulsion, he gave liberty to his Gry, ments, furpriles, and practices, Aratus was and annexed it to the Council of Achaia: chosen General of their forces (which was a year, for a certain while, he and dratus fucceeded one another by turns. Butthofe late Tyrants, and new Citizens, Lyladas and Aristomachus, were carried with private passion from care of the general good; in which courses they opposed Aratus, to the great hurt of Achaia, as shall appear induc

The Acheans having obtained fo much puissance and reputation, that Ptolemy King and so reknowledged: as his following acti- Athenians wore Garlands, in sign of joy, to flatter their good Lords the Macedonians, When Acrocorinthus was taken, and joyn-that had won the victory. Such were now ed unto the Common-wealth of Achaia, the the Athenians become ; in whom the rule was verified, that holds true in general of Demetrius was dead, Aratus performed that and corrupting the Captain of the Macedonian Garrison, purchased liberty to the allure the City by shew of love; yet the Athe- was all that they could do: but into their mans stirred neither against him, nor for him, Corporation they entred not, scorning it

Now as the Common-wealth of Achaia daily increased within Peloponnesus, by jufrice and honesty 5 fo did the Etolians, in ponnesus it self, wax very powerful, by sturCHAP. II. in Peloponnesus: so that they were hardned ready become Achean. with perpetual travail; feldom putting off felves.

not on what fide) and fo get no fmall fhare, both in booty and Territory. Neither did that in fine, Leonidas was brought home, they forbear to communicate this their de- and restored to his Kingdom, and the two

froutly defended themselves against Anti- vice unto Antigonus; offering to make him pater and Craterus; partly by daring to do partaker of their gain, whom they knew to and fuffer much, partly by the natural be offended with the many loffes, that this and unter index, fracting their Country; but Kingdom hath fultained by the Acheans. Of efectally by the benefit of the time, which this plot Aratus was aware: who therefore called away these famous Captains to other determined to suffer many indignities, rabulines, as hath been related. They had ther than to give the Lacademonians cause molested Cassander, in favour of Antigonus, to take Arms. But this resolution was taken and were themselves as much plagued by somewhat too late: and not altogether in his him, and by the Acarnanians, a little, but a own power to hold. He had been meddling front Nation, that took his part. Afterwards with the Arcadians, that were dependents they had to do with Demetrins, the fon of of Lacedemon: and thereby had provoked the first Antigonus, and more or less with all the Lacedamonians to look about them; the Kings of Macedon fucceeding him. They | feeing that all Peloponnesus, excepting themlikewife held often war with the Acarnani- felves, the Eleans, and a few Arcadians their ans, Athamanians, Epirots, and many Cities friends (who also were attempted) was al-

The City of sparta was in ill case about their Armour. But their hardines ill de- these times; and subject to the injuries of ferved the name of valour, feeing they had any stronger neighbour. Pyrrhus had greatly no regard of honesty or friendship, measur- | weakned it; The Etolians entring Laconia ing all things by their own infolent wills, with an Army, had carried away fifty thouand thinking all people base-minded, that sand flaves; and, which was worse, their disciwere not as fierce and outragious as them- pline was corrupted, Avarice and Luxury reigned among them, the poor was oppressed These Ætolians had lately made great by the rich, and the generosity of spirit, that fpoils in Peloponnesus, and occupied a good | had sometime been their general vertue, was part of the Country. They had invaded hardly now to be found among the best of the friends of the Acheans; taken and fack- them. There were left in Sparta no more than ed Pallene; where although they were leven hundred natural Citizens; of whom foundly beaten by Aratus, yet their defire of | not above one hundred had Lands: all the gain made them make a new voyage thi- rest were needy people, and desirous of inther, as to a Country wherein somewhat was novation. Hereupon followed intestine sedito be gotten. But they were forced to look tion, which endangered the City most of allanother way, by Demetrius the fon of Anti- Agis a good King, who fought to reform the gonus Gonatas: who pressed them so hardly, disorders of the State, exhorted the people that they were driven to feek help of the to a strict observation of Lycurgus his laws. Acheans; which they obtained. The war To which purpose he caused them to pass which the Acheans made upon Demetrius, an Act, for the aboliffing of all debts, and without Peloponnesus, in Attica, though it equal division of Lands. All the younger, tended to expelling the Macedons out of and poorer fort were glad of this: but the Greece, yet the benefit thereof redounded rich men opposed it. These had recourse chiefly unto the #tolians, at whose instance unto Leonidas the other King, (for in Sparta it was set on foot: for thereby were the Ma- | were two Kings) who took their part: becedonian forces diverted from them. Nei- ing himself a dissolute man, as one trained up ther was this good turn unacknowledged, in the Court of Syria, whence also he had though very basely the Ætolians, giving his wife. In this contention Leonidas was exthanks in words, devised how to require the pelled the City, and a new King chosen in his benefit with some great milchief. They faw stead But Agir his triends and Counsellors in that the Acheans were defirous to bring all this enterprife, abused his good meaning to Pelaponness into their Alliance and Corpother their own private commodity. They were ration: of which intent, the Lacademonians hafty to take away all debts, and cancel all were very jealous. Where fore the le #tolians bonds, for they themselves were deeply laboured earnestly, to set the Lacademonians indebted: but the division of Lands they and Acheans together by the ears: hoping afterwards hindred, because their own posthat if this might come to pass, they them fessions were great. Hence arose a tumult in felves should be called in to help (it skilled sparta, which these men increased by their

of which, Cleombrotus, the late-made King, vered his enmity to Sparta; of which Cleomwas dismissed into exile : but Agis was ness was nothing forry. By these degrees the trained forth, drawn into prison, and there war began. In the entrance whereto draine by his enemies condemned and strangled, had discovered the Ætolian practice, and together with his Mother, and his old therefore would have frayed the quarrel Grand-mother. The like to this was never from proceeding too farr. But Lyffadas known in Sparta: and (which is the and Aristomachus would needs fight, and more odious) this cruelty proceeded from he could do none other than be ruled the Ephori, Magistrates that should have gibby them; especially seeing Cleomene was ven Patronage to the Laws, using their power so urgent. Aristomachus was at that time er and more power than to them belonged, General of the Acheans, (He and Lysadas against a King, that had proceeded orderly being of great account, since they had abanin reforming the City as the Law requi-doned their tyranny) who fent unto Ara-

894

by all good Citizens; and ferved to establish conia. No dissiwasions of Aratus would serve. the impotent rule of a few tyrannical op- therefore he came in person, and took part pressors. In which case Aratus might well of a business, little pleasing him in the prehope to adjoin Lacedamon to the Achaans sent, and less in the future. When he met Common-wealth: though it were great in- with Cleomenes, he durst not fight; but opjustice to take such advantages, and attempt posed himself against Aristomachus, who by force, that which would have redounded defired to give battel. Yet had the Acheans to the general good of Peloponnesus, and to twenty thousand foot, and one thousand the benefit of Sparta it self, if it could have horse, in their Army: whereas Cleomenes been wrought by perfwafion.

orders of Sparta, and revenged the death of raifed an ill report upon Aratus; which Li-Agis, did also requite the unjust attempts of fladas helped to make worse, by accusing his the Acheans, even in their own kind: ob- cowardize. Nevertheless the Acheans would truding upon them by force an union of all not fall out with Aratus their Benefactor, Peloponnejus, though little to their good li- but chose him their General the year solking, for that the Lacedamonians and their lowing against Lysiadas his accuse that sued King, should have been the principal; not for the place. Being General himself, it bethey and their Prator. Leonidas having thus boved him to confute with deeds, the flancaused Agis to be slain, took his wife that derous words of Lysiadas. Therefore he was very rich and beautiful, and gave her purposed to set upon the Eleans: but was in marriage (perforce) to his own fon Cleo- met with al on the way, near unto the Mount menes. This young Prince fell greatly ina- Lzcens, by Cleomenes, who vanquished him moured on his wife, and fought to win her in a great battel, and drave him to hidehimaffection, as well as he had her person. He self all night for fear, so that he was discoursed much with her about the purpose thought to have been slain. This misadvenof her former husband Agis, & by pitying his ture Aratus recompenced by a trick of his missortune, began to entertain a desire of own more natural occupation: performing accomplishing that, wherein Agis had failed, with his broken Army, that which could So coming himself to be King, whilest he hardly have been expected, had he been viwas very young, he gladly embraced all ctorious. For whilest there was no sufficion occasions of War: for that he hoped by of any great matter that he could underftrong hand to effect that, which Agis by take; he suddenly wrought with some of proceeding formally in so corrupt an estate the Mantineans, who did let him into their of the City, had attempted to his own ru- City. These Mantineans, (whom he had thus ine. Therefore when the Ephori gave him in brought to his purpose) had once before charge, to take and fortifie Athenaum, a Tem- joyned themselves with the Achaians; but ple on the marches of Laconia, to which shortly upon fear, or some other passion, both they and the Megalopolitans pretended they gave themselves to the Ætolians; and title, he readily performed it. Hereof Ara- from the Atolians, presently after this victotus made no complaint, but fought to take ry, to Cleomenes, from whom immediately by surprize Tegea and Orchomenus, Cities they were thus won. For this their levity, then Confederate with the Lacedemonians: they were not punished but freely admitted wherein, his intelligence failing, he lost the now again into the Achean Society, Asthis

adverse Kings driven to take Sanctuary; out labour of a painful night travel, and discotus, lying then in Athens, and required his The death of Agis was much lamented affistance in a journey to be made into Lahad no more than five thousand in all. This But the same man who redressed the dif- gave reputation to the Lacedamonian, and good faccess repaired the credit of Aratus; other places, even of Achaia. These news fo another battel almost ruined it. Cleomenes displeased them not a little: but they must and he encountred near unto Megalopolis; patiently endure to hear worse. For where the Achaans had somewhat the bet- when Cleomenes had shaken off the power ter at the first, but their General durst not of the Ephori, that curbed his authority, he follow his advantage. Thereupon Lystadas, of whom we spake before, grew somewhat better obeyed, and by better men. His Laimpatient with anger ; and taking with him | cedamonians refumed their ancient courages all the horse, brake upon the Lacedamonians and he himself had the heart to demand the whom he routed at the beginning, but pur- Principality of Greece. He did not therefore fing them too far into places of hard paf- henceforth contend about the polleffion of fage, he was flain by them, and his follow- a few Towns: but adventured to win or ers driven back upon their own Compani- lose all. The Ætolians, in favour of his ata great loss and incensed the Achaans against other places; to which they had some title. further, than that they refused to make any unto him. longer contribution, towards the pay of tance was done; the Achaans being weary, and the Spartan King intentive to another bufine fs.

Cleomenes having led into the field all that were like to hinder his purpose, and tired them with painful journeys, forfook the Achean war on a fudden, and came unings, and forthwith began to make equal di-Ætolians, Illyrians, and fuch other enemies. Spartans well fatisfied, and Cleomenes him-overall Arcadia at his pleasure; and was Acheans. admitted into Mantinea; and ready to take proceeded more roundly in his work, being ons; in such fort, that finally all the Army tempt, declared themselves on his side and was disordered and put to flight. This was whereas he had gotten Mantinea, Tegea, and Aratus: yet their indignation proceeded no they willingly renounced all their interest

Aratus did apprehend the danger of his those Mercenaries which he had waged. Countrey, and faw that Antigonus, with the This Aratus took patiently, and followed Etolians, or perhaps without them, would the war nevertheles; wherein though Cle- | shortly make an end of that, which cleoomenes wan forme Towns, and Aratus got the menes had thus begun. Therefore he adbetter in one small fight, yet little of impor- vised how to provide against the worst, and either to repair all, or (if it could not be) to fave all from utter ruine. The office of General, when it was next put upon him, he reful difearing to be fo far prest, as to hazard in one battel all the force of his Countrey, to which as he had never any affection, nor perchance courage, fo was his manner of expected home to sparta, where he flew the warfare otherwife. For he commonly at-Ephori, and restored by force the ancient tempted by surprise, and defended upon the discipline of Lycurgus. Then he gave an ac- advantage of place, after the manner of the count of his doings; and shewing by what | Irish, and of all other Nations, overcharged degrees the Ephori had incroched upon the with numbers of men. Yet did he not forpower of Kings, and many disorders had sake the care of the Weal-publick, though grown in the City; he justified his proceed- in aiming at the general good, it feems that private passion drew him into an ill course. vilion of the Lands, reducing all to the first He faw, that Megalopolis could not be defeninstitution. He also supplied the defect of ded without making a dangerous hazard of Cuizens, by choosing new, out of such as battel; that Maniinea had not only opewere friends to the State, and valiant men: ned her gates unto Cleomenes, but slain the ned her gates unto Cleomenes, but flain the so that henceforth his Countrey might not Achean Garrison that lay therein; that altogether stand in need of Mercenary help, other Towns had yielded unto him, without as it lately had done, to fave it felf from the compulsion; and that Aristomachus, once Tyrant of Argos, and fince General of the All this was dispatched in great haste; the Achaans, was now revolted unto the enemy following the fortune of Cleomenes. Ptolemy felf ready in the field, ere his enemies could was too far off to help; and the nearness of take any advantage of these his domestical Antigonus was very dangerous; yet might be useful, if this King would (as Polybius The Acheans hearing of this great alte- faith) like others, be friend or enemy, as ration in sparta, thought that it would be should best agree with his own profit. long ere Cleomenes durst issue forth of the To make trial hereof, Aratus practifed City, for fear of some rebellion. But it was with some of Megalopolis, whom he found not long ere they heard, that he had wasted apt unto his purpose; and instructed them all the Countrey of Megalopolis; had ranged how to deal with Antigonus, and the time of Philip the Father of Alexander, who had obliged it unto him by some special benesits. At this time it lay nearest unto the danger; was very faithful, and therefore deferved fuccour; yet could not well be relieved by the Achaans, with their own proper strength. Wherefore it was thought meet, that Embassadours should be sent unto the General Council of Achaia, requesting leave and good allowance, to try the favour of Antigonus in their necessity. This was granted, for lack of what elfe to answer: and the same Embassadours dispatched away to Antigonus. They did their own er- freed his Country from all further trouble; rand briefly; telling him of the good will and respect which their City had of long time born unto him and his Predecessors; of their present need; and how it would agree with his honour to give them aid. But when they delivered the more general matter, wherein Aratus had given them inftruction; shewing how the ambition of time, and success of many actions, can illen-Cleomenes, and violence of the Atolians, dure the hafty growth of any others reputamight redound to his own great loss or tion, wherewith it fees it felf likely to be danger, if the one and the other were not overtopped. Other cause to despile the Lacein time prevented; how Aratus himself did damonians there was none, than that they ftand affected; and what good likelihood lately had been in dangerous case: neither there was of reducing the Achaans under could any reason be found, why Aratus should the Patronage of Macedon: then began prefer Antigonus before Cleomenes, than that Antigonus to lend a more attentive ear to he had flood in doubt of the one, when he their discourse. He embraced the motion: thought himself more mighty than the other. and to give it the more life, he wrote unto Wherefore he was justly plagued, when he the Megalopolitans, that his help should not faw his own honours reversed by the insolent be wanting, so far forth, as it might stand | Macedonians; and in stead of living as a comwith the Acheans good liking. Particularly panion with Cleomenes, that was descended he commended himself by these Messengers of a long race of Kings, the posterity of Herto Aratus; assuring them, that he thought cules, was fain to do sacrifice unto Antigonus, himself highly bound to this honourable as unto a god, and was finally poyloned by man, whole former actions he now percei- | Philip, whole Nobility was but of five deved, not to have been grounded upon any fcents, and whom perhaps he might have hatred to the Macedonians, but only upon a feen his fellows, if he had not made them his just and worthy love to his own Nation. With this answer they returned to Megalopolis: and are presently sent away to the with took part with Cleomenes, though he Council of Achaia; there to make some spee- did not supply him with such liberality, as dy conclusion, as the necessity of the time re- | he had used to the Acheans; being warned, quired. The Achaans were glad to hear, that as may feem, by their example, to be more Antigonus was so inclinable to their defire ; wary both in trufting and diffurfing. Cleoand therefore were ready to entertain his fa- menes himself, whilst this business with Anyour, with all good correspondence. Hereunto Aratus gave his consent; and praised the with an Army, and laboured by all means wisdom of his Countrimen, that so well disto draw the Achaens to battel. At the Cicerned the best and likeliest means of their ty of Dymes in Achaia were assembled all common fafety: adding nevertheless, that the remaining forces of the Nation; with it were not amis, first of all to try their own which it was concluded to make trial, whe affected to the Macedonians, ever fince the himfelf of all others did most wish: to the end, that he might not afterward fullain the common reprehension, if anything fell out amis; fince it might appear, that he had not been Author of this Decree, but only followed, and that leifurably, the general consent.

The City of Megalopolis had been well affected

Nevertheless, in true estimation, this fine. ness of Aratus might have been used, with his greater commendation, in a contrary course. For it had been more honourable to make an end of the war, by yielding unto Cleomenes that power which they gave unto Antigonus: fince thereby he should both have and withall, should have restored unto the universal state of Greece, that honourable condition, whereof the Macedonians had bereft it. But it is commonly found, (which is great pity) that Vertue, having rifen to honour by degrees, and confirmed it felf, (as it were)in the feat of principality, by length of Lords. By this inclination to the Macedonians, the love of Ptolemy was lost : who forthtigonus was a-foot, passed through Arcadia ability, which if it failed, then should they ther perhaps they might amend their estate, do well to call in this gracious Prince, and without feeking help of the Macedonian. make him their Patron and Protector. Thus Thither went Cleamenes, and there fought he shewed himself moderate; in that which | with them; where he had so great a victory, that the enemy was no longer able to keep | fought to hinder his coming thither in perthe City of Lerna, where a Parliament should be held, for the conclusion of the War.

ever been fince the beginning of the Peloponnefian Wars, yea, or fince the Persian invasiof cold water, which ckomenes drank in chief of his prisoners, to shew that he meant deed which Aratus feared, and for which he hold affured foveraignty of the Country; he

the open field. The calamity was such, that fon; left the people, hearing the promises of Aratus himself durst not take upon him to Cleomenes ratified by his own mouth should be their General, when his turn came in presently be won with his gentle words and the next election. Wherefore the Acheans finish the bargain without more ado. Therewere compelled to fue for peace; which was fore Cleomenes wrote unto the whole Coungranted upon this easie condition: That they cel, bitterly complaining against these iugshould not arrogate unto themselves the gling tricks: and Aratus was not far behind command of Peloponnesus, but suffer the La- with him in as bitter an Oration. So beeedemonians (as in former ages) to be their tween fear of the one, and reverence of the Leaders in war. Hereunto if they would other, the Affembly knew not how to procondescend, he promised unto them, that he ceed, but abruptly brake up, leaving all, would presently restore all places taken as it were to fortune. Cleomenes took his from them, and all his prisoners ransom-free: advantage of their present weakness, and also that they should enjoy their own Laws renewed the War. Many Cities yielded unand Liberties without moleftation. This to him willingly; many he forced; and gentle offer of Cleomenes was very pleafing to partly by force, partly by terror, he wan the Achaans: who defired him to come to Argos, which never King of Sparta before him could do. In this case Aratus sent his own fon to Antigonus, intreating him to Now seemed the affairs of Greece likely to defer no time, but come presently to rebe setled in better order, than they had lieve the distressed Acheans. Antigonus gave good words as could be wished: faveing that he utterly refused to do any thing, on: when God, who had otherwise disposed unless be might first have Acrocorinthus put of these matters, hindred all with a draught | into his hands. This demand was somewhat like unto that of the Hunter, who promifed greatheat, and thereupon fell extream fick, to help the horse against his enemy the and so could not be present at Lerna, but | Stagg: but with condition, that the horse caused the Parliament to be deferred to should suffer him to be saddled and bridled. another time. Nevertheless he sent home the | Aratus was herewithall contented, but wanted all honest colour to do it: seeing none other than good faith. By this fair deal- the Corinthians had no way deferved to be ing he confirmed the Acheans in their de- thus given away to the Macedonians. Yet fire of his friendship; who affembled again at length an occasion was found; for that at Argos, there to establish the League. But | the Corinthians, perceiving what he intend-Aratus was violently bent against it, and ed, were minded to arrest him. So he fought by great words, and terrible threats, withdrew himself out of their City, and to make his Countreymen afraid of refolv- fent word to Antigonus, that their Castle ing. When all would not serve turn, he be- should be ready to let him in. The Corinthitook himself to his cunning; and sent word ans on the other side ran to Cleomenes; who to Cleomenes, that he should do well to leave lost no time, but made haste with them to his Army behind him, and come alone into Corinth, where he fought how to get posses-Argos, receiving holtages for fafety of his fion of their Castle, or at least to save it from person. Cleomenes, was already far on his Antigonus, by surrounding it within Trenway, when he met with this advertisement; ches, that none might issue nor enter withand took it in ill part, that he should be thus out his leave. Whilest this was doing, he deluded. For it had been an easie matter, took special order, that Aratus his house and to have told him so much at the first, & not goods, within the Town, should be kept for have made him come so far with an Army, the Owner; to whom he sent Messenger afwhich afterwards he must dismis. Yet that ter Messenger, desiring him to come to which chiefly feems to have troubled him, agreement, and not to bring in the barbawas the drift of his oppugners; who fought rous Macedonians, and Illyrians; to Peloponthereby, either to make him wait without nefuspromifing that if he would hearken to the gates, and deal only with themselves and these perswasions; then would be give him their Mellengers, or if he would adventure double the same pension, which he had been himself into the City, then to deprive him of wont to receive of King Ptolomy. As for the all Royal flew, that might breed respect Castle of Corintb, which was the gate of Peofinin the multitude. This was that in-lopannesus, and without which none could dead which was the country be defired that it might not be committed unto men; and called him Tyrant for his doings his own disposition, but be joyntly kept by at home, because he would not do the like the Lacedamonians and Achaans. All this en- abroad. So they took their time, invited the treaty served to no purpose. For Aratus, Acheans, assaled his Garrison, cut in rejecting utterly the motion, fent his own pieces the refeue that he fent, and compelfon as an Hofrage to Antigonus; and labouled him at length to forfake the defence of red with the Acheans, to put Acrocorinthus Corinth, and look unto the enemies that into his hands. Which when Cleomenes were behind his back. For when he underunderstood, he seised upon the goods of stood by continual messengers, that his men Aratus in Corinth, and wasted all the Coun- which held the Citadel at Argos were almost trey of sieyon, whereof this his Adversary lost: he began to fear lest his labour in was native.

Nnnnn 2

the Isthmus; having passed with his Army that lay within. Therefore he forfook his through Eubea, because the Etolians held custody of the Isthmus, and made all haste the straights of Thermopple against him. This towards Argos: which if he could fave, he they did, either in favour of Cleomenes, which meant to trust fortune with the rest. And so they pretended; or in doubt of the great- far he prevailed at his coming to Argos, that nels, whereunto the Macedonians might at- both Argives and Achains were glad to tain by the good fuccels of this journey. house themselves, leaving him Master of the At his coming thither, he found the Lace- streets; when the horsemen of Anigonus demonians ready to forbid his entrance: were discovered afar off, hasting to relieve and that with fufficient strength; yet with no the Citizens; and Antigonus himself (to purpose to hazard battel, but rather to wea- whom Carinth was yielded, as soon asthe ry him thence with hunger; against which Spartan had turned his back) followhe came not well provided. Antigonus there- ing apace with the body of his Army. Closfore laboured hard to make his way by menes therefore had no more to do, then to force; but he was not able forto do: he fe- make a fafe retreat. This he did, and got was violently driven out again, with great space all, or most of that which he had been loss of men; finally he resolved to turn aside, long in getting. and feek a passage over the gulfe of Corinth, to Sieyon, or some other part and commended the Citizens, went into of Achaia; but this required much time, Areadia; where he wan fuch Castles as were and great preparation, which was not eafily held for Cleomenes, and reftored them to made. came by Sea, that greatly comforted Antigo ment by the Achains , to whom he declared nus, and no less troubled his enemies. The the cause of his coming, and spake brave Acheans were gotten into that City; and words, that filled them with hope. The the Garrison which Cleomenes had left there- Acheans were not behind with him; but in, though it was not driven out of the Cita- made him Captain-General over them and del, yet was hardly diffrefled, and ftood in their Confederates : and further entered in need of present help. Argos had always been to covenant with him, That they would not enemy to Sparta, and well affected to the deal with any Prince or State, either by Kings of Macedon. When Cleamenes took writing, or Emballadour, without his conit, he forbare to chase out those whom he sent. All this while & somewhat longer Aramost suspected; partly, at the entreaty of two was the only man, that seemed to rule the friends, and partly, for that they all made Kings heart: carrying him to Sicyon his own fhew to be glad of his prosperity. They were Town, (for Winter was come on) where he glad indeed of Cleomenes his victories, both not only feafted him as a great Prince, but in Argos and elsewhere, as many as hoped suffered more than humane honours, as factions. that he would cause all debters to be dist sices and the like, to be done unto him. This charged from their creditors, as he had latly example of Aratus and his Sicyonians, was done in Sparta. But that which Cleomenes had followed by the rest of Achaia: which had done in Sparta, was agreeable to the Spartan made (forfooth) a very wife bargain, if in institution: in other places, where it would stead of Cleamenes that would have been a have been tyrannical, he did it not. Thereup King, it had obtained the protection of a on, such as were disappointed of their unjust God. But this god was poor, and wanting hopes, began to turn good Common-wealths wherewith to pay his Macedonians, imposed guarding the entry should grow frivolous; Antigonus in the mean time drew near to the Acheans in the mean while spoiling all cretly got into the Corinthian Haven; but him home into Laconia : losing in flort

Antigonus having shewed himself at Argos, the old Possessions. This done, he took his In this perplexity, news from Argos way to Egium, where was held a ParliaHAP. II. hardly tance. Neither was Aratus him-hope of better. Neither was Aratus him-hope of better. Neither was Aratus him-hope of better. hope of oction. The hope of octions and the hope of octions and apprehension of necessity. Cleofelt over-early, which he had thrown menes therefore provided for himself, as well mesortinoie a judicio, and in the data with as his own ability would ferve. He madown in Argos, were again erected by Antidown in argo, when the flatues which he had numified all the Heilotes, which were the Lagonia is of the flatues which he had gonus; or those that had taken Acrocorin-crecked, of those that had taken Acrocorin-crecked acro erected, or those all thrown down by the liberty, and arming two thousand of them time with min, were an entired and down of the mocking, and one only left unto himfelf after the Macedonian fashion. Having thus tame ame, at his earnest intreaty. It might there increased his forces, he came on the sudden at an carrier that this god was also spight to Megalopolis, that lay secure, as having detore appears that taking revenge upon fended it felf in more dangerous times, and the those that offended him, Aratus did fatisfie having now Antigonus near at hand in those that of the his own passion by the aid of these Macedo - Ægium. The Town he wan: but after he nis own particularly and the extreme torments he did was entred, all that were fit to bear Arms put Ariffomachus to death, who had been rose hastily against him; and though they put arypomanna and thought they once Tyrant of Argos, afterwards General could not drive him out, yet laved the mulonce tyrain or and from them revolting titude, to whom they gave a Port free for of the clare, did fall at length into their their escape. He sent after the Citizens, ofamount in Galletin, or handled he (though not as fering their Town and goods to them again, yet) the Mantineans, for their ingratitude if they would be of his party. But they war against the Lacedamonian.

he lay ready to defend his own Territory. though he thereby added neither followers, The reason why he stirred no further, nor followed the strength unto Lacedamon. hemight have Cleomenes his own Mother, keep the war from his own gates; and and his children in pledge.

the burthen upon the Acheans. This was fent unto Egypt, yet the aid came not. For the buttness up yet worse must be indured in hardly taken: yet worse must be indured in hardly taken: yet worse must be indured in Ptolemy was slow; as dealing in the business. year the man years and cruelty flewed to the Acheans. For he bravely refuled his offer: wherefore he fackflewall the principal Citizens, and fold the ed and ruined it, carrying with him to Sparnew an the principal children, all for bond- ta a great booty that he found therein. These flaves: dividing the fpoyl; two parts to the news aftonished the Acheans at Ægium: Macedonians, and the third to the Achoans. who thereupon brake up their Parliament. The Town it self was given by Antigonus to Antigonus fent hastily for his Macedonians, the Argives, who peopled it with a Co- out of their wintering-places: but they long of their own ; and Aratus having were fo long in coming, that Cleomenes was charge of this bufiness, caused it to be new lafely gone home. Therefore he returned named Antigonia. Surely of this cruelty them back to their lodgings, and went himthere can be no better excuse, than even the self to Argos, there to pass the rest of his unflattery which Aratus was driven to use to lucky winter, somewhat further from the Antigonus: forafmuch as it was a token of eyeyes of the grieved Acheans. When he fervility, whereinto they had urged and had layn a while at Argos, Cleomenes was at brought him; whom he, as in revenge the gates, with no great number of men, yet thereof, did thus requite. But leaving to with more than Antigonus had then about fpeak of this change, which the coming in him. The Argives perceiving that their of the Macedonian wrought in the Civil Country would be spoiled, if Antigonus did State of the Acheans; let us return unto this not issue into the field, were very earnest wiser than to be moved with their clamors, Mantimea, Orchomenus, Herea, and Telphulfa: and suffered them to see their villages burnt; Mantinea he dif peopled, as was faid before; to bid him refign his Office of Protector unto in Orchomenus he placed a Garrison of his some that were more valiant; and to satisfie Macedonians; the reft he restored to the their passions with soolish words, rather than Acheans, with whom he wintred at Ægi- he would be overcome in fight, and thereby nm, where they held a Parliament. Once lose more honour than could easily be reonly cleamenes had met him this year; and paired. By this Cleamenes had his defire, in that was on the borders of Laconia, where weakning the reputation of his enemy:

Afterwards, when the season was more fit other Towns that he wan, was this: He had for war, Antigonus gathered together all his few Souldiers, and had not mony enough to troops; meaning to require these bravadoes wage more. Ptolems the Egyptian promised of his enemy, with the conquest of Sparta. be note. From the regiption promised of insciency, with the confide laboured to Thele were therefore entred upon the Country of Argos, where he made fuch a havock, as drew Anti- their Illyrians were driven to fall back upon gonus thither, from his intended invasion of the Army following them; perswaded the Laconia. Many great affronts the Macedoni- Captains of the Achean horie, to break upon an was fain to endure, in coasting of the spar- the spartan Mercenaries. But they would tan King; that ranging over the Country not: partly despiting his youth and want of of the Argives, Phliafians, and Orchomenians, charge; partly, for that Antigonus had given drave a Garrison of his out of Oligartie; order, that they should keep their places. and did facrifice, as it were before his face, until they received a fign from him, which in the suburbs of Argos, without the Temple | was not as yet. Philopainen perceiving them of Juno, that was shut up; sending unto to be more orderly than well advied, inhim in fcorn, to borrow the keys. These were treated some of his own Country-men to sollight things; yet ferved to dif-hearten the low him, gave a charge on the Spartans, and Achean fide, and to fill the enemy with cou- forced them, not only to leave the Illgrians. rage, which was no matter of light impor- but feek how to fave themselves. Being so tance. Therefore he concluded to lay apart far advanced, he found the place which the all other regard of things abroad, and to Illyrians had attempted, like enough to be put all to hazard; by fetting up his rest, with- won, through the unskilfulness of him that out any more delay, upon sparta it felf. He held it. Wherefore he alighted, and perhad in his Army eight and twenty thou- swaded the men at Arms his Companions to fand foot, and twelve hundred horse, col- do the like: the folly of Euclydas being malected out of fundry Nations, as Macedoni- nifest, who kept the top of the Hill, and stirans, Illyrians, Gaules, Epirots, Ewotians, Acar- red not to hinder those that ascended, but nanians, and others; together with the Ache- waited for them in a Plain, where they might ans; and their friends of Peloponnesius. Cleo- fight upon even terms. So he recovered the menes had of all forts twenty thousand, Hill-top; where, though he was fore hurt, with which he lay at selasia: fortifying yet he made good the place that he had flightly the other paffages into Laconia, gotten, until the whole Army came up to through which the Macedonians were not him; by which the Lacedemonians were likely to feek entrance. Antigonus coming beaten from it, with great flaughter of them unto Selasia, found his enemy so strongly en- in their descent. This overthrow, and death camped, upon and between the hills of Eva of Euclydas, made Cleomenes lose the day: and Olympus, that he was conftrained to spend who fighting bravely on the other side, upon much time there, before he could advance Olympus, against Antigonus himself, was like any one foot: neither lay it in his power to to have been furrounded and loft, if he had come hastily to blows, which he greatly de- not withdrawn himself with an extraordifired, without the hazard of his whole Army, nary speed. In this battel ended the glory of in affailing their well defenced Camp. But Lacedamon, which, as a light ready to go at length (as it happens, when men are weary out, had with a great, but not long blaze, both of their hopes and fears) both Kings shined more brightly of late, than in many being resolved to make an end one way or agest past. other; Antigonus attempted with his Illy- Cleomenes fled unto Sparta; wherehe had rians, to force that part which lay on the no defire to ftay; finding only two hundred hill Eva. But his Illyrians were so ill seconded left, of six thousand Spartans that he had led by the Achean foot, that the Spartan horse, unto this battel, and most of his hired Souland light-armed foot, incamped in the diers dead, or gone away. So he perswaded straight valley between those hills, issuing his people to yield themselves unto Antigoforth, fell upon their skirts, and not only 1003; and promising to do all that should at disordered them, but were like to have en- any time lye in his own power, for their dangered all the rest. If Cleomenes himself good, he hasted away to the Sea-side (where had frood in that part of the battel, he he had shipping long before provided would have made great use of such a fair against all that might happen) and imbarkbeginning. But Euclydas, his Brother, a more ed himself for Egypt. He was lovingly entervaliant than skilful Souldier, commanded in tained by Ptolemy Euergetes; who undertook that wing: who neither followed this ad- to restore him to his Kingdom, and (perhaps) vantage, nor took such benefit as the ground meant no less, as being much delighted with afforded, whereon he lay. Fhilopemen the his gallant behaviour, and qualities. In the Areadian of Megalopolis, who afterwards pro- mean feason, he had a Pension allowed him, ved a famous Captain, ferved then on horse, of four and twenty. Talents, yearly. But as a private young man, among the Acheans. this Ptolemy died 5 and his Son Ptolemy Phi-

as a private young man, among the Acheans, this Protemy area, and his young He seeing that all was like to go to rout, if lopater succeeded him: a vicious young Prince, and bale Men, unmindful of all vertue, and bled before with a confumption of the hating any in whom it was found. When lungs. His Kingdom descended unto Philip therefore Cleomenes was defirous to return the Son of Demetrim, being then a Boy: as into Greece, whither the troubles in Pelopon- also about the same time it was, that Antionefus did feem to invite him; Ptolomy and chus, surnamed (Iknow not why) the Great; his Minions, would neither give him aid; and Ptolemy Philopater, began to reign in Alia nor yet dared to dismis him (as he desired) to try his own friends in Greece, because he old enough to love Harlots, when he first was too well acquainted with the weakness of Egypt: nor well knew how to detain himagainst his will. At length they devised matter against him, and made him prisoner. the last act of him was, that with thirty of his Country-men, he undertook a desperate enterprize: breaking out of the prilon, and provoking the Alexandrians to rebel and feek their liberty. In which attempt he them, and of their Kingdoms, more at largeflewfome enemies of his that he met; and having walked up and down the streets without refistance (no man offering to take his part, or, which is very strange, to fight | How the Illyrians infested the Coast of Greece; against him on the Kings behalf) he, and his Companions, agreed together to be ministers of thier own death. Upon his deadbody Ptolemy was bold to flew his indignation: and flew his Mother and Children, that had and Government: tarrying there no longer it is not meet to be utterly filent.

otherwise determined.

Prince, wholly governed by lewd Women, I fhort space finished his life, who was trouand Egypt; Boyes all. Of these, Ptolemy, though was King, vet continued a Boy all the feventeen years of his reign. The unripe age of Philip and Antiochus, bred fuch intestine inconvenience to their Kingdoms, as is ufual in the minority of Princes: but their elder years brought them acquainted with the Romans; upon which occasion, when it comes, we shall more seasonably speak of

ø. VII.

and how they were subdued by the Ro-

Whilst things thus passed in Greece, and whilst the Carthaginians were been sent thither as Hostages; together with busie in their conquest of Spain; the Rothe Wives of his Adherents, as many as were mans had found themselves work among there, attending upon the old Queen. Such | the Sardinians and Corficans, that were eawas the end of Cleomenes, a generous fily subdued at first, and easily vanquished Prince, but Son of Leonidas, who had cau- again, when they rebelled. They made fed Agis, with his Mother and Grand-mo- also war with the Illyrians, wherein they ther, to come to such a bloody end, as now got much honour with little pain. With the befell his own Wife, Son, and Grand-chil- Gaules they had much ado, that lasted not Lin. lib. 216 long; being rather, as Livy faith, a tumult After the victory at Sellasia, Antigonus than a war. So that by all these light exerwithout refistance entred sparta: wherein- cises their valour was hardly kept from rust. to never the force of any Enemy, before him, How they got the Islands in the Mediterracould make way. He kindly intreated the nean Sea, it hath been shewed before: of Citizens, and left them to their own Laws their dealings with the Illyrians and Gaules, than two or three daies; after which he The Illgrians inhabited the Country now haltned out of Peloponnesus, and never re- called Slavonia; a troublesome Nation, impaturned. The cause of his speedy departure tient of rest, and continually making war for was an advertisement that he received out gain, without either regard of friend or foe. of Macedon; how the Illyrians over-ran and They were invited by Demetrius, King of destroyed the Country. Had these news Macedon, to help the Mydionians his friends, come a little fooner, or had Cleomenes ei- that were befieged by the Etolians, for that ther deferred the fight, a few daies longer, they refused to be of their fociety. Before or at least-wise tarried a few daies after the the Illyrians succours came, the Mydionians fight, in sparta; the Kingdom of Lacede- were lo far spent, that the Etolians contendmon would have flood, and perhaps have ed about the booty: the old Prætor, or extended it self over all Greece. But God had chief Magistrate of their Nation, who was going out of his office, claiming to have the ho-Antigonus fought a great battel with the nour of the victory, and the division of the Illyrians, and overcame them. Yet therein spoyl to be referred unto him; for that he he caught his bane: not by any wound, but had in a manner brought the fiege to amend, by over-straining his voice; wherewith he and won the Town: others, that were in hope brake a vein that bled inwardly, and in to be chosen into the Office, contradicting tins, and denting that the same and form the by these Epirots, and trusted to lye in Garlike to that of the French in latter ages, who rison within their Town. The Ganler were thought upon dividing the prey, before they foon grown acquainted with the Illyrians, to had won the victories, which anon they loft, whom they betrayed Phanice; which deat Poitiers and Agincourt. The Etolians ferved none other in trusting them. All En. wifely compounded the difference, order- rus was presently in arms, and hastned to ing it thus, That the old, and the new drive out these unwelcome guests. But whilf Prætor should be joyntly intituled in the the Epirots lay before the Town, there victory, and have equal authority in distribution of the gettings. But the Illyrians inified the strife much more elegantly, and after another fashion. They arrived and landed ere any was aware of them; they fell upon the Ætolians; and though good refistance was made, yet got the victory, partly by force of their multitude, partly by the help of the Mydionians, that were not idle in their own business, but ftoutly fallied out of the Town. Many of the Ætolians were flain, more were taken, their Camp and all their baggage was lost: the Illyrians took the spoyl, and that were besieged within Phanice, fallied went their way; the Mydionians erected out of the Town, and gave such an overa Trophie, inscribing the names both of throw to the Epirots, as made them despair their old and new Magistrates (for they al- of faving their Country, without great and fo chose new Officers at the same time) speedy help from abroad. Wherefore as the Ætolians had directed them by ex-

842

Agron King of the Illyrians: not only in tained their fuit; neither was it long, beregard of the money, wherewith Demetrius fore an Army, fent by these two Nations, had hired his affiftance; or of the booty was ready in Epirus to present battail unto that was gotten; but for that having van- | Scerdilaidas. But Scerdilaidas was called quished the stoutest of the Greeks, he found home by letters from Tenta the Queen, that it not uneasse to enrich himself by setting signified a rebellion of some Illyrians against upon the less warlike. For joy of this he her: fo that he had no mind to put his forfeasted, and drank so immoderately, that ces to hazzard, but offered composition, he fell into a Pleurisie, which in few dayes which was accepted. The agreement was, ended his life. His Kingdom, together That the Epirots might ransome their Town, with his great hopes, he left unto Teuta his and all their people that were prisoners;

all forts at Sea, making no difference be- made this profitable and honourable bartween friend and foe; as if the had been gain, the Illyrians returned into their own fole Mistress of the salt Waters. She armed a Country by land, sending their booty away fleet and fent it into Greece; willing her by Sea. Captains to make war where they found advantage, without any further respect. These great trouble, as that which they brought, fell on the weltern coast of reloponness; or had occasioned in this voyage. For, in fulwhere they invaded the Eleans, and Meffani- stilling the commandement of their Queen, ans. Afterwards they returned along by they had taken many Italian Merchants, Epirus, and stayed at the City of Phanice, whiles they lay at Phanice; and made them to take in victuals and other necessaries. good prize. Hereof the complaints, made There lay in Phanice eight hundred Ganles, unto the Roman Senate, were fo frequent, that having been Mercenaries of the Cartha- that Embafiadours were fent to require of ginians, went about to betray, first Agri- Tenta, that she should abstain from doing gentum, then Eryx, to the Romans; but fail- fuch injuries. These Embassadours found her ing to do either, they nevertheless revolted, | very jolly; both for the riches which her fleet and were for their misseeds disarmed and had brought in and for that she had, in short

this, and desiring that old orders might be | sent to Sea by the Romans, yet entertained came news into their Camp, of another Illy. rian Army, that was marching thitherward by land, under one scerdilaidas, whom Queen Tenta had fent to help his fellows. Upon this advertisement, a part of them is fent away towards Antigonia, to make good that Town, and the straights adjoyning, by which these new commers must enter into their Country; another part of them remains at Phanice, to continue the fiege. Neither the one nor the other fped well in their business. For Scerdilaidas found means to joyn with his fellows; and they Embassadours were sent to the Acheans and Ætolians: craving their help, with The success of this voyage highly pleased very pitiful terms of intreaty. They oband that the Illyrians should quietly depart Tenta gave her people free liberty to rob | with all their booty and flaves. Having a good look to the Romans, that found fault less may an Embassadour do it without inwas it the manner of Kings to forbid their dour Coruncanus. Subjects to get commodity, how they best The Illyrian Queen was secure of the Roner, and a very laudable one, to take re- undone many of all forts, greater and lefs mean to disquiet and afflict it ever after.

At their coming home, they found no fuch

tion, there would never be an end of war fleet divided it felf, & one part of it fell with (a) Divided and destruction, therefore it was equally received by all Nations, as a leilon taught by

(a) Dyrrachium, the other with Coreyra. (a) Dyrrachium was almost surprised by the Illy-sometime called Roic Person of that Prince, in whose Countries than to trust her. they refide, warranted by any law whatfoThe Romans were even ready to put to an.

foace, tamed her rebels, and brought all to ever. For whereas the true office of an Emgood order, fave only the Town IJa, which baffadour refiding, is the maintenance of her forces held straightly besieged. Swelling amity; if it be not lawful for one Prince to with this prosperity, the could hardly afford practise against the life of another; much with her doings, and, calling them by a curring justly the same danger of punishtrue name, Piracy, required amends. Yet ment, with other Traitors; in which case, when their speech was ended, she vonchsaf- his place gives him no priviledge at all. But ed totell them, That injury in publick the we will leave this dispute to the Civilians; would do them none: as for private matters, and go on with the revenge, taken by the no account was to be made of them; neither Romans, for the flaughter of their Embasia-

could by Sea. But (faid the younger of the mans, as if they would not dare to ftir against two Embafiadours) we Romans have a man- her. She was indeed in an errour, that hath venge in publick, of those private wrongs than she, both before and since: Having that are born out by publick authority: more regard unto fame, than unto the fubstance therefore we shall teach you, God willing, to of things. The Greeks were at that time more reform your Kingly manners, and learn bet- famous than the Romans; the Ætolians and ter of us. These words the Queen took so Epirots had the name of the most warlike impatiently, that no revenge could fatisfie people in Greece; these had she casily vanher, but the death of him that had spoken quished, & therefore thought, that with the them, Wherefore, without all regard of the Romans she should be little troubled. Had she common Law of Nations, the caused him to confidered that her whole Army, which be flain: as if that had been the way to fet wrought fuch wonders in Greece, was not her heart at rest; which was indeed the much greater than often thousand men; and that nevertheless, it prevailed as much by The Romans, provoked by this outrage, odds of number, as by valour, or skill in arms; preparetwo great Armies; the one by Sea, she would have continued to use her advanconfisting of two hundred fail, commanded tage against those that were of more fame by C. Fulvius; the other by Land, led by A. than strength, with such good caution, that Postbumus. They trouble not themselves any she should not have needed to oppose her more with requiring fatisfaction: for this late-gotten reputation, against those that injury is of fuch nature, as must be requited were more mighty than her self. But she was with mortal war. It is indeed contrary to all a woman, and did what she listed. She sent human Law, to use violence towards Em- forth a greater fleet than before, under Demebassadours: the reason and ground whereof, trius of Pharos; with the like ample commisfeems to be this; that fince without media- fron to take all that could be gotten. This Nature, that Embassadours should pals free- rians; yet was it rescued by the stout Citi-dams, and ly, and in fafety, between enemies. Never- zens. In (b) Corcyra the Illyrians landed, now Detheles, as I take it, this general Law is not wasted the Isle, and belieged the Town, edit without limitation. For if any King or State Hereupon the Etolians and Achieans where the Adrialay hold upon Embassadours sent by their called in to help; who came, and were tick sea, between enemies, not unto themselves, but unto some beaten in a fight at Sea : losing, besides the islands third, whom they should draw into the quarrel; then it is as lawful to use violence to thole Embassadors (thus employed to make ceeded. The Town of Corcyra, difmayed to corcythe war more terrible) as it is to kill the men with this overthrow, opened the gates unto filled of of war, and subjects of an enemy. And so Demetrius Pharius, who took possession of it the Adridmight the Athenians have answered it when with an Illgrian Garrison: sending the rest tick sea, they flew the Lacedamonian Embassadours, of his forces to besiege Dyrrachium. In the from Duthat were fent to Xerxes, to draw him into mean feason, Teuta was angry with her Cap-races, cala war upon the Athenians. Neither are those tain Demetrins: I know not why; but so led now Embassadours, which practife against the as he resolved to try any other course, rather in the pos-

844

Sea, though uncertain which way to take, when advertisement was brought to C. Fulwines the Conful, of Demetrius his fear and of the war between the Romans and Gauls, discontent. Likely it was that such an occafion might greatly help to advance the bufiness in hand. Wherefore the Consul sailed thither; where he found the Town of Corcyra so well prepared to his hand by Demetrius, that it not only received him willingly, but delivered into his power the Illyrian Nation, and often molested Rome; fome-Garrison, and submitted it self unto the Ro- times with their own forces, and sometimes

man protection. (c) Apollo- ed along the coast to (c) Apollonia; accom- they took Rome and burnt it : though the mas City panied with Demetrins, whom he used liftue of that war proved not answerable to mear Drest thenceforth as his Counsellor and guide. To the beginning, if we may give credit unto rathing, or thenceforth as his Counsellor and guide. To the beginning, if we may give credit unto rathing the color of the beginning of the man Historians. In following times their Apollonia came allo Posthumus, the other Koman Historians. In following timestheir Dargo, Apollonia came and rejournment, the other apon the Conful, with the Land-Army, numbred at Many country they received; and if twenty thousand foot, and two thousand Many overthrows they received 5 and if horfe. Thence they haften towards Dyrra- they got any victory, it yielded them no chium, which the Illyrians had besieged; but prosit, but was soon extorted out of their upon news of the Roman army they difperfe hands. They were indeed more fierce than themselves. From thence the Royans enter well advised: lightly stirred up to war, Illyria, and take Parthenia; beat the Illyria and lightly giving over. At the first brunt, ans by sea, take twenty of their ships, and they were said to be more than men; but enforce the Queen Tenta to for fake the coast, when that was past, less than women. The and to cover her self in Rison far within the Romans were acquainted with their temper, Land. In the end, part of the Romans hafte by long experience, and knew how to hanthem homeward, and leave the best places die them: yet gave alwayes careful heed to of Illyria in the hands of Demetrins; ano their approach, were it only bruited. For ther part staies behind, and profecutes the the danger of them was sudden, and uncerwar, in fuch fort, that Tenta was forced to tain; by reason of their neighbourhood and beg peace; which she obtained upon miser- want of intelligence among them. Few of able conditions; to wit, That she should their attempts upon Rome were called wars, quit the better part of Illyria, and pay tri- but tumultus Gallici, tumults of the Gauls: bute for the rest; and from thenceforth ne- and rightly. For they gave many alarams to ver fend any of her ships of war towards the | Italy, and used to rise with great Armies: but coasts of Greece, beyond the Island of Lissa: after a few dayes march, and sometimes beexcept it were some one or two vessels un- fore their setting forth, any small occasion armed, and by way of Trade.

Embassadours into divers parts of Greece, years, sometimes twenty or thirty: till they fignifying their love to their Country, and were ftirred up again, by younger heads, how, for good will thereunto, they had made unacquainted with the danger. Whill they war with good fuccels upon Tenta, and her refred, the State of Rome, that againft these people. They hoped, belike, that some distres- made only defensive war, had leisure to fed Cities would take this occasion, to defire grow, by fetting upon others. Herein God their patronage: which if it hapned, they provided well for that Monarchy, which he were wife enough to play their own games. intended to raife: that the Gauls never fell But no fuch matter fell out. The Embassa upon Italy with a mighty power, in the time dours were only rewarded with thanks; and of any other great and dangerous war. Had a decree made at Corinth, That the Romans they attempted to conquer it, whilst Pyrthenceforth might be partakers of the Ifib rhus was travelling in the same enterprize; mian pastimes. This was an idle courtesic, or in either of the two former Punick wars: but well meant by the vain Greeks, and it may be doubted what would have become therefore well taken by the Romans: who of this Imperious City. But it feems that by this Illyrian expedition got nothing in the Gauls had no better intelligence in the Greece, save a little acquaintance, that shall affairs of Italy, than strangers had in Gaule.

be more hereafter.

o. VIII.

into Italy.

"He Gaules that dwelt in Lombardy. were the next, against whom the Romans took Arms. These were a populous with the affiftance of those that inhabited After this good beginning, the Conful fail- | France. Once their fortune was good, when ferved to disperse them. Having received an After this Illyrian war, the Romans fent overthrow, they would rest ten or twelve At least, they knew not how to use their times: and were therefore like to smart, whenfoever the enemies, whom they had leilure to visit them at their own home: which was now after the first Punick War. Once before this, the Romans had been bold. to fet upon the Gaules in their own Coun- rooted out by degrees; the great Nation of to set and that was three years before the the Influbrians, which inhabited the Dutchy coming of Pyrrhus into Haly. At that time of Milan, joyned with the Boji, and upon hitse Hetruria, and befieging Arretium, had won Nations about Rhodanus, wageable as the (2) that names, was cause as the surface agreed battel, and Ilain L. Cacilius, with the Switzers in these times. The Gestates having and a great mater, and a first most of his Army. Mannius Curius the new received a great impreft, come to the field and the most of the Embaladours to them, to treat under the conduct of their Kings Concolitabout ranfome of prisoners. But these Em-nus and Aneroessus: who with the Boji, and mission about the supplier of fifty fiews, Therefore when for Infubrians, compound an Army of fifty (1988) Danasacrast of the better, the Romans fol-thousand foot, and twenty thousand horse, and those of the best men, and best appoint-FINESTAND TOWNS OUT OF their Countrey, and fent a co-ed, that ever invaded the Roman Territory; in the long of their own to inhabit it. This caused to whom the senogalli, that had been beather nearly and the senogalli, that had been beather nearly of the senogalli, t the (a) Boji, another people of Gaule, to fear ten out of their possessions, gave a great inthe like measures who thereupon took arms, the like measures who thereupon took arms, and and down the Heterwiant to their fide. But the Venetians and the (b) Congruence of the contrary fide; (b) constants the Venetians, and the (b) Cenomanni, ad-mani are the Romans overthrew them in two great hered to the Romans: as better believing in the people they were neerer; like as they called Cifal- of Tuscane. pines, or by-hither the Alpes, those who dwelt between them and the Mountains) to draw the confideration of this powerful Army, them to their party: reasonably prefuming, which the Gaules had affembled, they caused that as their disjunction had caused their a view to be taken, as well of all their own los, so their union might recompenceit, with forces, as of those of their Allies: who were

Illyrian war.

This dreadful Prefident extremely difmuch provoked, and little hurt, should find pleased the Boji; who being neighbours to Ariminum, feared the like displantation. And because the rest of the Gaules had reafon to resolve, that themselve also should be the senones, a Tribe of the Gaules, invading a common purse entertained the Gessates; battels; and thereby made them fue for their prosperity and rising fortune. For fear game, on much of battles, much lasted untill the end of this of whose incursions therefore, the Gaules the north the Rater peace, which lasted untill the end of this were forced to leave a good part of their fide of the River Po It vexed the Gaules to fee a Roman colo- Army, on the frontier of Milan: with the in tady. ny planted in their Countrey; who had been accultomed to enlarge their bounds, by driving out their neighbours perforce. Where- Emilius to Rimine, to stop their passage 3 Commanni fore they laboured with the Transalpines (so and in the place of C. Atilius their other and inhathe Romans called those in France, as lying Consul, who then was in Sardinia, they im-bired the the Romans called those in France, as sying Conius, who then was in vocational, they find control from them beyond the Alpes, though to us ploy one of their Prators, for the defence of Main.

Being at this time greatly troubled with large amends. But the bufine is was to fooliih no less willing than themselvs, to oppose the ly carried, that the Cifalpines and Tranfalpines incursions of the barbarous people 5 fearfell together by the ears, putting the Romans ing, as they had cause, that their own deonly to a tumult, without further trouble of firuction could not be prevented otherwise, war. Soon after, they were urged by a greathan by the good fortune of Rome: The ter indignity, to go more substantially to numbers, found in this Muster, deserve to be work. For C. Flaminius, a popular man in recorded: because they set out the power of Rome proposed a Decree, which was ratifithe Romans in those dayes. With the Coned by the people; That, befides one Colony fuls they fent forth to the war four Legions already planted in the territory of the Seno- of their own: every Legion confifting of five nes, as many more should be carried thither, thousand two hundred foot, and three as would ferve to people the whole Coun-turn hundred horses, and of their Allies thirteen try between Ancona and Ariminum: exter- thousand foot, & two hundred horse. There minating utterly thole Gaules. Such an offer were also appointed for supplies (if any mifwere it made in England, concerning either adventure came to these of the Sabines and Virginia, or Guiana it felf, would not overjoy the Multitude. But the Commonalty of fand horfe, which Army was to be lodged Roy took this in fo good part, notwithflanding all danger joyned with the benefit, that Flaminius had ever after their good there were twenty thouland; and of the Venetians and Cenomans, other twenty thoufand ;

O0000 2

their own Territories, the General Army of nified. There were besides these, to be entring into Inscane, destroy, and put to fire ready against all uncertain chances of war, and sword, all that lay before them. From thirty thousand foot, and fifteen hundred themes they march directly towards. Rome; horse garrisoned in Rome it self of their own hoping to find the Romans rather in delipeople; and of their Allies, thirty thousand beration, than in the field. But their infoot, and two thousand horse. Over and telligence fails them. For the Roman Army, above these great troops; in the Roll of the sent into Tuscane, having taken some Latines, that was fent unto the Senate, there other way than they did, and finding that were numbred fourscore thousand foot, and it had missed of them, came again fall after (e) Jupyer feven thousand; in that of the (g) lapyer and be charged on their backs, they turned head: and Milja-pygo feem Messapyges, fifty thousand foot, and fixteen and in the same evening discovered the Roto be one thousand horse; the Lucans sent a list of man Army, by whom they incamped. It was wno are also called horse; th (b) Marsi, (i) Marrussim, (k) Fer- fight they must. Wherefore they helped Salemines, rentani, and the Veltini, of twenty thousand themselves with a stratagem, that shew-Pencersons, foot and four thousand horse. The Romans ed no great fineness of wir, but such and also two Legions in Sicil, and about Table had also two Legions in Sicil, and about Table had also two Legions in Sicil, and about Table had none because the size of the size entraining of the Romans and Campanes joyntly, recko- the night, they cause their foot to march the Nor- ning men armed, and fit to bear arms, there away, but not far, leaving their horfe in thermost were registred two hundred and fifty thounead-land of cottainia, fand foot; and of horse three and twenty off at the first light of day, with such a speed, (b) A peo-thousand: of which, reckoning the Romans ple of the apart, there were an hundred and fifty kingdome apart, of Naples thousand foot, and about fix thousand horse. (i)Piolomy Cafring up the whole forces of all the Procaus them a people of vinces in Italy, both of the Romans and their should, follow them in disorder. The Gaules pmia, cal-But the number is somewhat mis-cast by Po-nine thousand two hundred of the foot.

846

How great foever this muster was, it feems to have been like unto that, which Kings, perswades them, rather to return in-Lodowick Sforza made, when Lewis the to their own Countreys; where, after they twelfth invaded Milan: at what time, the | had disposed of the great spoils and riches better to encourage himself and his subjects which they had gotten, they should then he took a Roll of all persons able to bear renew the war, being without carriage, pearms, within the Dutchy, though indeed he | fter or other impediment. This advice they were never able to bring a tenth part of all embrace; for, feeing they that were them into the field. Certain it is , that the Mercenaries, had obtained what they came battels of Trebia, Thrasymene, and Canna, did for, to wit, the spoils of their enemies, they not confume any fuch proportion, as was an- thought it wisdom, to hazard neither it, nor fwerable to this large accompt. Yet were the themselves any further. Romans fain to arm their flaves, even for | This indeed had been a good refolution, want of other Souldiers, after their over- if they had taken it, before the enemy had throw at Canna. Wherefore the marvel is been in fight. But as well in the wars of not great, that the Carthaginians and others these later ages, as in former times, it hath were little terrified with report of such a ever been found extream dangerous to make multitude. For all heads are not fit for Hel- | a retreat in the Head of an Enemies Army.

and: which latter Armies were directed to | general, as good fighting men, as elfwhere invade the Boji, that forcing them to defend | might be found.

Notwithstanding all these counter prepathe Gaules should be thereby greatly dimi- rations, the Gaules keep on their way: and five thousand horse; in that of the sam- them, to arrest them in their journey. Herewites, seventy thousand foot, and of horse of when they heard the rumour, fearing to thirty thousand foot, and three thousand now a matter of apparent necessity, that dred foot, and four hundred horse. So as in good stead at the present. In the dead of guard; to whom they give order to come as might rather argue a running away, than a retreat; as if they had not dared to abide battell. The Romans, interpreting this their hafty departure, as the Gaules defired they Confederates, it amounted to feven hundred return, charge them, and kill fix thouland (h) A peo thouland foot, and feventy thouland horse. The take a piece of ground of advantage, and defend themselvs, led to this lybius; not with a purpose to inrich himself till L. Emilius, being at Ariminum, comes any comes, faith by the dead payes; for where he reckons to their fuccour. Upon the coming of the Conful, the Gaules confult, whether they Leander. nine hundred horse too many, he fals short should give the Romans battel, or forbear. In which dispute, Aneroestus, one of their

mets: though the Roman Citizens were, in | For although they that retire, do often turn

head; yet in always going on from the purfu- nefs, and was one of them that had cause to ing enemy, they find within few miles, either thank him for it. fraight, hedge, ditch or place of disadvantage, which they are inforced to pass in dis- vice (as they take it) of one of their Kings order. In such cases, the Souldier knows turn their backs to the enemy, and their it as well as the Captain, that he which for- faces homeward. Emilius follows them as fakes the field, perceives and fears fome ad-near as he can, without ingaging himself, atvantage of the Enemies. Fear, which is tending his advantage. In the mean while, the betrayer of those succours that reason C. Atilius the other Consul, with the Legions offereth, when it hath once possest the of Sardinia, lands at Pisa; so as the Gaules heart of man, it casteth thence both cou- inclosed between two Armies, are forced to rage and understanding. They that make fight. They therefore equally strengthen retreat, are alwayes in fear to be abando- their Rear and Front. To fustain Emilius, ned; they that lead the way, fear to be in- they appoint the Geffates, and the Milanois; gaged: and so the hindmost treads on his in the Front they range the Piemontois, and heels that is foremost, and consequently, all the rest of the Gaules inhabiting upon the disband, run, and periff, if those that favour River of Po. The manner of the fight Polybins the retrait be not held to it by men of great | describeth at large; which was well fought courage. The miserable overthrow that the of all hands. But in the end the Gaules fell; French received in Naples, in the year 1503. and so did Atilius the Consul: who died in upon a retreat made by the Marques of Sal, the place, accompanied with the two Kines doth testifie no less. For although a great of the Gaules, Concolitanus and Antroestus; troop of French horse sustained the pursu- with forty thousand of their Vassals. ing Enemy a long time, and gave the foot leafure to trot away; yet being retarded courage; and ere long, all that they held in by often turnings, the spanish foot overtook Italy. For they were invaded the year foland defeated them utterly. During the lowing this overthrow, by the new Confuls, wars between the Imperials and the French, Fulvius and Manlius. The Romans knew in a brayery would need sfee the enemy, be- ten, twenty, or thirty years time to the forethey left the field. So was stroft over- Gaules, to repair their forces, as the Gaules thrown by the Marquess of Marignan, be- had done to them. These new Confuls beat cause he could not be perswaded to dislodge the Boji; but by reason of the great rains the night before the Marquess his arrivall, that fell, and the great pestilence that reignarmes chose se difficile, qu'une retraitte; I pelled to resign their Ossice; because the find nothing in the art of war so difficult as Augures, or Soothsayers, had found, that

Now the Gaules, embracing the fafe ad-

After this fatal overthrow, the Gaules loft Boil and Mont were lost at Brignolles, who well how to use their victory: they gave not Therefore did the French King Francis the ed, they were compelled for that prefent first wifely: when without respect of point to surcease. In the second year, Furius and of honour, he dislodged from before Lander- Flaminius invade the Milanois; and preby night, as many other the most advi- vail very far, being strongly affisted by the fed Captains, (not finding themselves in Cenomanni and the Venetians. Neverthecase to give battel) have done. Je ne trouve less these Consuls were revoked out of their Point (faith the Marshal Monluc) au fait des Province, by the Senate of Rome, and comto make a fafe retreat. A fure rule it is that fome token or other of the Birds (in which, there is less dishonour to dislodge in the and all forts of their divination, the Rodark, than to be beaten in the light. And mans were extremely superstitious) had hereof M. de la None gives this judgement of a not only foreshewed little good, when they days retreat, made in France, presently before were chosen, but had also nullified the elethe battel at Moncountour. For (faith he) flaving upon our reputation, in flew, not to this revocation from the Senate, and being diflodge by night; we lost our reputation in- otherwise advertised of the contents, was deed, by dislodging by day: whereby we not hasty to open them: but first gave battel were forced to fight upon our difadvan- unto the enemies, vanquished them, and tage, and to our ruine. And yet did that spoiled their Countrey; then perused the Worthy Gentleman Count Lodowick of Naf- letters; and returning home obtained a Jan, brother to the late famous Prince of triumph, fore against the will of the Senate, Orange, make the retreat at Moncountour with and not altogether with good liking of the fo great refolution, as he layed the one half people, who yet bare him out, for that he of the protestant Army, then broken and die fided in faction with the Commonalty, hand, I would be supported by the commonalty of the protestant Army, then broken and die fided in faction with the Commonalty, hand, I would be supported by the commonalty of the common and the commo banded; of which my felf was an eye-wit- though a man of great Nobility.

848

pounded the Decree, for dividing the voking any one to fight with him. Marcellus Country of the Senones among the people was no lefs daring, than the barbarous of Rome. He was the first, or one of the King: whether more wise in this action, I hirft, that understanding the Majesty of will not dispute the was more fortunate, and nrit, that undertraining in the people, and that fufficed to commend him. He flue and no otherwise in the Senate, than by a way disarmed Britomarus, in the presence of both no otherwise in the senate, mission is did not Armies: whereby his own men took such frand highly upon his birth and degree, but courage, and his enemies were fo difmated, courted the multitude, and taught them to that without much trouble of fight the know and use their power, over himself and Romans obtained a great Victory. his fellow Senators, in reforming their diforders. For this, the Commons highly effective ever any Roman General flue the General of med him, and the Senators as deeply hated the enemies, with his own hand. To this him. But he had the futer fide, and found kind of victory, belonged a peculiar triinitators, that role by the fame art, which umph; whereof only Romulus, Coffus, and in process of time, grew the only or chief this Marcellus, had the honour: yet I dare way to preferment.

posed, Al. Claudius Al. seellus, and Cn. Cornelius ter men of war than any of these three; Scipio, were chosen Consuls, for the rest of though they never offered up to Jupiter, that year. The Gaules about this time desi- Opima spolia, The Armour of a General stain red peace; and were like to have obtained by themselves, when they were General, nor it: though the new Confuls were against it, | perhaps affected so to do. as fearing to want work. But when thirty thousand of the Gestates following their the Romans; and Milan soon after: with all King Britomarus, were come over the Alpes, that belonged to the Cifalpines, or Gaules, and joyned with the Infubrians: all other that dwelt in Lumbardie. Thus was that vadiscourse, than of present war, was at an end. liant and mighty Nation, that had so many So the Confuls hasted into their Province, years vexed the State of Rome, and in forwhere they befieged Acerre, a Town not mer times taken the City it felf, brought to far from Novarro (fo far had the Romans nothing in a short time; their pleasant and pierced already in the Dutchy of Milan. fertile Territory posses by the Romans, and To divert them from this fiege Eritomarus the remainder of their Nation, inhabiting fat down before Clastidium, a Town in the Italy, so many as would not subject their fame Traft, with a great part of his forces: necks to the Romanyoke, either forced to leaving the rest, with the Insubrians, to at- abandon their Countreys, or to hide themtendupon the Confuls at Acerra, and to look felves in the cold and barren Mountains, like to the defence of Milan. But this would not Outlawes and Thieves. And thus did the fuffice, to make the Romans break up their Romans spend the three and twenty years fiege. Marcellus, taking with him the great following the peace made with Carthage. In est part of the horse, and fix hundred foot part of which time, they were at such leilightly armed, thought to deal well enough fure, that they closed up the Temple of Jawith those at Classidium. Britomarus heard nur which they never did before, (it standof the Confuls coming, and met him upon ing always open, when they had any war) the way: fo fuddenly, that the Romans had fave once in the reign of Numa; nor in long no leisure to rest themselves after their jour- time after, until the reign of Augustus. But ney, but were compelled instantly to fight: this their present happiness was not tolast Herein Britomarus had done well, if he had long: a dangerous war, and perhaps the not forthwith, in a rath bravery, loft his greatest that had ever been, was to come ungame at a cast. He had advantage enough in to their gates; which being well ended, they number, both of horse and foot: but he might boldly undertake to extend their Mothought fo well of his own personal valour, narchy as far as their ambition could reach.

This was that Flaminius, who had protthat he rode out fingle before his Army, pro-

This was the third and last time, that fay, that the two Scipio's, and divers of the Flaminius and his Colleague, being dif- Roman Captains, especially Casar, were bet-

After this victory, Acerrae was yielded to

CHAP. III.

Of the second Punick Warr.

6. I.

The Wars of Hannibal in Spain. Quarrels between the Romans and Carthaginians. Hannibal befregeth and taketh Saguntum, whilft the Romans are buffed with the Illyrians. War proclaimed between Rome and Carthage.

by the Army, as foon as Afdrubal was dead: famine or pettilence, or after fome great and the election was ratified by the State of loss of Army or Fleet, they should be driven Carthage; wherewith Hanno and his Com- to yield unto the impudent demands of plices were nothing pleafed. This was now their enemies; and to give away bafely the third of the Barchine family (so called of their lands and treasures, as they had lately Amilear, whose surname was Barces) that done; or miserably fight, upon terms of had command in chief, over the men of war. Which honour would perhaps have been less envied by these domestical enemies, if the Allies and Friends of the Barchine house, norant (for his father, and other friends, had had not also born the whole sway in Government, and been the only men regarded, making war with the Romans, it was no both by the Senate and the people. This general good will, as it was first purchased by the most worthy deserts of Amilear in saving his Country from imminent ruine, inlarging the Dominion thereof, and inriching even of those people, that helped to increase it with treasures and great revenues; so was the Roman Armies in foreinwars. But this it retained, by the same good Arts, among could never be effected, if the matter were his friends and followers. Hanno therefore, openly disputed at Carthage. For it was to be and his Partifans, being neither able to tax doubted, that the Carthaginians, how glad the vertue of their enemies, that was unre- foever they would be, to hear that he had provable; nor to perform the like services set the war on foot, would nevertheless be unto the Common weal; had nothing left | flow and timorous, as commonly men are in whereby to value themselves, excepting the the beginning of great enterprises, if the general reprehension of War, and cautelous matter were referred to their deliberation. advice of not provoking the Romans. This Which if it should happen, then were the they seasoned other-whiles with detractions Romans like to be made acquainted, not onfaying that the Barchine faction went about ly with the generalities of his purpose, but to oppress the liberty of the City. But their with such particulars as must be discoursed peacewas like to hold no longer, than until and the diffosition of his own Citizens.

Annibal, the Son of Amil- the Romans could find some good advancar, was about fix and twenty tage, to renew the war: it was rather defiyears old, when he was chosen red by the Carthaginians, that whilft their General of the Carthaginian own estate was in good case, the war should forces in Spain. He was elected | begin; than that in some unhappy time of disadvantage.

This disposition of his Country-men, Hannibal well understood. Neither was he iglong time devised of this business) that in fmall advantage to get the ftart of them. If once he could bring an Army into Italy, without molestation; there was good hope that he should find friends and assistance, malicious words were unregarded; and if it of, in procuring allowance to his defign. Were factious, to bear ill-will to Rome, then This might suffice to disorder the whole were all the Citizens (very few excepted) no Project. Wherefore, he refolved to lay fiege less Barchine, than Hannibal himself. For it unto Saguntum, which might seem not greatwas long fine apparent, that the oath of the ly to concern the Romans, and would highly Romans, to the articles of peace, afforded please the Carthaginians, that had fresh in nofecurity to Carthage, were the never fo mind the indignity of that spanish Towns Quiet, and officious; unless she would yield alliance with her half friends. So should to become their subject. Since therefore the he assay both the patience of his enemies, Having went fair and orderly to work : and begin- in the Army, the most adventrous, but that ning with those that lay next in his way, ap- which may be feem a Captain, or inferiour proaching unto Saguntum by degrees. This Commander, doth not alwayes become a he did (faith Livie) to give some colour to Chief; though it hath sometime succeeded his proceedings: as if he had not principally well with fuch great ones, as have been intended the war against Saguntem, but had found more fortunate than wise. At this been drawn thither by course of business. time, our great Man of war knew as well Yet reason teacheth plainly, that without how to dissemble his courage, as at other regard of fuch formalities, it was needful to times to make it good. For he with-drew finish the conquest of the rest, before he did himself from the River-side, as if fearful to any thing that thould provoke the Romans. foord it; thereby to draw over that great First therefore he entred upon the Territo

* A people ty of the * Oleases; and having besieged Al(sain ste theat (Liene calleth it Cartera) their chief

fort, as Hamibal desired that they should; Ciry, he became, in a few daies, Mafter not thrust themselves in fury and disorder, into only thereef, but of all the other Towns of the swift stream, with a purpose to charge their Country. This Nation which he first the Carthaginians, abandoning (as they description andertook, being subdued, and the winter thought for fear) the defences on the conat hand, he refled his Army in new Carthage, trary fide. But when Hannibal faw them in they are or Carthagena; and imparted liberally to their way, and well-near over; he turned deadant, the Sculdiers, the spoils he had gotten in back his Elephants to entertain them at 123, 5 m his land Company. his late Conquest.

from New war against the (a) Vaccei; and without any ver. These carrying a kind of Lance de Gay, Continue and the continue and after it, (b) Arbusala, midt of the ftaff; had fuch an advantage the Oth. the Old Asia- by affault: though not without a long over the foot, that were in the River, under a for de fiege, and great difficulty. But in his return, their strokes, clattered together, and unable berda, an he was put to the height, both of his couor stage, and of his Martial judgment. For all ground, that they slew all those (in a man-ter factor fuch of the Vaccei, as were able to bear ner) without resistance, which were already arms, being made desperate by the spoil of entred into the water; and pursued the rest, their Country, with those of Salamanca, and that fled like men amazed, with so great a of the Olcades, that had escaped in the late slaughter, as from that day forward, there overthrow, joyning themselves with the To- was not any Spaniard, on that side the River letans; compounded an Army of a hundred of Iberus, (the Saguntines excepted) that thousand able men: and stayed Hannibal had the daring to lift up their hands against on the banks of the River Tagus, which run- the Carthaginians. neth to the Sea by Lisborn in Portugal. These four Nations, having had experience of wards them, cryed before they were hurt. Hannibals invincible courage, and that he They fent Embassadours to Rome, and benever faw enemy, upon whom he durst not moaned themselves, as likely to suffer that, give charge; were throughly refolved, that which afterwards they fuffered indeed; ouhis natural valour would at this time no less ly because of their alliance and friendship neglect the cold advice of discretion, than with this honourable City, which the Carat other times it had seemed to do, when thaginians hated. This tale moved the Sethe like great occasion perswaded him to nate, but much more a report, that sagunuse it. But he that makes himself a body tum was already besieged. Hereupon some of Crystall, that all men may look thorow cry out, that War should be proclaimed by him, and discern all the parts of his dispo-lition, makes himself (withall) an As: and should be sent with Armies, the one into thereby teacheth others, either how to Spain, the other into Africk But others went ride, or drive him. Wife men, though they more Roman-like to work, and carried it So have fingle hearts in all that is just and ver- it was only concluded; that Embassadours

Having thus concluded, he nevertheless der Afdrubal, was, of all the men of mark their landing: and thrust his Horse-men, In the Spring following, he purfued the both above and beneath them, into the Rito move or shift their bodies, as on firm

The Saguntines perceiving the danger totuous; yet they are like Coffers with double should be sent into spain, to view the state bottoms: which when others look into, be- of their confederates: which were indeed ing opened, they see not all that they hold, none other than the Saguntines. For if Hanon the fudden, and at once. It is true, that nibal intended war against Rome 37 it was this subtle Carthaginian, when he served un-likely that he would give them, ere it were long, a more plaufible occasion to take | In the mean while, Demetrius Pharius Arms against him; if he had no such purpose, whom the Romans had made King over a vet would it be in their power to determine great part of Illyria, rebelled against them: what they lifted themselves, upon the report either for that he found himself overof these Embassadours, and this their gra- straightly tyed up by them, with hard condivity, in being not too rash at first, would tions; or rather because he was of an unferve to countenance their following De- thankful disposition. The commotion of the cree. Of these Embassiadours Livie reports, Gauls, and afterward the same of the Carthathat they found Hannibal before Saguntum, ginian war, emboldened him to despise his but could not get audience of him, and there- Benefactors and Patrons: whom he ought to fore went to Carthage, where also they were have defended and aided, in all perils even not regarded, nor heard. But Polybins an with the hazard of his whole estate, which Historian of fincerity less questionable, tells, he had received of their gift. But he was a that they found him at Carthagena, and had Traitor to his own Queen; and therefore conference with him, though such as left | dealt, according to his kind, with those that them doubtful. This is more agreeable to had rewarded him for being fuch. First, he the rest of Hannibal his whole course. And built ships, and spoiled the Isles of Greece; furely we might wonder, why the Carthagi- against the covenants to which he was nians should afterwards admit a more pe- bound. Then he adventured further, and seiremptory Embassage (as Livie confesseth) sed upon some places, that the Romans kept of Peace; if they had rejected that which or rather if he had stayed somewhat longer, vention of war.

CHAP. III.

Finding therefore fuch an occasion, whatfoever it was, as made him able to fay, that the Saguntines had first provoked him, ere he medled with them; he made no more ado, but fate down with his whole power beforetheir Town. He was now more secure, than he had formerly been of his own Citi-Roman Embasiadors, with any trembling rewas not proclaimed; but that he might not whose liberality he first had it. be checked in his course, as an open enemy, to be sent into spain, where they thought to many dayes unable to move. Nevertheless, make Saguntum, the feat of the War.

and fall to disputation about the covenants in their own hands. If he had begun sooner, was sent, upon none other pretence than pre- he might have sped better. For the business with the Gauls was ended; with Hannibal, Whillf the Embassadours passed to and not throughly begun, when he declared himfro, Hannibal prepared not only his forces, | felf by his doings, an enemy, and was vanbut some Roman pretences, against sagun- | quished. The Roman Conful, Amilius, was tum. He found out Mamertines, or people | sent against him: who in seven daies wan that should do as the Mamertines in Sicil the strong Town of Dimalum; and thereby had done for the Romans; and implore his brought fuch terrour upon the Country help against the Saguntines. These were round about, that Embassadours were sent the Turdetani, a Nation adjoyning to Sagun- from all places, to yield themselves, withtum, and having many quarrels with them: out putting him to further pains. Only the (as happens commonly among neighbours) City of Pharus, in which Demetrius lay, of which, Hannibal himself hatched some prepared to resist : which he might have done long, if the hor-headed Rebel had not part of his Army in the Isle of Pharus, by night; and bestowed them in covert, prefenting himfelf the next morning with twenty ships before the Town, and offering to force the Haven. Demetrius with all his zens: for that they had not entertained the power issued out against the Consul, and was foon intercluded from the Town, by those verence, as of late years they had been wont. that lay in ambush. Wherefore he fled away Nevertheless, he was glad of any handsome through by-paths to a Creek, where he had colour, to shadow his actions : not only be- shipping ready for him, and imbarqued himcausethe War, which he so much desired, self: leaving all his estate unto them, of

This business, though it were soon disbefore he could fet foot in Italy. The Romans patched, yet prevented it not the fiege of Sas had the like, though contrary defire. They guntum; before which Hannibal fate down, were glad of the quarrel; as hoping that ere Emilius was landed in Illyria. In the Carthage, with all thereto belonging, should beginning of the siege, the Carthaginians thereby in short space become their own. Yet were much discouraged, by reason of the were they not hasty to threaten, before they | brave fallies made by the saguntines; in one were ready to strike; but meant to tempo- of which, their general received a dangerous rize, until they had an Army in readiness to wound in the thigh, that caused him to lye he was not unmindful of his work in the mean while; but gave order to raise certain friends at Carthage, and to animate them unmovable Towers, that might equal those to the War. which were built on the walls of the City; and to prepare to batter the curtains, and mans, who had good cause to be angry at make a breach. These being finished and aptheir own flowness, in forbearing to fend plied, had focn wrought their effect. A help unto the Saguntines, that held out eight great and large breach was made, by the fall months, looking still for succour, but in vain. great and large of each was made, by the fall wherefore they determined to repair of divers Towers, and a great length of walls. Wherefore they determined to repair whereat an hot affault was given; but it was their honour, by taking tharp revenge. To fo well fuftained by the saguntines, as the Carthaginians were not only beaten from Carthage: demanding only, Whether it were the breach, and out of some ground with- by general consent and allowance of the Carin the Town, which upon the first fury they thaginians, that Hannibal had made war uphad won; but they were purfued even to on Saguntum: which if they granted (as their own trenches and camp. Nevertheless it feemed they would) then to give them the Carthaginian Army, wherein were about defiance. Hereunto answer was made, in an hundred and fifty thousand men, did so the Senate of Carthage, to this effect; That weary the Towns-men with continual tra- this their fecond Embassage, howsever vel, that at length it got within the walls; and was only hindred from taking full poffession of the City, by some counter-works only required justice against Hamibal; but of the Saguntines, that were also ready to be in this, the very State and Common-wealth won. In this extremity, there was one Aleon of Carthage, was urged to plead guilty, or a Saguntine, that conveyed himself out of not guilty. But (faid the Carthaginian the Town, to treat with Hannibal for some ac- speaker) whether the general of our Army cord. But the conditions which the Carthaginian offered were so severe, and without sollowed his own counsel; or whether he all compass of honour, as Alcon durst not did it, by direction from us: it is not the return to propound them to his Country- question which the Romans ought to alk us. men. For Hannibal demanded all that they That which is indeed worthy examination had, gold, filver, plate, and other riches or dispute, is; Whether it were lawful or mwithin the City: yea, the City it self to be lawful for Hannibal to do as he hath done. abandoned by the Citizens; promifing, that For it belongs to us, to call our own Comthat he would assign some other place for manders in question, and to punish them actheir habitation: not allowing them to car- cording to their faults and errours; to you, to ry out with them any other thing, where- challenge us, if we have done any thing with to fustain themselves, than the cloaths contrary to our late League and contract. on their backs; or other arms, to defend It is true, that in our negotiation with Lathem, than their nails and teeth. Yet might datius the Conful, the Allies of both Nathey far better have submitted themselves tions were comprehended: but the same unto this milerable appointment, (feeing times were not then of your Allies, and therethereby they might have injoyed their lives, fore no parties to the peace then mades for of and faved the honour of their wives and your Allies in the future, or of ours, there daughters) than to have refted at the difere- was no dispute. As touching the last agreetion of the Conquerour, as foon after they ment between you and Afdrubal, wherein did: by whom their wives and daughters you will say, that the Saguntines were comwere deflowred before their own faces; and prehended by name; it is you that have all put to fword, that were above fourteen taught us how to answer that particular. For years of age. For it was a poor comfort, whatfoever you found in the Treaty between which a great number of them took; when us and Instalius, to your own disadvantage, not daring to fight, and fell their blood at you cast it upon your Consuls presumption the dearest rate, they shut themselves up as promising those things, for which he had like most wretched creatures in their own no warrant from the Senate and people of houses, and therein burnt themselves with Rome. If then it be lawful for the Romans, all that they had: fo dying unrevenged. The to disavow the actions of their Confuls and treasures found in Saguntum, which were Commanders, concluding any thing without very great, Hannibal kept wherewith to pay punctual and precise warrant; the same libit Arms of the same libit Arm his Army: the flaves, and other booty, he berty may we also assume, and hold our divided among his Souldiers, referving some selves no way bound in honour to perform things of choice, wherewith to prefent his those bargains which Afdrubal hath made

Ppppp

852

These tydings exceedingly vexed the Roqualified with mild words, was indeed more infolent than the former. For in that, they in Spain, in besieging Saguntum, have only

CHAP. III.

This was an impertinent answer, and cepted. little better than a meer cavil. For Luctatius regard of our oath, which we have already goods in his Ports.

broken.

But this the Carthaginians did not alledge, forgetting, in heat of contention (as Polyry was omitted, not so much upon forgetfulmade with extraordinary force, in other marvel, if the impression were strong in him. manner than heretofore. In conclusion, the Carthaginian Senate moved the Roman Emterms the purposes of those that sent them, and the worst of that, which they had long determined against them: as for the Saguntines, and the confining of their Armies within Iberus; those were but their pretences. Whereupon Q. Fabius gathering up people of England. the skirt of his gown, as if somewhat had been laid in the hollow thereof, made th's fhort reply: I have here (quoth he) in my Gown-kirt both Peace and War: make you Hannibal takes order for the defence of Spain, (my Masters of the Senate) election of these two, which of them you like best, and purpose to imbrace. Hereat all cryed out at once; Even which of them you your felf for us, without our commandment and Fabius) take the War, and share it among you: Which the affembly willingly ac-

This was plain dealing. To wrangle about the Conful, in his Treaty of Peace with the pretences, when each part had refolved to. Conthaginians, had expresly referred the al- make War, it was meerly frivolous. For all lowunce thereof to the people of Rome. It these disputes of breach of Peace, have had been therefore much better to have ever been maintained by the party unwildealt plainly, and to have alledged, That ling, or unable to sustain the War. The rusty after this League was made and confirmed sword, and the empty purse, do alwaies plead onboth parts, it was broken by the Romans, performance of covenants. There have in robbing the Carthaginians of the Isle of been few Kings or States in the World, that Sardinia, and withall of twelve hundred have otherwise understood the obligation of talents: which perjury the State of Carthage, a Treaty, than with the condition of their being now grown able, would revenge with own advantage: and commonly (feeing open War. As for the Saguntines, it little Peace between ambitious Princes and States, skilled that the Romans had admitted them is but a kind of breathing) the best advised into confederacy, and forthwith inferted have rather begun with the fword, than their names into the Treaty of Peace with | with the trumpet. So dealt the Arragonois Afdrubal: feeing that the Treaty with Af- with the French in Naples; Henry the second drubal, and all other business between Rome of France, with the Imperials, when he and Carthage, following the violence and wrote to Brifac, to furprise as many places breach of Peace, in taking away Sardinia, as he could, ere the War brake out; Don were no better than Roman injuries, as im- John, with the Netherlands; and Philip the plying this commination, Do what sever we second of spain, with the English, when in require; else will we make War, without the great Imbarge he took all our ships and

But Hannibal, befides the prefent strength of Carthage, and the common feeling of injuries received from these enemies, had anobim takes it) the best of their Plea. Yet fince ther private and hereditary defire, that vio-Livie himself doth remember and acknow- lently carried him against the Romans. His ledge, that the taking of Sardinia from the | Father Amilear, at what time he did sacri-Carthaginians, did inflame the spirit of Amil- fice, being ready to take his journey into car with desire of revenge: we may rea- | Spain, had solemnly bound him by oath, to fonably think, that the mention of this inju- | purfue them with immortal hatred, and to work them all possible mischief, as soon as nels, as for that it was not thought convel he should be a man, and able. Hannibal nient, by ripping up such ancient matter of was then about nine years old, when his quarrel, to thew that the war, now towards, Father caused him to lay his hand upon the had long been thought upon, and like to be Altar, and make this vow: fo that it was no

That it is inhumane to bequeath hatred in this fort, as it were by Legacy, it cannot be bassadours, to deliver unto them in plain denied. Yet for mine own part, I do not much doubt, but that some of those Kings, with whom we are now in peace, have received the like charge of their Predecesiors, that as foon as their coffers shall be full, they shall declare themselves enemies to the

ø. II.

and Africk. His Journey into Italy.

Arr being thus proclaimed, Hannibal refolved not to put up his fword have a fancy to offer us. Marry then (quoth which he had drawn against the Saguntines, Ppppp 2

until he had therewith opened his passage asking leave: which that others might nor unto the gates of Rome. So began the fe- also do, or attempt, he courteoully dismissed cond Punick War; fecond to none that many more that feemed willing to be gone. ever the Senate and people of Rome furtain- Hereby it came to pass, that the Journey ed Hannibal wintred at Carthagena; where feemed the less tedious unto those that ache licensed his Spanish Souldiers to visit companied him, as being not enforced by the friends, and refresh themselves against compulsion. With the rest of his Army, conthe Spring. In the mean while he gave fifting now but of fifty thousand foot, and infunctions to his Brother Afdrubal for the nine thousand horse, he past the Pyrenes, and Government of Spain in his ablence. He affe took order, to lend a great many troops of Spaniards into Africk, to equal the bid his entrance into their Country: but number of Africans formerly drawn thence won them with gentle speech, and rich preinto Spain; to the end, that fo the one sents that he bestowed upon their Leaders. Nation night remain as pledges and gages to favour his Expedition. So without any for the other. Of the spaniards, he trans- molestation, he came to the bank of Rhodaported into Africk thirteen thousand, nus; where dwelt, on each side of the River, eight hundred and fifty foot, and twelve a people called Volce. These were unacquainhundred horse; also eight hundred slingers ted with the cause of his coming; and there · Majores, of the * Baleares. Besides these, he selected fore sought to keep him from passing over four thousand foot, all young men, and of the water. But he was greatly affisted by quality, out of the best Cities of spain; some of those Gauls, that inhabited on the which he appointed to be garrifoned in West side of Rhodanus, to wit, by those of Carthage it felf, not lo much in regard of Vivaretz and Lyonnois. For although many their forces, as that they might ferve for of them had transported themselves and hoftages: for among those four thousand. the best of the spanish Citizens, and those thinking to defend the further bank against that fivayed most in their several States, had him : yet such as remained, being very desitheir Sons or Kinsmen. He also left with rous to free their Country of so many ill his Brother, to guard the Coasts and Ports, | guests, were better pleased to have their fifty and feven Gallies; whereof thirty feven were presently armed, and appointed doned them, than to have their own store of for the war. Of Africans and other Nations, corn and cattel wasted, by the long stay of so ftrangers, he left with him above twelve great an Army, as lay upon them. For which thousand foot, and two thousand horse, befides one and twenty Elephants.

Having in this fort taken order for the defence of spain and Africk; he sent disce- When the Vessels for transportation of his verers before him, to view the Passages of Army were in readiness; he sent Hanno, the the Pyrenean Mountains, and of the Alps. | Son of Bomilear, up the River: himfelfinthe He also sent Embassadours to the Mountai- mean while making countenance to enter ners of the Pyrenes, and to the Gauls, to ob- | the Foord below. The end of this labour, tain a quiet passage: that he might bring his was, that Hanno charging the Gauls una-Army entire into Italy, and not be compelled wares upon their own fide, and Hannibal, at to diminish his force, by any War in the the same time, passing the River in their faway, till he came to encounter the Romans. | ccs, the further bank was won, though with His Embassadours and Discoverers being re- some difficulty; and the enemies dispersed. turned with good fatisfaction, in the begin- Yet was he greatly troubled in conveying ning of the Spring, he past over the River of over his Elephants; who marvellously fear-Iberus, with an Army confifting of fourfcore cd the water. He was therefore driven to and ten thouland foot, and twelve thouland make raffs of trees, and cover them with horse. All those parts of Spain, into which | Earth and Turf 3 whereof he fatned one to he had not entred before, he now subdued: each bank, that might serve as a bridge, to and appointed Hanno (not that old enemy and from another of the same fort, but look of his house, who sate still at Carthage) to upon which the beafts were towed over. govern spain on the East fide of Iberus; to whom he left an Army of ten thousand both the rage of the River, and of those that foot, and one thousand horse. Being arridefended it, he was visited by the Princes ved at the borders of Spain, some of his of the Gauls Cifalpines, that inhabited Pietheir goods, into the Country of Dauphine, Country-men well beaten, which had abanreason, they helped him to make boats; informed him of another more easie passage, higher up the River; and lent him guides.

Having past this first brunt, and overcome spanish Souldiers returned home, without mont and Atilan, who lately had revolted CHAP. III. pallages of the Alps; that they were not to nians; whom they might elfe have held panages as common report made them; and their affured friends, and good neighbours, from these he received guides, with many as we, and other the people of spain have other encouragements. All which notwith-found them Ye may therefore be gone, with other casconding, he found himself extremely in-flanding, he found himself extremely incombred by the Savoyans; and loft, both of (and fo I think, I may answer for the rest of his carriages, and of his Carthaginians, more our Country-men) the Romans henceforth than willingly he would, or had formerly are not to expect any kindness at our hands; and relistance.

ø. III.

rebellion of the Cisalpine-Gauls against the mies, who have no way as yet offended us, from the Romans, These informed him of the rooted out, and destroyed by the Carihagithought that he should. For he was twice who are resolved, never to make account of mainly affailed by them, before he could retheir protection, nor amity. From the Volcover the plain Countreys on the other fide. cians, the Embaffadours took their way to-And whereas his Journey over the Moun- wards the Gauls; using their best arguments tains cost him fifteen dayes travel, he was to perswade them not to suffer the Carthaevery day, more or less, not only charged ginians to pass into Italy, thorow their Terby those Mountainers, but withall extremely beaten with grievous weather and snow: selections their frength, and large Dominion itbeing the beginning of Winter, when he But the Gauls laught them to corn, and had began, and overcame this passage. But the hardly the patience to hear them speaks fair and fertile Plains, which were now rea For shall we (said one of their Princes) dy to receive them; with the affiftance and by refifting Hannibals paffage into Italy, enconduct of the Cifalpine Gauls, who by their tertain a war which is not meant to be made proper forces had so often invaded the Roman Territory; gave them great comfort our selves, and in our own Territory, by and encouragement to go on: having no- force which marcheth with a speedy pace thing else of difficulty remaining, but that from us, toward our ancient enemies? Have which from the beginning they made ac- the Romans deserved so well of us, and the comptto overcome, by their proper valour | Carthaginians foill, that we should let fire on and resolution; namely, the Roman Armies, our own houses, to save theirs from burning? No, we know it well, that the Romans have already forced fome Nations of ours, out of their proper Territory and inheritance: and constrained others, as free as How the Romans in vain folicited the Spa- themselves, to pay them tribute. We will not niards and Gauls to take their part. The therefore make the Carthaginians, our enenor we them.

With this unpleafing answer the Embassa-HE Countries of spain and Ganl, dours returned home, carrying no good I through which the Carthaginians news, of friends likely to help them; but marched thus far, had been folicited before, rather some assurance from the people of by the same Roman Embassadours, who Massilia, which were confederates with had denounced the war at Carthage. These, Rome, that the Gauls were determined to as they were inftructed by the Senate, took take part with their enemy. Of this inclinaspain in their way home-ward from Cartion, the Cifalpine Gauls gave hafty proof. thage, with a purpose to draw into the Ro- For when the news was brought into Haly, man Alliance, as many of the Cities and that the Carthaginians had passed Iberus, Princes as they could; at least to dissinate and were on the way towards Rome; this them from contracting any friendship with alone sufficed to stir up the Boji, and Insubrithe carthaginians. The first which they attempted were the Volcians, a people in spain; lately offended at the plantation of new from whom, in open affembly, they received Roman Colonies, at Cremona, and Placentia, by one that spake for the rest, this uncomfortable answer: With what face (faith he) upon the Carthaginian succour, which they can ye Romans perswade us to value your supposed to be now at hand; they laid Alliance, or to prefer it before the friendlipp afide all regard of those hostages, which of the Carthaginians; seeing we are taught they had given to the Romans, and fell upon by the example of the saguntines, to be more the new Colonies. The Towns it feems they when the organization of the organization of the state of the organization of the orga and promifed affiftance, have been utterly failed to get them. But they forced the Roman

Commissioners, (who belike were abroad five hundred Numidians; Scipio, three in the Country) to flye to Modena: where hundred of his better appointed Roman they belieged them. The fiege of Modena horse. These met and fought, and the Nuhad continued some small time; when the midians were beaten: yet could not the Gaules, having little skill in assaulting Cities, Romans greatly brag, having slain only two waxed weary, and seemed desirous to have hundred, and lost of their own, one hundred peace, and to come to some good accord with and forty. But when Scipio drew near, to the Romans. This they did of purpose, to have met with the Carthaginians; he found draw on some meeting; that they might that they were gone three daies before; and therein lay hand upon the Roman Deputies, that (as he then found affuredly true) with thereby to redcem their Hostages in way of an intent to look upon the walls of Rome. exchange. And it fell out, in part, according This interrupted his intended Voyage into to their wills. For the Romans fent out Embasiladours to treat with them, and to con- his Brother Cn. Cornelius Scipio, with the clude a Peace; whom they detained. Man-greatest part of his Fleet and Army, to try lius the Prætor, who lay in these quarters what might be done against Asarubal, and with anArmy, hearing this outrage; marched the other Carthaginian Lieutenants in the in all haste to the relief of the besieged. But Country. He himself, taking with him a the Gaules, having laid a strong ambush in a few choise bands, returned by Sea to Pisa; wood joyning to the way, fell upon the Prætor fo opportunely, as he was utterly overthrown, and all his followers left dead in the place, a few accepted, that recovered, by fast running to a little village, but defenfible ; upon the River of Po. When this was heard at Rome, C. Atilius, another of the Prætors, was haftily fent to relieve the befieged with a Legion, and five thousand of the Roman affociates: which forces were taken out of the Confuls Army, and supplied by a new levy. As the Gaules were too rash and hasty; fo were the Romans too flow, and indeed too ill-advised in the beginning of this war. They were not perswaded that Carthage. which had almost servilely endured so many indignities in time of the late peace; great muster he could make, when he had would be so brave and couragious on the fudden, as to attempt the conquest of Italy it | reckon his foot at an hundred thousand, and felf. Wherefore they appointed one of their his horse at twenty thousand; others re-Confuls to make war in spain, the other port them to have been only twenty thouin Africk: resting secure of all danger at land soot, and six hundred horse. Hamibal home. Titus sempronius took his way toward | himself in his monument which he raised, in Africk, with an hundred and fixty Quin- the Temple of Juno Lacinia, agreeth with queremes, or Gallies of five to an Oar, which the latter fumm. Yet the Gaules, Ligupreparation may feem to threaten even the | rians, and others that joyned with him, City of Carthage, to which it shall not come are likely to have mightily increased his near. P. Cornelius Scipio, the other Conful, Army, in short space. But when he marchmade all possible haste, by the way of Ge- | ed Eastward from the banks of Rhodanus, noa, into Provence; and used such diligence, he had with him eight and thirty thouhaving the wind also favourable, as in five | fand foot, and eight thousand horse; of dayes he recovered Maffilia. There he was which, all fave those remembred by himadvertised of Hannibal his having passed the self in the Inscription of his Altar in Juno's River of Rhodanus, whom he thought to Temple, are like to have perished by difhave found busie yet a while in Spain. Han- eases, enemies, Rivers and Mountains; nibal had also news of the Consuls arrival: which mischiefs had devoured, each their whereof he was neither glad, nor forry, as feveral shares. not meaning to have to do with him. Each of them fent forth Scouts to discover the refreshed his wearied Army in the Country others number and doings: Hannibal, about of Piemont; he fought to win the friendship and so passing thorow Tuscane into Lumbardie, drew together the broken troops of Manlius and Atilius that lately had been beaten by the Gaules: with which forces he made head against the enemy, thinking to find him over-laboured, with travel of his painful Journey.

ø. IV.

Scipio the Roman Conful overcome by Hannibal at Ticinum. Both of the Roman Consuls beaten by Hannibal, in a great battel at Trebia.

Tive Months Hannibal had fpent in his redious Journey from Carthagena; what passed the Alpes, it is not easily found. Some

Having newly passed the Alpes, and scarce

The of the (a) Taurini, who lay next in his way, prepared the minds of their Souldiers, by But the Taurim held war at that time with the best arguments they had: unto which the Influtrians, which were his good friends; Hannibal added the Rhetorick of a prefent and refused (perhaps for the same cause) his example, that he shewed upon certain prianity. Wherefore he affaulted their Town; foners of the Savoians, which he brought and wan it by force in three daies. Their along with him, fitted for the purpole, into fpoil served well to hearten his Army; and Italy. For these, having been no less misertheir calamity, to terrifie the Neighbour ably fettered and chained, than sparingly then places. So the Gauls, without more ado, fed; and withall so often scourged on their fell unto his fide: many for fear, many also naked bodies, as nothing was more in their for good-will, according to their former in- defire, than to be delivered from their miclination. This disposition ran thorow the feries by any kind of present death, were whole Country: which joyned, or was all brought into the middle of the Army: in readiness to joyn with the Carthaginians, where it was openly demanded, which of when the news of Scipio the Conful his arthem would fight hand to hand with some rival, made some to be more advised than other of his Companions , till the one of therest. The name of the Romans was ter them were slain, with condition, being the rible in those quarters; what was in the Victor, to receive his liberty, and some small Carthaginians, experience had not yet laid reward. This was no fooner propounded, open Since therefore the Roman Conful than all of them together accepted the offer. was already gotten thorow the most defen. Then did Hannibal cause lots to be cast, fible passages, ere any speech had been heard which of them should enter the List, with of his approach: many fate still for very fuch weapons, as the Chieftains of the Gauls fear, who elfe would fain have concluded were wont to use in single combats. Every less they had wished well to speed.

whereinto they were entred, made the two chosen, fought resolvedly : as rather de-

a League with these new-come friends; and one of these unhappy men wished, that his some, for greater fear, offered their service own lot might speed; whereby it should at against the Carthaginians, whom neverthe- least be his good fortune, to end his miseries by death, if not to get a reward by victory. This wavering affection of the Province, | That couple, whole good hap it was to be Generals haften to the tryal of a battail firing, than fearing death; and having none Their meeting was at Ticinum, now called other hope, than in vanquishing. Thus were Pavia; where each of them wondred at the fome few couples metched, it skilled not others expedition: Hannibal thinking it how equally: for all these poor creatures ftrange that the Conful, whom he had left were willing, upon whatfoever uneven behind him on the other fide of the Alper, terms, to rid themselves out of flavery. The could meet him in the face, before he had fame affection that was in these Combatants, well warmed himself in the Plains; scipio and in their fellows which beheld them, admiring the strange adventure of passing wrought also upon the Caribaginians, for those Mountains, and the great spirit of his whom the spectacle was ordained. For they Enemy. Neither were the Senate at Rome deemed happy, not only him, that by winlittleamazed at Hannibals success, and sud- ning the victory had gotten his liberty, toden arrival. Wherefore they dispatched a gether with an horse and armour: but even McGenger in all haste unto Sempronius, the him also, who being slain in fight, had escaother Conful, that was then in Sicilia, giving ped that miserable condition, unto which him to understand hereof: and letting him his Companions were returned. Their Gefurther know, that whereas he had been di- neral perceiving what impression this dumb rected to make the war in Africa, it was now shew had wrought in them, began to adtheir pleasure that he should for bear to pro- monish them of their own condition, speakfecute any such attempt, but that he should ing to this effect: That he had laid before return the Army under his charge, with all them an example of their own effates: feepossible speed, to save Italy it self. According ing the time was at hand, wherein they were to this order, Sempronius fent off his Fleet all to run the same fortune, that these slaves from Lilybeum; with direction to land the had done; all to live victorious and rich; Army at Ariminum, a Port Town not far or all to die, or (which these prisoners from Ravenna: quite another way from esteemed far more grievous) to live in a Carthage, whither he was making hafte. In perpetual flavery: That none of them all, the mean while, Scipio and Hamibal were in whom was common fenfe, could promile come cone cone that fight they must ere they to himself any hope of life by flight; fince could part afunder. Hereupon both of them the Mountains, the Rivers, the great diCHAP. 111.

pursuit of merciles Enemies, must needs re- long after this, ere the two Generals met: trench all juch impotent imaginations. He each being far advanced before the groß of therefore prayed them to remember, that his Army, with his Horse; and the Roman they, who had even now praised the fortune having also with him some light-armed soot. both of the Victor, and of the vanquished, to view the ground, and the enemies counwould make it their own case; seeing that tenance. When they discovered the apthere was never any in the world, appointed with such a resolution, that had ever been him his horsemen of the Ganls, to begin the broken, or beaten by their enemies. On the fight, and bestowing his Darters in the void contrary, he told them that the Romans, who were to fight upon their own foil, and in view of their own Towns; who knew as ed foftly in good order. The Gauls (whemany wayes to fave themselves by flight, as ther desirous to try the metal of the Carthathey had bodies of men to fight withall, could no way entertain such a resolution as the Romans) behaved themselves couragitheirs: feeing the same Necessity, (to which outly, and were as couragiously opposed. nothing feems impossible) did no way prefs Yet their foot that should have aided them, them, or constrain them. In this fort did shrank at the first brunt, or rather fled co-Hannibal, with one substantial argument, That there was no mean between Victory and of being troden down by the enemies horse. Death, encourage his Companions. For, (faith a great Captain of France) La commodite de la retraitte advance la fuite; The commodity of a retrait, doth greatly advance a flat running away.

858

Scipio on the other fide, after that he had given order for the laying of a bridge over the River of Ticinus, did not neglect to use it was needful. Wherefore he adventured the best arguments and reasons he could, to himself so far, that he received a dangerous encourage the Army he led: putting them in mind of the great conquests and victories | his son (afterward surnamed Africanus) had of their Ancestors; against how many Nations they had prevailed; and over how many Princes, their Enemies, they had triumphed. As for this Army commanded by Hanvibal, although it were enough to tell them, that it was no better than of Carthaginians, whom in their late war they had so often had appointed his Numidian light-horse, to beaten, by Land and Sea; yet he prayed give upon the Romans in flank; and to comthem withall to consider, that at this time it was not only so diminished in numbers, as it Arms sustained their charge, and met them rather feemed a troup of Brigants and in the face. The Numidians performed Theeves, than an Army likely to encounter this very well: cutting in pieces the featthe Romans, but so weather-beaten, and star- tered foot, that ran away at the first enved, as neither the men, nor horses, had counter; and then falling on the backs of ftrength or courage to fustain the first charge those, whose looks were fastned upon Hanthat should be given upon them. Nay (said nibal and scipio. By this impression, the he)ye your felves may make judgment what Romans were shuffled together, and routed: daring they have now remaining, after so so that they all betook them to their speed, many travails and miferies; feeing when they and left unto their enemies the honour of were in their best strength, after they had the day. past the Roan, their horse-men were not only beaten by ours, and driven back to the very ten, and the rest of his Army thereby greatly Trenches of their Camp, but Hannibal him- discouraged; he thought it a point of wiffelf, fearing our approach, ran head-long dom, having loft so many of his Fleet upon towards the Alps: thinking it a less disho- the first puff of the wind, to take Port with nour, to die there by frost, famine, and pre- the rest, before the extremest of the temcipitation, then by the sharp swords of the pest overtook him. For he saw by the low-Romans, which had so often cut down his ring morning what manner of day it was like stance from their own Countries, and the people, both in Africa, and in Sicil. It was not proach one of the other ; Scipio fent before ground between their troups, to affift them: himself with his Roman men at arms, followginians, or hoping thereby to get favour of wardly away, without casting aDart; for fear This not withstanding, the Gauls maintained the fight, and did more hurt than they received; as prefuming that they were well backt, Neither was the Conful unmindful to relieve them: their hardiness deserving his aid; and the hafty flight of those that should have stood by them, admonishing him that wound; and had been left in the place, if not brought him off: though others give the honour of this rescue to a Ligarian slave. Whilst the Romans were busied in helping their Conful; an unexpected from came driving at their backs, and made them look about how to help themselves. Hannibal pass them about, whilst he with his men at

When Scipio faw his horsemen thus bea-

ing yet unbroken, he in a manner stole the every day more and more of the Gauls fell mg jet and recovered the bridge over Ticito the Carthaginian fide; among whom nus, which he had formerly built. But not came in the Boji, that brought with them withfranding all the hafte that he made, he the Roman Commissioners, which they had left fix hundred of his Rear behinde him: taken in the late Infurrection. They had hiwho were the last that should have passed, therto kept them as pledges, to redeem their and staid to break the bridge. Herein he fol- own hostages: but now they deliver them lowed this rule of a good man of war, Si certamen quandoque dubium videatur, tacitam their affections towards him; by whose help laudanda: which must be understood in this their own men and lands. In the mean while, fort: If a General of an Army, by some unprosperous beginnings doubt the success; or find his Army fearful or wavering, it is more profitable to feal a safe retrait, than to abide the uncertain event of battail.

It was two dayes after, ere Hannibal could passthe River; Scipio the whilst refreshing his men, and eafing himself of his wound in Placentia. But as foon as Hannibal presented his Army before the Town, offering battail to the Romans, who durft not accept it, nor issue forth of their Camp; the Gauls, that hitherto had followed scipio for fear, gathered out of his fear, courage to forfake tire. They therefore hafted away Sempronihim. They thought that now the long-defired time was come, in which better Chiefthe Roman Camp; wounded and flew many; Armies being joyned in one, the Confuls deespecially of those guards that kept watch at vised about that which remained to be done: the gate; with whose heads in their hands, sempronius received from scipio the relatithey fled over to the Carthaginians; and pre- on of what had passed since Hannibals arrifented their service. Hannibal received them |val; the fortune of the late fight; and by more use to him, in perswading the rest laid on the revolt and treason of the Gauls. of their Nation to become his Confe-

to prove. Therefore his battail of foot be- do; yet this diminished his reputation. For up to Hannibal, as tokens and pledges of miles arripiat fugam: fuga enim aliquando they conceived better hope of recovering Hannibal, being in great scarcity of victuals, attempted the taking of Clastidium, a Town wherein the Romans had laid up all their store and munition. But there needed no force; a Brundustan, whom the Romans had trusted with keeping it, fold it for a little money.

Rome, filled the Senate and People, rather with a defire of hafty revenge, than any great forrow for their loss received; feeing that in a manner, all their Foot, wherein their strength and hope consisted, were as yet enus, that was newly arrived, towards Ariminum, where the Army, by him fent out of tains and Souldiers, than Aneroestus, Brito- | Sicil, awaited his coming. He therefore hastmarus, and Gessates, were come to help them: | ed thither; and from thence he marched if they had the hearts to help themselves. speedily towards his Colleague: who attend-Wherefore the same night they fell upon ed him upon the banks of Trebia. Both the exceeding courteously, and dismiss them to what errour or misadventure the Romans their own places: as men likely to be of were therein foiled: which Scipio chiefly Sempronius, having received from Scipio

The news of these disasters, brought to

derates, than in any other service at the the state of the affairs in those parts; sought by all means to try his fortune with Hanni-About the fourth watch of the night fol- |bal, before Scipio were recovered of his lowing, the Conful stole a retrait, as he had wounds, that thereby he might purchase to done before; but not with the like ease and himself the sole glory of the victory, which security, Hannibal had a good eye upon him, he had already, in his imagination, certainly and ere he could get far, sent the Numidians obtained. He also feared the election of the after him: following himself with all his new Consuls: his own time being well-near Army. That night the Romans had received expired. But Scipio perswaded the contrary; agreat blow, if the Numidians, greedy of objecting the unikilfulness of the new-come spoil, had not staid to ransack their camp: Souldiers: and withall, gave him good and thereby given time to all (lave some few reason, to assure him that the Gauls, natuin Rear, that were slain or taken) to pass the rally unconstant, were upon terms of aban-River of Trebia, and save themselves. Scipio, doning the party of the Carthaginians; being both unable to travel by reason of his those of them inhabiting between the rivers wound, and withall, finding it expedient to of Trebia and Po, being already revolted. attend the coming of his fellow-Conful; in sempronius knew all this as well as scipio but camps himfelf (trongly upon the banks of being both guided and blinded by his ambi-Trebia. Necessity required that he should so tion, he made haste to find out the dishono Qqqqq

which he might otherwise easily have horse, and as many foot. The rest of his Aravoided. This resolution of sempronius was my, after they had well warmed, and well exceeding pleasing to Hannibal: who fear- fed themselves in their camp, he led into the ed nothing fo much as delay and loss of time. field, and marched towards the Conful Ear-For the ftrength of his Army, confifting in ly in the morning, he had fent over Trebia firangers, to wir, in Spaniards and Gauls; he some companies of Numidian light-horfe, to no less feared the change of affection in the brave the enemy, and draw him forth to a One, than the impatience of the other: who bad dinner, ere he had broken his fall, sembeing far from their own home, had many pronius was ready to take any opportunity to paffions moving them to turn their faces to- fight and therefore not only iffued out of his wards it. To further the defire of semprowards no ning, it fell out fo, that about the same time, most cold and miserable day; his footbeing the Gauls, inhabiting near unto Trebia, com- wet almost to the arm-holes: which, togeplained of injuries done by the Carthagini- ther with the want of food, did so enseeble and cool their courages, as they wanted force ceffaries, as he supposed that they might to handle the arms they bare. Strong they have done; although he daily reprehended were in foot, as well of their own Nation.as their negligence, telling them, that for their of the Latines: having of the one fixteen of fakes, and to fet them at liberty, he had un- the other twenty thousand. The mass of dertaken this Expedition. Seeing therefore these they ranged in a gross Battalion, guardhow little they regarded his words, he was ed on the flanks with three thouland horle; bold to be his own Carver ; and took from thrusting their Light-armed, and Datters in them by force, as much as he needed of that loofe troups in the head of the rest, in the nawhich they had. Hereupon they fly to the ture of a Vantguard. The Carthaginian num-Romans for help: and, to make their tale the bers of foot were in a manner equal to their better, fay that this wrong is done them, because they refused to joyn with Hannibal both in number and goodness. When there Scipio cared not much for this: he suspected fore the Roman horse, ranged on the slanks their fallhood, and was affured of their mu- of their foot, were broken by the Numidians; tability. But Sempronius affirmed, that it when their foot were charged both in front flood with the honour of Rome, to preferve and flank, by the Spaniards, Gauls and Eletheir Confederates from fuffering injury : phants; when finally the whole Army was and that hereby might be won the friend- unawares prest in the Rear, by Mago and his thip of all the Gauls. Therefore he fent out a two thousand, that rose out of their place of thousand horse: which coming unlooked amoush; then fell the Romans, by heaps, unfor upon Hannibal his forragers, and finding der the enemies swords: and being beaten them heavy loaden, cut many of them in down, as well fighting in disorder, as flying pieces, and chased the rest even into their towards the River, by the hossemen that own camp. This indignity made the Car- purfued them, there escaped no more of fix thaginians fally out against them: who caused and thirty thousand, than ten thousand of them to retire faster than they came. Sem- all forts, Horse and Foot. pronius was ready to back his own men; and repelled the enemies. Hannibal did the ted, of which every one deserved to be relike. So that at length all the Roman Army compensed with the loss that followed. The was drawn forth; and a battel ready to be first was, that he fought with Hannibal in a fought, if the Carthaginian had not re- Champain, being by far inferiour in horfe, fuled it.

defirous to try the main chance in open field: no use. His second errour was, that he made all the perswassions of scipio to the contrary no discovery of the place upon which he notwithstanding. Of this disposition Hanni- fought; whereby he was grosly over-reacht, bal was advertised by the Gauls, his Spies, and infnared, by the ambush which Hamibal. that were in the Roman Camp. Therefore he had laid for him. The third was, that he bethought himself how to help forward the drencht his footmen with empty stomacks, victory by adding some stratagem to his in the River of Trebia, even in a most cold forces: he found in the hollow of a water and frofty day, whereby, in effect, they loft courfe, over-grown with high reed, a fit the use of their limbs. For, as one faith well, trench to cover an ambush. Therein he cast | There is nothing more inconvenient of perious, his brother Mago with a thousand choise than to present an Army tyred with travel, to

Camp, but foorded the River of Trebia, in a

Three great errours Sempronius commitand withall, thereby subject to the African This victory (for fo the Conful would Elephants, which in inclosed or un-even have it called) made the Romans in general grounds & wood-lands, would have been of as an unprofitable vapour.

CHAP. III.

over-run by the enemies horse. He was attended by more than were requisite in a serly against Hannibal.

ø. V.

Gauls into Hetruria. Flaminius the Roby the Carthaginians, at the Lake of Thra-

followers he not only well intreated, but heard news of the Roman Confuls. fent them to their Countries without ranthem, at his feeding upon them, and walting feigning some religious impediment, should an enemy fresh and fed , since where the strength their territory. Wherefore some of them of body faileth, the generosity of mind is but conspired against his life; others admonished him of the danger: and these that gave The broken remainder of the Roman Ar- him the advice, were ready foon after to pramy, was collected by Scipio, who got there- ctice against him; but were in like fort detectwith into Placentia; ftealing away the same ed. He was therefore glad to use Piriwigs of night, which was exceeding rainy, from the hair, and false beards of divers colours: to Carthaginians, who either perceived him not, the end that he might not be described, nor hecaule of the showres; or would not per- known, to those that should undertake to ceive him, because they were over-wearied. make him away. Fain he would have passed sempronius escaped with extreme dan- the Appenines, upon the first appearance of ger, tlying through the Country that was Spring; but was compelled by the violence of weather, to tarry among the Gauls, till he had feen more fwallows than one. At cret flight; yet by fewer than could have length, when the year was somewhat better made refistance, if the enemy had met with opened, he resolved to take his leave of these him. Nevertheless he got away, and came to giddy companions, and bring the war nearer Rome, where he did his office in chusing new to the gate of Rome. So away he went, ha-Confuls for the year following: and then | ving his Army greatly increased with Lightreturned into his Province, with a fresh sup- rians and Gauls; more serviceable friends abroad, than in their own Country. That the passage of the Appenine Mountains was troublesome, I hold it needless to make any doubt. Yet fince the Roman Armies found The departure of Hannibal from the Cifalpine no memorable impediment, in their marches that way: the great vexation which fell man Conful flain, and his Army destroyed upon Hannibal, when he was travelling thorow and over them, ought in reason to be imputed rather to the extremity of Winter, that makes all wayes foul, than to any THE Winter growing on apace, was intolerable difficulty in that journey. Ne-L very sharp, and unfit for service: to vertheless, to avoid the length of war, tothe great contentment of the Romans, who, gether with the refiftance and fortifications being not able to keep the field, lay warm which may not improbably be thought to in Placentia, and Cremona. Yet Hannibal did have been erected upon the ordinary pafnot fuffer them to reft very quiet; but vex- | fages towards Rome: he chose at this time, ed them with continual Alarms: affayled though it were with much trouble, to travel divers places, and taking some; beating thorow the Fens and rotten grounds of the Gauls their adherents, and winning the Tuscane. In those Marishes and bogs, he lost Ligurians to his party, who presented him, in all his Elephants, save one, together with token of their faithful love, with two Ro- the use of one of his eyes; by the moistness man Queftors, or Treasurers, two Colonels, of the air, and by lodging on the cold and five Gentlemen, the Sons of Senators, ground, and wading thorow deep mire and which they had intercepted. These, and in water. In brief, after he had, with much general all fuch prisoners as he had of the ado, recovered the firm and fertile Plains, Romans, he held in straight places, loaden he lodged about Arretium; where he somewith Irons, and miserably fed: those of their what refreshed his wearied followers, and

C. Flaminius, and Cn. Servilius had of late some; with this protestation, That he there- been chosen Consuls for this year: Servilius fore undertook the War in Italy, to free a tractable man, and wholly governed by them from the oppression of the Romans. advice of the Senate; Flaminius an hot-By these means he hoped, and not in vain, headed popular Orator; who having once to draw many of them to his party and af- been robbed (as he thought) of his Confulfistance. But the Gauls were not capable of ship, by a device of the Schators, was afraid such perswasions. They stood in fear, lest to be served so again, unless he quickly sihe should make their Country the seat of nished the war. This jealous Conful thought War, and perhaps take it from them. They it not best for him to be at Rome, when he were also more grieved than reason willed entred into his Office, lest his adversaries, by Qqqqq 2 detain him within the City, or find other and the Lake. There was he charged unabusiness for him at home, to disappoint him wares, on all sides, (save only where that of the honour that he hoped to get in the great Lake of Perusia permitted neither his war. Wherefore he departed fecretly out of enemies to come at him, nor him to flye from the Town, and meant to take possession of them) knowing not which way to turn, or his Office, when the day came at Ariminum, make refiftance. So was he flain in the place. The Fathers (to the Senators were called) accompanied with fifteen thousand dead highly displeased with this, revoked him by carkasses of his Country-men. About six Embafladors: but he neglected their in- thousand of his men, that had the Vantjunction; and halfning to meet with the guard, took courage, as for the most part it Carthaginians, took his way to Arretium, where he shortly found them.

CHAP III

mised unto Hannibal great assurance of vi- had returned, and given charge upon the ctory, Therefore he provoked, with many in- Carthaginians backs, it was thought that they dignities, the vehement nature of the Ro- might have greatly amended, if not wholly man; hoping thereby to draw him unto altered the fortune of the day. But that viofight, ere Servilius came with the rest of the lence of their fear, which, kindled by neces-Army. All the Country between Fefulæ and fity, had wrought the effects of hardines, Arretium he put to fire and fword, even un- was well affwaged, when they ceafed to deder the Confuls nose; which was enough to spair of saving their lives by flight. They make him stir, that would not have litten stood still, in a cold sweat, upon the Hill-top, ftill, though Hamibal had been quiet. It is hearing under them a terrible noise, but not true that a great Captain of France hath any way discovering how things went, befaid; Pays gaste n'est pas perdu; A masted cause of the great fogg that held all that Country is not thereby loft. But by this waste of the Country, Flaminius thought his own Air was cleared, and they might plainly difhonour to be much impaired; and there- cern the lamentable flaughter of their felfore advanced towards the Enemy. Many lows. But they staid not to lament it; for it advised him (which had indeed been best) was high time, they thought, to be gone ere to have patience a while, and stay for his they were descryed and attatched by the Colleague. But of this he could not abide to enemies horse. This they should have hear; faying, that he came not to defend thought upon fooner, fince they had no mind Arretium, whilft the Carthaginians went to return into the fight. For, descryed they burning down all Haly before them, to the were, and Maharbal fent after them, who gates of Rome. Therefore he took horse, and overtook them by night in a Village, which commanded the Army to march. It is re- he surrounded with his horse: and so they ported as ominous, that one of their Enligns | yielded the next day, rendring up their fluck so fast in the ground, as it could not arms, upon his promise of their lives and be plucked up by the Enfign-bearer. Of liberties. this tale, whether true or falfe, Tully makes This accord Hannibal refused to confirm; a jest; saying, That the cowardly knave saying, That it was made by Maharbal did faintly pull at it (as going now to fight) without sufficient warrant, as wanting his having hardly pitched it into the earth. authority to make it good. Herein he taught Neither was the answer of Flaminius (if it them (yet little to his own honour) what it were true disagrecable hereto: for he com- was to keep no faith: and fitted them with manded that it should be digged up, if fear a trick of their own. For if it were lawful had made the hands too weak to lift it : unto the Romans, to alter covenants, or asking withall, whether letters were not add unto them what they listed; if the Carcome from the Senate, to hinder his pro- thaginians must be fain to pay certain hunceedings. Of this their jealousie, both he dreds, and yet more hundreds of talents, beand the Senate that did give him cause, are lides their first bargain; as also to renounce likely to repent.

the Lake of Thrasymene, was on a light fire; which whilst the Consulthought to quench advantage is more ample, than the condiwith his enemies blood, he pursued Han- tions of the late concluded Peace: then can nibal so unadvisedly, that he fell with his Hannibal be as Roman, as themselves; and whole Army into an ambush cunningly laid make them know, that perfidicusness gainfor him, between the Mountains of Cortona eth no more in prosperity, than it lofeth in happens, out of desperation; and breaking thorow the enemies, that stood in their way, The fiery disposition of this Consul, pro- recovered the tops of the Mountains. If these their interest in Sardinia, and be limited in All the Territory of Cortona, as far as to their Spanish Conquests, according to the good pleasure of the Romans, whose present lian prisoners, or thereabout, he had in his fo hasty to fight, before the arrival of serhe fet free without ransome; protesting, as his charge, it is probable that he would have he had done before, that it was for their taken his companion with him the second fakes, and to free them and others from the time, and have fearched all suspected places. Roman tyranny, that he had undertaken this proper to have shadowed an ambush: both war. But the Romans he kept in straight pri- | which this new Consul Flaminius neglected. fon, and in fetters, making them learn to cat We may boldly avow it, that by being conhard meat. This was a good way to breed tinued in his Government of France ten in the people of Italy, if not a love of Car- years, Casar brought that mighty Nation, tothate, yet a contempt of Rome : as if this war gether with the Helvetians and many of the only the preferving of her own neck from parts had there been every year a new Lieuthe voke of flavery, which her over-ftrong tenant fent, they would hardly, if ever, have enemies would thrust upon her in revenge been subdued. For it is more than the best ofher oppressions. But an ancient reputation, wit in the World can do, to inform it self. is to be done, ere the Carthaginians can get ces, Rivers, and of all good helps, whereby any Italian Partifans.

matter of importance, when the news was perswaded the imitation. brought him of his Colleagues overthrow and death in Hetruria; that made him hasten back to the defence of Rome.

fruits of popular jealousie, which perswaded the Romans to the yearly change of their Commanders in the wars; which greatly endangered, and retarded the growth of that Empire. Certain it is, that all men are far better taught by their own errours, than by the examples of their foregoers. Flaminius had heard in what a trap sempronius had been taken up but the year before, the change of fortune Fifteen thousand Ita- not, contrary to all good advice, have been hands: of which, all that were not Romans, vilius. If Sempronius had been continued in had not concerned the general fafety, but Germans, under the Roman yoke; into which confirmed by fuccess of many ages, is not within one years compass, of the nature of lost in one or two battels. Wherefore more a great Nation, of the Factions, of the Plato profecute a War to the best effect. Our Presently after the battel of Thrasymene, Princes have commonly left their Deputies C. Centronius, with four thousand Roman in Ireland three years; whence by reason of horse, drew near unto the Camp of Hanni- the shortness of that their time, many of bal. He was sent from Ariminum by Servilius them have returned as wise as they went the other Conful, to increase the strength of out; others have profited more. & yet when Flaminius: but, coming too late, he increa- they began but to know the first rudiments fed only the miladventure. Maharbal was of War, and Government, fitting the Counemployed by Hannibal, to intercept this try, they have been called home, and new company; who finding them amazed with Apprentices fent in their places, to the great report which they had newly heard of the prejudice both of this and that Estate. But it great overthrow, charged them, and brake hath ever been the course of the World rathem: and killing almost half of them, drave ther to follow old errours, than to examine the rest unto a high piece of ground, them: and of Princes and Governours to whence they came down, and simply yielded uphold their slothful ignorance, by the old to mercy the next day. servilius himself examples and policy of other ages and peowas in the mean while ikirmithing with the ple; though neither likeness of time, of oc-Gauls; against whom he had wrought no cassion, or of any other circumstance, have

ø. VI.

In these passages, it is easie to discern the How Q Fabius the Roman Dictator, Sought to consume the force of Hannibal, by lingring War. Minutius the Master of the Horse, konoured and advanced by the People, for bold and successful attempting; adventures rash= ly upon Hannibal, and is like to perish with his Army, but rescued by Fabius.

Reatly were the Romans amazed at I this their ill success, and at the danger by this subtle Carthaginian; yet suffered he apparent; which threatned them in more himself to be caught soon after in the same terrible manner, than ever did war since manner. He had also belike forgotten how Rome it self was taken. They were good Sempronius, fearing to be prevented by a Souldiers, and so little accustomed to renew Conful, and ambitious of the fole ho- ceive an overthrow, that when Pyrrkus had nour of beating Hannibal in battel, without beaten them, once and again, in open field, helpof his companion scipio, had been re- all Italy was strangely affected with his suc-Warded with shame and loss; else would be cess, and held him in admiration, as one that rel was not grounded upon hate: he only against Hannibal, word was brought that the fought honour, and fought (asit were)upon Carthaginian Fleet had intercepted all the a bravery; demeaning himfelf like a cour- fupply, that was going to Cn. Seipio in Spain. teous enemy. This Caribaginian detested the Against these Cartbaginians, Fabins comwhole Roman name; against which he burn-manded servilius the Consulto put to Sea; ed with defire of revenge. Ticinum, Trebia, and taking up all the ships about Rome and and Thrasymone, witnessed his purpose, and Ostia, to pursue them : whilst he, with the his ability; which to withftand, they fled Legions, attended upon Hannibal. Four Leunto a remedy that had long been out of gions he had levied in hafte: and from Ariuse, and created a Dictator. The Dictators minum he received the Army which Servipower was greater than the Confuls, and lins the Conful had conducted thither. scarcely subject unto controll of the whole City. Wherefore this Officer was seldom after Hannibal; not to fight, but to affront chofen, but upon some extremity, and for no him. And knowing well, what advantage longer time than fix months. He was to be the Numidian horse had over the Romans he named by one of the Confuls, at the ap- alwayes lodged himself on high grounds. pointment of the Senate: though it were fo, and of hard accels. Hannibal in the mean that the Conful (if he stood upon his prero- while, pursuing his victory, had ranged gative) might name whom he pleased. At over all the Country, and used all manner of this time the one Conful being dead, and cruelty towards the inhabitants; especially the other too far off, the people took upon to those of the Roman Nation, of whom he them, as having supreme authority, to give did put to the sword all that were able to the Dignity by their election, to 2. Fabius bear arms. Passing by spoletum and Ancona. Maximus; the best reputed man of war in he incamped upon the Adriatick shores; rethe City. Novum factum novum constitum ex- freshed his diseased, and over-travelled petit, Contrary winds, contrary courses, Q.Fa- Companies, armed his Africans after the bius choie M. Minutius Rufus Mafter of the manner of the Romans, and made his difhorse: which Officer was customarily as patches for Carthage; presenting his friends, the Dictators Lieutenant; though this Mi- which were in effect all the Citizens, with nutius grew afterwards famous, by taking part of the spoils that he had gotten Having more upon him.

tion of somewhat amiss in matter of Religi- healed his horse heels of the scratches, by on: a good beginning, and commendable, washing their pasterns in old wine: he folhad the Religion been also good. But if it lowed the coast of the Adriatick Sea to-Liv. liv. ... were true (as Livie reports it) that the wards Apulia, a Northern Province of the Books of Sybil were confulted, and gave di- Kingdom of Naples; fpoiling the Marrucini, rection in this business of devotion; then and all other Nations lying in his way. In must we believe that those books of sybil, all this ground that he over-ran, he hadnot preserved in Rome, were dictated by an evil taken any one City: only he had assayled Spirit. For it was ordained, that some Vow, Spoletum, a Colony of the Romans; and findmade in the beginning of this war to Mars, ing it well defended, prefently gave it over. The malice of a great Army is broken, and ving not been rightly made before: also the force of it spent in a great siege. This the that great Plays should be vowed unto Ju- Protestant Army found true at Poittiers, a piter, and a Temple to Venus; with fuch little before the battel of Moncountour; and could work wonders. But Pyrrhus his quar- when the Dictator was newly fet forth

With these forthwith he followed apace refreshed his army, fed his horses, cured his The first act of Fabius, was the reforma- wounded Souldiers, and (as Polybius hath it) other trumpery. This vehemency of super-flition, proceeds alwayes from vehemency of S. Jean d'Angely. But Hannibal was more fear. And furely this was a time when Rome wife. He would not engage himself in any was exceedingly diftempered with paffion; fuch enterprife, as should detain him, and whereof that memorable accident, of two give the Romans leave to take breath. All his women that fuddenly died, when they faw care was to weaken them in force and reputheir Sons return alive from Thrassmene, may tation: knowing, that when once he was abferve to bear witness, though it be more pro- solute Master of the field, it would not be perly an example of motherly love. The long ere the walled Cities would open their Walls and Towers of the City were now regates, without expecting any engine of batpaired and fortified; the Bridges upon Ri- tery. To this end he presented Fabius with vers were broken down, and all care taken battel, as foon as he faw him; and provoked for defence of Romeit felf. In this tumult, him with all manner of bravadoes. But differences between fouldiers bred up, ever of Fabius to grow into credit; as if he had fince they were boyes, in war and in blood, taken the Carthaginians in a trap, and won trained and hardned in Spain, made proud the victory without blows. But Hannibal trained and adventurous by many victories there, reformed this opinion, and freed himself, by and of late by some notable acts against the a sleight invention, yet serving the turn as Romans; and fuch, as had no oftner feen well as a better. In driving the countrey, the enemy, than been vanquished by him. he had gotten about two thousand Kine, Therefore he attended the Carthaginian fo whose hornes he dressed with dry faggots, neer, as he kept him from stragling too far; and setting fire to them in the dark night; and preserved the countrey from utter spoil. | caused them to be driven up the hils. The the Lyon afar off, that in the end he might

CHAP. III.

and was as fiery as Flaminius: taxing Fabius | hill tops were horribly affraid, when some with cowardize and fear. But all stirred of these fiery Monsters were gotten beyond not this well-advised Commander. For them; and ran therefore hastily away, thinkwife men are no more moved with fuch ing the enemies were behind their backs; noise, than with wind bruised out of a blad- and fell among the light-armed Carthaginider. There is nothing of more indifcretion ans, that were no less afraid of them. So Hancould he by any arguments be perswaded, the Dictators camp, that hung over his horse. head upon the hills of Collicula, and Cafilinum: for other way there was none, by to thew his own fufficiency. He was fully which he might issue out of that goodly gar- perswaded, that his Romans, in plain field den-countrey, which he had already wast- would be too hard for the Africans and Spaed, into places more abundant of provision | niards: by whom if they had been foiled

Fabins would not bite. He well knew the not cafily escape. Now began the wisdom Heinured his men by little and little, and spectacle was strange, and therefore terrimade them acquainted with dangers by de- | ble; especially to those that knew it to be grees, and he brought them first to look on a work of a terrible enemy. What it should mean, Fabius could not tell; but thought it a device to circumvent him, and therefore Now Minutius had a contrary disposition, kept within his Trenches. They that kept the and danger, than to purfue misfortune: it misal, with his whole Army recovered fure wasteth it self sooner by sufferance, than by ground without molestation: where he staid opposition. It is the invading Army that till the next morning, and then brought off delires battel: and this of Hannibal, was his light footmen, with some slaughter of the both the invading and victorious. Fabius | Romans, that began to hold them in skirtherefore suffered Hannibal to cross the Ap- mish. After this, Hannibal made semblance penines, and to fall upon the most rich and of taking his journey towards Rome: and pleasant Territory of Campania; neither the Dictator coasted him in the wonted manner; keeping still on high grounds, beto adventure the Roman Army in battel: but | tween him and the City, whileft the Carthabeing far too weak in horse, he alwayes kept | ginian wasted all the Plains. The Carthagithe Hilsand fast grounds. When Hannibal nian took Gergon, an old ruinous Town in faw he could by no means draw this wary Apulia, forfaken by the Inhabitants, which Dicator to fight, that the Winter came on, he turned into Barns and Store-houses for and that the Towns flood firm for the Ro- | winter, and incamped under the broken mans, whose Legions were in fight, though wall. Other matter of importance he did afar off; he refolved to rest his Army, that | none: but the time passed idly, till the Diwas loaden with spoil, in some plentiful and ctator was called away to Rome, about some assured place, till the following spring. But business of Religion, and lett the Army ere this can be done he must pass along by in charge with Minutius the Master of the Minutius was glad of this good occasion for his wintering. It was by meer errour of already twice or thrice, it was not by open his guide, that he first entred within these force, but by subtilty and ambush, which he ftraights. For he would have been directed thought himself wile enough to prevent. unto Callimum; whence he might both affay All the Army was of his opinion; and that the fair City of Capua, which had made him fo earnestly, as he was preferred, by judgefriendly promifes under-hand, and hinder ment of the Souldiers, in worthiness to comthe Romans from coming near it to prevent mand, before the cold and wary Fabius. him. But his guide mif-understood the Car- In this jollity of conceit, he determined to thaginian pronuntiation, and conducted him fight. Yet had he been peremptorily forawry another way, from Cassimum to Cassii-bidden so to do, by the Dictator; the breach num, whence Fabius hoped that he should of whose command was extreme peril of

867

he held undoubtedly his own; and the highly esteemed by the Army, and more love of the Army, and the friends that hehad highly by the people at Rome, to whom he at home bearing office in Rome, were enough lent the news, with somewhat greater boast to fave him from the Dictators rods and than truth. It seemed no small matter, that axes, took he the matter never so hainouf- the Roman Army had recovered spirit, so far ly. Hannibal on the other fide was no less forththat it dared to fet upon Hannibal in glad, that he should play with a more ad- his own camp; and that in so doing, it came venturous gamester. Therefore he drew off with the better. Every man therefore near, and to provoke the Romans, fent forth praifed the Master of the Horse, that had a third part of his Army to waste the Coun- wrought this great alteration; and confetrey. This was boldly done, feeing that quently, they grew as far out of liking with Minutius incamped hard by him: but it Fabius and his timerous proceedings, thinkfeems, that he now despised those whom he ing that he had not done any thing wisely, had so often vanquished. There was a piece in all his Dictatorship: saving that he chose of high ground between the two Camps; such a worthy Lieutenant; whereas indeed which because it would be commodious to in no other thing he had so greatly erred. him that could occupy it, the Carthaginians But the Dictator was not so joyful of a little feized upon by night with two thousand of good luck, as angry with the breach of ditheir light armed. But Minutius, by plain scipline; and fearful of greater danger, thereforce, wan it from them the next day; and on likely to enfue. He faid that he knew his intrenching himself thereupon, became their own place, and what was to be done that he ncerer neighbour.

The main business of Hannibal at this time likewise; and make him give account of what was, to provide abundantly, not only for he had done, if he were Dictator: speaking his men, but for his horles, which he knew it openly, That good fucces iffuing from to be the chief of his strength; that he might bad counsel, was more to be feared than cakeep them in good heart against the next lamity; for as much as the one bred a foolist fummer: if belides this he could give the confidence, the other taught men to be wa-Romans another blow, it would increase his ry. Against these Sermons c ery one cryed reputation, incourage his own men, terri- out, especially Metellus, a Tribune of the fie his enemies, and give him leave to for- people: which office warranted him to fpeak, rage the Countrey at will. Since therefore and do what he lift, without fear of the Di-Minutius did not in many dayes issue forth Ctator. Is it not enough (faid he) that this of his Camp, the Carthaginian fent out (as our only Man, cholen to be General, and before) a great number of his men, to fetch | Lord of the Town, in our greatest necessity, in harvest. This advantage Minutius wisely hath done no manner of good, but suffered espied, and took. For he led forth his Ar- all Italy to be wasted before his eyes, to the my, and fetting it in order, presented battel uttershame of our State; unless he also himto Hannibal, that was not in case to accept der others, from doing better than himself it, even at his own Trenches. His horfes, can, or dares? It were good to consider and all his light Armature, divided into what he means by this. Into the place of many companies, he fent abroad against the | C. Flaminius he hath not chosen any new forragers; who being dispersed over all the Consul all this while; Servilius is sent away fields, and loaden with booty, could make to Sea, I know not why; Hannibal and he, no resistance. This angred Hannibal, that have as it were taken Truce; Hannibal was not able to help them; but worse did sparing the Dictators grounds: (for Hanit anger him, when the Romans took heart nibal had indeed forborn to fpoil some to alfail his Trenches. They perceived that grounds of Fabins, that so he might bring it was meer weakness, which held him with- him into envy and suspicion) and the Dictain his Camp, and therefore were bold to torgiving him leave to spoil all others, withdespise his great name, that could not resist out impeachment. Surely his drift is even their present strength. But in the heat of the this: he would have the war to last business, Aldrubal came from Geryon with long, that he himself might be long in of four thousand men, being informed of the fice, and have the sole Government both of danger, by those that had escaped the Ro- our City and Armies. But this must not be man horfe. This imboldned Hannibal to fo. It were better, that the Commonalty of iffue forth against the Romans; to whom Rome, which gave him this authority, should nevertheless he did not such hurt, as he had again take it from him and conferr it upon received.

death. But the honour of the victory, which For this piece of fervice Minutius was would teach the Mafter of the horse to do so one more worthy. But lest, in moving the people hereto, I should seem to do him in- Before this busie day of contention. Fabius on of this Dictator, by the People.

worthy Master of the Horse) that was bet- and assurance of their liberty. proceed as he had begun. So the Act passed. Minutius & Hannibal equally desired, could jury; thus far forth I will regard his ho- had dispatched the election of new Connour: I will only propound, That the Master stull, which was M. Atilius Regulus, in the of the Horse may be joyned in equal authoroom of C. Flaminius: and, having finished rity with the Dictator; a thing not more all requifite business, went out of Town. new, nor less necessary, than was the electi- perceiving well, that he should not be able to withstand the multitude in hindering the Though all men, even the Senators, were decree. The news of Minutius his advanceill reriwaded of the course which Fabius ment, was at the camp as soon as Fabius: had taken against Hannibal, as being neither so that his old Lieutenant, and new Colplaufible, nor feeming beneficial at the pre- league, began to treat with him as a Comient; yet was there none fo injurious, as to panion; asking him at the first, in what think that his general intent, and care of fort he thought it best to divide their authe Weal-publique, was lefs than very ho- thority: whether that one, one day; and nourable. Whereas therefore it was the the other, the next; or each of them fucmanner, in palling of any act, that some cessively, for some longer time, should comman of credit and authority, besides the mand in chief, Fabius briefly told him, That propounder, should stand up, and formally it was the pleasure of the Citizens, to make deliver his approbation; not one of the the Master of the horse equal to the Dictaprincipal Citizens was found so impudent, tor, but that he should never be his superias to offer that open difgrace, both unto or: He would therefore divide the Legions a worthy Personage, and (therewithal) with him by lot, according to the cultom. unto that dignity, whose great power had Minutius was not herewith greatly pleased; freed the State at feveral times, from the for that with half of the Army he could not greatest dangers. Only C. Terentius Varro, work such wonders as otherwise he hoped who the year before had been Frator, to accomplish. Nevertheless he meant to do was glad of fuch an opportunity, to win his best, and so taking his part of the Army, the favour of the Multitude. This fellow incamped about a mile, and a half from the was the fon of a Butcher, afterwards be- Dictator. Needful it was (though Livy feems camea Shop-keeper; and being of a con-to tax him for it) that he should so do. For tentious spirit, grew by often brabling, to where two several Commanders are not take upon him as a Pleader, dealing in poor subordinate one unto another, nor joyned in mens causes. Thus by little and little he Commission, but have each intire and absogot into Office; and role by degrees, lute charge of his own followers, there are being advanced by those, who in hatred of the forces (though belonging to one Prince the Nobility favoured his very baseness And or State) not one, but two distinct Arnow he thought the time was come, for him mies in which regard, one Camp shall not to give a hard push at the: Consulship; by hold them both without great inconvenidoing that, which none of the great men, ence. Polybius neither finds fault with this fearing or favouring one another, either distinction, nor yet reports, that Fabins was durft or would. So he made an hot inve-unwilling to command in chief successively vective, not only against Fabius, but against (as the two Consuls used) with Minutius, by all the Nobility; faying, That it grieved turns. He faith that Minutius was very rethem to see the people do well, and take fractory, and so proud of his advancement, upon them what belonged unto them, in that continually he opposed the Dictator: matter of Government; That they fought who thereupon referred it to his choice, eito humble the Commons by poverty, and ther to divide the forces between them, as is to impoverish them by War; especially by faid before, or else to have command over war at their own doors, which would foon all by course. This is likely to be true. For confume every poor mans living, and find Natures impatient of subjection, when once him other work to think upon, than matter they have broken loofe from the rigour of of State. Therefore he bade them to be authority, love nothing more, than to conwife; and fince they had found one (this test with it; as if herein consisted the proof

ter affected unto them and his Countrey, to It behoved the Malter of the horse to reward him according to his good deferts; make good the opinion which had thus adand give him authority, according as was vanced him. Therefore he was no less carepropounded by the Tribune, that so he ful of getting occasion to fight, than was Famight be encouraged and enabled to bius of avoiding the necessity. That which

tween them was open and bare, yet as fit for and (being so required by the Dictators letambuilt, as could be wished: for that the ters) repaired to the camp, with his fellowfides of a naked valley adjoyning, had many Conful, where they took charge of the Army. and spacious caves; able some one of them, to hide two or three hundred men. In these lurking places Hannibal bestowed five hundred horte, and five thousand foot; thrusting The Roman people, desirous to finish the mar them so close together, that they could not be discovered. But lest by any misadventure they should be found out, & buried in their holes; he made offer betimes in the morning, to feize upon a piece of ground that lay on the other hand: whereby he drew the eyes and the thoughts of the Romans, from their more needful care, to bufiness little concerning them. Like unto this was the occasion, which not long before had provoked Minu- by the principal Citizens. He had indeed tius to adventure upon the Carthaginians. preferved them from receiving a great over-Hoping therefore to increase his honour, in throw; but had neither finished the war, nor like fort as he got it; he sent first his light ar- done any thing in appearance thereto tendmature, then his horse, and at length (seeing ing. Rather it might seem that the reputatithat Hannibal feconded his own troops with on of this his one worthy act, was likely to fresh companies) he followed in person with countenance the slow proceedings or perthe Legions. He was foon caught, and fo hot- haps the cowardize (if it were no worfe) of ly charged on all fides, that he knew neither those that followed him, in protracting the how to make refiftance, nor any fafe retrait. work to a great length. Elfe, what meant the In this dangerous case, while the Romans Confuls to sit idle the whole winter, contradefended themselves losing many, and those ry to all former custome; fince it was never of their best men: Fabins drew near, in very heard before, that any Roman General had good order to relieve them. For this old willingly fuffered the time of his command Captain, perceiving afar off, into what ex- to run away without any performance: as tremity his new Colleague had railly if it were honourable to do just nothing? thrown himfelf & his followers, did the office | Thus they suspected they knew not what; of a good Citizen; and regarding more the and were ready every man to discharge the benefit of his Countrey, than the difgrace grief and anger of his own private los, upon which he had wrongfully fustained, sought the ill administration of the publick rather to approve himself by hasting to do good, than by fuffering his enemy to feel helpful to C. Terentius Varro, in his fuit for the the reward of doing ill. Upon Fabius his ap- Confulfhip.It behoved him to strike, whilest proach, Hannibal retired: fearing to be well the Iron was hot: his own worth being wetted with a showre, from the cloud (as he little or none; and his credit over-weak, to on the Hill-tops. Minutius forthwith submittted himfelt to Fabius; by whose benefit | abundantly supplyed all his defects. Wherehe confessed his life to have been saved. So up his charge unto the Consuls, that follow-

868

within kenning. He ran along all the coast of have been overthrown, and was rescued by Italy; took holtages of the Sardinians and Fabins with the other two: but, had all Conficans; passed over into Africk; and there been joyned together, what they might have negligently falling to fool the countrey, was done, it was apparent, by the victory of Michael the property of fhamefully beaten aboord his ships, with the ntime when he commanded over all as Market of the command loss of 1000 men. Weighing archor thereloss of 1000 men. Weighing archor the 1000 men. Weighing archive the 1000 not long be wanting. The countrey lying be- fore in all hafte, he returned home by sicil,

ø. VII.

quickly, choose a rash and unworthy Consul. Great forces levied against Hannibal. Hannibal taketh the Romans provisions in the Caftle of Cannæ. The new Confuls fet forth against Hannibal.

With little pleasure did they of the poorer fort in Rome hear the great commendations that were given to Fabius

This affection of the people, was very termed the Dictator)that had hung to long make way into that high Dignity. Butthe Commonalty were then in such a mood, as in to help, he had a kiniman, Bibius Herennifrom this time forwards the war proceeded us, then Tribune of the People; who spacoldly, as the Dictator would have it; both red not to use the liberty of his place, in laywhileft his Office lafted which was not long, and likewife afterwards, when he delivered truth, or modefty. This bold Orator fuck Italy, and fuffered therein to range at his Servilius the Conful had pursued in vain pleasure, by the Noblemen; That Minutius a Carthaginian fleet, to which he came never indeed with his two Legions, was likely to CHAP. 111. Conful, the war would never be brought to | thers, against the vertue (as it was beleived) this. All the Fathers, or Senators, who at the first were an hundred parted themselves into Tens or Decuries; and governed successively, by the space of five dayes, one Decurie after another in order: yet fo, that the Li-Hors, or Virgers, carrying the Fasces, or bundles of rods and axes, waited only upon the chief of them with those Ensigns of power. This custome was retained in times of the Confuls; and put in use, when by death, or any cafualty, there wanted ordinary Magi-Fathers herein was, that if the election were then was all to begin a new: by which incommonly well affwaged. Upon fuch change

an end; That fuch of the Plebeians as had of this mean, but worthy man, feemed fo long fince been advanced to honour by the manifest, that when the People had urged people, were grown as proud as the old knobility, and contemned the meaner fort, cholen Conful: in whole hand it was left, to ever fince themselves were freed from con- hold the election of his Colleague. Hereupon tempt of the more mighty; That therefore all the former Petitioners gave over. For it was needful to choose a Consul, who whereas men of ordinary mark had stood fould be altogether a Plebeian, a meer new for the place before, it was now thought man, one that could boast of nothing but meet, that, both to supply the defect, and to the Peoples love, nor could with more, than | bridle the violence of this unexpert, and hotto keep it, by well deserving of them. heated man, one of great sufficiency and re-By fuch perswasions the Multitude was putation, should be joyned with him, as both won, to be wholly for Terentius: to the Companion and Opposite. So L. Emilius Paugreat vexation of the Nobles, who could lus, he who a few years fince had overcome not endure to see a man raised for none the Illyrians, & chased Demetrius Pharius out other vertue, than his detracting from their of his Kingdome, was urged by the Nobility honour; and therefore opposed him with to stand for the place; which he easily oball their might. To hinder the defire of the tained, having no Competitor. It was not the People, it fell out, or at least was alledged, defire of this honourable man, to trouble that neither of the two present Consuls himself any more in such great business of could well be spared from attending upon the Common-wealth. For, notwithstanding Hannibal, to hold the Election. Wherefore his late good fervice, He, and M. Livius that a Distator was named for that purpose; and had been his companion in office, were afhe again deposed: either (as was pretend- terwards injuriously vexed by the people, ed) for some religious impediment, or be- and called unto judgement: wherein Livius cause the Fathers defired an Inter-regnum, was condemned, and Emilius hardly escapwherein they might better hope to prevail ed. But of this injustice they shall put the inchoice of the new Consuls. This Inter-Romans well in mind each of them in his seregnum took name and being in Rome, at the | cond Confulship wherein they shall honoudeath of Romulus: and was in use at the rably approve their worth; the one of them death of other Kings. The order of it was nobly dying, in the most grievous loss; the other bravely winning, in the most happy victory that ever befell that Common-wealth.

These new Confuls, Varro and Paulus omitted no part of their diligence in preparing for the war; wherein though Varro made the greater noise, by telling what wonders he would work, and that he would ask no more, than once to have a fight of Hannibal, whom he promised to vanquish the very first day : yet the providence and care of Panlus travelled more earnestly toward the acstrates of the old year, to substitute new for complishment of that, whereof his fellow the year following. The advantage of the vainly boasted. He wrote unto the two old Confuls Servilius and Atilius, desiring them not like to go as they would have it, there to abstain from hazard of the main chance; needed no more, than to slip five dayes, and but nevertheless, to ply the Carthaginians with daily skirmish, and weaken them by terruption, the heat of the multitude was degrees: that when he and his Colleague should take the field, with the great Army of those, that were Presidents of the electi- which they were now levying, they might on, it was also lawful unto new Petitioners, find the four old Legions well accustomed to fue for the Magistracies that lay void: to the enemy, and the enemy well weakned which otherwise was not allowed; but a to their hands. He was also very strict in time limited, wherein they should publickly. his Musters, wherein the whole Senate affist declare themselves to seek those offices. But him so carefully, as if in this Action they no device would ferve against the general meant to refute the flanders, with which favour born unto Terentius. One Inter-reg- Terentius and his adherents had burdened mm passed over, and the malice of the Fa- them. What number of men they raised, it is uncertain leaft, and fix thousand horse, they were the most part, was rather good than great. ftrong in the field, when the day came, which Farro had to greatly defired, of look- honour of their other fervices, but was ining upon Hannibal.

relieved the Carthaginians, when they were that time, made his abode at Gergon; where diffrested by their own Mercenaries; so did lay all his store for the Winter. The Roman he now fend help to Rome, a thousand Art to be near him, lodged about Cammisum; chers, and Slingers, with great quantity of and, that they might not be driven to turn Wheat, Barly, and other provisions: fear-afide for all necellaries, to the los of good ing norhing more, than that one of these opportunities, they believed much of their two mighty Cities should destroy the other, provisions in the Castle of Canne. for the whereby his own cleate would fall to ruine, Town was razed the year before. This place that ftood upright, by having them fomewhat evenly ballanced. He gave them also missed wan, and thereby not only furnished himself, but compelled his enemies to counsel, to send forces into Africa; if (perhaps) by that means they might divert the war from home. His gifts, and good advice lides this, and more to his advantage, he were lovingly accepted; and inftructions enabled himfelfto abide in that open Counwere given to Titus Octacilius the Prætor. which was to go into sicil, that he should than the Romans, having so many mouths found it expedient. at this time, do much more serve to declare their puillance, than any, though larger accompt by Foll, of fuch as were not eafily him to command no fmall part of the Coundrawn into the field, and fitted for fervice. try adjacent 3 it then feemed needful, even For, besides these Armies of the Consuls, and that which went into sicil, twenty five battel with the Carthaginian, rather than thousand, with L. Fosthumius Albinus, another of the Prators, went against the Gauls, to reclaim that Province, which the passage of Hannibal through it, had taken from them. The contemplation of this their prefent frength might well embolden them to do as they did. They fent Embaffadors to When all things we Philip, the fon of Demetrius, King of Macedon, requiring him to deliver into their hands Demetrius Pharius : who, having been their subject, and rebell, was fled into his Kingdom. They also sent to the Illyrians, to demand their tribute; whereof the day of payment was already past. What answer they received, it is not known: only this is to Jupiter, and the rest of their gods, for known, that Demetrius Pharius was not fent good fuccess and Victory: which being perunto them; and that Philip henceforth began to have an eye upon them, little to their good. As for the Illyrian money, by the fhifts that they were driven foon after to make, it will appear, that the one half of it (how little foever) would have been welcavil about forfeiture for non-payment of the with friendly leave-taking, and good withes

Whilst the City was busied in these cares, the old Confuls lay as near unto Hannibal as necessity of a battel. Many skirmishes they Country remarkable service. Terentiathis uncertain. Fourfcore thousand foot, at the had with him; wherein their success, for Yet one mischance not only blemished the the rothe old King of Spracuse, as he had following. Hannibal for the most part of would be troubled with far carriage. Betry, fit for the service of his horse, longer accordingly pass over into Africk, if he to feed, could well endure to tarry; with The great Levies, which the Romans made Of this mithap when servilus had informed the Senate, letting them understand how this Piece taken by Hannibal, would ferve unto the Fathers themselves, to adventure a fuffer him thus to take root in the ground of Italy. Nevertheless answer was returned unto Servilius, that he should have patience yet awhile: for that the Confuls would shortly be there, with a Power sufficient to

When all things were ready in the City, and the season of the year commodious to take the field, the two Confuls, with their Army, fet forth against Hannibal. This was alwayes done with great folemnity: especially, whenfoever they went forth to war against any noble or redoubted Enemy. For Sacrifices, and folemn Vows, were made unformed, the Generals in warlike attire, with an honourable train of the principal men, (not only fuch as were of their kindred and alliance, or followed them to the war, as Voluntaries for love, but a great number of others that meant to abide at home,) were accompanied on their way, and dismissed At this time, all the Fathers, and the whole Nobility, waited upon Emilius Paulus, as the only Man, whom they thought either worthy of this honour, or likely to do his have exhorted the Conful Paulus, with many grave words, to shew his magnanimity, not only in dealing with the Carthaginians, but (which he thought harder) in bridling the outragious folly of his fellow-Conful. not again to run into danger of condemuafaw his best were likely to be ill taken, he would think it less rashness to adventure upon the Enemies fword, than upon the malice of his own Citizens.

ø. VIII.

Diffension between the two Roman Consuls. Whether it be likely, that Hannibal was upon point of flying out of Italy, when the Romans pressed him to fight. The great battail of Cannæ.

Lamp, difmissed M. Atilius, one of the bers : which were no less than all that should his Colleague, though greater in per-Rome at the present was able to set forth. formance. He told them in what danger their Country flood; how the state and safety thereof to have the better of their enemies, they fall refled upon their hands; ufing some such into an inconvenience, than which few are other common matter of perswasion. But more dangerous; Dissension of their chief the most effectual part of this Oration, was, That Hannibal with this his terrible Army, had not yet obtained one victory by plain time; why? because the enemy must shortforce and valour: but that only by deceit ly dillodge, and remove hence, into places and ambush he had founthe honour, which less fit for his horse. But shall the Romans he had gotten at Trebia and Thrasymene. Herewithall he taxed the inconfiderate years provisions, return into Campania to rafiness of sempronius and Flaminius; of gather a fecond Harvest? This would (faid whom the one law not his enemies, until | Varro) favour too much of Q. Fabius: And he was furrounded by them; the other your hafte (faid Paulus) doth favour no fearce faw them, when they ftruck off his less of c. Flaminius. Their deeds were like head, by reason of the thick mist, through their words: for they commanded by the darkness whereof he went groping (as turns interchangeably every day. it were blinde-fold) into their fnares. lius lodged fix miles from Hannibal, where

Attendants were the whole multitude of the Finally declaring what advantages they poorer Citizens; a troup no less in great- had against the Enemy; and how destitute ness, than the other was in dignity. At the the Enemy was of those helps, by which he parting, Fabius the late Dictator, is faid to had hitherto prevailed against them; he exhorted them to play the men, and do their best. They were easily perswaded: for the contemplation of their own multitude, and confidence of the Roman vertue in matter of Armes, gave them cause to The answer of Paulus, was, That he meant think, that under a Captain so well experienced, and every way fufficient, as Æmition by offending the multitude; that he lins was known to be, they should easily would do his belt for his Country, but if he prevail against the Carthaginians, that came fhort of them in all things elfe, fave craft; which would not alwayes thrive; But in one thing they mistook the meaning of their General. It was his defire that they should have heart to fight; not that they should lose the patience of awaiting a convenient feafon. But they, having preconceived a victory, thought all delayes to be impediments: and thereby fought to rob themfelves of their best help; which was, Good conduct. They remembred what talk they had heard at Rome; and were themselves affected with the vulgar defire, Hele new Generals, arriving at the of ending the war quickly; wherein fince Amilius had acknowledged, that the adlast years Consuls, requesting it because of vantage was theirs, why did he make them his age and weakness: Servilius they re- forbear to use it: Thus thought the comtained with them, as their Assistant. The mon Souldier : and thus also thought the first thing that Amilius thought necessary, Consul Terentius; who was no less popular was, to hearten his Souldiers with good in the Camp, than he had been in the City. words; who out of their bad fucces hi- Expectation is alwayes tedious; and never therto, had gathered more cause of fear, more, than when the Event is of most imthan of courage. He willed them to con- portance. All men longed, both at Rome, fider not only now, their victories in time and in the Army, to be freed from the past against the Carthaginians, and other doubtful passions of Hope and Fear: theremore warlike Nations than were the Car- fore Terentius, who hastened their defire to thaginians, but even their own great num- effect, was likely to win more thanks, than

Thus while the Romans think themselves Commanders. Varro would fight: Emilius would so too, but said that it was not yet wait, till Hannibal, having eaten up his last 872

if the Carthaginians would take pains to might find the more difficulty in running come, he doubted not to fend them away in from him; and that his hunger might be fuch hafte, as they should not leave run- relieved with the more early harvest. But ning till they were out of Italy. But they whilft he was about to put this device inexcame not. Terentius therefore the next day ecution, the Romans prefied him fo hard. descended into the Plains; his Colleague that they even forced him to that, which he holding him, and befeeching him to ftay. most defired, even to fight a battel upon Nevertheles, he sate down close by Hanni- open Champain ground: wherein he was balwho, as an unbidden gueft, gave him but victorious. It was not uncommendable in a rude welcome and entertainment. The Livie, to speak the best of his own Ciri-Carthaginian Horse, and light armature, fell zens; and, where they did ill, to say, That. upon the Roman Vant-courrers; and pur without their own great folly, they had the whole Army in tumult, whilst it was yet done passing well. Further also he may be in march: but they were beaten off, not excused; as writing only by report. For without los, for that the Romans had among thus he faith, Hannibal de fuga in Galliam their Velites, fome troops weightily armed, whereas the Carthaginians had none. The day following, Emilius, who could not hand- he makes it no more than a matter of hearfomely withdraw the Army out of that le- fay; as perhaps was all the rest of this Revel ground, incamped upon the River Aufi- lation. As for the process it self, it is very due; sending a third part of his forces over incredible. For if Hannibal, coming out of the water, to lye upon the Eastern bank, Ganl, thorow the Marishes and Bogs of Hernwhere they entrenched themselves. He ne- ria, could find victuals enough, and all things ver was more unwilling to fight than at this needful unto his Army, the Summer forepresent; because the ground served wholly going: what should hinder him to do the for the advantage of his enemy; with whom like this year; especially seeing he had plaid he meant to deal, when occasion should the careful Husband in making a great hardraw him to more equal terms. Therefore vest; fince he had long been Master of the he stirred not out of his Trenches, but for open field; and besides, had gotten, by surtified himself, expecting when Hannibal prise, no small part of the Romans provishould dis-lodge, and remove towards Ge- lions? Sutable hereunto is all the rest. If ryon, Canna, or some other place, where his Hannibal had taken nothing but corn and ftore lay, for want of necessaries: whereof cattel, his Souldiers might perhaps have an Army forraging the Country, was not likely to carry about with it sufficient quangold with him into Italy: and had so well tity, for any long time.

lence, That Livie differeth much in his Re- | Souldiers, all Roman-like, and loaded his lation from Polybius; telling many strange followers with spoil: having left wheretales, of the milery into which Hannibal with to redeem as many of his own, as were had been driven; and of base courses that taken by the enemy; when the Romans he devised to take, if the Romans could have were not willing, as finding it not easie to do retained their patience a little longer. He the like. In this point therefore, we are to had (faith Livie) but ten dayes provision of attend the general agreement of Historians, meat. He had not mony to pay his fouldiers. who give it as a principal commendation They were an unruly Rabble, gathered out unto Hannibal, That he alwayes kept his of feveral Nations, so that he knew not how Army free from sedition, though it were muring, they fell to flat exclamations, first, in Manners, Religion, and almost in Naabout their Pay, and Provant, and after- ture, than they were in languages; and well get him as far as he could from the Romans, Gaul, was a fenfeles device. Hannibal, beinto the Southermost parts of Apulia; to the ling there with his whole Army, took to the ground was somewhat uneven. Thither end, that both his unfaithful Souldiers increased his stock, since he came into that Here it would not be passed over with si- Country, that he had armed his African to keep them in order; by that from mur composed of fundry Nations, no less different wards for very famine. Especially the spa- might he so do, having not only pronounniards were ready to forfake him, and run ced, That which of his men foever fought over to the Romans fide. Yea Hannibal him- bravely with an enemy, was thereby a Carfelf was once upon the point, to have ftoln thaginian; but folemnly protested and wore, away into Gaul with all his horse, and left his (besides other rewards) to make as many foot unto their milerable destinies. At length of them as should deserve and seek it, free Cifor lack of all other counfel, he refolved to tizens of Carthage. The running away into CHAP. III. that he made all haste to get him out of it. some answerable number, for defence of his And what should be now do there with his Trenches (which out of his paucity he was hore for could he be trufted, either there, less able to spare from the battel, than or ellewhere? yea, how could he defire to were the Romans) or that these ten thouor enewards betrayed all his Army, and re- fand, falling upon the Carthaginian Camp,

Now let us return back to the two Ar-River Aufidus. Varro was perfwaded, that which as yet was lively, and full of fuch courage, as promifed affured victory. When hold. ginan, to the intent, that either Hannibal rible many. As horrible a many as they are little pleasure in the Country and People, might be compelled to leave behind him linquified his miferable foot to the butchery of their enemies? This tale therefore Plusal the wealth therein, might thereby (as tuckomitteth, who in writing the life of commonly do fuch accidents) terrifie and Hamibal, takes in a manner all his directions diffract the enemies in the heat of fight. This from Livie. But of this and the like it is done, the two Confuls went over the water chough to fay, That all Historians love to with their Army to the leffer Camp, whence extol their own Country-men, and where a also they drew forth their men, and ranlos cannot be diffembled, nor the honour of ged them in order of battel: the ground the victory taken from the enemy, and given on the East part of the River, seeming perunto blind Fortune, there to lay all the blame haps more fit for marshalling of their Army. on tome strange mil-government of their Hannibal was glad of this, as he had great own forces: as if they might easily have cause; and without any delay, passed likewonall, but loft all through fuch folly, as wife over, fomewhat higher up the ftream, no Enemy can hope to finde in them another which ran from the South; leaving in his own Camp so many, as he thought would serve to defend it, and no more. To encourage mies, where they lye encamped on the his men; he bade them look about them, and view the ground well, upon which they it concerned him in honour to make good were to fight. They did so. And could you his word unto the people of Rome: and (faid he) pray for any greater fortune fince he had thus long waited in vain than to joyn battel with the Romans upon to get the confent of Paulus, now at length fuch a level ground, where the stronger in to the his own authority; and, without horse are sure to prevail? They all asany more disputing of the matter, to fight sented to him; and shewed by their countewhen his own day came. When therefore nances, that they were very glad of it. Well it was his turn to command; at the first then (said he further) ye are first of all to break of the day he began to pass the thank the gods, that have brought them River, without staying to bid his Col- hither; and then Us, that have trained them league good morrow. But Paulus came to along, and drawn them into necessity of him, and fought, as in former times, to playing for their lives, where they are fure to have diffiwaded him from putting the lofe them. As for the Romans, I was fain estate of his Country to a needless hazard. to encourage you against them, when Against whose words and substantial argu- ye met them first: but now ye may even ments, Terentius could alledge none other encourage your selves, by calling to mind than point of Honour. Hannibal had pre- that they are the men, whom ye have as fented them battel at their Trenches: should often beaten as seen. Of one thing only they endure this Bravado.? He had fent I will put you in mind: That whereas his his Numidians over the River but even the therto you fought for other respects, as, to day before, who fell upon the Romans that drive them before you out of Ganl; and to were fetching water to the leller Camp; win the open Country, and fields of Haly; and drave them shamefully to run within both of which ye have obtained: now are their defences, which also they made offer ye to fight for the Towns themselves, and to assail: Must this also be suffered? He all the riches within them; which this viwould not endure it: for it could not but drory shall make yours. Therefore play the weaken the spirit of the Roman Souldier; stout Souldiers: and ere many hours pass,

When he had faid this; his Brother Mago the oblimate resolution of his Companion, came to him, whom he had sent to view the he took all care, that what he faw must be countenance of the enemy. Hannibal asked done, might be done well. Ten thousand him, what news, and what work they were Roman foot he caused to be left behind, in likely to have with these Romans? Work the greater Camp opposite unto the Cartha- enough (answered Mago) for they are an hora (thus Hannibal replied) I tell thee, Brother, | niards, armed each after their own Counthat among them all, fearch them never fo try manner; their shields alike; but the diligently, thou shalt not find one man, Gauls using long broad swords, that were whose name is Mago. With that he fell a forcible in a down-right freak; the spalaughing, and so did all that stood about niards, short and well pointed blades, either him; which gladded the fouldiers, who to firike or thrust; the Gauls, naked from thought their General would not be so mer- their navel upwards, as consident in their ry, without great affurance. Whether it own fierceness: the spaniards, wearing were fo, that Hannibal, in the pride of his white Cassocks embroidered with Purple. victorics already gotten, valued one Mago This medley of two Nations, differing as above many thousand Romans; or whether well in habit and furniture, as in quality, he intimated, that the Romans were no less troubled with thinking upon Mago and his strange. The Gauls were strong of body and Companions than was Mago with beholding furious in giving charge, but foon wearied. their huge multitude; or whether he meant as accustomed to spend their violence at the only to correct the fad mood of his Bro- firstbrunt, which disposition all that come ther with a jest, and show himself merry un- of them have inherited to this day. The Shato the Souldiers: this his answer was more mards were less eager, but more wary; neimanly, than was the relation of his discove- ther ashamed to give ground, when they rer. But if Hannibal himself had been sent were over-pressed; nor asraid to return and forth by Mago, to view the Romans, he could renew the fight, upon any small encouragenot have returned with a more gallant re- ment. As the roughness of the one, and paport in his mouth, than that which Captain tience of the other, ferved mutually to re-Gam, before the battel of Agincourt, made duce each of them to a good and firm temunto our King Henry the fifth: faying, That per; fo the place which they held in this of the Frenchmen, there were enow to be kil- battel, added confidence joyntly unto them led; enow to be taken prisoners; and enow both. For they saw themselves well and to run away. Even fuch words as these, or strongly flanked with Carthaginians and fuch pleasant jests as this of Hannibal, are not other Africans; whose name was grown terwithout their moment; but ferve many rible in Spain, by their Conquests, and in times, when battel is an hand, to work up- | Gaul, by this their present war. Since thereon fuch passions, as must govern more of the fore it could not be feared, that any great bufiness: especially, where other needful calamity should fall upon them, whill the care is not wanting, without which they are | wings on either fide flood fast: thele Barbut vain boafts.

led himfelf, expressing no less perfection of knowing that the enemy could not press his military skill, than was greatness in his far upon them, without further ingaging spirit and undertakings. For to omit the himself than discretion would allow. Herecommodiousness of the place, into which he unto may be added that great advantage, had long before conceived the means to which the Carthaginian had in horse; by draw his enemies to battel; he marshalled which he was able, if the worst had happed, his Army in such convenient order, that all to make a good retrait. The effect of contrahands were brought to fight, where every ries is many times alike. Desperationbegetone might do best service. His Darters, teth courage; but no greater, nor so lively, and Slingers of the Baleares, he fent off be- as doth affured Confidence. Hannibal therefore him, to encounter with the Roman Ve- fore caused the Gauls and Spaniards to adlites. These were loose troops, answerable vance, leaving void the place whereinthey in a manner to those, which we call now by had stood, and into which they might fall a French name, Enfans Perdues; but when back, when they should be over-hardly prewe use our own terms, the forlorn-hope. The fed. So, casting them into the form of a groß of his Army following them, he or- | Crefcent, He made them as it were his Vantdered thus. His Africans, armed after the guard: the two points of this great half Roman manner, with the spoils which they Moon, that looked toward the empty space had gotten at Trebia, Thrassmene, or else- from which he had drawn it, being narrow where; and well trained in the use of those and thin, as serving only to guide it orderly weapons that were of more advantage, than back, when need should require; the fore those wherewith they had formerly served; most part of the Ring, swelling out toward made the two wings very deep in File. Between these he ranged his Gauls, and Spa- thickned against all impression. The circle

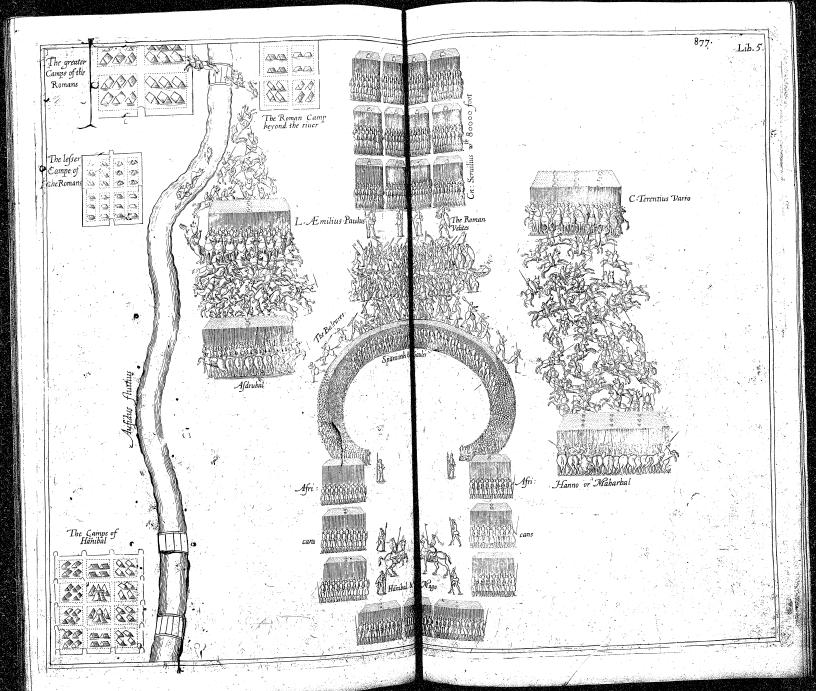

made a gallant shew, and terrible, because barians had no cause to shrink, or forbear to In this great day, the Carthaginian excel- | imploy the uttermost of their hardines, as fladowed the Africans, who stood behind the South. it though fuch figures, cut in brass, as I have feen of this Battel, present it more narrow; with little reason, as shall anon appear: as Slingers of the Baleares; Astrubal brake upalso in the same figures it is omitted, That on the Consul Paulus, and was roughly enany Companies of Africans, or others, were any companies, to second the Gauls and on horse-back, used in those times, wheeling spaniards, when they were driven to retrait; about Alman-like; but each giving on in a though it be manifelt, that Hannibal in per- right line, Pouldron to Pouldron, as having fon flood between the last ranks of his long the River on the one hand, and the shoulder Battalions, and in the head of his Rear, of the foot on the other hand; fo that there doubtlefs well accompanied with the choice was no way left, but to pierce and break of his own Nation. Between the left Batta- thorow. Wherefore they not only used their lion and the River Aufidus, were the Gauls Lances and Swords; but rushing violently and Spanish horse, under the command of amongst the Enemies, grasped one another: Assumble: On the right wing, toward the and so their horses running from under them, wide Plains, was Hanno (Livie faith Mahar | fell many to the ground; where flatting up hall with the Numidian light-horse. Hanni- again, they began to deal blows like foothalhimself, with his brother Mago, had the men. In conclusion, the Roman horse were leading of the Rear. The whole fum of over-born, and driven by plain force to a Hamibals Army in the field this day, was staggering recoil. This the Consul Paulus herfe.

The Roman Army was marshalled in the usual form: but somewhat more narrow, and deep than was accustomed; perhaps, because this had been found convenient against the Carthaginians, in the former war. It was indeed no bad way of refistance against Elephants, to make the Ranks thick and flort, but the Files long; as also to strengthen well the Rear, that it might stand fast the disordered troups might re-ally themfelves. Thus much it feems, that Terentius had learned of some old Souldiers; and therefore he now ordered his Battels accorhereof feemeth to have been fo great, that it their faces Northward, the Romans toward

of the History of the World.

After some light skirmish, between the Roman Velites, and Hannibal his Darters and countred: not after the manner of service tenthousand horse, and forty thousand foot, could not remedy. For Asarbal, with his his enemies having two to one against him in boisterous Gauls and Spaniards, was not to foot; and He, five to three against them in be refisted by these Roman Gentlemen, unequal both in number, and in horfmanthip. When the battels came to joyning, the Roman Legionaries found work enough, and fomewhat more than enough, to break that great Crefcent, upon which they first fell: To strongly for the while, did the Gauls and spanish foot make relistance. Wherefore the two points of their battel drew towards the midit; by whose aid, these opposites were forced to difband, and fly back to compacted as a wall, under shelter whereof their first place. This they did in great haste and fear : and were with no less haste, and folly purfued. Upon the Africans that ftood behind them, they needed not to fall foul; both for that there was void room dingly, as meaning to flew more skill, than enough; and forasmuch as the Rear, or wasin his understanding. But the Carthagi Horns of this Moon, pointed into the fafe mians had here no Elephants with them in retrait, where Hannibal with his Carthagithe field: their advantage was in Horfe; nians was ready to re-enforce them, when against which, this manner of imbattailing time should require. In this halty retrait, was very unprofitable, forafimuch as their or flight of the Ganls and Spaniards, it hapcharge is better fultained in front, than upon ned, as was necessary, that they who had a long flank. As for Emilius, it was not his stood in the limb or utter compass of the half day of command: He was but an Affiftant; Moon, made the innermost or concave surand in fuch cases it happens often, that wise face thereof (disordered and broken though men yield for very weariness unto the more it were) when it was forced to turn the incontentions. Upon the right hand, and toward the River, were the Roman horfe-men, as yet, untouched, only turning round, and under the Conful Paulus: On the left wing, recoyling very little. So the Romans in purwas C. Terentius Varrothe other Conful, with fuing them, were inclosed in an half circle; the reft of the horfe, which were of the La- which they should not have needed greatly tines, and other affociates: Cn. Servillus the to regard, (for that the fides of it were former years Conful, had the leading of the exceeding thin and broken; and the bothers and the bothers are the second than the second the second the second than the second the second than th battel. The Sun was newly rifen, and offended neither part; the Carthaginian: having routed, and feeming unable to make refiftance) had all the enemies foot been cast company alighted, thinking that the Conful into this one great body, that was in a man- had given order fo to do: as in many batner diffolved. But whilft the Legions, follow- tels, the Roman men at arms had left their ing their supposed victory, rushed on upon horses, to help their foot in diffres. When those that stood before them, and thereby Hannibal (for he was near at hand) perceivunwittingly engaged themselves deeply ed this, and understood that the Conful had within the principal strength of the Enemies, willed his horse-men to dismount; He was within the principal fitting and beat and pleasantly fail, the work of them in on both hands; the two very glad of it, and pleasantly fail, the different pleasantly fail, the would have delivered them unto me, far, that getting beyond the Rear of them, bound hand and foot: meaning that he had they enclosed them, in a manner, behind: them now almost as safe, as if they were so and forward they could not pass far, with- bound. All this while C. Terentius Varro, with out removing Hannibal and Mago; which the horse of his associates, in the lest wing, made that way the least easie. Hereby it is was marvellously troubled by Hanno(or Maapparent, That the great Crescent, before harbal) and the Numidians: who beating fpoken of, was of such extent, as covered the up and down about that great fandy Plain. Africans, who lay behind it undifcerned, un- raifed a foul dust; which a strong South till now. For it is agreed, that the Romans wind, blowing there accustomarily, drave were thus empaled unawares; and that they into the eyes and mouths of the Romans. behaved themselves, as men that thought These, using their advantage both of number upon no other work, than what was found and of lightness, wearied the Consul and his them by the Gauls. Neither is it credible, followers exceedingly: neither giving, nor that they would have been fo mad, as to fuftaining any charge, but continually run head-long, with the whole bulk of their making offers, and wheeling about. Yet at Army, into the throat of flaughter; had the first they seemed to promise him an hapthey feen those weapons bent against them py day of it. For when the battails were at the first, which when they did fee, they even ready to joyn; five hundred of these had little hope to escape. Much might be Numidians came pricking away from their imputed to their heat of fight, and rashness fellows, with their shields cast behind their of inferiour Captains: but fince the Con- backs, (as was the manner of those which ful Paulus, a man so expert in war, being | yielded) and throwing down their arms. vanquished in horse, had put himself among rendred themselves. This was good luck to the Legions; it cannot be supposed, that begin withall, if there had been good meanhe and they did wilfully thus engage them- ing. Varro had not leifure to examine them; felves. Afdrubal, having broken the but caused them, unweaponed as they were, troups of Roman horse, that were led by to get them behind the Army, where he the Conful Paulus, followed upon them bade them rest quietly till all was done. along the River side, beating down and These crasty adventurers did as he bade killing, as many as he could, (which were them, for a while; till they found opporalmost all of them) without regard of tak- tunity to put in execution the purpole, for ing prisoners. The Consul himself was ci- which they had thus yielded. Under their ther driven upon his own Legions, or wil- Jackets they had short swords and poniards; lingly did cast himself among them; as besides which, they found other scattered hoping by them to make good the day, not- weapons about the field of such as were lain, withstanding the defeat of his horse. But he and therewithal slew upon the hindmost of failed of this his expectation. Nevertheless the Romans, whilst all eyes and thoughts he cheared up his men as well as he could, were bent another way: fo that they did both with comfortable words, and with great mischief, and raised yet a greater terthe example of his own front behaviour: ror. Thus Hannibal, in a plain level ground, beating down and killing many of the found means to lay an ambush at the back of enemies with his own hand. The like did his enemies. The last blow, that ended all Hannibal among his Carthaginians, in the fight and refistance, was given by the same fame part of the battel; and with better fue- hand which gave the first. Afdrubal (having cels. For the Consul received a blow from in short space broken the Roman troups of a fling, that did him great hurt : and though horfe, and cut in pieces all, fave the Coma troup of Roman Gentlemen, riding about pany of Emilius that rushed into the gross of him, did their best to save him from further his foot, and a very few besides, that recoverharm; yet was he so hardly laid at, that ed some narrow passage, between the River he was compelled, by wounds and weak- and their own Battalions) did not flayto ness, to for fake his horse. Hereupon all his charge upon the face of the Legions, but fell hack behind the Rear of his own, and that he lived and died mindful of his wholegetching about, came up to the Numidians: Some counsel. These words (peradventure) with whom he joyned, and gave upon Te- or some to like purpose, the Consul uttered behindit, on the other fide: fo did it prog- time he put himself in the head of his Leginosticate a dismal storm unto those upon ons. For I doubt not, but Hannibal knew whomit was ready now to fall. Wherefore what he faid a good while before this; Terentius his followers, having wearied when he thought the Conful and his troup, nosultain; thought it the best way, to avoid inclosed indeed as within a sack; whereof the danger by present flight. The Consul the African Battalions made the fides; the was no less wife than they, in apprehending Spaniards, Gauls, and Hannibal with his Carthe greatness of his own peril; nor more thaginians, the bottom; and Afdrubal with desperate, in striving to work impossibili- his horse, closed up the mouth: in which ties: it being impossible, when so many part, they first of all were shuffled together. fhrank from him, to fustain the impression and began the Rout, wherein all the rest alone, which he could not have indured followed. Emilius therefore, who could with their affiftance. Now he found that not fit his horse, whilst the battel yet lasted, it was one thing to talk of Hannibal at Rome; and whilft the spaces were somewhat open, and another, to incounter him. But of this, by which he might have withdrawn himor of ought elfe, excepting hafty flight, his felf; was now (had he never fo well been fider. Close at the heels of him and his flying close a throng of his own miserable (ollointo judgement by the People, either as an ac- and leave him. cufer of his Colleague, or as guilty himself of In this terrible overthrow died all the Roas fall as well they could, and telling Fabius, of them brake forth, and joyning with such

to Lentulus, either when against his will he This fearful Cloud, as it shewed at the was drawn to that battel, or when he befirst appearance what weather it had left held the first defeat of his horse; at what themselves much in doing little, and seeing in little better case than if they had been more work toward, than they could hope bound. The whole Gross of the Romans, was present leisure would not serve him to con- mounted) unable to fly, having in his way so troups, followed the light Numidians, appointed by Afdrubal unto the purfuit, as fit-apace in that great Carnage. It fufficeth untelt for that service. Aschrubal himself, with to his honour, That in the Battel he fought the Gauls and Spanish horse, compassing no less valiantly, than he had warily before, about, fell upon the backs of the Romans; both abstained himself, and disswaded his that were ere this hardly diffressed, and in sellow-Consul, from fighting at all. If, when amanner surrounded on all parts else: He the day was utterly lost, it had lien in his brake them eafily; who before made ill re- power to fave his own life unto the good of fiftance, being inclosed, and laid at on every his Country, never more needing it: I should fide, not knowing which way to turn. Here think, that he either too much discheemed began a pittiful flaughter: the vanquished himself; or being too faintly minded, was multitude thronging up and down, they weary of the World, and his unthankful knew not whither or which way, whilst Citizens. But if such a resolution were every one fought to avoid those enemies, praise-worthy in Amilius, as proceeding whom he faw nearest. Some of the Roman out of Roman valour; then was the English Gentlemen that were about Amilius, got vertue of the Lord John Talbot, Viscount up to horfe, and faved themselves: which | Lifle, son to that famous Earl of shrewsbury, though it is hardly understood how they who died in the Battel of Chastillon, more could do; yet I will rather believe it, than highly to be honoured. For Æmilius was Suppose that Livie so reporteth, to grace old, grievously, if not mortally, wounded, thereby his Hiftory with this following tale. and accomptable for the overthrow receiv-Cn. Cornelius Lentulus, galloping along by a ed: Talbot was in the flowre of his youth, Place where he faw the Conful fitting all bloodi- unhurt, cafily able to have escaped, and not ed won a stone, intreated him to rise and save answerable for that dayes misfortune, when bimself; offering him his allistance and horse. he refused to forsake his Father; who fore-But Paulus refused it; willing Lentulus to seeing the loss of the battel, and not meaning Shift for himfelf, and not to lofe time: faying, to stain his actions past by flying in his old That it was not his purpose to be brought again age, exhorted this his noble fon to be gone

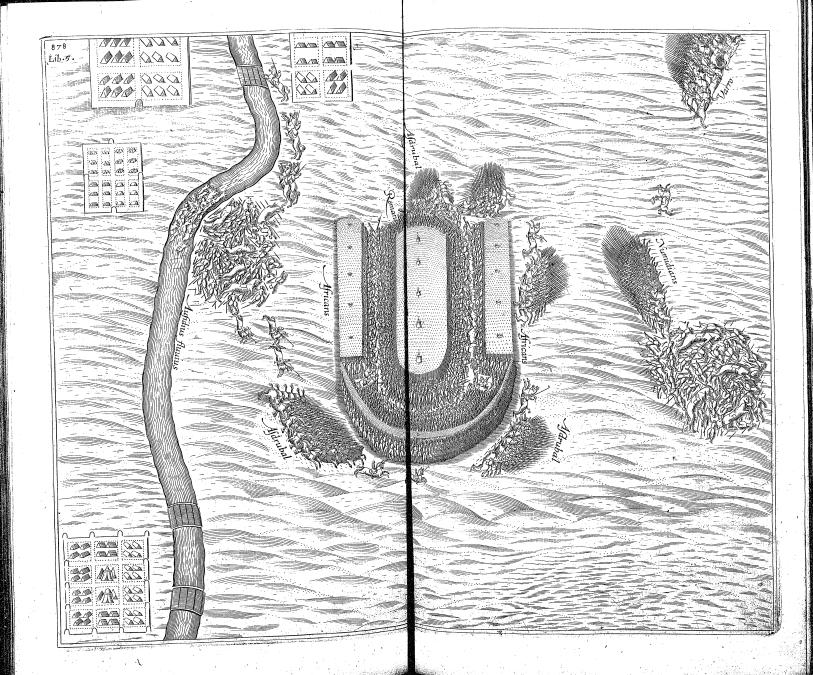

that dayes loss. Further, he willed Lentulus man foot, fave two or three thousand, who to commend him to the Senate, and in particu- (as Livie faith) escaped into the lesser Camplarto Fabius: willing them to fortifie Rome, whence the same night, about six hundred of those in the greater Camp, as were willing | Confuls: among whom was Ch. Servilius. to try their fortune, conveyed themselves the last years Consul, and Minutius, late away ere morning, about four thouland fcot, Master of the horse. The number of prisoand two hundred horfe, partly in whole ners, taken in this battel, Livie makeyno troops, partly dispersed into Cannussum: the greater than three thousand foot, and three next day the Roman Camps, both less and hundred horse: too few to have defended greater, were yielded unto Hannibal by those for the space of one half hour, both the Rothat remained in them. Polybius hath no man Camps, which yet the same Livie saith. mention of this escape: only he reports, that to have been over-cowardly yielded up. We the ten thousand, whom Emilius had left on may therefore do better, to give credit unto the West side of Aussidus (as was snewed be- one of the prisoners, whom the same History fore) to fet upon the Camp of Hannibal, did rian shortly after introduceth, speaking in as they were appointed; but ere they could the Senate, and faying, That they were no effect their defire, which they had well-near less than eight thousand. It may therefore be, done, the battel was loft: and Hannibal, that these three thousand were only such as coming over the water to them, drave them the Enemy spared, when the sury of Execuinto their own Camp; which they quickly tion was past: but to these must be added yielded, having loft two thousand of their number. Like enough it is, that at the first the greater Camp, when their company were fight of Hannibal, coming upon them with cither flain or fled. So the reckoning falls his victorious Army, a greater number of out right: which the Romans, especially the these did flye, and thereby escaped, whilst their fellows, making defence in vain, retired into their Camp, and held the enemy busied. For about two Legions they were (perhaps not half full, but made up by addition of others, whose fault or fortune was like) that having ferved at Canna, were afterwards extremely difgraced by the State of Rome, for that they had abandoned their companions fighting. Of the Roman horse what numbers escaped, it is uncertain: but very few they were that faved themselves in the first charge, by getting behind the River; and was therefore told, That he knew have to and Terentius the Conful recovered Venusia, get, not how to use a victory. with threefcore and ten at the most in his company. That he was so ill attended, it is no marvel: for Venusia lay many miles off to the Southward; so that his nearest way thither, had been thorow the midst of Hannibals Army, if the passage had been open-Therefore it must needs be, that when once he got out of fight, he turned up some by- Fabius the Roman, and Philinus the Carthaway; so disappointing the Numidians that gian; who, regarding more the pleasure hunted contre. Of fuch as could not hold of them unto whose honour they consepace with the Conful, but took other wayes, crated their travels, than the truth of and were scattered over the fields; two things, and information of posterity, magnithouland, or thereabout, were gathered up fied indifferently, whether good or bad, all by the Numrdians, and made prisoners: the actions and proceedings, the one of his Carrest were slain, all save three hundred, who thaginians, the other of his Roman Quirites, differfed themselves in flight, as chance and Fathers conscript. No man of sound led them, and got into fundry Towns. There judgment will condemn this liberty of cendied in this great Battel of Canna, befides fure, which Polybius hath used. For, to recom-L. Emilius Paulus the Conful, two of the pence his juniority (fuch as it was) he pro-Roman Quartors or Treasurers, and one and duceth substantial arguments, to justifichis twenty Colonels or Tribunes of the Soul- own Relation; and confuteth the vanity of diers, fourfcore Senators, or fuch as had born those former authors, out of their own wil office, out of which they were to be chosen into the Senate. Many of these were of special which pains is to be surface. cial mark, as having been #diles, Prators or would not have taken, had he been bornin about five thousand more, who yielded in Consul Varro, had before cast up (as we say) without their Host; nothing so chargeable, as now they find it. On the fide of Hannibal there died fome four thousand Gauls, fifteen hundred Spaniards and Africans, and two hundred Horse, or thereabouts: a loss not sensible, in the joy of so great a victory; which if he had purfued, as Maharbal advised him, and forthwith marched away towards Rome; it is little doubted but that the war had prefently been at an end Buthe believed not fo far in his own prosperity;

ø. IX.

Of things following the Battel at Canna.

DOT without good cause doth Polybius reprehend those two Historians, either of these two Cities, but have spared unto him; not only in regard of their griefome part of his diligence, and been content- vous losses sustained abroad in the fields, ed to have all men think better and more which the Romans themselves, who could not honourably than he deserved, of his own hinder him from spoiling the Country, espe-Country. The like disease it is to be feared, cially the poorer fort of them did hardly inthat we shall hereafter find in others; and dure; but in a loving respect unto that great shall have some cause to wish, that either courtesie (as it seemed) which he used unto they were somewhat less Roman, or else, that such of them as became his prisoners. For as some works of their opposite Writers were at other times, so now after this great victoextant, that so we might at least hear both ry at Canna, he had lovingly dismissed as fides speak: being henceforth destitute of many of the Italian Confederates of Rome, Polybius his help, that was a man indifferent. as fell into his hands, rebuking them gently But fince this cannot be, we must be some- for being so obstinate against him that had times bold, to observe the coherence of sought to deliver them from bondage. Neithings; and believe so much only to be true, ther spared he to win their love by gifts, as dependeth upon good reason, or (at least) pretending to admire their valour; but seekfair probability. This attentive circumfpe- ing indeed, by all wayes and means, to make ction is needful at the present : such is the them his, whilst all other motives were conrepugnancy, or forgetfulness, which we current. At this time also he began to deal find in the best narration of things following kindly (though against his nature) with the the Battel of Canna. For it is faid, that four Roman prisoners; telling them, that he bore thousand foot and horse gathered toge- no mortal hatred unto their Estate; but bether about the Conful Terentius at Venulia; ing provoked by injuries, fought to right that others to the number of ten thousand himself and his Country; and fought with got into Cannussum, chusing for their Cap- them, to try which of these two Ciries Rome tains, young P. Scipio, and Ap. Claudius; yet or Carthage, should bear soveraign Rule, not, that the Conful Terentius Varro, joyning his which of them should be destroyed. So he company unto those of scipio at Cannusum, gave them leave to chuse ten of their numwrote unto the Senate, that he had now ber, that should be sent home to treat with well-near ten thousand men about him; that the Fathers about their ransome: and togethese letters of the Consul were brought to ther with these he sent Carthalo a Noble Rome, when the Senate was newly rifen, man of Carthage, and General of his Horfe to that had been taking order for pacifying feel the disposition of the Senate, whether it those tumults in the City, which grew upon were bowed as yet by so much adversity, the first bruit of the overthrow; and yet, and could stoop unto desire of peace. But that Embassadours from Capua (after some with the Romans these Arts prevailed not, confultation, whether it were meet to fend as shall be shewed in due place. The people any, or without further circumstance, to side of Italy, all, or most of them, save the Rowith Hannibal) were fent unto Terentius, and | man Colonies, or the Latines, were not only found him at Venusia, a pretty while before weary of their losses past, but entertained he wrote those letters, which overtook (in a deceivable hope, of changing their old a manner) at Rome the first news of the Society for a better. Wherefore not only overthrow. Among such incoherences, I the Samnites, Lucans, Brutians, and Apuhold it the best way, to omit so much as lians, ancient enemies of Rome, and not unhath not some particular connexion with til the former Generation utterly subdued, matter enfuing: mutual dependency in began to re-assume their wonted spirits: but things of this nature, being no small argu- the Campans, a Nation of all in Italy most ment of truth.

Camp, and truffed up the spoils, forthwith he | ly conjoyned, as were any save the Latines, dif-lodged, and marched away into samni- changed on a fudden their love into hatred, um; finding a disposition in the Hirpines, and without any other cause found, than change many other people thereabout, to forfake of fortune. the Roman party, and make alliance with Carthage. The first Town that opened the ful Province of Italy, if not (as some then gates unto him, was Coffa, where he laid up thought) of all the Earth: and the City of his baggage: and leaving his Brother Mago Capua, answerable unto the Country, whereto take in other places, he hasted into Cam- of it was Head; so great, fair, and wealthy, pania. The general affection of the multi- that it feemed no less convenient a feat of the bound unto the State of Rome, and by When Hannibal had facked the Roman many mutual affinities therewith as straight-

Campania is the most goodly and fruittude, in all the Cities of Italy, was inclinable | Empire, than was either Rame or Carthage.

quisite unto soveraign command. The Cam- a Roman: but, that the danger of forsaking pans were luxurious, idle, and proud: and of the Roman party was not now the greavaluing themselves like Jayes by their feateft: for that the people were violently bent thers despited the unfortunate vertue of the to murder all the Senate, and after to joyn Romans their Patrons and Benefactors. Yet themselves with Hannibal, who should counwere there fome of the principal among tenance the fact, and save them harmles. them, as in other Cities, that bore especial This he spake, as a man well known to be regard unto the Majesty of Rome, and could beloved himself by the people, and prive not indure to hear of Innovation. But the unto their defigns. Having throughly terri-Flebeian faction had lately so prevailed with- fied the Senate, by laying open the danger in Capua, that all was governed by the pleafure of the Multitude; which wholly followed the direction of Pacuvius Calavius an ambitious Noble-man, whose credit grew, to his hands; offering his oath, or any other and was up held by furthering all popular defires; whereof the conjunction with Hannibal was not the leaft. Some of the Capuans had offered their City to the Carthaginians shortly after the battel of Thrasymene: whereupon chiefly it was, that Hannibal made his journey into Campania: the Dictator Fabius waiting upon him. At that time, either the nearness of the Roman Army, or some other fear of the Capuans, hindred them from surprised by his policy, and all fast, ready to breaking into actual rebellion. They had abide what fentence they would lay upon indeed no leifure to treat about any article them. Only thus much he advised them, as of new Confederacy: or, had leifure ferved, a thing which necessity required, That they yet were the multitude (whose inconstant should chuse a new Senate, before they salove Hannibal had won from the Romans, tisfied their anger upon the old. So rehearing by gentle ulage, and free difiniffing of fome unto them the names of one or two Senaprisoners in good account among them) un- tors; he asked what their judgement was able to hold any fuch negotiation, without of those. All cryed out, That they were woradvice of the Senate, which mainly impug- thy of death. Chuse then (said he) first of ned it. So they that had promised to yield all some new ones into their places. Hereat up their Town to Hannibal, and meet him the multitude, unprovided for such an elethat should assure him of all faithful mean-other adventured to name whom he thought plexity: as having failed to let in this their liked by the whole Affembly; either for

880

But of all qualities, Bravery is the least re- Lady, and given his Daughter in marriage to hapging over them : He promised nevertheless to deliver them all, and to set things in quiet, if they would freely put themselves inaffurance that they should demand for his faithful meaning. They all agreed. Then shutting up the Court, and placing a guard of his own followers about it, that none might enter, nor issue forth, without his leave; he called the people to affembly: and fpeaking as much ill of the Senate as he knew they would be glad to hear, he told them, that these wicked Governours were on the way, with some of their Nobility ction, was filent, until at last some one or ing, were driven to fit still in a great per- fit. The men so nominated, were utterly disnew friend, yet sufficiently discovered them- some known fault, baseness and insufficiency; felves, to draw upon them the hatred of the or else even because they were unknown, Romans. In this case were no small number and therefore held unworthy. This difficulof the Citizens; who thereupon grew the ty in the new Election appearing more and more incensed against their Senate, on whom more, whilst more were to be chosen; (the they cast all the blame, easily pardoning sittest man to be substituted, having been their own cowardize. The people holding named among the first, and not thought sit for tender a regard of liberty, that even the lawful government of Magistrates grieved them, with an imaginary oppression; had nate might for this time be spared, in hope now good cause to fear left the Senators of amends hereafter; which (doubtles) would become their Lords indeed, and by they would make, having thus obtained help of the Romans bring them under a pardon of all offences past. Henceforth, not more straight subjection, than ever they had nonly the people, as in former times, hoendured. This fear being ready to break in- noured Pacuvius, and efteemed him their to some outrage, Pacuvius made use of, to Patron; but the Senators also were governferve his own ambition. He discoursed unto ed by him, to whom they acknowledged the Senate, as they fate in Counsel, about themselves indebted, for faving all their those motions troubling the City: and said, Dives Neither did the Senate fail after this by That he himself had both married a Roman all obsequiousness, to court the people, giving the reines unto their lawless Will, who else tude; whom he put in mind of Pyrrhus and being thus of one mind; only fear of the Ro- old friends for new acquaintance. This did pans, did then serve the Romans in the Isle of it, and to cut it in pieces, that by such a vailed so far, that Embassadors were sent unto amends unto the Romans, whom they had Terentino the Conful, to fee his present case, for sken. and what it could minister of Hope or were likely to cast them down. All the City the Tarentines, wishing them not to change mans kept them from opening their gates to he, when they were fending Embassadours Hannibal. But after the Battel at Canna, this unto Hannibal; and this also did he, when impediment was removed; and few there the new alliance was concluded; but most were that would open their mouths to speak earnestly, when a Carthaginian Garrison was against the rebellion. Yet forasmuch as three entring the Town: at which time he gave hundred principal Gentlemen of the Cam- advice, either to keep it out, or to fall upon Sicil: the Parents and Kinfmen of these pre- notable piece of service, they might make

Advertisement hereof was given to Han-Fear. These, wheresoever they found him, nibal: who lying about Naples not far off. found him weakly attended, and as weak in fent for Magins to come speak with him in fpirit, as in followers. Yet they offered him the Camp. This Magius refused : alledging, formally the service of their State; and de- that he was, by the late concluded Articles, fired to know what he would command free from subjection unto any Carthaeinian; them. But he most basely lamented unto and therefore would not come. Hannibal them the greatness of the Roman misfortune: thereupon hasted himself towards Capua; faying. That all was loft; and that the cam- forbearing to attempt any further upon pans must now not help the Romans, who had Naples, which he thought to have taken in his nothing left wherewith to help themselves, way by Scalado, but found the walls too high, but make war in their defence against the and was not well provided to lay siege unto Carthaginass, as the Romans had fometimes it. At Capua he was entertained with great done for the Campans against the Samnites. solemnity and pomp: all the people isluing Hereunto he is faid to have added a foolish forth of the Town, to behold the great Invective against Hannibal and his Cartha- Commander, which had won so many noble ginians: telling, how he had taught them victories. Having taken his pleasure in the to make bridges of flaughtered carkaffes, fight of that goodly City, and paffed over his and to feed upon mans flesh, with such first entertainments, he came into their Seother stuff, as only bewrayed his own fear. nate, where he commended their resolution, As for the Campans themselves, he put in shaking off the Roman yoke; promising, them in mind of their present strength: that ere long all Italy and Rome it self, should they having thirty thousand foot, and four be driven to acknowledge Capua as chief, thouland horse; with money, and all pro- and receive Law from thence. As for Decius visions, in abundance. Thus he dismissed Magins, who openly took part with the Rothem prouder than they came, and filled mans their enemies; he prayed them, that them with conceit of getting a great Lord- they would not think him a Campan, but a thip; whereas before they were fome- Traitor to the State, and use him accordingwhat timorous in adventuring to feek ly, giving fentence out of hand upon him, as their own liberty. Having reported this he deferved. This was granted : and Magine at Capua; the same Embassadours were dif- delivered unto Hannibal; who unwilling to patched away to Hannibal, with whom they offend the Capuans, at his first coming, by eafily made alliance, upon these conditi- putting so great a man to death, yet fearing ons; that the Campans should be absolute- that they might sue for his liberty, if he kept ly free, and ruled by their own Laws; him alive, thought it best to fend him away That no Citizens of theirs should be subject to Carthage. Thus Hannibal settled his friendunto any Carthaginian Magistrate, in what ship with the Campanes : among whom, oncase soever, whether in War or Peace; and ly th's Decius Magius had openly dared to that Hannibal should deliver unto the Cam- speak against him; being affisted by Perolla Pans three hundred Roman prisoners, such the Son of Pacuvius. This Parolla would as themselves would chuse, whom they have murdered Hannibal, whilst he was might exchange for their Gentlemen which at supper, the first night of his coming, had not his Fathers authority kept him from at-Against all this Negotiation, Decius Ma- tempting any such attempt. All the Town gim, an honourable Citizen, opposed him- (besides) were so earnest in the love of their telfearnestly; using, in vain, many perswa-fions, to the wilful and head-strong Multi-dered all the Romans, upon whom at the all one) to have mothered them to death fcue of Hieron, in an hot Bath.

which depended on this, as their Mother-take foveraign charge of the Weal-publick, City. Nola, Nuceria, Naples, Cassline, and Acer- with absolute power, as necessity required. re, were the Ciries next adjoyning, that It must needs seem strange, that all forts of frood out for the Romans. Against these people went forth to meet the Consul, and Hanibal went, thinking to find them weak- bid him welcome home, giving him thanks ly manned; as they were indeed, though for that he had not depaired of the Weal-pub-froutly defended. to put Garrifons into all their walled less) provided wisely for upholding the ge-Towns; but were fain to leave all places, neral reputation. If this coming into the except a few of the most suspected, unto the City had renewed the lamentations and outfaith and courage of the inhabitants. Rome cries of the people: what else would have it self was in extream fear of Hannibals followed, than a contempt of their wretchcoming, at the first report of the overthrow edness, among those that were subject unto at Canna: and the grief of that loss was so their Dominion? Now in finding this ocgeneral, and immoderate, that it much cation (though indeed he gave it not) of diffurbed the provision against apparent bestowing upon him their welcome, and danger. It was hard to judge, whether the thanks; they noised abroad a fame, which loss already received, or the fear of destru- came perhaps unto the ears of Hannibal, of ction prefently threatning, were the more their Magnanimity and Confidence: that terrible. All the Senators found work might feem grounded on their remaining enough, to stint the noise and lamentable strength. This therfore was wifely done. But which was in readiness to set upon Lily- that whosoever ought money and could baum, and the rest of the Roman Pro- not pay it, or had committed any capital present they could lay hand ; or (which is vince, if the Prætor stirred aside to the re-

In the midst of these extremities, it was The fame course of fortune, with those thought needful to call home Terentise the of Capua, ran some other Towns thereabouts Conful, that he might name a Dictator, to lick.But this was done (as may feem) by or-The Romans at this time were not in case der from the Senate: which therein (doubtbewailings, whereof the firects were full, whereas Livie would have us think, that it to the bewailings. Courses were fent forth, to bring affured was done generoully, and out of great fairt, tidings how all werths hereof when Letters let me be pardoned, if I believe him not. It from the Confu Varro had throughly in- was done fearfully, and to cover their grief: formed them, they were fo amazed, that had they dared to flew their indignation, they ran into barbarous superstition; and they would have struck off his head; as in taking direction (as was faid) from their fa- few years after, Cn. Fulvius had his life tal books, buried alive two men and women, brought into question, and was banished by Gaules and Greeks, in their Oxe-market. If them, being less blame-worthy, for a smaller the books of sibyl gave them fuch instruction offence. M. Junius, by appointment of the ons; we may juftly think that sibyl her felf Senate, was nominated Dictator; and T.Sem-Liniban was inftructed by the Divel. Yet is it not im- pronius, Mafter of the horse. These fell preprobable, that extremity of fear caused fently to mustering of Souidiers, of whom them to hearken to wicked South fayers; they raifed four new Legions, and one thouwhose detestable counsels they afterwards fand horse: though with much difficulty; for their own honour (as affnamed of fuch as being fain to take up fonce that were very Authors) imputed to the books of sibyl. An boyes. These four Legions are essewhere Embassadour was sent to Delphi, to consult forgotten in account of the forces levied by with the oracle of Apollo; and enquire with this Dictator; and two Legions only fet what prayers and supplications they might down, that had been enrolled in the beginpacifie the gods, and obtain an end of these ning of the year for custody of the City. calamities. This is enough to discover the So it may be, that these two Legions being Links greatness of their fear; though not ferving drawn into the field; four new ones of to give remedy. At that time came Letters Pretextati, or striplings were left in their out of sicil, from the Prætor of Ocincilius; places. In such raw Souldiers, and so few, whom the Senate had appointed, it he found little confidence was to be reposed; for it meet, to pals over into Africk. In these which reason they increased their number, were contained news of one Carthaginian by adding unto them eight thousand flurdy flect that walted the kingdome of Hieron llaves, that were put in hope of liberty, if their good friend and confederate; and of they should deserve it by manfull service. another fleet, riding among the Isles Agateis, This not sufficing, the Dictator proclaimed, his debt or punishment, if he would ferve them at the price, whereat he thought in the War. To arm these Companies, they them current. But if we should suppose, were fain to take down out of their Tem- that by trading with Hannibal, a better ples and Porches, the spoils of their enemies bargain for slaves might have been made. that had been there fet up: among which, than was by the State at home, in dealing were 6000. Armours of the Gaules, that with private men; yet must we withal conhad been carried in the Triumph of C. Fla- | fider, that these private men did only lend War. To fuch mockery had God brought wealth, and were afterwards contented to the pride of the Romans, as a due reward of forbear the price of them (when by order of their insolent oppressions, that they were the Senate they were enfranchised) unfain to iffue forth of their own gates, in the till the war should be ended. If Hannihabit of strangers, when Hannibal was ready bal would have given such long day of to encounter them with his Africans, armed payment, it is likely that the Romans Roman-like.

with the Agents of the prisoners taken at rather to say, We will not give, than, We Canna, came to Rome. Carthalo was not ad- cannot. The like aufterity, upon the fame mitted into the City, but commanded, whilft reason, but contrary pretence, was used he was on the way to be gone ere night out toward the Souldiers that escaped from of the Roman Territory. To the messengers that great battel. These were charged of the captives audience was given by the for having fled: as the prifoners were, for Senate. They made earnest Petition to be not flying, when they might have done ransomed at the publick charge; not only so. True it is, that in such cases (if ever) the tears&amentation of their poor kinsfolk | that which they call Raggione del Stato, may but the great need, wherein the City then | serve for an excuse: when the Commonflood, of able Souldiers, commending their wealth, being driven to a milerable exifuit; which yet they obtained not. Besides gent, is sain to help it self, by doing in-the general custom of the Romans (held by Juries to private men. And so dealt the long Tradition, and strengthened by a Romans now: condemning all those that notable Precedent, when Regulus was overhad served at Canna, to be transported thrown, and taken prisoner in the former into sicil; and there to serve, not as War) not to be too tender of fuch as had others did, untill they had fulfilled twenyielded to the enemy; much was alleaged ty years in the Wars, or else were fifty against these who now craved ransome : but | years of age, but untill this War should selves, as others did. It sufficed not unto censure was afterwards laid upon others, they had been severe; when as indeed they apparent than the fault. were fuitable to the present fortune, poor offence, should forthwith be discharged of ransome: and likely it is, that he offered minius, a little before the beginning of this these slaves for a while unto the Common-Liville 26.

would have been his Chapmen: but, feeing About the same time it was that Carthalo he dealt only for ready money, they chose the special point was, that they were wil- be ended, how long soever it lasted, and fully lost, fince they might have faved them- that without reward. The same thrifty these poor men to say that their offence was for their mis-behaviour: but never upon no greater than the Confuls; they were any man of quality, fave only (a good told that this was great prefumption. The while after this, at better leifure) uptruth was, the State wanted money; and on Cecilius Metellus, and a few other haretherefore could not want excuses, whereby brain'd fools his companions; who, being to avoid the disbursement : whether it were frighted out of their wits, with the terlo, or not, that any fuch Plea was held about rour of fo great a loss, were devising, this matter of redemption, as we find re- after the battel, which way to run out corded. Neither must we regard it, that the of Italy, when Hannibal as yet had scarce llaves which were armed for the war, are one Town within it. The inequality of faid to have cost more, than the summed d this rigour grew shortly distasteful to the amount unto, that would have ranfomed Commonalty: and was openly blamed by these prisoners. For this is but a tale, devised a Tribune of the people; nevertheless it was Livilib. 24. to countenance the Roman proceedings, as if quietly digested, the excuse being no less

M. Junius the Dictator, having dispatched and somewhat beggarly. Hereof it is no lit- all needful business within the City, took tle proof, That Hannibal valued those Roman the field with five and twenty thousand slaves, whom he had taken in the Camp men. What he did with this Army, I canamong their Masters, at no more, than every not find: nor more of him than this, That one the third part of a commou Souldiers he spent the time about Campania; where (as may be prefumed) he was not idle. To one that had so well deserved of the Rohim therefore perhaps it may be afcribed, man state, had not repaired unto him that Hannibal did no greater evil: for of the Prætor, who defired nothing more any evil done to Hannibal, by the Romans, than such acquaintance. So with many in this their weak estate, only Marcellus commendations, gifts, and loving enterhad the honour. Marcellus, being then tainment, being himself also a man highone of the Prætors, lay at offia, with a ly reputed for his personal valour, he made Fleet ready to set sail for sicil, having this Bantius so far in love with him, that no one Legion aboord his ships; and sifteen thing could be attempted within Nola, hundred other Souldiers newly taken up: against the Romans, whereof he had not with which forces he was to defend that prefently advertisement. At the coming of Island, and do what harm he could in Marcellus, Hannibal removed from about Africk. But hearing of the overthrow at Nola; and affayed, as formerly he had Canna, he sent these of his new Levy to done, the Neapolitans: but they had late-Rome, for defence of the City; and mar-ly taken in a Roman Garrison; upon conched hastily with his Legion toward Can-fidence whereof they gave him a peremnulium: delivering the Fleet, empty of ptory answer, to his discontent. Thence Souldiers, to P. Furius Itis Colleague, went he to Nuceria, which he took by Thence was he called by the Magistrates, composition; and so returned back again and chief Citizens of Nola, to help them: who to Nola. He was not ignorant, what good were like to be forced by the multitude affection the common people of Nola bore (affected, as were the rest of the Cam- unto him: who although they durst not panes) to let in the Carthaginian; and stir in his quarrell, being over-awed by knew not how to avoid this otherwise, the Roman Garrison; yet if they saw than by seeming to deliberate about the Murcellus hardly bestead, and forced to articles of this new confederacy. Where-turn his care from watching them within, fore he made great journeys thitherward; to repelling the enemies affailing him and arrived even time enough to prevent without, like enough it feemed, that the Enemy. Many idle walks Hannibal they would not be wanting unto the acmade betwixt Nola and Naples: aflaying compliftment of their own defires. He by fair words and terrible threats the therefore brought his Army close to the one and the other City. Naples was strong, Town, and skirmished often with Marcellus: and not infected with any the least touch not in hope thereby to do much good, of difloyalty : had also a fure Haven, but only to make shew of a meaning to whereby it stood in the less fear of fustain- force the Town; which he fought in the ing much inconvenience, by spoil of the mean while to take by intelligence. In the Lands and Villages abroad in the Counnight time there passed messages between trey. But at Nola it was thought a him and the Citizens hispertakers: where-valuable confideration, That Hannibal was by it was concluded, That if once Mar-Master of the field: which if he laid waste, cellus, with all his forces, could be trainall the poor people were utterly undone, ed into the field, the multitude within So thought the Multitude: and fuch talk the Town should presently rise; and seizing used some, that had little fear of their upon the gates, exclude him as an Enemy. own private want or poverty, but a great Of this Negotiation Marcellus was adverdesire to gratise the Carthaginian. Of tiled: and fearing lest the Conspirators these, one L. Bantius was chief; a frour would shortly adventure, even to find him young Gentleman, and Souldier of especi- busied within the City, whilest the Carthaal mark, well beloved in the City, and ginians should scale the wals; hethought one that had done good service to the Ro- lit the surest way, to cut off the Enemies mans 5 but was found by Hannibal half hope, and fend him away betimes. Wheredead at Canna; and after much gentle fore ordering his men in three companies, usage, good attendance, and cure of his within three several gates, looking towards wounds, friendly dismissed with liberal the enemy: he gave a straight command, gifts. He therefore thought, that it con- that all the Citizens should keep their cerned himin honour, to return the greatest houses. Thus he lay close a good part of thanks he could unto fo courteous enemy. the day, to the enemies great wonder, Marcellus perceiving this, wrought upon against whom he had customarily ished the same easie nature of the Gentleman; forth before more early, every day, to skir and taking notice of him, as if it had mish But when it was further noted, that the been by chance, feemed to wonder, why wals were bare, and not a man appearing on them; then thought Hannibal, that furely red unto their pleasure, by his own Citizens; all was discovered, and Marcellus now bu- could now please themselves, as with good fied with the Citizens. Whereupon he bad news, to hear, That in a skirmish not far his men bring ladders, and make ready for from Rome, he appeared to be a man, and not the affault: which was done in all hafte. But refiftless. At Casilimim the Dictator was not a when the Carthaginians were at the very but many Companies of Italians, Confedewals, and thought nothing less, than that the rates of Rome, were gotten into the Town. Romans would meet them in the field : fud- and held it. Five hundred of the Praneftines denly the middle gate was opened, whereat there were, and about four hundred of Pe-Marcellus, with the best and oldest of his rusia, with some of the Latines. All these Souldiers, brake forth upon them, with a had the good hap, to come too late to the great noile, to make his unexpected fally the battel at Canna, being fent by their feveral more terrible. Whilest the Carthaginians, States to the Camp: whither whilest they much out of order, were some of them fly- were marching the tidings of that great ing before Marcellus, the rest making head misfortune encountred them, and sent them against him: the other two gates opened, backforrowful; for they loved well their whereat in like fort issued they of the new Lords the Romans, under whose government levied Companies, upon the enemics backs. they lived happily. So came they all, one The fudden terrour was more available unto after another, to Casiline, where they the Romans, than their force; yet the Exe- met and stayed. Neither had they stayed cution was fo great, that this was accounted there long, ere they heard news from Capua, as a victory, and reputed one of the bravest How that great City became the Ring-lea-Acts performed in all that War, for a for of all the Campanes into rebellion. The as hereby it was first proved, that Hannibal people of Casiline were affected as they of might be overcome. After this, Marcellus Capua: and therefore fought how to rid being freed from his enemies that were their hands of those Pranestines and their departed, took a strict account of the Citi- fellows; but the Souldiers were too hard zens of Nola; condemning above threefcore for them, and after many trains laid one for and ten of high Treason, whose heads he another, at last they slew all the Townsmen struck off; and so leaving the Town in quiet in a night, and fortified the Western part obedience unto their Senate, went and in- of the Town (for it was divided by the Ricamped hard by about Suessula. Hannibal in ver Vulturnus) against the Enemy. If they the mean feafon was gone to Acerra: where had run away with the goods, and pretendbeing excluded, he thought it no wildom ed, that these of Casiline were as the rest of to lose time in perswasions, but said siege the Campanes, all Traitors; they themselves unto it, and began on all fides to close it might have been reputed, as no better up. This terrified the People, who knew than the Mamertines. But their constancy themselves unable to hold out. Therefore in defence of the place witnesseth, upon what before his Works were finished, & they quite honest reasons they surprised it. Hannibal furrounded; they frole out by night; and came thither, thinking to have encountred left him the Town empty: which he facked with greater forces: but these few found and burnt. Then hearing news of the Di- him more work than he expected. Divers dator, that he was about Cassline, thither assaults he gave, but was still repelled with went Hannibal; as being unwilling that an loss: and many fallies they made, with vaenemy fo near should disquiet him at Capua; riable event. The Enemy mined; and they where he meant to Winter. It feems, or ra- countermined : opposing so much industry ther indeed it is plain, that the late victory to his force, that he was driven to close of Marcellus had nothing abated the spirit them up, and seek to win them by famine. of the Carthaginian : who durst with a small T. Sempronius Gracchus, that was Master of part of his Army feek out the Dictator, that the horse, lay with the Roman Army higher had with him the heart of the Roman up the River: who fain would have relieved strength. Wherefore the joy of his Ene- castiline, but that the Dictator being gone mies, upon fo flight an occasion as the death to Rome about some matters of Religion, had of some two thousand of his men, at the given him an express charge not to fight till most, and those not slain in plain battel, his return. Marcellus from Suessila could not but by a fudden eruption; witneffeth come: his way being fropped by the overchiefly, in what great fear they stood of flowings of Vulturnus; the Nolans also be-Hannibal, and how Crest fallen they were : seeching him not to leave them, who that having three years fince demanded at were in danger of the Campanes, if he de-Carthage the body of Hannibal, to be delive- parted. Thus it is reported: but if the water Ttttt 2.

Ttttt

884

frayed his journey, fuch intreaties were needless. Neither is it like that the Dictator neculeus rectuel is a line that the stream fa- of the great supply that was decreed at Cartarried at Rome fo long, as till extream famine had consumed the Garrison in Casiline. Wherefore it may be thought, that the Town was loft, because the Romans durst not adventure to raise the siege. Barrels of corn were fent by night, floting down the River; and when some of these, being carried awry by an Eddie of water, fruck among the Willows on the bank, whereby this manner of relief was discovered and prevented; Gracehus cast a great quantity of Nuts into the stream, which faintly sustained the poor belieged men. At length when all food was spent, and whatsoever grew green un- the battel at Canna; his brother Hamnibal der the Walls was gathered for Sallets, the fent for him to Capua, and thence difpatch-Carthaginians ploughed up the ground; ed him away to Carthage, with the joywhereon the besieged presently sowed Rape ful message of Victory. He told the Carthafeed. Hannibal feeing this, admired their ginian Senate with how many Roman Gepatience; and faid, That he meant not to nerals his brother had fought, what Conftay at Cafiline untill the Rapcs were grown. fuls he had chafed, wounded or flain; how Wherefore though hitherto he had refused the stout Romans, that in the somerwar neto hearken unto any Composition, as in- ver shunned any occasion of fight, were tending to make them an example to all now grown to calm, that they thought their others, by punishing their obstinacy; yet Dictator Fabius the only good Captain, benow he was content, to grant them their cause he never durst adventure to come lives at an indifferent ransome, which when to battel; That not without reason their they had paid, he quietly dismissed them, according to his promife. Seven hundred Car- flain of them above two hundred thouthaginians he placed in Casiline, as a Garrison and taken above fifty thousand prisofor defence of the Campanes, unto whom he ners. He further told them of the Brutirestored it. To the Pranestine Souldiers ans, Apulians, Sammites, Lucans, and other great thanks were given, and loving rewards; among which they had offer, in re- of those great victories, had revolted unto gard of their vertue, to be made Citizens of the Carthaginians. Among the rest he mag-Rome. But their present condition pleased | nified Capna, as a goodly City, and fit to be them fo well, that they chofe rather to con- not only (as already it was) Head of all tinue, as they were in Praneste: which is no the Capuans, but the chief seat of their Doweak proof, of the good estate wherein the Cities flourished, that were subject to the them, how lovingly his brother had been Roman Government. This fiege of Cassime entertained, where he meant to rest that was not a little beneficial to the Romans; as winter attending their supply. As for the having long detained Hannibal, and consumed much of his time, that might otherwise have been better spent. For winter overtook the Romans any breathing time, wherein to him long before he could dispatch the business: which how to quit with his honour he ken forces. He willed them to consider, that did often beat the Romans in following times, as shall appear hereafter.

ø. X.

by the malice of Hanno, and floth or parfemony of the Carthaginians, the Supply was too long deferred. That the riches of the Carthaginians grew faster, than of the Romans. Of Fabius and other old Roman Historians , how partial they were in their writings.

When Mago, the fon of Amilear had fpent some time about the taking in fuch Italians, as fell from the Romans after spirits were thus abated, since Hannibal had people of Italy, that followed the fortune minion in Italy: and there he informed war, He said it was even at an end, if they would now purfue it closely, and not give re-collect themselves, and repair their broknew not, when he was once engaged. the war far from home, in the Enemies Coun-Therefore he wintered at Capua: where he trey: that so many battels had much dimirefreshed his Army, or rather corrupted it, as nished his brothers Army: that the Souldiers, all Historians report, and made it effeminate; who had so well deserved, ought to be conthough effeminate as it was, He therewithal fidered with liberal rewards; and that it was not good to burden their new Italianfriends, with exactions of money, corn, and other necessaries; but that these things must be sent from Carthage; which the victory would requite with large amends. Finally, he caused the golden rings, taken from the fingers of the Roman Knights that were flain, to be poured out openly in the Court: Spain, in his journey towards Italy) then which being measured, filled (as some say) might such an objection more justly have three bushels; or (as others would rather been made unto his demand of a supply. But have it) no more than one; adding that by the most likely part of Hanno his Oration. this might appear the greatness of the Ro- and wherein he best might hope to prevail, is, that the Rome was poor, the bravery of private men was not altogether for gest, as the Law would have permitted, though otherwise Jus Annuli, it was in g of the Ring, was the general priviledge of the Roman Equites.

may easily find, that the State of Carthage war; yet it is not likely, that the faith, so ofnever did receive, in all the durance there- ten broken to the Carthaginians in former of, any fuch hopeful advertisements from times, would have been kept entire, when their Captains abroad. Wherefore it is no any opinion of good advantage had called marvel, if the errand of Mago found extra- for revenge of fo many shameful overthrows; ordinary welcome. In the vehemency of this lince after this war ended, and a new league joy, Himileo, a Senator adverse to the facti- concluded, no submissive behaviour could on of Hanno, is faid to have demanded of preferve Carthage from ruine, longer, than that great perswader unto peace with Rome, untill such time as Rome was at leisure from Whether he were still of opinion, that Han- all other wars. This counsel therefore of nibal should be yielded up unto the Romans; Hanno, though it might seem temperate, was or whether he would forbid them to give indeed very peftilent; and ferved only to thanks unto the gods, for this their good fuc- hinder the performance of a noble refoluticefs. Hereunto though it be not likely that on. For it was concluded by a main confent Hanno made the fame formal answer, which of the Senate, that forty thousand Numidi-Livie puts into his mouth, calling the Cartha- ans, forty Elephants, and great abundance ginian Senators Patres Conscripti, by a term of filver, should be sent over to Hannibal: proper to the Romans; and putting them and that, befides these, twenty thousand in mind of his own shameful overthrow re- foot, and four thousand horse, should be leceived at the Islands Agateis: yet the sum vied in Spain; not only to supply, as need of his speech appears to have been no less should require, the Armies in their Promalicious than is fet down, forafmuch as vince, but to be transported into Italy. Hannibal himself, at his departure out of This great Aid, had it been as carefully Italy, exclaimed against the wickedness of sent, as it was readily decreed; the Roman this Hanno; faying that his hatred against Historians would not have found cause, to the Barchines, had oppressed their Family, tax the retchless improvidence of Hannibal, when otherwise it could not, with the ruine in forbearing to march directly from canne of Carthage. Therefore it may well be, that to Rome, or in refreshing his Army among he made fuch a jest of these victories, as is re- the delights of Capua: the next years work ported; faying, It ill beseemed him, who would have finished the business, with less had vanquished the Romans to call for more dangerous adventure; and the pleasures, help as if he had been beaten; or him, that which his men enjoyed among the Camhad taken their camp, filled forfooth with panes, would have been commended, as respoil, to make request for meat and money. wards by him well thought upon, where-To these cavils, if answer were needful, it with to animate both them and others, that might be faid. That other booty than of were to be imployed in the following Warhorses and slaves, little was to be found in But either the too much carelesness of those, a few * filver study in the bridles and trap-quired it; or the crasty malice of Hanno, and ken any main convoy of money and provisi- mours of men, that had more feeling of their ons, going to supply all wants of a great own commodity, than sense of the publick army in some other Province, (as the two need; utterly perverted, and made unprocontained a perfwafion to use their fortune with moderation; and now to seek peace, whilst to wear that ornament.

What would have been the iffue of this counfel, if it had been followed, it were not easie to say. For though it be likely, that the Roman pride would have brooked much in-Who fo confiders the former Punick-war, dignity, in freeing Italy from the danger of the Roman camp: the best of the Souldiers that were loth to make haste in laying out carrying no other wealth into the field than their money, before extreme necessity repings of their horses. If Hannibal had ta- his fellows, working upon the private hu-Scipio's are afterwards faid to have done, fitable in the performance, the order that when they wan the camp of Afdrubal, that had been so well set down. The * Elephants * Liv.l. 16. carryed along with him all the wealth of were fent: and some money peradventure, uncertain it is how long after. But those | pons, and engines of War; the Romans told great forces of threescore thousand foot, and them plainly, That the City of Carthage. four thousand horse, came not into Haly, till which was the body of the Citizens, should much was lost of that which already had be friendly dealt withal, but the Town been gotten, and a great part of the old Car- must needs be demolished, and removed inthaginian Army, was first consumed by time, to some other place, that should be twelve and fundry accidents of war. Only fome miles diftant from the Sea. For (faid the small numbers, no way answering unto the Romans) This Trade of Merchandice, by proportion decreed, were fent into spain; which ye now live, is not so fit for peaceable and the journey of Asarubal thence through men, such as ye promise to become hereas-France into Italy much talked of, but he not ter, as is the Trade of Husbandry; an enabled thereunto, till many years were wholesome kind of life, and enduing men past, and the Romans had recovered their with many laudable qualities which enable ftrength.

Carthaginians drew into their City, both the Romans, though sugred with glosing by the Tributes received from their subjects, words, plainly shews, what good observaand by their wealthy Trade of Merchan- tion the elder Cato had made of the hafty dize. For it is not long, fince the War of the growth of Carthage in riches. For when be-Mercenaries, and the perfidious tyranny of ing demanded his opinion in the Senate the Romans, extorting in time of greatest about any matter whatsoever it were, he adnecessity twelve hundred talents; had ex- ded still this conclusion, Thus Ithink, and ceedingly impoverished Carthage : which that Carthage should be destroyed; He may was before brought into great want, even by feem, not only to have had regard unto that the expence of to much money, as was to be present wealth, which at his being there he difburied for redeeming of peace, after the had found in the City, but much more unto los of Ægateis. Yet we see, what great these times, and the great height whereunto Armies of Numidians, and spaniards, be- it rose, even suddenly as we see, out of many fides those already on foot, are appointed calamities, whilft the Romans thought, that to the service in Haly, and how little the it had not been in case to date so terrible a Carthaginians fear the want of money in War. these chargeable undertakings: whereas the But as the Carthaginians, in gathering Romans on the other fide, having three or | wealth, were more industrious and skilfull four years together been forced to some ex- than the Romans; so came they far short of traordinary cost, are fain to go upon credit; them in the honourable care of the publick even for the price of those flaves, which good: having every one, or most of them,a they bought of their own Citizens to arm more principal regard of his own private befor their defence. Such advantage in means nefit. This made them (besides the neglito enrich their Treasury, had the wealthy gence commonly found in victors) when the Merchants of Carthage, trading in all parts first heat of their affection (wherein they of the Mediterran Sea, even from Tyrm their concluded to pursue the war strongly) was Mother-City in the bottom of the ftraights over-past, go more leisurely to work, than unto the great Ocean, above the Romans . had been requifite in the execution. It was who lived on the fruits of their ground, and easie for Hanno to perswade covetous men, ing the same course of life. When the time in Spain. This might be done with little chardition, that their City might not be destroy- had given him to the conquest of Rome. dition, that their City might not be deftroy-lad given him to the conqueft of Rome, which is detailed and flav ng accordingly, when they were so required, yielded up all their weather their own slackness, incredulity, dull-Lingless.

their bodies, and make them very apt for Here we may note, what great riches the conversation. This villainous dealing of received their Tributes from people follow- that they should first of all defend their own therefore was come, that the hatred of ges. Afterwards, when that Province was fe-Rome found leifure to shew it self, in the de- cured, hey might send an Army into Haly, so ambien struction of Carthage; the impudence of Ro- going to work orderly by degrees. For it Hamble man fallhood, in feeking an honeft colour were no wisdom to commit all the firength melly wherewith to shadow the intended breach of the Common-wealth to one hazzard of mind, for of Fairh, discovered plainly whence the fortune, against the enemies, or (which per ingidate and each of the collection). jealousse was bred, that this mighty City haps were worse) to the government of an the selection would again rebel. For the Carthaginians, ambitious man, and his brethren; who having might let having given up hoftages, even betore the once (if they could fo do) finished the wars with the Roman Army did let four have properties when the once (if they could fo do) finished the wars with the Roman Army did fet forth, to perform what- might easily make * Hannbal a King, and ons, ss foever should be enjoyed them, with confulded Carthage, with the forces that they knowledge the confunction that their City middle method them.

perswaded rather to make small disburfed to hearken unto his discourses, as long ments in Spain, than to let up all their reft at once in Italy. Yet was it indeed impossible to the purse full. In the mean while they sufhold a Country of fo large extent, and fo fered Hannibal, and all the noble house of open a coast as that of spain, free from all Amilear, to weary themselvs in travel for the incursion of the Enemy: especially the affe- Common-wealth: which all Carthage in gettion of the Naturals being (as in a new con- neral highly commended, but weakly afquelt)ill established. A better way therefore stifted; as if the industry of these Barchines it had been, to make a running War, by had been somwhat more than needful. Surewhich the Romans might have been found by the Carthaginians, in general, were far occupied, even with the ordinary Carthagi- less honourable than the people of Rome not nian Garrisons or some little addition there-only in government of their subject Provinunto. For if it were thought meet, to defer ces, but in administration of their own the profecution of their main intendment estate; few of them preferring the respect against Rome it self, untill such time as every of the Weal-publick above their private inlittle thorn were pulled out of the fides of terest. But as they thrived little in the end, fo great a Province, then must Emporia have by their parsimony used toward their own been belieged and forced: which, by reason Mercenaries, when the former Roman war of alliance with the Mafilians, gave unto the was finished: so the conclusion of this war Romans, at all times when they pleased, a present, will make them complain, with ready and secure Harbour. But the Town of feeling sighs, of their negligence in supplying Emporia, was too strong to be won in haste: Hannibal, after the victory at Canna; when it had long defended it felf against the Bar-gladly they would give all their Treasures, barians; having not above four hundred to redeem the opportunity, that now they races of wall to the main Land, and excee- let pass, as if it were cost enough to send a dingly well fortified: a great spanish Town few handfuls into spain. of the same name, lying without it, that was That both the Spanish business, and the three miles in compass, very strong likewise, state of Africk it self, depended wholly, or and friend unto the Gracians, though not for the most part, upon success of things in over much trusted. Wherefore to force this Italy, the course of actions following will Town of Emporie, that was, befides the pro- make manifest. Particularly, how matters per strength, like to be so well assisted by the were ordered in spain by the Carthaginian Massilians, Romans, and some Spaniards, Governours, it is very hard and almost imwould have been a work of little less diffi- possible to set down. For though we must culty, then was the Roman war (in appear-not reprehend, in that worthy Historian Livy, ance) after the battel at Canne: yea, it had the tender love of his own Countrey, which been in effect none other, than to alter the made him give credit unto Fabius & others; feat of the war; which Hannibal had already yet must we not, for his sake, believe those fixed, with better judgement, near unto the | Iyes, which the unpartial judgement of Polygates of Rome. The difficulty of this attempt, bins hath condemned, in the Writers that being such as caused it altogether to be gave them original. It were needless to rebled about expelling the Romans utterly out cerning the untruth of that Roman Hiftorian of spain: whom they might more easily Fabina. One example may suffice. He saith of have diverted thence, and drawn home to Amilear and his men at Eryx, in the former their own doors, by making strong war up- war, I hat, having clean spent their strength, on their City. For even so the Romans af- and being even broken with many miseries, terwards removed Hannibal into Africk, by they were glad to submit themselvs unto the fending an Army to Carthage; and by take- Romans. Contrary hereunto we find in the ing the like course, they now endeavoured life of Amilear, set down by Emilius Probus, was a malicious wretch: yet they that peace between Amilear and Catulus when nes, or niggardize, the Carthaginians were thought him so, were well enough content-

forborn; great folly it was to be much trou- hearfe all that may be found in Polybius, con- Pol, Eb. 1. to change the feat of the war transferring That Eryx was in such fort held by the Carit out of Italy into Spain. But the private thaginians, that it feemed to be in as good affections of men, regarding the common condition, as if in those parts there had not good no otherwife, than as it is accessary to been any war. These words, being referred to their own purpoles, did make them easily thebrave resolution of the Carthaginian Soulwink at opportunities, and hope that some- diers, and the singular vertue of their Genewhat would fall out well of it felf, though ral, infuling fuch spirit into them may be tathey fet not to their helping hands. Hanno ken as not over liberal. For in the treaty of the Roman first of all required, that this Gaulinto Italy, to encounter with Hannibal Garrison of Ergx should lay down their arms at his descent from the Alps, sent before him and forfake Sicil, threatning, that otherwise his Brother Cnew, with part of his Fleet and he would not talk of any composition: Amil- Army, into Spain. Two Roman Legions. car boldly bade him chuse, whether he with fourteen thousand foot of the Confewould talk of it or no; for that the Arms derates, and twelve hundred horse, had been which his Country had put into his hands to allotted unto the Conful, therewith to make use against her enemies, it was not his pur- war in Spain against Hannibal; who, since he pose to yield up unto them. Now since the was marching into Haly with the strength of Romans, contrary to their custom upon like his Army, P. Scipio believed, that a good advantages, were content to let Amilear have part of these his own forces might well be his will, & not to stand with him upon point spared from the Spanish Expedition; and of honour, whilst otherwise they might therefore made bold to carry some of the quietly rid their hands of him; plain enough number back with him, fending on his Broit is, that they were far from thinking him a ther with the rest, as his Lieutenant. Publius man confumed with miseries, as Fabius would himself remained in Italy all the time of his have him feem. Hereunto agrees the relation | Confulfhip; which being expired, he was of Polybius: who flatly, and by name, charg- fent Proconful into Spain by the Senate. eth Fabius with untruth; faying, That how- with an Army of eight thousand men, and a foever Amilear and his Souldiers had endu- Fleet of thirty Gallies. red all extremity, yet they behaved themfelves as men that had no fense thereof; and | Province, were very great; and, as they are were as far from being either vanquished or reported, somewhat marvellous. For they tyred, as were their Enemies. Such being the continually prevailed in Spain, against the difference between Fabius (as also perhaps | Carthaginians; whom they vanquished in between other oldWriters of the Roman (to- | fo many battels, and withdrew from their ry)and those that had more regard of truth, Alliance fo many of the Spaniards their than of flattering the mighty City of Rome: | Confederates, that we have cause to wonwe must take it in good part, that howsoe- der how the enemy could so often find ver Livie introduceth Hanno, in one place, means to repair his forces, and return ftrong joyning very foolifhly his own shameful into the field. But as the Romans, by pre-* Egatis overthrow at the Islands * Ægateis, with the tending to deliver the Country from the tyinfulas great services of Amilear at Ergx, as if both ranny of Carthage, might easily win unto their Eyyengue greater vices of names at exps., as it soon and so the mate scalar of them had had a like event; yet felferen proposite, where he forbeareth not to put a more like-the hybrid state (though with as impudent a commetted by tale (though with as impudent a commetted by tale (though with as impudent a commetted by tale). t Lipaliza; moration of his own unhappy conduct) into first Conquerors might serve to arm the Nathe same Hanno his mouth, making him say, turals against these Invaders, and to reclaim That the affairs of Carthage went never bet- those that had revolted unto the Romans, ter, than a little before the loss of their Fleet were it only by the memory of such ill sucin that battel at Sea; wherein himself was cess, as the like rebellions in former times General Now, concerning the doings of the had found. Hereto may be added the Car-Scipio's in Spain, there is cause to wish, that thaginian Treasure; which easily raised this Fabins, with Val. Antins, and others of the Souldiers, among those valiant (but in that like stamp, had either written (if they could Age) poor, and gold-thirsty Nations. Neinot write more temperately) nothing at all; ther was it of small importance, that so malow.

6. X I.

Strange reports of the Roman victories in Spain, before Aldrubal the Son of Amilcar nelius scipio the Conful returning from it had been extremely dangerous to Rome,

The fifth Book of the first Part

The Acts of these two Brethren in their or that the tender affection of Livie to his ny of the Spaniards had their children kinf-Rome, had not caused him to think too well men, and friends, abroad with Hannibal in of their relations; which are such as fol- his Italian Wars; or serving the Carthaginians in Africk. And peradventure, if we durst be bold to say it, the victories of the Scipio's were neither fo many, nor fo great as they are fet out by Livie. This we may be bold to fay, that the great Captain Fabius, or Livie in his person, maketh an objection unto scifollowed thence his Brother Hannibal into pio, which neither Scipio, nor Livie for him, doth answer. That if Asdrubal were vanquished, as Scipio would say by him in Spain: T hath been shewed already, how P.Cor- strange it was, and as little to his bonour, as that the same vanquished man should invade | That they should gently (or kindly) uphold the Italy. And it is indeed an incredible narra- Majefty of the People of Rome. This was in tion. That Asdrubal, being enclosed on all appearance nothing troublesome; yet imthese his Elephants, being so sent before, Hanno Governour over them, as over the whereof there is no great certainty.

fides, and not knowing how to escape out of plied it indeed an obscure covenant of subbattel, fave only by the steep descent of jection. And in this respect it may be true. Rocks, over a great River that lay at his That the Spaniards became ditionis Roma-Livelbasis back, ran away with all his mony, Ele- ne, of the Roman jurifdiction; though herephants, & broken troops, over Tagus, direct- after they will fay, they had no fuch meanly towards the Tyrences, and so toward Ita- ing. That part of the Country wherein Scily, upon which he fell with more than three- pio landed, was newly subdued by Hannibal fcore thousand armed Souldiers. Neither do in his passage toward Italy; and therefore I see, how it hangs well together, That he the more easily shaken out of obedience. chose a piece of ground very defensible, but particularly in the Bargutians; Hannibal had most incommodious for his retrait, if he found at his coming among them such an should happen to be vanquished; and yet, apprehension of the Roman greatness, as that he fent all his mony and Elephants made him suspect, that any light occasion away before him, as not intending to abide would make them frart from the Carthagithe enemy: Or how it could be true, that nians. Wherefore he not only appointed could hinder the Romans (for so have they rest of the Province between Iberus and the faid to have done in the last battel between Pyrenees, but made him also their Lord; that him and Scipio) from breaking into his is, (as I conceive it; for I do not think he Camp. Wherefore we can no more than be gave the Principality of their Country unforry, that all Carthaginian records of this to Hanno and his Heirs) he made him not War, and spanish, (if there were any) being only Lieutenant-general over them, in matutterly loft, we can know no more thereof, ters of War, and things concerning the than what it hath pleased the Romans to tell holding them in obedience to Carthage; but us; unto whom it were no wildom to give took from them all inferiour Officers of too much credit. In this regard, I will fum- their own, leaving them to be governed by marily run over the doings of the Scipio's in Hanno at his discretion. These therefore spain, not greatly infifting on particulars, had good cause to rejoyce at the coming of Scipio; with whom, others also (no doubt) Cn.Cornelius landed at Emporia, an Haven found reasons to joyn; it being the custom Town, not far within the Pyrenees, retain- of all conquered Nations in hatred of their ing still the same name with little inflexion. present Lords, to throw themselves indis-That by the same of his clemency he allu- creetly into the protection of others, that red many Nations to become subject unto many times prove worse than the former. So Rome, as the story begins of him, I could were the Neapolitans, and Milanois, in the eafily believe, if I understood by what occa- age of our Grand-fathers, weary by turns of fion they had need to use his elemency, or the Spaniards and French; as more fensible he to give such famous example thereof, be- still of the present evil which they felt, ing a meer stranger, and having no jurisdi- than regardful of the greater mischief, ction in the Country. Yet it is certain, that whereinto they ran by feeking to avoid it. he was a man very courteous, and one that This bad affection of this Province, would could well infinuate himself into the love of not suffer Hanno to temporize. Ten thousand the Barbarians, among whom, his dexterity foot, and a thousand horse, Hannibal had left in practice had the better success, for that unto him: besides which it is like that some he feemed to have none other errand than forces he was able to raife out of his Profetting them at liberty. This pretext avail- vince. Therefore he adventured a battel ed with fome: others were to be hired with Scipio, wherein he was overthrown with mony: and some he compelled to yield and taken. Following this victory, Scipio by force or fear; especially when he had besieged stissum, a Town hard by, and won won a battel against Hanno. Into all Trea- it. But Asdrubal having passed Iberus, and ties of Accord, made with these people, coming too late to the relief of Hanno, likely it is, that he remembred to infert this with eight thousand foot, and a thousand Article, which the Romans in their Alliances horse, fell upon the Roman Sea-forces, that never forgat, unless in long times past, and lay not far from Tarracon, whom he found When they dealt with the Carthaginians, or careles, as after a victory, roaving abroad in the Superiours; Majestam Pop. Rom.comitthe Country; and with great slaughter him ter conservent, which is, as Tully interprets it, drave them aboard their ships. This done, he drew the Ilergetes from the Roman party, ruled them before. For that it was their inthough they had given Hostages to scipio. tent to live under their own Country Laws. Scipio in the mean feafon was gone to visit and not under Governours sent from and aid his Fleet; where having fet things in order, he returned back, and made toward Afdrubal; who durst not abide his henceforth unto the daies of Augustus Cafar. coming, but withdrew himself again over till when they were never thorowly con-Iberus. So the Ilergetes were compelled by force, having lost Athanagia their chief City, to pay a fine to the Romans, and increase the number of their Hostages. The Aufetani likewife, Confederates of the Carthaginians, were befieged in their chief Town; men being on shore. All their ships, that ran which they defended thirty days; hoping, in vain, that the sharp Winter, and great abundance of Snow that fell, would have ing at pleasure, and doing great hurt in all made the Romans todislodge. But they were places that were not well defenced. After fain at length to yield; and for this their this victory, above one hundred and twenty obstinacy, they were amerced twenty talents Nations, or petty Estates in Spain, are said of filver. During the fiege, the Lacetani to have submitted themselves unto the Rocame to help their diffressed neighbours; mans, or given Hostages; whereby Astrobal and were beaten home by scipio, leaving was compelled to flye into the uttermost twelve thouland of their Company dead be- corners of the Land, and hide himself in Luhind them. I cannot but wonder how these strania. Yet it follows, that the Ilergetes Lacetani, that are said to be the first which | did again rebel; that Astrubal hereupon embraced the friendship of scipio, should, without any cause remembred, become Carthaginian on the sudden, in the next news went not forth to meet him, but stirred up that we hear of them. As also it is strange, that all the Sea-coast Northward of Iberus, Liv.lib.31. having lately become voluntarily ditionis him Hostages. These took from the Cartha-

892

Romana subject unto Rome, should, in continuance of the Story, after a few lines, hold war in two battels; wherein they flew fifteen against scipio, without any resistance of the thousand of his men, and took four thou-Carthaginians. Neither can I believe, that fand prisoners. Then arrived P. Scipio, with Asit were by a charm, stirred up the supply before mentioned: and hencethe Hergeres, making them lay afide all care | forward the two Brethren joyntly adminiof their Hostages, and take Arms in his quar- | stred the business in Spain. rel; whilst himself had not the daring to ftand against Scipio, but ran away, and sa- | Celtiberian War; the two Scipio's did band ran up into the Country, where he with- the comfortable promifes of those that had Rome or Carthage, their demeanour in all Ages following may testifie: even from quered.

The year following this, Cn. Scipio had a victory against the Carthaginians in fight at Sea; or rather came upon them unlooked for, while they rode at Anchor, most of their not too far on ground, he took ; and thereby grew Mafter of the whole coast; landcame over Iberus; and that Scipio (though having eafily vanquished the Ilergetes) against him the Celtiberians, that lately were become his subjects, and had given ginians three Towns, and vanquished him

The Carthaginians being occupied in the ved himself beyond Iberus. Philinus per- cunctanter, without both fear or doubt, pass haps, or some Carthaginian Writer, would over Iberus, and besieged Saguntum. Little have told it thus: That scipio adventuring | cause of doubt had they, if cn. had already too far into the Country, was beaten by subdued many Nations beyond it; and, Afdrubal back to his ships, whence he durst among many other, the same Celtiberians, not sfir until Winter came on: at what that with their proper forces were able to time the Carthaginian returned into the vanquish Asarbal. Bostar, the Governor of heart of his Province, leaving some few | Saguntum, a simple man, suffered himself to Garrisons to defend those places, that after be perswaded by one Acedux a Spaniard, Scipio won, by returning upon them, un- that the only way to get the favour and looked for through a deep Snow. As for the hearty good will of the Country, was by Lacetani, Ilergetes, and the rest, we may freely restoring unto them their Hostages; reasonably think, that they sought their own benefit; helping themselves one while by their faith. But the crafty spaniard, being the Romans against the Carthaginians; and | trusted with this message and restitution of contrariwife, upon sense of injuries received, the Hostages, carried them all to the Roman or apprehention of more grievous tyranny, General; perswading them, as he had done under which they feared to be brought by Bostar, to make the Liberality their own these new Masters, hearkning again unto Hereby the Romans purchased much love, if

if the tale were true; and if it were not ra- and Sea, is sent to take the charge of spain. ther true, as afterward, and ere this we find Wherefore Afdrubal hath now no more to few, But fince we find no better certainties, we must content our selves with these.

The year following was like unto this: Addribal must be beaten again. The two him of his care. But fince it can be no betby Land, P. by Sea. Afdrubal, with much Spaniards his Subjects: and having gotten labour and entreaty, hath gotten four thou- together as much treasure as he could, onfand foot, and five hundred horse out of ward he marcheth toward Iberus. The Sci-Africk: He repairs his Fleet, and provides pio's hearing these news, are careful how to every way to make refistance. But all his arrest him on the way. They besiege Ibera chief Sea-men, and Masters of his Ships, re- (so called of the Rivers name running by it) volt unto the Romans; because they had the richest Town in all those quarters, that been chidden the last year for their neg- was confederate with Afdrubal; who thereligence, which had betrayed the Navy. The upon steps aside to relieve it. The Romans revolt of these ship-masters animates to re- meet him, and fight a battel with him: bellion the Carpetians, or Carpetani, an In- which they win the more easily, for that the land people about Toledo, in the very Center | Spaniards, his followers, had rather be vanof Spain. These do much mischief, so that quished at home, than get the victory, and Aldrubal is fain to make a journey to them. afterwards be haled into Italy. Great num-His sudden coming cuts off some of them, bers are slain; and few should have escaped. that were found scattered abroad in the but that the Spaniards ran away ere the fields. But they, making a head, fo valiantly battels were fully joyned. Their Camp the assail him, that they drive him for very fear, Romans take and spoil; whereby (questionby force, wherein he had laid up all his provisions; and shortly make themselves Manate of Carthage is not much moved with else can we think, that remember the last this excuse; Astrubal must needs be gone: news of him, and how fearfully he mistrust-Himileo, with fuch forces as are thought ed his own fafety? They find him, and Mago expedient for that service, both by Land and Amilear the Son of Bomilear, with an

that all the spanish Hostages were left in do, than to furnish himself with store of monew Carthage. I am weary of rehearing fo ny, that he might have wherewithall to win many particularities, whereof I can believe fo the friendship of the Gauls; through whose Countries he must pass, as Hannibal had done before him. The Carthaginians were greatly to blame, for not remembring to eafe scipio's divide their forces: Cn. makes war ter, he layes great Impositions upon all the to encamp himselfstrongly on an high piece less) they are marvellously enriched; all the of ground; whence he dares not come forth mony that could be raked together in Spain to give them battel. So they take a Town being carried along in this Italian Expedition. This dayes event joyns all spain to the Romans, if any part of the Country sters of the Country round about. This good | stood in doubt before; and puts Afdrubal so fuccess breeds negligence; for which they | far from all thought of travelling into Italy, dearly pay. Afdrubal comes upon them, that it leaves him small hope of keeping himtakes them unprepared, beats them, kills felf fafe in Spain. Of these exploits advertisthe most of them, and disperseth the rest; so ment is sent to Rome, and Letters to the Sethat the whole Nation yieldeth to him the nate, from P. and Cn. Scipio, whereof the Liv. lib. 24. next day. Then come directions from car- Contents are, That they have neither mony, thage, that Asdrubal should lead his Army apparel, nor bread, wherewith to sustain forth into Italy; which we may wonder why | their Army and Fleet; That all is wanting: the Carthaginians would appoint him to do, if they had been informed by his letters in they can neither hold their forces together, what hard case he was; and had so weakly nor tarry any longer in the Province. These supplyed him, as is shewed before. But thus Letters come to Rome in an evil season; the we find it reported; and that upon the ve- State being scarcely able, after the loss at ry rumour of this his journey, almost all | Canne, to help it self at home. Yet relief is spain was ready to fall to the Romans. Af | fent; how hardly, and how much to the drubal therefore prefently fends word to car- commendations of that love and care, which thage, That this must not be so: or, if they the private Citizens of Rome bare unto the will needs have it fo, that then they must Common-wealth, shall be inserted elsewhere fend him a fucceffor, and well attended with into the relation of things, whereof the truth astrong Army, which to imploy they should is less questionable. At the coming of this find work more than enough; fuch notable supply, the two Scipio's pursue Astrubal, men were the Roman Generals. But the Se- and hunt him out of his lurking holes. What

Huuuu 2

Illiturgi: (which the learned Ortelius, and place with victuals, being strong and defenothers probably conjecture to have food, lible; as intending to make it his feat for a where Carinnena is now in the Kingdom of while. But the Countrey round about is too Aragon; for there was Illiturgio, afterwards full of Enemies: the Carthaginian horse have called Forum Julii, quite another way) a charged the Romans in their march, and are Town of the Illergetes their nearest Neigh- gone off clear; falling also upon some stragbours, for having revolted unto the Ro-mans. The Town is greatly diffred in march, they have cut off two thousand fed; but most of all, for want of victu- of them. Hereupon it is thought behoveful. als. The Romans therefore brake through to retire unto some place more assured. So between the Enemies Camps, with terrible Publius withdraws himself unto Mons villoflaughter of all that refifted them: & having rie: that rifing fomewhat Eastward from victualled the place, incourage Townf-men | Incibili, overlooketh the Southern Out-let to defend their wals as floutly, as they of Iberus. Thither the Carthaginians pursue should anon behold them fighting manfully him: His brother Cn. repairs unto him; and with the beliegers, in their behalf. So they Afdrubal the fon of Gefco, with a full Army. issue forth, about sixteen thousand against arrives to help his Companions. As they lie threefcore thousand: and killing more of thus near incamped together, P. Scipio with the enemies, than themselves were in num- some light-armed, going closely to view the tienthing ber, drave all the three Carthaginian Com- places thereabouts, is discovered by the ene-booty, fifty and eight Enfignes.

894

ten from Illiturgi, fall upon Incibili, that know not why) Castulo, a great city of Spain, stood a little Southward from the mouth of whence Hannibal had taken him a wife, joyn-Iberus. The Spaniards are blamed, as too eth with the Romans; though being far greedy of earning money by war, for thus distant from them, and seated on the head of re-inforcing the broken Carthaginians. But the River Bætis. Nevertheless the Carthait may be wondred, whence the Carthagini- ginians pass over Iberus, to besiege Illiturgi ans had money to pay them: fince Afdrubal again, wherein lodgeth a Roman garrifon; was lately driven to poll the Country, want- hoping to win it by famine. We may justing money of his own; and being beaten ly wonder, what should move them to negin his journey, had lost his wealthy carriages | lect the rebellion of Castulo, yea and the Rowhen his Camp was taken after the battel man Army lying so close by them, and to seek by Iberus. Howfoever it happens, the Car- adventures further off, in that very place, thaginans (according to their custome) are wherein they had been so grievously beaten beaten again at Incibili: where there were the year before. But thither they go: and of them above thirteen thousand slain, and thither follows them Cn. Scipio with one were not aware.

mous by the death of the great Amilear, and fifty Enfigns. The Carthaginians flicto

Army of threefcore thouland men, befieging | Publius Scipio incampeth: and stores the manders, every one out of his quarter; and mies: who are like to take him, but that took that day, besides prisoners and other he withdraws himself to an high piece of ground; where they befiege him, until his The Carthaginian Army, being thus bea- brother Cn. fetcht him off. After this (but I above three thousand taken; besides two Legion: who enters the Town by force, and forty Enfigns, and nine Elephants. Af- breaks out upon them the next day, and ter this, (in a manner) all the people of spain in two battels kills above twelve thousand, fell from them unto the Romans. Thus and takes more than a thousand of them pricould Fabius, Valerius, Antius, or fome foners, with fix and thirty Enfigns. This viother Historian, to whom Livy gave credit, Ctory (doubtless) is remarkable: consiconquer all Spain twice in one year, by dering that the greatest Roman Legion at winning famous victories; whereof thele this time, conflited of no more than five good Captains, P. and Cn. Scipio, perhaps thousand men. The vanquished Carthaginians besiege Bigarra: but that siege is also The Romans notwithstanding this large raised by Cn. Scipio. Thence the Carthaginiaccess of Dominion, winter on their own ans remove to Manda; where the Romans side of Iberus. In the beginning of the are soon at their heels. There is a great batnext year, great Armies of the Spaniards tel fought, that lafteth four hours, wherein rife against Asdrubal; and are overthrown the Romans get a notable victory: and a by him. P. scipio, to help these his friends, is more notable would have gotten, had not forced to make great hafte over the River. Cn. Scipio been wounded. Thirty nine Ele-At Castrum Altum, a place in the mid-way phants are killed, and twelve thousand men; between new Carthage and Saguntum, fa-three thousand prisoners taken, and seven Auringes;

Auringes; and the Romans pursue them. Cn. | took Saguntum (if they took it not by furthrows, the Spaniards, a people framed even also must we think, that all those battails disturbed them if they had been able.

But overlooking now this long continu-

scipio in a Litter is carried into the field, and | prife; which is to be suspected, fince in this vanquished the Carthaginians again; but Action we find no particulars remembred. kils not half so many of them, as before; as when the same place was taken by Hangood cause why, for there are fewer of them | nibal) they had gotten the better of their left to fight. Notwithstanding all these over- | Enemies in some notable fight. In like fort by nature to fet war on foot, quickly fill lately remembred, after every one of which up the broken troops of Afdrubal, who hav- Afdrubal fate down before some place, that ing also hired some of the Gauls, adventures | had rebelled, or seemed ready to rebel, were once more to try his fortune with the Ro- prosperous unto the Carthaginians. For it mans. But he is beaten again: and loseth is not the custome of Armies vanquished, to eight thousand of his mensbesides Priloners, carry the war from Town to Town, and Elephants, Enfigus, and other appurte- beleaguer Cities of their Enemies; but to nances. After fo many victories, the Romans fortifie themselves within their own places are even ashamed to leave Saguntum en- of strength, and therein to attend the levy thralled unto the Carthaginians; fince, in and arrival of new fupplies. And furely, behalf of that City, they had at first entred if the Romans had been absolute Masters into this war. And well may we think it of the field, when they won Saguntum, ftrange, that they had not recovered it long they would not have confumed a whole before, fince we may remember, that long year following, in practifing only with the before this they had won all the Countrey Celtiberians the next adjoyning people. Yet once and again. But it must not be forgot- made they this, little less than two years ten, that they had ere now befieged sagun- business. Of these Celtiberians we hear betum; and were fain (as appears) to go their | fore, That they had yielded up themselves way without it: so as they need not to blush, unto the Romans; for security of their faith, for having fo long forborn to do that, which | given Hostages to Scipio; and, at his appointere now they had attempted, but were un- ment, made war against the Carthaginians, able to perform. At the present they won with their proper forces. Wherefore it is Saguntum: and reftored the possession strange, that they are now thus hardly thereof unto such of the poor dispersed wrought; and not without express condi-Citizens as they can find out. They also tion of a great summ, hired to serve in the waste and destroy the Countrey of the Tur- Roman camp. How this may hold together I detani, that had ministred unto Hannibal cannot perceive; unless perhaps in those days matter of quarrel against the Saguntines. it were the Roman custome, or rather the This last action (questionless) was much to custome of some bad Author whom Livi their honour; and wherein we may be af- follows, to call every meffenger, or stragfured, that the Carthaginians would have gler, that entred that camp, an Hostage of that people from whom he came.

The Celtiberians at length, hired with ance of great victories, which the Romans great rewards, fend an Army of thirty thouhave gotten in spain, other print or token and to help the Romans: out of which, of all their brave exploits, we can perceive 3000 of the fittest men are chosen , and none, than this recovery of Saguntum: ex- carried into Italy, there to deal with their cepting the stopping of Asdrubals journey; | Countrey-men that follow Hannibal in his which was indeed of greatest importance, wars. But if any of these three hundred but appertaining to their own defence. For return back into spain, it is to be feared, they have landed at Emporia, an Haven that he brings with him such news of the Town, built and peopled by a Colony of riches and welfare of Hannibals men, that all the Phoceans, kin to the Malfilians, friends his fellows at home are the less unwilling to the Romans; They have easily won to to follow Asdrubal, when he shall next have their party, loft, recovered, and loft again, a defire to lead them into Italy. Hereof we some petty bordering Nations of the spal find more than probability, when these niards, that are carried one while by per- mercenary Celtiberians meet the Carthaginiswasion, other-whiles by force, & sometimes an Army in the field. The two scipio's, preby their own unfettled paffions; and now fuming on this access of strength, divide finally they have won a Town, whereof the their forces, and feek out the Enemies, who Carthaginians held entire possession, who lie not far off with three Armies. Askirubal hadrooted out the old inhabitants. Where the fon of Amilear, is nearest at hand; fore we may eafily believe, that when they even among the Celliberians, at Anitorgical good order: but the fear is, that this one C. Scipio therefore being unable to flay them, part of the Carthaginian forces being de- and no less unable, without their help, eiftroyed; Mago, the Son of Gefeo, hearing the ther to refift the enemy, or to joyn with his news, will make use of their distance, which Brother, maketh a very violent retrait; is five dayes march, and, by running into herein only differing from plain flight, that the furthest part of the Country save them he keeps his men together. Astrobal preffelves from being overtaken. Publius there- feth hard upon him: and Mago, with Afdrufore must make the more haste, and take bal the Son of Gesco, having made an end with him the better Souldiers, that is, two of Publing, haften to dispatch his Brother afparts of the old Roman Army, leaving the ter him. Scipio (teals from them all by night, third part, and all the Celliberians, to his but is overtaken the next day by their horse, Brother. He that hath the longer journey to and arrefted, in an open place of hard stomake, comes somewhat the sooner to his ny ground, where grows not so much as a lives end. Mago and Afdrubal, the Son of Ihrub, unfit for defence of his Legions Geleo, are not studying how to run away: against such enemies. Yet a little Hill he they find no fuch necessity. They joyn their finds of easie ascent on every side; which forces together, meet with Publius Scipio, and the takes for want of a more commodious lay at him fo hardly, that he is driven to place, and fortifies with pack-faddles, and keep himself close within his Trenches; other luggage, for default of a better Palwherein he thinks himself not well assured. lisado. These weak desences the Carthaei-Especially he is vexed by Masarissa, Prince vians soon tear in sunder : and, breaking in of the Maffelyli, Numidians, bordering up on all hands, leave very few of them alive; on Mauritania, in the Region called now that faving themselves, I know not how, Tremizen: to whom the chief honour of within some woods adjoyning, escape unto this service is ascribed, for that he becomes T. Fonteius, whom Publius had left in his afterward Confederate with the Romans. In Camp, as is before faid. It is a terrible overthis dangerous case, P. Scipio gets intelli- throw, they say, out of which no man escapes. gence, that Indibilis a spanish Prince, is com- Yet, how they that were thus hemmed inon ing with seven thousand and five hundred every side, in so bare a ground as afforded of the Suessetani, to joyn with his Enemies. not a shrub to cover them, could break out, Fearing therefore to be ftrait that up, and and throwd themselves within woods adbefieged, he islues forth by night, to meet joyning, I should much wonder; did not a with Indibilis upon the way, leaving T.Fon greater miracle following call away mine teins his Lieutenant, with a small company attention. T. Fonteins is in P. Scipio's Camp.on to defend the Camp. He meets with Indibi- the North fide of Iberus, fearful (as may be lie, but is not able according to his hope, to supposed) of his own life; fince his General, defeat him at the first incounter. The fight with two parts of the Roman Army, had

With him Cn. Scipio doubts not to take should have had for hazarding their lives. continues to long, that the Numidian horse little hope to remain long safe within it. Thiappear (whom he thought to have been ig- ther comes L. Martins, a young Roman norant of his departure) and fall upon the Gentleman of a notable spirit; who having Romans on all sides : neither are the Car- gathered together the scattered Souldiers, thaginians far behind; but come so fast up- and drawn some Companies out of their Garon him in a Rear, that P. Scipio, uncertain risons, makes a pretty Army. The Souldiers, which way to turn, yet fighting and anima- being to chuse a General by most voices, ting his men, where need most requireth, is preferr this L. Martius before Fonteins ftruck thorow with a lance, and flain: very the Lieutenant, as well they may. For few of his Army escaping the same destiny, Afdrubal the Son of Gesco, coming upon through benefit of the dark night. The them; this L. Martius fo encourageth his like end hath Cn. Scipio within nine and men (fondly weeping when he led them twenty daies after. At his meeting with Af- | forth, upon remembrance of their more hodrubal, the Celtiberian Mercenaries all for nourable Generals lately flain) and admofake him, pretending that they had war in nisheth them of their present necessity, that their own Country. If Anitorgis, where Af he beats the Carthaginians into their drubal then lay, were, as Ortelius following Trenches. A notable victory perhaps he Beuterus takes it, a Celtiberian Town; this might have gotten, but that he wifely founds was no vain pretence, but an apparent truth. the retrait; referving the fury of his Soul-But we may justly believe, that they were diers to a greater occasion. The Carthoginiwon by Afdribal, and eafily perfinaded to ans are at first amazed, and wonder whence take as much mony for not fighting, as they this new boldness grows, in enemies lately vanquished, taken : but when they see, that the Roman tius got a great name; which he might dares not follow his advantage, they return well do, if with fo fmall forces, and in fuch to their former fecurity; and, utterly de- diffress, he could clearly get off from the fpifing him, set neither Corps de garde nor Enemies, and give them any parting blow, Sentinel, but rest secure, as if no enemy were though it were far less than that which is near. Martius therefore animates his Soul- here set down. diers with lively words; and tells them, That there is no adventure more fafe, than to Rome, not forgetting his own good ferthat which is furthest from suspition of be- vice, whatsoever it was, but setting it out in ing undertaken. They are soon perswaded such wise, as the Senate might judge him to follow him, in any desperate piece of ser- worthy to hold the place of their Vicevice. So he leads them forth by night, and gerent in spain: which the better to intisteals upon the Camp of Afdrubal; where, mate unto them, he stilled himself Propretor. finding no guard, but the enemies fast The Fathers were no less moved with the tyafleep, or very drowfie, he enters without dings than the cafe required; and therefore refistance, fires their Cabbins, and gives took such careful order, for supplying their aterrible alarm; fo that all affrighted the forces in Spain, that although Hannibal came Carthaginians run head-long one upon ano- to the gates of Rome, ere the Companies ther, they know not which way. All paf- levied to ferve that Province, could be fages out of their Camp, Martius hath pre- fent away; yet could they not stay a tyde possessed, fo that there is no way to escape, for defence of the City it self, but shipped fave by leaping down the Rampart; which them in all hafte for spain. As for the title of as many do, as can think upon it, and run Propretor, which Martins had affumed they away toward the Camp of Afdrubal the Son thought it too great for him, and were ofof Amilear, that lay fix miles off. But Mar- fended at his prefumption in usurping it: tius hath way-laid them. In a Valley be- forefeeing well, that it was a matter of ill tween their two Camps he hath bestowed a consequence, to have the Souldiers abroad Roman cohort, and I know not what num- make choice among themselves of those that ber of Horse; so that into this Ambush they should command Armies and Provinces. fall every one, and are cut in pieces. But, Therefore Claudius Nero was dispatched left perchance any should have escaped, and away, with all convenient haste, into spain: give the alarm before his coming; Martins carrying with him about fix thousand of hastens to be there as soon as they. By which the Roman toot, and as many of the Latines, diligent speed, he comes early in the with three hundred Roman horse, and of the morning upon this further Camp; which Latines eight hundred. with no great difficulty he enters, and part- It happened well, that about these times, ly by apprehension of danger which the the affairs of Rome began to prosper in Italy, Énemies conceived, when they beheld the and afforded means of fending abroad such

Perate, as Valerius Antius, in multiplying whom he found among the Ausetani, near the numbers that have fallen in battels, enough at hand, incamped in a place called That, whilst Martius was making an Oration Lapides atrizout of which there was no iffue, to his Souldiers, a flame of fire shone about but only through a straight, whereon the Rohis head, Livie reports as a common tale, man seized at his first coming. What should vanquished, and now again little better than | rately concludeth, That this Captain Mar-

Of these occurrents L. Martius sent word

Roman shields, foul, and bloodied with a strong supply: otherwise the victories of their former execution, he drives head- Martius would ill have served either to keep long into flight, all that can fave themselves footing in Spain, or to stop the Carthaginifrom the fury of the fword. Thirty feven an Armies from marching towards the Alps. thouland of the enemies perish in this nights. For when Claudius, landing with his new work; besides a thousand eight hundred forces, took charge of that remainder of and thirty, taken prisoners. Hereunto Vale- the Army, which was under Martius and rius Antius adds, that the Camp of Mago | Fonteius; he found furer tokens of the overwas also taken, and seven thousand slain; throws received, than of those miraculous and that in another battel with Asdrubal, victories, whereof Martius had made his there were flain ten thousand more; besides vaunts unto the Senate. The Roman party four thousand three hundred and thirty ta- was forsaken by most of the Spanish friends; ken prisoners. Such is the power of some whom how to reclaim, it could not easily Historians. Livie therefore hath elsewhere be devised. Yet Clandius advanced boldly well observed, That there is none so intem- towards Asarbal the Brother of Hannibal; not giving thereto any credit: and tempe- have tempted any man of understanding to incamp in fuch a place, I do not find: and much of the great Alexanders vanity; how as little reason can I find in that which followed. For it is faid, That Afdrubal feeing himself thus lockt up, made offer to depart forthwith out of all spain, and quit the Province to the Romans, upon condition that he and his Army might be thence dismissed; That he spent many dayes, in entertaining parley with Claudius about this bufiness; That night by night he conveyed his footmen (a few at a time) through very difficult passages, out of the danger; and that finally taking advantage of a misty day, he ftole away with all his Horse and Elephants, leaving his Campempty. If we confider, that there were at the same time, besides this Afdrubal, two other Carthaginian Generals in end nothing is left out, that might ferve Spain; we shall find no less cause to wonder to adorn this Roman Champion. For it is at the simplicity of Claudius, who hoped to considently written, as matter of unqueconclude a bargain for fo great a Country, fitionable truth, That when a Proconful was with one of these three Chiestains, than at to be chosen for spain, there durst not any the ftrange nature of those passages, through which the footmen could hardly creep out self as Petitioner for that honourable, but by night; the Horse and Elephants easily following them in a dark mifty day. Wherefore in giving belief to such a tale, it is needful that we suppose, both the danger wherein the Carthaginians were, and the conditions offered for their safe departure, to have been of far less value. How soever it was; neither this, nor ought else that the Romans could do, served to purchase any new friends in Spain, or to recover the old which they had loft. Like enough it is that the old Souldiers, which had chosen Martius their Propretor, took it not well, that the Senate, regardless of their good deserts, had repealed their election, and fent a Propretor whom they fancied not so well. Some fuch occasion may have moved them to defire a Proconful, and (perhaps) young Scipio by name: as if a title of greater dignity were needful to work regard in the Barbarians; and the beloved memory of cn. and Publius, likely to do good, were it revived in one of the same family. Whether upon these,or upon other reasons; C. Claudius was recalferred the war into Africk: where he happily ended it, to the great honour and benefit of his Country. He was a man of goodly presence, and fingularly well conditioned; the Sea-coast. At the same of scipio's arrival, especially he excelled in Temperance, Contilit is faid, that Embassages came to him apace neucy, Bounty, and other vertues that pur- from all quarters of the Province; which chase love; of which qualities what great use he entertained with such a Majesty, as bred he made, shall appear in the tenour of his a wonderful opinion of him. As for the actions following. As for those things that enemies, they were greatly afraid of him; are reported of him, favouring a little too and fo much the greater was their fear, by

he used to walk alone in the Capitol, as one that had some secret conference with Tupiter; how a Dragon (which must have been one of the gods; and, in likelihood, Jupiter himself) was thought to have conversed with his Mother, entring her Chamber often. and vanishing away at the coming in of any man; and how of these matters he nourished the rumour, by doubtful answers; I hold them no better than fables, devised by Historians, who thought thereby to add unto the glory of Rome: that this Noble City might ieem not only to have surpassed other Nations in vertue of the generality, but also in great worth of one fingle man. To this Captain of the principal Citizens offer himdangerous charge ; That the people of Rome were much aftonished thereat; That when the day of Election came, all the Princes of the City flood looking one another in the face, not one of them having the heart to adventure himself in such a desperate service; and finally, that this P. Cornelius Scipio, being then about four and twenty years of age, getting up on an high place where he might be feen of all the multitude, requested and obtained, that the office might be conferred upon him. If this were true, then were all the victories of L. Martius no better than dreams: and either very unreasonable was the fear of all the Roman Captains, who durst not follow Claudius Nere, that not long before was gone into Spain Propretor; or very bad intelligence they had out of the Province, which Afdrubal the Carthaginian, as we heard even now, was ready to abandon. But upon these incoherences, which I find in the too partial Roman Historians, I do not willingly infist.

P. Scipio was fent Proconful into Spain; led out of the Province; and Publius the Son of P. Scipio sent Proconsul into Spain. as Propretor, and his Coadjutor. They car-This is that Scipio, who afterward trans- ried with them ten thousand foot, and a thousand horse, in thirty Quinquereme Gallies. With these they landed at Emporie; and marched from thence to Tarracon alongst how much the less they could give any rea- to fo great a benefit. Hereupon a Prince of fon of it. If we must believe this, then must the Celtiberians, and two petty Kings of the What booty was found within the Town, temper. Livie himself cannot certainly affirm; but is Now if I should here interpose mine own

we needs believe, that their fear was even as Ilergetes and Lacetani, nearest Neighbours great as could be: for very little cause there to Tarracon, and dwelling on the North-fide was, to be terrified with the fame of fo of Iberus, forfook the Carthaginian party, young a man, which had as yet performed and joyned with the Romans. The speech nothing. All the Winter following (or, as of Indibilis, King of the Ilergetes, is much fomethink, all the next Year) he did no- commended; for that he did not vaunt thing: but spent the time perhaps, as his fore- himself, as commonly Fugitives use, of the goers had done, in treating with the Spani- pleasure, which he did unto the Romans, in ards. His first enterprise was against new revolting from their enemies; but rather ex-Carthage: upon which he came unexpected, cused this his changing side, as being thereto with five and twenty thousand foot, and compelled by injuries of the Carthaginians, two thousand five hundred horse; his Sea- and invited by the honourable dealing of forces coasting him, and moderating their Scipio. This temperate estimation of his new course in such wise, that they arrived there professed friendship, was indeed no unsure together with him. He affailed the Town by token, that it should be long-lasting. But if Land and Sea; and won it by affault the the Ilergetes had long ere this (as we have first day. The Carthaginians lost it, by their heard before) for saken the Carthaginian partoo much confidence upon the strength of ty, and stoutly held themselves as friends to it: which caused them to man it more slen- cin. Scipio: then could nothing have been dederly, than was requisite. Yet it might have vised more vain, than this Oration of Indibibeen well enough defended, if some Fisher- lis their King, excusing, as new, his taking men of Tarracon had not discovered unto part with the same, when he should have ra-Scipio, a fecret passage unto the walls; where- ther craved pardon for his breach of alliof the Townsmen themselves were either ig- ance, formerly contracted with the Father norant, or thought (at least) that their ene- and the Uncle. Most likely therefore it is, mies could have no notice. This City of new that howfoever the two elder scipio's had carthage, resembled the old and great car- gotten some few places among these their thage in fituation; franding upon a demy- Neighbours, and held them by frength; yet Island, between an Haven and a great Lake. were the Romans never masters of the All the Western side of the walls, and some- Country, till this worthy Commander, by what of the North, was fenced with this recovering their Holtages from the Cartha-Lake: which the Fisher-men of Tarracon had ginians, and by his great munificence in founded; and finding fome part thereof a fending them home, won unto himself the shelf, whereon at low-water men might pass affured love and affistance of these Princes. knee-deep, or (at most) wading up to the The Carthaginian Generals, when they Navil, Scipio thrust thereinto some compa- heard of this loss, were very forry: yet nenies of his men; who recovered the top of vertheless they set a good face on the matthe walls without refiftance: the place be- | ter ; faying, That a young man, having ftoln ing left without guard; as able to defend it a Town by surprise, was too far transported, felf by the natural strength. These falling and over-joyed, but that shortly they would suddenly upon the backs of the Carthagini- meet with him, and put him in mind of his ans within the City, easily forced a gate, Father and Uncle; which would alter his and gave free entrance to the Roman Army. | mood, and bring him to a more convenient fain to fay, That some Roman Historians told conjecture; I should be bold to fay, That the lies without measure, in way of amplificati- Carthaginians were at this time busic, in seton. By that small proportion of riches, ting forth towards Italy; and that Scipio; to which was afterward carried by Scipio into divert them, undertook new Carthage, as his the Roman Treasury, we may easily perceive | Father and Uncle, upon the like occasion, how great a vanity it was to fay, That all fate down before Ibera. And in this respect the wealth of Africk and Spain was heaped I would suppose, that it had not been much up in that one Town. But therein were be- amis, if the passage over the Lake had been flowed all the spanish Hostages (or at least undiscovered, and the Town held out some of the adjoyning Provinces) whom Scipio longer while. For howfoever that partiintreated with fingular courtefie 3 refloring cular Action was the more fortunate, in them unto their kindred and friends, in fuch coming to fuch good iffue upon the first gracious manner, as doubled the thanks due day: yet in the generality of the business,

900

be wished, that Astrubal should be stayed finally to have concluded, that go he needs from going into Half, than that half of spain must, were it but to carry all the spaniards thould be taken from him. Whereas there- as far as might be, from the name of scipio. fore he had nothing left to do, that fhould How likely this was to have been true, it hinder his journey; Mago, and Afdrubal shall appear at his coming into Half; whence the fon of Ggeo, were thought fufficient to these incoherent relations of the spanish hold seipio work, in that lingring War of affairs have too long detained us. taking and retaking Towns, whilst the main of the Carthaginian forces, under Asdrubal the fon of Amilear, went to a greater enterprise: even to fight in tryal of the Empire. But the Roman Historians tell this after another fashion; and say, That Asdrubal was beaten into Italy: whither he ran for fear, as thinking himself ill assured of the spaniards, as long as they might but hear the name of Scipio. Scipio, fay they, coming upon Afdrubal; his Vant-currers charged fo lustily the Carthaginian horse, that they drave them into their Trenches: and made it apparent, even by that fmall piece of service how full of spirit the Roman Army was, and how dejected the Enemy. Afdrubal therefore by night retired out of that even ground, and occupied an Hill, compassed on rejoyced (as may be thought) not a little, to three fides with the River, very freep of hear the good news from Carthage of fuch ascent, and not easie of access on the foreside: mighty aid, as was decreed to be sent thence by which himself got up, and was to be followed by the Romans. On the top of it there work enough, to carry the Romans corn inwas a Plain, whereon he strongly encamp- to his own barns, and to drive away their ed himself: and in the mid-way, between Cattel to Geryon: his victories affording him the top and root of the Hill, was also ano- little other profit, than sustenance for his Arther Plain; into which he descended, more upon bravery, that he might He might perhaps have forced fone walled not feem to hide himself within the Towns in like fort as he did Gergon, and the Trenches, than for that he durft adventure Castle of Canne: but had he spent much his Army to the hazzard of a battail, for time, about the getting of any one place well which this was no equal ground. But such defended; the hunger, that his Army must advantage of place could not fave him from have endured the Winter and Spring folthe Romans. They climed up the Hill to him; lowing, untill corn were ripe, would have they recovered even footing with himsdrove grievoully punished him for such imployhim out of this lowerPlain, up into his Camp | ment of the Summer. This may have been on the Hill top: whither although the accent the reason, why he forbore to adventure up were very difficult, and his Elephants bestow- on Rome, after his victory at Canna. For had ed in the smoothest places to hinder their he failed (as it was a matter of no certainapproach; yet compassing about, and seeking ty) to carry the City at his first coming; passage where it was hardest to be found; but much more strongly breaking their to quit the enterprise. Yea many of the gan. Nevertheless, Mago, and Astrubal the lessened reputation, somewhat later in the fon of Gesco, are reported after this to have lyear; when time to force their obedience between Rome and Carthage, it was more to confulted with him about this War; and

The great troubles that Hannibal raised in all quarters, to the City of Rome. Posthumius the Roman General, with his whole Army is flain by the Gauls. Philip King of Macedon enters into a League with Hannibal, against the Romans. The Romans joyning with the Ætolians, make war upon Philip in Greece: and afterwards conclude a peace with him. the better to intend their business against the Carthaginians.

WE left Hannibal wintering at Capua: where he and his new Confederates unto him. In former times he had found my; by making him mafter of the open field. want of victuals would have compelled him way, where the Carthaginians had got up reople that opened to halfily their gates before them, they drave both men and Ele- unto him, upon the fresh bruit of his glophants head-long, I know not whither for it rious fuccess, would have taken time of deis faid, that there was no way to flye. Out of liberation, and waited perhaps the event fuch a battel, wherein he had loft eight thou- of another battel; if being, either for want fand men, Aftrubal is faid to have escaped; of means to force the City, or of necessary and gathering together his differ fed troops, ries to continue a fiege before it, repelled to have marched toward the Fyrenes, hav- (as might feem) from the walls of Room, he ing fent away his Elephants ere the fight be-

was wanting, unless they would freely yield | or Petilia, by force ; after it had held out it. But this great part of the care and travel fome moneths. He won likewise Consentia. was past, when so many States of Italy were and Croton, that was forsaken by the Inhabecome his: the year following, the sam- bitants. Also the City of Locri, which was nites, and other old enemies of Rome, were of great importance, yielded unto him : like to receive a notable pleasure of their as did all other places thereabout ; except new alliance with Carthage, by helping to only the Town of Rhegium, over against

winter was passed over joyfully, saving that to be recorded, as a notable testimony of there came not any tidings of the prepara- the good government, under which the Rotions, to second the welcome report of those man subjects lived. As for the Samnites, Cammighty forces, that were decreed and expected. The Spring grew on: and of the bellion may feem to prove the contrary; we promifed fupply there arrived no more, are to confider, That they had lately conthan only the Elephants. How late it was tended with Rome for Soveraignty, and were ere these came, I find not : only we find, now transported with ambition : which that after this he had above thirty of them; reason can hardly moderate, or benefits alwhereas all, fave one, that he brought over lay. The Petilians, in the very beginning of the Alps, had been loft in his journy through their danger, did fend to Rome for help: the Marishes of Hetruria. Very bad excuse where their messengers received answer of this exceeding negligence, they that from the Senate, That the publick misforbrought the Elephants could make unto tunes had not left means, to relieve their Hannibal. If they were his friends, they told Affociates that were fo far diftant. The Petihim truly, what mischiefs the perswasion of lian Messengers (Embassadours they are Hanno wrought among the too niggardly | termed; as were all others, publickly fent Carthaginians. Otherwise, they might per- from Cities of the Roman subjection, that haps inform him, that it was thought a had a private jurisdiction within themfafer, though a farther way about, to pass felves) fell down to the ground, and humbly along through Spain and Gaul, as he him- befought the Fathers, not to give them felf had done; and increase the Army, by away: promising to do and suffer whatsoehyring the Barbarians in the journey; than ver was possible, in defence of their Town, to commit the main strength of their City, against the Carthaginians. Hereupon the Seto the hazzard of the Seas: especially want- nate fell to consultation again: and having ing a commodious Haven, to receive the throughly confidered all their forces re-Fleet that should carry such a number of maining, plainly confessed, that it was not in Men, Horses, and Elephants, with all need-their power to give any relief. Wherefore ful provisions. With these allegations Hanni- these Embassadours were willed to return bal must rest content; and seek, as well as home, and to bid their Citizens provide he can, to fatisfie his Italian Confederates. hereafter for their own fafety, as having al-Therefore when time of the year ferved, he ready discharged their faith to the utmost. took the field: and having finished what All this notwithstanding, the Petilians (as was faid)held out fome moneths: and having striven in vain to defend themselves, when there was no apparent possibility gave to the Carthaginians a bloody victory over them 5 being vanguished as much by famine, as by

The Romans at this time were indeed in fuch ill case, that Hannibal with a little help no to the Lucans: not forgetting at once to from Carthage, might have reduced them unto terms of great extremity. For whereas, til and Sardinia, fince the fiege of Rome must in a great bravery, before their loss at Canneeds be deferred unto another year. Hanno na, they had shewed their high minds, by made an ill journey of it being met or over- entertaining the care of things far off, nottaken, by T. Sempronius Longus: who flew withflanding the great war that lay upon above two thousand of his men; with the them so near at hand: it now fell out miserloss of fewer than three hundred Romans. ably all at once, that their fortune abroad But Himileo fped far better. By help of the was no whit better than at home. L. Posthu-

Xxxxx 2

o. XII.

lay fiege unto that proud City, which fo | Sicil. long had held them in subjection. Thus the The great faith of the Petilians is worthy rested to be done at Casilinum, sought to make himfelf Mafter of some good Haventown thereabout; that might ferve to entertain the Carthaginian Fleet, or take from his Enemies at home all excuse, which they might pretend by want thereof. To the same any violence of the Assailants. purpole, and to do what elfe was needful, he fent Himileo unto the Locrians, and Hanaffay all quarters of Italy, yea, the Itles of Si-Brutians, his good friends, he won Petellia, mius Albinus their Prætor they had fent, with an Army of five and twenty thousand, For having affured his affairs in Greece, and into Gaul: to the Illyrian King Pinens they enjoying leifure to look into the doings had fent for their tribute due, whereof the abroad, he fent Embassadours to Hannibal; pay-day was past; willing him, if he defired with whom he made a league, upon these forbearance, to deliver Hoftages for his conditions; That the King in person should performance of what was due; and to Philip come into Italy, and with all his forces, by King of Macedon they had fent, to require, Land and Sea, affift the Carthaginians in the that he should deliver up unto them Deme-Roman war, until it were finished; That trius Pharius their Subject and Rebel, whom Rome, and all Italy, together with all the he had received. But now from all quar- spoil therein to be gotten, should be lest inters they hear tydings, little fuitable to tire unto the State of Carthage; and that aftheir former glorious conceits. Posthumius terwards Hannibal, with his Army, should with all his Army was cut in pieces by the pass into Greece, and there affilf Philip, until he had subdued all his enemies (which ped. The manner of his overthrow was very were the Ætolians, Thracians, King Antiofrange. There was a great Wood, called by the Gauls, Litana; thorow which he was to him the full possession of that Country, and pals. Against his coming, the Enemies had the Isles adjoyning. But such predisposition fawed the trees fo far, that a little force of Kingdomes and Provinces, is lightly would ferve to cast them down. When there-controlled by the divine Providence, which fore Posthumius, with his whole Army, was therein shews It self ; not (as Herodotus fallentred into this dangerous passage, the ly terms it, and like an Askesss envious or Gauls that lay about the Wood, began to malicious, but very just and Majestical in cast down the trees; which falling one upholding that unspeakable greatness of against another, bore all down so fast, that Soveraignty, by which II rules the whole the Romans were overwhelmed, Men and World, and all that therein is. Horses, in such wise, that no more escaped, The first Embassadours that Philip sent, than is faid before. How this tedious work fell into the Romans hands, in their journey of fawing fo many trees, could take defired towards Hannibal: and being examined effect, and neither be perceived, nor made what they were, adventured upon a bold frustrate, either by some wind that might lye, faying, That they were sent from the have blown all down before the Romans King of Macedon to Rome, there to make a entred, or by some other of those many ac- League with the Senate and people, and ofcidents, whereto the device was subject; I do fer his help in this time of great necessity. not well conceive. Yet some such thing may These news were so welcome, that the joy have been done, and what failed in the thereof took away all care of making better ftratagem, supplied with the Enemies sword. inquiry. So they were lovingly feasird, and It is not perhaps worthy to be omitted, as freely difmified with guides that should a monument of the favage condition where- lead them the way, and shew them how to with Lombardie, a Country now so civil, avoid the Carthaginians. But they being thus was infected in elder times, That of Pofthu- infructed concerning their journey, fell urius his skull, being cleansed and trimmed wilfully into the Camp of Hannibal; who up with gold, a drinking cup was made, and entertained them after a better fashion, and confectated in their principal Temple, as an concluded the bufiness about which they holy vessel for the use of the Priest in their came, upon the points before remembred folemnities. Of this great overthrow, when In their return homeward, they happened word was brought to Rome, the amazement again unluckily to be described by the Rowas no less than the calamity. But forrow man Fleet; which mistrusting them to be of could give no remedy to the michief: and the Carthaginian party, gave them chace. manding their duty, as Vassals. The Macedonian troubled them yet a little further. Mafter. The tale was now less credible than anger was vain, where there wanted forces They did their best to have ecaped: but torevenge. Tribute from the Illyrians there being overtaken, they fuffered the Romans came none; neither do I find that any was to come aboord; and trufting to the lye that a second time demanded; this we find, That once had served them, aid it again, That ha with Pleuratus, and Scerdiletus, Illyrian ving been fent from King Philip to make a Kings as also with Gentius, who reigned league with the people of Rome, they were within a few years following, the Romans not able by reason of the Carthaginians lydealt upon even terms; entreating their afing between, to get any further than to fistance against Philip and Perseus; not combefore: and (which marred all) Gefco, Boft ar, with fo great flaughter, that they forced and Mago, with their followers, Carthagi-nians that were fent with them from Hanni-The King purposed (as it is said) to have dehaltoratifie the agreement, being prefently parted thence by Sea: but Valerius, coming detected, made the matter apparent. Where- with his Fleet from Oricum, stopped up the fore a little inquisition served to find all mouth of the River, so that he was fain to out: so that at length Hannibals own let- burn his ships (which belike were no betterstoKing Philip were delivered up, and the ter than long boats) and depart ill furnished whole bufiness confected. The Embassadours of carriages by Land. After this Valerius and their followers were fent close prisoners dealt with the Ætolians, a Nation alwayes to Rome; where the chief of them were cast enemy to the Crown of Macedon; and easily into prison, and the rest sold for bond- perswaded them (being so affected, as hath flaves. Yet one of their flips that escaped, else-where been shewed) to make strong carried word into Macedon of all that had war on Philip; wherein he promifed them happened. Whereupon new Embaliage was great affiftance from the Romans. That fent, that went and returned with better which most moved the troublesome spirits of feed; concluding, as was agreed before, the Ætolians, was the hope of getting Acar-

902

CHAP. III.

only with some loss of time.

nania; after which they had gaped long, and The Romans were exceedingly perplexed; whereof the Roman was as liberal in making thinking with what heavy weight this Mace- promife, as if already it had been his own. donian war, in an evil hour, was likely to So a league was made between them; and fall upon them, when their shoulders were afterward solemnly published at Olympia, over-burdened with the load of the Cartha- by the Etolians, and by the Romans in their ginian. Yet they took a noble resolution, Capitol. The conditions were, that from and suitable unto that, whereby they kept | Ætolia to Coregra, in which space Acarnania off the storm, that else would have beaten was contained, all the Country should be upon them from spain. They judged it more subdued, and left unto the Atolians, the easie with small forces to detain Philip in pillage only to be given to the Romans. And Greece, than with all their strength to refist that if the Etolians made peace with Phihim in Italy. And herein they were in the lip, it should be with Provision, to hold no right. For that the very reputation of a King longer than whilft he abstained from doing of Maccdon, joyning with Hannibal in such injury to the Romans, or their Associates. a time, would have sufficed to shake the al- This was indeed the only point whereat Valegiance, not only of the Latines, and other, lerius aimed, who promifed as much on the their most faithful Subjects, but even of the Romans behalf, That they should not make Roman Colonies, that held all priviledges peace with the Macedonian, unless it were of the City, it will appear by the following with like condition of including the Ætofuccess of things. M. Valerius the Prætor lians. Into this league was place reserved for with twenty Quinquereme Gallies, was ap- the Laced emonians and Eleans, as to those pointed to attend upon the Macedonian, and that had made or favoured the fide of Cleato let on foot some commotion in Greece, or menes against the Macedonian, to enter at to nourish the troubles already therein be- their pleasure. The like regard was had of gun. Philip was busie about the Sea Towns, | Attalus, Pleuratus, and Scerdiletus: the first that looked towards Italy, fetting upon of which reigned at Pergamus in Asia the Apollonia; and thence falling upon Oricum, less, a Prince hereafter much to be spoken which he won, and so returned to Apollo of, the other two held some part of Illyria, mia again. The Epirots craved help of M.Va- about which the Romans were to far from lerius; or rather accepted his kind offers; continding with them, that gladly they who had none other business to do. The sought to get their friendly acquaintance. Garrison that Philip had left in Oricum, was But the names of these Associates are thrust strong enough to hold the Towns-men in into the Treaty, rather to give it countegood order, but not to keep out the Romans; nance, than for any readiness which they disof whose daring to attempt any thing close to enter thereinto. The Atolians alone, against him, on that side the Sea, Philip as and chiefly Scopas their Prætor, with then had no suspition. Valerius therefore ea- Dorymachus and others, are yet a while the fily regained the Town, and fent thence a only men, of whom the Roman Generals thousand men, under Nevius Crispus, an un- must make much; as the late French King, dertaking and expert Captain, which got Henry the fourth, when he had only the by night into Apollonia. These made a no- title of Navarre, was said to court the Majors table fally, and brake into Philip's Trenches of Rochel. Philip was not idle, when he heard

whereunto the Ætolians tended. He repair- Hereupon, these his troublesome neighbours ed his Army, made a countenance of war defired peace of him, and used their best upon the Illyrians, and other his borderers, that were wont in times of danger to infest the Kingdom of Macedon; wasted the Country about Oricum and Apollonia, and overrunning the Pelagonians, Dardanians, and rable conditions, as ill befeemed vanquished others, whom he held suspected, came down men to offer; and might therefore well teinto The flaty, whence he made thew as if he stiffie, that their minds were altered. It was would invade Ætolia. By the fame of this not any love of peace, but fear of being be-Expedition, he thought to ftir up all the fieged in their own Towns, that had made Greeks adjoyning, against the Ætolians; them desirous of composition. This sear bewhom they generally detefted as a neft of ing taken away, by the incouragements of Robbers, troubleleme to all the Country. Attalus and the Romans, they were as fierce To which purpose, and to hinder the Æto- as ever; and thrust a Garrison of their own. lians from breaking into Greece, he left Per- and some Roman friends into Elis; which feus, his Son and Heir, with four thousand threatned Achaia, wherein Philip then lav. men, upon their borders: with the rest of The Romans, making a cut over the straight his Army, before greater business should from Nanpatius, wasted the Country in a overtake and intangle him, he made a long terrible bravery; wherein Philip required journey into Thrace, against a people called him, coming upon them in great haste from the Medes, that were wont to fall upon Ma- the Nemaan Games (which he was thencecedon, whenfoever the King was ablent. The lebrating) and fending them fafter away, Ætolians hearing of his departure, armed but nothing richer than they came. as many as they could against the Acarnanians; in hope to subdue those their daily of Bithynia, fearing the growth of Attalus. enemies, and win their little Country, ere no less than Attalus held suspected the power he should be able to return. Hereto it much of Philip, fent a Navy into Greece, to affist availed, that the Romans had already taken the Macedonian party. The like did the Ocniada and Naxos, Acarnanian Towns, con- Carthaginians; and upon greater reason, as veniently fituated to let in an Army; and being more interessed in the success of his configned them unto the Atolians, accord- affairs. Philip was too weak by Sea: and ing to the tenour of the contract lately made | though he could man fome two hundred with them. But the front resolution of the ships, yet the vessels were such, as could not Arcananians, to dye (as we fay) every Mo- hold out against the Roman Quinqueremes. thers Son of them, in defence of their Coun- Wherefore it behoved him to use the help try; together with the great haste of the of his good friends the Carthaginians, But Macedonian (who laid afide all other busi- their aid came somewhat too late; which nefs) to succour these his friends; caused the | might better at first have kept those Ene-Ætolians to forsake their enterprise. When mies from fastening upon any part of Greece, this Expedition was given over, the Romans | than afterward it could ferve to drive them and Etolians fell upon Ancyra, which they out, when they had pierced into the bowels took: the Romans affailed by Sea, the Eto- of that Country. Ere Philip could attempt lians by Land. The Ætolians had the Town, any thing by Sea, it was needful that he and the Romans the spoil.

chosen Consul at Rome; and P. Sulpitius sent But in assailing their Town, he was encounin his flead, to keep the war on foot in tred by the Atolian and Roman garrison, Greece. But besides the Roman help, Attalus | which drave him back with some loss. In out of Asa came over to affist the Atolians. Such cases, especially where God intendeth He was chiefly moved by his own jealousie a great conversion of Empire, Fame is very of thalips greatness; though somewhat also powerful in working. The King hadreceltickled with the vanity of being chosen by ved no great detriment in his retrait from the Etolians their principal Magistrate; which honour, though no better than titulary, he took in very loving part. Against the forces which Attalus and the Romans also soon after taken a great multitude of had sent, being joyned with the main power the Eleans, to the number of four thousand, of Ætolia, Philip tried the fortune of two with some twenty thousand head of Cattel, battels; and was victorious in each of them. which they had brought together in a place means to get it. And when the day appointted for the conclusion therefore, was come: their Embassadours, in stead of making fubmission, proposed unto him such intole-

In the heat of this contention, Prusias King should correct the Eleans, bad neighbours For these good services M. Valerius was to the Achaians his principal Confederates. Elis: rather he had given testimony of his personal valour, in fighting well on foot, when his horse was slain under him. He had

of fafety, as they thought, when their Country was invaded. But it had hapned, that port of Cleomenes his death in Egypt, went in his pursuit of the Roman forragers about about to chuse two new Kings, and to consicyon, his horse running hastily under a form themselves to their old manner of golow tree, had torn off one of the horns, vernment. But their estate was so far out which (after the fashion of those times) the of tune, that their hope of redressing things King wore in his Creft. This was gathered within the City, proved no less unfortunate, up by an Ætolian, who carried it home, and than had been their attempts of recovershewed it as a token of Philip's death. The ling a large dominion abroad. Lycurgus a horn was well known, and the tale believed. Tyrant role up among them: upon whom All Macedon therefore was in an uproar; succeeded this Machanidas, and shortly afand not only the boderers, ready to fall up- ter came Nabis, that was worse than both on the Country, but some Captains of Philip of them. They held on the Ætolian and Roeafily corrupted; who thinking to make man fide, for fear of the Acheans, that were themselves a fortune in that change of the chief Confederates of Philip, and hated things, ran into fuch treason, as they might extremely the name both of Tyrant and better hope to make good, than to excuse. Lacedemonian. But of these we shall speak Hereupon the King returned home, leaving more hereafter. not three thousand men to affist his friends the Acheans. He also took order, to have Bea- presence had brought the contentment of conserected, that might give him notice of affurance to that Country; spake brave the enemies doings, upon whom he meant words to the Assembly of their States, sayshortly to return. The affairs of Macedon, ling, That he had to do with an Enemy his presence quickly established. But in that was very nimble, and made war by Greece all went ill-favouredly; especially in running away. He told how he had folthe Isle of Eubwa, where one Plator betrayed lowed them to Chalcis, to Orcum, to Opus, to Attalus and the Romans, the Town of and now into Achaia; but could no where Oreum, ere Philip could arrive to help it: find them, fuch hafte they made, for fear of where also the strong City of Chalcis was being overtaken. But flight, he said, was not likely to have been lost, if he had not come alwaies prosperous: he should one day the sooner. He made such hasty marches, light upon them; as ere this he sundry that he had almost taken Attalus in the City times had done, and still to their loss. The of Opus: This City, lying over against Eu- Achaians were glad to hear these words; bea, Attalus had won more through the and much the more glad, in regard of his cowardize of the people, than any great good deeds accompanying them. For he reforce that he had used : now because the Ro- Itored unto their Nation some Towns that man Souldiers had defrauded him in the were in his hand, belonging to them of old. fack of Oreum, and taken all to themselves; it | Likewise to the Megalopolitans their Confewas agreed, that Attalus should make his best derates, he rendred Aliphera. The Dyprofit of the Opuntians, without admitting means, that had been taken by the Rothe Romans to be his sharers. But whilst he mans, and fold for slaves, he sought out, was busie, in drawing as much mony as he ransomed, and put in quiet possession of could out of the Citizens: the fudden ty- their own City. Further, paffing over the dings of Philip's arrival, made him leave all | Corinthian Gulf, he fell upon the Etolians; behind him, and run away to the Sea-fide, whom he drave into the mountains and Romans gone before, upon the like fear.

The Lacedamonians, hearing certain re-

Philip entring into Achaia, and feeing his where he got aboord his ships, finding the wood, or other their strongest holds, and wasted their Country. This done, he took Either the indignity of this misadventure, leave of the Acheans, and returned home or tydings of Prusias the Bithy nian his inva- by Sea, visited the people that were his subfion upon the Kingdom of Pergamus; made | jects, or dependants; and animated them fo Attalus return home, without staying to well, that they rested searless of any threattake leave of his friends. So Philip reco- ning danger. Then had he leifure to make vered Opus, won Torone, Tritonos, Drymus war upon the Dardanians, ill neighbours to and many small Towns in those parts; per- Macedon: with whom nevertheless he was forming likewise some actions, of more bra- not so far occupied, but that he could go in very than importance, against the Ætolians. hand with preparing a Fleet of an hundred In the mean feason, Machanidas, the Tyrant Gallies, whereby to make himself Master of Lacedamon, had been busie in Peloponne- of the Sea; the Romans (since the depar-Jus; but hearing of Philip's arrival, was re- ture of Attalus) having not dared to meet or purfue him, when he lately ran along the

This good fuccess added much reputati- the Carthaginians unto a fafe and thrifty on to the Macedonian, and emboldened him course: which was, not to admit into the felto make strong war upon the Ætolians, at lowship of their Italian wars so mighty a their own doors. As for the Romans either Prince; whom change of affection might fome displeasure, conceived against their make dangerous to their Empire; or his Confederates, or some fear of danger at much affection unto Hannibal, more dangehome, when Afdrubal was ready to fall upon rous to their liberty. Rather they should Italy; caused them to give over the care of do well to save charges, and feed the Macethings in Greece, and leave their friends donian with hopes; by making many prothere to their own fortunes. The Ætolians miles of fending a fleet and some other suctherefore being driven to great extremity, cours. This would cost nothing, yet would were fain to fue for peace unto Philip; and it ferve to terrifie the Romans, and compell accept it, upon what ever conditions it best them to send part of their forces from home, pleased him. The agreement was no sooner that might find this Enemy work abroad. made, than P. Sempronius with ten thousand | So should the Roman Armies be lessened in foot, a thousand horse, and thirty five gal- | Italy; and Philip, when once he was ingaged lies, came over in great hafte (though some- in the war, be urged unto the profecution, what too late) to trouble it. Hearing how by his own necessity: putting the Carthathings went in Ætolia, he turned alide to ginians to little or no charges 3 yea, scarce to Dyrrhacchium and Apollonia, making a great the labour of giving him thanks. Now ifit noise, as if with these his own forces he might come to pals, as Hannibal every day would work wonders. But it was not long ere did promife, that Rome, and all Italy should Philip came to visit him, and found him tame within a while be at the devotion of Carenough. The King prefented him battel, but | thage: better it were, that the City should he refused it : and fuffering the Macedoni- be free, to as the troublesome Greeks might ans to waste the Countrey round about, be- address their complaints unto the Carthagifor his eyes, kept himself close within the vians, as competent Judges between them wals of Apollonia, making some overtures of and the Macedonian, than that Hamibal. peace: which caused Philip to return home with the power of Africk, should wait upquietly. The Romans had not so great cause on Philip, as his Executioner, to fulfill his to be displeased with the Atolians, as had will and pleasure, in doing such injuries, as Philip to take in evil part the demeanor of would both make the name of a Carthaginithe Carthaginians. For notwithstanding the an hateful in Greece, and oblige Philip to be royal offer that he made them, to serve their no less impudent, in fulfilling all requests of turn in Italy, and affilt them, in getting their Hannibal. Whether the counsel of Hanno hearts defire, before he would expect any and his fellows were fuch as this, or wherequital: they had not fent any ficet, as in ther the Carthaginians, of their own disposireason they ought, and as (considering his tion, without his advice, were too sparing, want of sufficient ability by Sea) it is likely and careless, the matter (as far as concerned they were bound either to secure the tran- | Philip) came to one reckoning. For they did sportation of his Army, or to free his coast him no manner of good, but frather dodged from the Roman and Ætolian Piracies. Only with him, even in their little courtesse which his own Navy, durst boldly pass by Sea, make Monarchs, and alter the affairs of the he had wilfully entred into trouble for their coast of Greece, fast by them where they world at pleasure. Therefore he had reafon, fuch as envy could fuggeft, to perfwade once they came to his help, which was at his they most pretended. And this perhaps was last journey into Achaia. But they were gone part of the reason, why he began the again before his arrival: having done no- building of an hundred Gallies, as if he thing, and pretending fear of being taken by would let them and others know, whereto the Romans, even at such time as Philip with his proper strength would have reached, had he not vainly given credit to faithless proand found none that durst oppose him. This mises. When therefore the Etolians had wretchless dealing of the Carthaginians, may submitted themselves already: and when the therefore seem to have been one of Hanno Romans desired his friendship, as might be his tricks, whereof Hannibal so bitterly com- thought, for very fear of him, with repuplained. For it could not but grieve this ma- tation enough, and not as a forfaken Client licious man exceedingly to hear that so of the Carthaginians, but a Prince able to great a King made offer to serve in person have succoured them in their necessity, he under Hannibal, and required the affiftance might give over the war, and, without reof the same Hannibal, as of a man likely to prehension, leave them to themselves. For fakes: but they despised him, as if the quarrel were meerly his own, and he unable to manage it.

CHAP. III.

The vanity of which their conceits would appear unto them, when they should see. that with his proper strength he had finished the War, and concluded it highly to his honour. So the year follow-ing it was agreed, by the mediation of that embracing fo many enterprises at conditions somewhat to their loss.

ferve to follow it.

s. XIII.

How the Romans began to recover their strength by degrees. The noble affection of the Romans, in relieving the publick Necesfities of their Common-weal.

the Epirots, Acarnanians, and others, once, they followed all by the halves; and That the Romans should retain three or wasted more men and mony to no purpose, four Towns of Illyria, which they had than would have served (if good order had recovered in this War, being part of been taken) to finish the whole War, in their old Illgrian Conquest: Places no far shorter space; and make themselves way belonging to the Macedonian; and Lords of all that the Romans held. This error therefore perhaps inferted into the Cove- had become the less harmful, if their care nants, that somewhat might seem to have of Haly had been such as it ought. But they been gotten. On the other fide, the fuffered Hamibal to weary himfelf with ex-Atimanes were appointed to return under pectation of their promifed supplies; which the obedience of Philip: who, if they being still deferred from year to year, cauwere (as Ortelius probably conjectures) fed as great opportunities to be loit, as a Conthe people of the Country about Apollo- querour could have defired. The death of nia, then did the Romans abandon part Posthumins, and destruction of his whole Arof their gettings; whereby it appears, that my in Ganl; the begun rebellion of the Sarthey did not give peace, as they would dinians; the death of Hiero their friend in feem to have done, but accepted it, upon Syracuses, with great alterations much to their prejudice, in the whole Ille of sicil; as al-The Confederates and Dependants of lothat War, of which we last spake threatthe Macedonian, comprehended in this ned from Macedon, happening all at one time; Peace, were Prulias King of Bithynia, the and that so nearly after their terrible over-Acheans, Beotians, Theffalians, Acarnani- throw at Canna, among fo many revolts of ans, and Epirots. On the Roman fide their Italian Confederates; would utterly were named, first, the people of Ilium, have funk the Roman State; had the Carthaas an honourable remembrance of the ginians, if not the first year, yet at least the Romans descent from Troy; then, Attalus second, sent over to Hannibal the forces that King of Pergamus; Fleuratus an Illyrian was decreed. It is not to be doubted, that Prince; and Nabis the Tyrant of Lacede- even this diversity of great hopes, appearing mon; together with the Eleans, Messeni- from all parts, administred matter unto Hanand, and Athenians. The Ætolians were omitted, belike, as having agreed for themselves before. But the Eleans and Carthage, to perform all that was decreed for Melfenians, followers of the Etolians, Italy; yet could not that prohibition hold, (and by them, as is most likely, compri- when so many new occurrences brought prifed in their league with Philip) were each along with them their new care; and also inserted by the Romans; that were required their several Armies. This had not never flow in offering their friendship to been a very bad excule, if any one of the mafmall and feeble Nations. As for the ny occasious offered had been throughly Athenians; they flood much upon their profecuted: though it flood with bestreaold honour; and loved to bear a part, fon, that the foundation of all other hopes though they did nothing, in all great acti- and comforts, which was the prosperity of ons. Yet the fetting down of their names | Hannibal in his Italian war, should have been in this Treaty, ferved the Romans to strengthened; whatsoever had become of good purpole: forasmuch as they were a the rest. But the slender Troops, wherewith busie people, and ministred occasion to the Carthaginians fed the War in Spain; renew the War, when means did better the lingring aid which they fent to uphold the Sardinian rebellion, when it was already well-near beaten down; their triffing with Philip; and (amongst all these their attempts) their hafty catching at sicil: little deferved to be thought good reasons of neglecting the main point, whereto all the rest Marcellus therefore gave over the places and had reference. Rather every one of these Q. Fabius Maximus, the late famous Dista-Actions, confidered apart by it felf, was no tor, was substituted in his room. But Fabius coherwife to be allowed, as differently undertaken or fubftantially fellowed; than by religion or fuperfittion: wherewith Rome making supposition, That the care of Italy was commonly, especially in times of danger, made the Carthaginians more negligent in very much troubled. So Gracehus alone, all things elfe. Yet if these allegations would with a Consular Army, waited upon Haminot serve to content Hannibal, then must be bal among the Campans: not able to meet patiently endure to know, that his own Ci- the enemy in field; yet intentive to all octizens were jealous of his Greatness, and casions, that should be presented. The Vodurst not trust him with so much power, as lones, or Slaves, that lately had been armed, thould enable him to wrong the State at were no fmall part of his followers. These, feed his Italian friends with hopes 3 and to keep it from quarrels that might arise by trifle away the time about Nola, Naples, Cume, upbraiding one another with their base conand other places: being loth to fpend his dirions. Army in an hard fiege, that was to be referved for a work of more importance. Many ternum, the Senators of Cume fent him offers he made upon Nola, but alwayes with word of all that had passed between them badfuccess. Once Marcellus fought a battel and the Capuans. It was a good occasion to with him there, yet under the very Walls of flesh his men, and make them confident the Town; having the assistance of the Citizens, that were grown better affected to the Roman fide, fince the Heads that inclined them to rebellion, were cut off. About a thousand men Hannibal in that fight lost: which was no great marvel; his forces being then divided, and imployed in fundry led Hame: three miles from Cume. There parts of Haly at once. Naples was even in those dayes, a strong City; and required a pua, with source thousand men; not years work to have taken it by force. Wher- wholly intent either to the Sacrifice, or to fore the earnest desire of Hannibal to get it, any danger that might interrupt it; buttawas alwayes frustrate. Upon the Town of ther devising how to surprize others, than Cuma they of Capua had their plot, and were fearing himself to be assailed. The Consul in hope to take it by cunning. They fent to therefore, suffering none to go forth of Came, the chief Magistrates of the Cumans, desiring that might bear word of him to the enemies, them (as being also Campans) to be present issued out of the Town when it grew dark: at a folemn facrifice of the Nation, where his men being well refreshed with meat they would consult about their general and sleep, the day before, that they might good: promising to bring thither a suffici- hold out the better in this nights service. So ent guard, to affure the whole Affembly from he came upon the Capuans unawares, and any danger that might come by the Romans. Ilew more than two thousand of them, toge-This motion the Cumans made shew to enther with their Commander, losing not tertain; but privily fent word of all to above a hundred of his own men. Then a time. His Colleague should have been greater loss, than he had brought upon the Posthumius Albinus, that was lately flain by Enemies. For when Hannibal was information the Gauls: after whose death Marcellus was ed how things went at Hame, forthwithin chosen, as being judged the fittest man to en marched thither; hoping to finde those counter with Hannibal. But the Roman Au-young fouldiers, and flaves, bufied in making gures either tound fome religious impediipoil, and loading themselves with the boots. ment that nullified the election of Marcellus; But they were all gotten fafe within Came? or at least they fained to to have done, be- which partly for anger, partly for defired cause this was the first time, that ever two gaining it, and partly at the urgent en-Pleberan Confuls were chosen together. treaty of the Capuans, Hannibal affailed the

908

Whatfoever he heard or thought, Hanni- ed; and had not a greater care to make his bal was glad to apply himself to Necessity, to Army skilful in the exercises of war, than to

The fifth Book of the first Part

Whilst the Consul was thus busied at Linagainst the Enemy; of whom hitherto they had bad experience. Gracehus therefore put himself into Cuma: whence he issued at fuch time, as the Magistrates of that City were expected by the Campans. The Sacrifice was to be performed by night, at a place cal-T. Sempronius Gracchus, the Roman Consul. Camp he took; but tarried not long to rifle Gracehus was a very good man of war, it, for fear of Hannibal, who lay not far and happily chosen Consul in so dangerous off. By this his providence, he escaped a the next day. Much labour, and with ill fuctheir revolt.

strong in the field. Wherefore Hannibal, of war: and instead of making (as formerdaily more commodious to the enemy, than Samnites was grievoully wasted by Marcellus, in the absence of Hannibal; as also was Campania, by Fabius the Consul; when Hannibal having followed Marcellus to Nola, and received there the loss before mentioned, was gone to winter in Apulia. These people shewed not the like spirit in defending their lands, and fighting for the Carthaginian Empire, as in former times they had done, when they contended with the Romans, in their own behalf, to get the Soveraignty. They held it reason, that they should be protected by fuch as thought to have dominion over them: whereby at once they overburdened their new Lords; and gave unto theirold, the more easie means to take revenge of their defection.

The people of Rome were very intentive cels, the Carthaginians and their fellows as necessity constrained them, to the work front about this town. They raised a wooden that they had in hand. They continued Fa-Tower against it; which they brought bins in his Consulship; and joyned with him close unto the wals; thinking thereby to Marcus Claudius Marcellus; whom they had force an Entry. But the Defendants, on the appointed unto that honour the year beinfide of the wall, raifed against this an high fore. Of these two, Fabius was called the Tower; whence they made refistance, and Shield : and Marcellus, the Roman Sword. In found means at length to confume with fire Fabius it was highly, and upon just reason. the work of their Enemies. While the Car- commended, That being himself Consul, and thaeinians were busie in quenching the fire, holding the Election, he did not stand upthe Komans, fallying out of the Town at on nice points of formality, or regard what two gates, charged them valiantly, and men might think of his ambition, but caused drave them to their Trenches, with the himself to be chosen with Marcellus; knowflaughter of about fourteen hundred. The ing in what need the City flood of able Conful wifely founded the Retreat, ere his Commanders. The great name of these men were too far engaged, and Hannibal in Confuls, and the great preparations which a readiness to requite their service. Neither the Romans made, served to put the Campans would he in the pride of his good success, in fear, that Capua it self should be besieged. adventure forth against the Enemy; who To prevent this, Hannibal, at their carnest presented him battel the day following, near entreaty, came from Arpi (where he lay, unto the wals. Hannibal therefore, feeing no hearkening after news from Tarentum) and likelihood to prevail in that which he had having with his prefence comforted these his taken in hand, brake up the fiege, and re- friends, fell on the fudden upon Puteoli, a turned to his old camp at Tifata. About Sea-town of Campania; about which he thele times, and shortly after, when Fabius | spent three dayes in vain, hoping to have the other Conful had taken the field; fome | won it. The garrifon in Puteoli was fix thousmall Towns were recovered by the Ro- | fand strong: and did their duty so well, mans, and the people severely punished for that the Carthaginian, finding no hope of good fuccefs, could only fliew his anger up-The Carthaginian Army was too small, to on the fields there, and about Naples; which fill with garrifons all places that had yield- having done, and once more (with as ill ed; and withal to abide (as it must do) successas before) assailed Nola, he bent his course to Tarentum: wherein he had very attending the supply from home, that should great intelligence. Whilest he was in his enable him to strike at Rome it self, was progress thither, Hanno made a journey driven in the mean time to alter his course against Beneventum : and T. Gracchus, the last years Conful, hafting from Nuceria, met ly he had done) a general invasion upon him there; and fought with him a battel. the whole Country, to pass from place to | Hanno had with him about seventeen thouplace; and wait upon occasions, that grew | fand foot, Brutians and Lucans for the most part: befides twelve hundred horfe; very few to him. The Countrey of the Hirpines and of which were Italians, all the rest Numidians and Moors. He held the Romans work four hours, ere it could be perceived to which fide the victory would incline. But Gracebus his fouldiers, which were all (in a manner) the late-armed flaves, had received from their General a peremptory denunciation. That this day or never they must purchase their liberty, bringing every manfor price thereof, an enemies head. The fweet reward of liberty was fo greatly defired, that none of them feared any danger in earning it: howbeit that vain labour imposed by their General, of cutting off the flain enemies heads, troubled them exceedingly; and hindered the fervice by imployment of fo many hands in a work fo little concerning the victory. Gracehus therefore finding his own errour, wifely correct- worse do than before; as living upon the ed it : proclaiming aloud, That they should fame trade, and subject to the same inconvecalt away the heads, and frare the trouble kiencies, which enfecbled Rome it felf. sieil of cutting off any more; for that all should and sardinia, that were wont to yield great have liberty immediately after the battel, if profit, hardly now maintained the Roman they wonn the day. This encouragement Armies, that lay in those Provinces, to hold made them run head-long upon the Enemy; them fafe, and in good order. As for the Ciwhom their desperate sury had soon over tizens of Kome, every one of them suffered thrown, if the Roman-horse could have his part of the detriment, which the Commade their part good against the the Numi- mon-wealth sustained, and could now do dian. But though Hanno did what he could, least for his Country, when most need was: and prefled to hard upon the Romans bat- as also the number of them was much detel, that four thousand of the slaves, (for creased; so as if mony should be raised fear either of them, or of the punishment upon them by the Pell, yet must it be far less which Gracebus had threatned before the than in former times. The Senate therefore battel unto those that should not valiantly diligently considering the greatness of the behave themselves) retired unto a ground war within the bowels of Baly, that could of ftrength; yet was he glad at length to not be thence expelled, without the exceedfave himself by hight, when the Groß of his ing charge of many good Armies; the peril, Army was broken; being unable to remedy wherein Sicil and Sardinia flood, both of the lofs. Leaving the field, he was accome the Carthaginians, and of many among the panied by no more than two thouland, most Naturals declining from the friendflip or of which were horse; all the rest were either subjection of Rome; the threats of the Macflain or taken. The Roman General gave donian, ready to land in the Eastern parts of unto all his fouldiers that reward of liberty | nah, if they were not at the coft to find him which he had promifed: but unto those work at home; the greater threats of Africant four thouland, which had recoyled unto bal, to follow his Brother over the Alps, as the Hill, he added this light punishment; foon as he could rid himself of the scipios That as long as they served in the wars, they in spain; and the poverty of the Commonfhould neither eat nor drink otherwife than wealth, which had not mony for any one of franding, unles fickness forced them to these mortal dangers; were driven almost break his order. So the victorious Army even to extream want of counsel. But being returned to Beneventum: where the newly urged by the violence of fwift necessity, figenfranchifed Souldiers were feasted in publified in the letters of the two Scipio's from lick by the Towns-men; fome fitting, fome standing, and all of them having their heads covered (as was the custom of flaves manu- subfifted. mised) with caps of white wooll. The picture of this Feaft (as a thing worthy of remembrance) was afterward hung up in a Table open the publick wants; and plainly faid, by Gracehus, in the Temple of Liberty; which his Father had built and dedicated. of mony for victuals, weapons, apparel, or This was indeed the first battel, worthy of the like things needful to the Souldiers; great note, which the Carthaginians had loft but that fuch as had ftuff, or were Artificers, fince the coming of Hannibal into Haly: the must trust the Common-wealth with the victories of Marcellus at Nola, and of this Loan of their commodities and labors until Gracehus before at Hame, being things of the war were ended. Hereunto he fo effectufmall importance.

Yyyyy 2

little and little,repaired the great Breach in mer times had lived upon their dealing in their Estate, which Hamnibal had made at the common Revenues, that the charge was Canne. But all this while, and long after undertaken by private men; and the Army this, their Treasury was so poor, that no in in Spain, as well supplyed, as if the Treasury dustry nor art could ferre to help it. The had been full. Shortly after this, March fruits of their grounds did only (and per- Attilius Regulus, and Publius Furius Philus, haps hardly) ferve to feed their Towns and the Roman Cenfors; taking in hand the re-Armies, without any furplulage, that might dress of dilorders within the City, were be exchanged for other needful commodi- chiefly intentive to the correction of those, ties. Few they were in Haly that continued that had mif-behaved themselves in this preto pay them tribute: which also they could sent war. They began with L. Cealing

Spain; they resolved upon the only course, without the which the City could not have

They called the people to affembly; wherein Quintus Fulvius the Prætor laid That in this exigent, there must be no taking ally exhorted all men, especially the Publi-Thus the Romans, through industry, by cans or Customers, and those which in for the note of the Cenfors at this time (as other- undertake fuch pieces of work, offered now wife it had used to be) hurtful only in re- themselves as willingly to the Censors, as if putation: but greater weight was added there had been no fuch want : promifing lithereunto, by this Decree of the Senate, fol- berally their cost and travel; without exlowing; That all fuch as were noted with in- | pectation of any payment, before the end of famy by these Censors, should be transported in- the War. In like fort, the Masters of those to Sicil, there to serve until the end of the War, Ilaves, that lately had been infranchised by under the same hard conditions, that were Gracehus, were very well contented to forimposed upon the Remainder of the Army bea- bear the price of them, until the City were ten at Cannæ. The office of the Cenfors was, in better case to pay. In this general inclito take the List and accompt of the Citizens; nation of the Multitude, to relieve, as far to chuse or displace the Senatours; and to forth as every one was able, the common fet notes of diffrace (without further pu- necessity; all the goods of Orphans, and of nilhment) upon those, whose unhonest or Widows living under Patronage, were unfeemly behaviour fell not within the brought into the Treasury; and there the compass of the Law. They took also an ac- Questor kept a Book of all that was laid out count of the Roman Gentlemen: amongst | for the sustenance of these Widows and Orwhom they distributed the publick Horses phans: whilst the whole stock was used by of service, unto such as they thought meet; the City. This good example of those which or took them away for their mif-behaviour: remained in the Town, prevailed with the Generally, they had the overfight of mens | Souldiers abroad : fo that (the poorer fort tended no further, than to putting men out when their Country was in fo great want. of rank; or making them change their

Metellus; who, after the battel at Canne, | small help to conserve the dignity of the had held discourse with some of his Compa- Senate: the commonalty being obnoxious nions, about flying beyond the Seas; as if unto the Cenfors; which were alwayes of Rome, and all Italy, had been no better than that Order, and careful to uphold the reloft. After him they took in hand those, putation thereof. But the Common-weal that having brought to Rome the message of being now impoverished by War, and having their fellows made prisoners at Canna, re- small store of Lands to lett, or of Customs turned not back to Hannibal, as they were that were worth the farming; Regulus and bound by oath; but thought themselves Philus troubled not themselves much with thereof sufficiently discharged, in that they perusing the Temples, or other decayed plahad stepped once back into his Camp, with ces, that needed reparations: or, if they took pretence of taking better notice of the a view of what was requifite to be done in Captives names. All these were now pro- this kind; yet forbore they to set any thing nounced infamous by the Cenfors: as also in hand, because they had not wherewith were a great many more; even whofoever to pay. Herein again appeared a notable had not served in the wars, after the term generosity of the Romans. They that had which the Laws appointed: Neither was been accustomed in more happy times, to lives and manners : and their censure was excepted) they refused to take pay; and much reverenced and feared; though it ex- called those Mercenaries, that did accept it,

The twelve hundred Talents wrongfully Tribe; or (which was the most that they extorted from the Carthaginians; nor any could do) caufing them to pay some Duties injuries following, done by the Romans in to the Treasury, from which others were the height of their pride; yielded half so exempted. But, besides the care of this ge- much commodity, as might be laid in balneral Tax, and matters of Morality, they lance against these miseries, whereinto their had the charge of all publick Works; as Estate was now reduced. Nevertheless if mending of High-wayes, Bridges, and Water-courses; the reparations of Temples, this War did rather inable Rome to deal Porches, and such other buildings. If any with those Enemies, whom she forthwith man incroached upon the Streets, High- undertook, than abate or flacken the growth wayes, or other places that ought to be com- of that large Dominion, whereto she atmon; the Cenfors compelled him to make tained, ere the youngest of those men was amends. They had also the letting out of dead, whose names we have already men-Lands, Customs, and other publick Revel tioned. For by this hammering, the Roman nues to farm: fo that most of the Citizens metal grew more hard and solid: and by of Rome were beholding unto this office; as paring the branches of private fortunes, the maintaining themselves by some of the Root and Heart of the Common-wealth was Trades thereto belonging. And this was no corroborated. So grew the City of Athens, when Xerxes had burnt the Town to ashes , and taken from every particular Citizen, all hope of other felicity, than that which The Romans win some Towns back from Hanrested in the common happiness of the universality. Certain it is, (as Sir Francis Bacon hath judiciously observed) That a State, whole dimension or stem is small, may aptly ferve to be foundation of a greatMonarchy: which chiefly comes to pass, where all regard of domestical prosperity is laid aside; and every mans care addressed to the bene- the War: so their Generals abroad omitted fit of his Country. Hercof I might fay that no part of industry, in feeking to recover our Age hath seen a great example, in the what had been lost. The Town of Cossiline, united Provinces in the Netherlands; whose Fabius befieged. It was well defended by present riches and strength grew chiefly the Carthaginian Garrison; and likely to from that ill affurance, which each of their have been relieved by those of Сприа, if Towns, or almost of their Families, percei- Marcellus from Nola, had not come to the ved it selfto hold, whilst the generality was affistance of his Colleague. Nevertheles, oppressed by the Duke of Alva; were it so, the place held out so obstinately, that Fathat the people had thereby grown as war- bins was purposed to give it over: saying, like, as, by extreme indultry, and straining that the enterprise was not great; yet as difthemselves to fill their publick Treasury, they ficult, as a thing of more importance. But are all grown wealthy, ftrong at Sea, and able Marcellus was of a contrary opinion. He to wage great Armies for their fervices by faid, That many fuch things, as were not at Land. Wherefore if we value at such a sirst to have been undertaken by greatComrate as we ought, the patient refolution, con- manders, ought yet, when once they were taformity to good Order, obedience to Magi- ken in hand, to be profecuted unto the best ftrates, with many other Vertues, and above effect. So the fiege held on ; and the Town all other, the great love of the Common- was pressed so hard, that the Campans dwelweal, which was found in Rome in these dan- ling therein, grew fearful, and craved pargerous times: we may truly fay, That the City was never in greater likelihood to prosper. Neither can it be deemed other-pleased. Whilst they were thus treating of wife, than that if the same affections of conditions: or whill they were ish the people had lafted, when their Em- ing forth, according to the composition alpire, being grown more large and beau-ready made; (for it is diverfly reported) tiful, should in all reason have been more | Marcellus seizing upon a Gate, cutred with dear unto them; if the riches and delicacies his Army, and put all to fword that came in of Asia had not infected them with sensuali- their way. Fifty of those that were first got-

ø. XIV.

The fifth Book of the first Part

nibal. Hannibal wins Tarentum. The flege of Capua. Two Victories of Hannibal. The Journey of Hannibal to the gates of Rome. Capua taken by the Romans.

As the people of Rome strained them-felves to the utmost, for maintaining ty, and carryed their appetites mainly ten out, ran to Fabius the Conful, who faved to those pleasures, wherein they thought them, and sent them to Capua in safety; all their well-being to confift; if all the Ci- the rest were either slain, or made prisotizens and subjects of Rome could have be- ners. If Fabius deserved Commendations, lieved their own interest to be as great, in by holding his word good unto these fifty; I those wars which these latter Emperours know not how the slaughter of the rest, or made for their defence, as in these which imprisonment afterward of such as escaped were managed by the Confuls: the Em- the heat of execution, could be excused by pire, founded uponto great vertue, could Marcellus. It may be that he helped himnot have been thrown down by the hands | felfatter the Roman fashion, with some aquiof rude Barbarians, were they never fo vocation, but he shall pay for it hereafter. In many. But unto all Dominions God hath like fort was Mount Marfam in Gafeogutafet their periods: Who, though he hath ken by the Marshall Monluc, when I was a given unto Man the knowledge of those young man in France. For whilst he enterwayes, by which Kingdoms rile and fall; tained parley about composition; the beyet hath left him subject unto the affections, slegged rann all from their several guards, which draw on these fatal changes, in their times appointed.

The Marshall the conditions proposed. The Marshall the conditions proposed. therefore discovering a part of the Walls unguarded, entred by Scalado, and put all fave the Governour unto the fword. Herein ted two gross errours; the one, in that he the Consul, suffered him, in regard of due gave no order for the Captains and Com- reverence, to pass by them on horse-back, panies, to hold themselves in their places; which was against the custom. But the Son the other, in that he was content to parlee perceiving this, commanded the last of his without Pledges for affurance given and re- Lictors to note it: who thereupon bade the ceived. Some such oversight the Governour old Fabius alight, and come to the Consul of Casiline seemeth to have committed; yet on his feet. The Father chearfully did so; neither the advantage taken by Marcellus, faying, It was my mind, Son, to make tryal, or by Monluc, was very honourable. When whether thou didft understand thy self to be this Work was ended, many small Towns of Conful. Calfius Altinius a wealthy Citizen of the Samnites, and some of the Lucans of Arpi, who, after the battel at Canna, had and Apulians, were recovered: wherein holpen the Carthaginian into that Town, were taken or flain, about five and twenty feeing now the fortune of the Romans to thouland of the Enemies; and the Country amend, came privily to this Conful Fabius; grievously wasted by Fabius, Marcellus ly- and offered to render it back unto him, if

ing fick at Nola.

down the Country.

ship, we will speak hereafter.

him: eleven of the twelve Lictors, which they had been betrayed by their Princes; and that Governour of Mount Marfam commit- | carried an Axe with a bundle of Rods before he might be therefore well rewarded. The Hannibal in the mean while was about Consul purposed to follow old examples; Tarentum, waiting to hear from those, that and to make this Altinius a pattern to all had promifed to give up the Town. But Traitors; using him as Camillus and Fabricius M. Valerius the Roman Propretor had thrust had done those that offered their faithful fo many men into it, that the Traitors durst service against the Falisci, and King Pyrrhus. not stir. Wherefore the Carthaginian was But Q. Fabius the Father, was of another fain to depart, having wearied himself in opinion: and faid, it was a matter of danvain with expectation. Yet he wasted not gerous consequence, That it should be the Country, but contented himself with thought more safe to revolt from the Rohope, that they would please him better in mans, than to turn unto them. Wherefore time following. So he departed thence to- it was concluded, that he should be sent to ward salapia, which he chofe for his win-tring-place; and began to victual it when ner; until they could better resolve, what Summer was but half past. It is said, that he to do with him, or what use to make of was in love with a young Wench in that him. Hannibal understanding that Altinius Town, in which regard, if he began his Win- was gone, and among the Romans, took it ter more timely than otherwise he required, not forrowfully; but thought this a good oche did not, like the Romans; whom necessis- casion to seize upon all the mans riches, ty inforced, to make their Summer last as which were great. Yet that he might seem long as they were able to travel up and rather fevere, than covetous, he fent for the wife and children of Altinius into his Camp: About this time began great troubles in where having examined them by torment, Sicil, whither Marcellus the Conful was partly concerning the departure and intenfent, to take such order for the Province, as tions of this sugitive, partly, and more strictneed should require. Of the doings there, ly, about his riches, what they were, and which wore out more time than his Conful- where they lay, he condemned them as partakers of the treason, to be burnt alive; and The new Consuls, chosen at Rome, were took all their goods unto himself. Fabius 2. Fabius the Son of the present Consul, the Consul shortly after came to Arpi: which and T. Sempronius Gracchus the second time. he wonn by Scalado, in a stormy and rainy The Romans found it needful for the pub- night. Five thousand of Hannibal's Soullick service, to imploy oftentimes their best diers lay in the Town; and of the Arpines ablemen: and therefore made it lawful, themselves, there were about three thouduring the war, to recontinue their Officers, | fand. These were thrust formost by the Carand chuse such as had lately held their pla- thaginian Garrison; when it was understood, ces before; without regarding any distance that the Romans had gotten over the Wall, of time, which was otherwise required. The and broken open a Gate. For the Souldiers old Fabius became Lieutenant unto his held the Towns-men suspected; and there-Son: which was perhaps the respect, that fore thought it no wildom to trust them at most commended his Son unto the place. It their backs. But after some little resistance, is noted, That when the old man came into the Arpines gave over fight, and entertained the Camp, and his Son rode forth to meet parley with the Romans: protesting, they were become subject to the Carthaginians, where they suffered death as Traitors, Bu against their wills. In process of this dif- reason of this cruelty, or severity, the people course, the Arpine Prætor went unto the of Tarentum grew to hate the Romans more Roman Confid: and receiving his faith for generally and earneftly than before. As for fecurity of the Town, prefently made head the Confpirators, they followed their bufiness against the Garrison. This notwithstanding, the more diligently, as knowing what relike it is that Hannibals men continued to ward they were to expect, if their intention make good refistance. For when almost a should happen to be discovered. Wherefore thousand of them that were Spaniards, of- they fent again to Hannibal; and acquaintfered to leave their companions, and ferve ing him with the manner of their plor. on the Romans fide, it was yet covenanted, made the fame composition with him for that the Carthaginians should be suffered to the Tarentines, which they of Capua had pass forth quietly, and return to Hannibal. made before. Nico and Philomenes, two of This was performed: and to Arpi became the chief among them, used much to go forth Roman again, with little other loss, than of of the Town on hunting by night; as if they him that had betrayed it, About the same durst not take their pleasure by day for fear time Cliternum was taken by Sempronius Tu- of the Carthaginians. Seldom or never they ditanus, one of the Prators: and unto Cnews missed of their game: for the Carthaginians Fulvius, another of the Prators, an hundred | prepared it ready for their hands, that they and twelve Gentlemen of Capua offered their might not feem to have been abroad upon fervice; upon no other condition, than to other occasion: From the Camp of Hannibal have their goods restored unto them, when it was about three dayes journey to Tarentheir City should be recovered by the Ro- tum; if he should have marched thither with mans. This was a thing of finall importance: his whole Army. This caused his long abode but confidering the general hatred of the in one place the less to be suspected : as also, Campans towards Rome, it served to disco- to make his enemies the more secure, he ver the inclination of the Italians in those caused it to be given out, that he was sick. times; and how their affections recoyled But when the Romans within Tarentum, from Hannibal, when there was no appea- were grown careless of such his neighbourrance of those mighty succours, that had hood, and the Conspirators had set their bubeen promised from Carthage. The Confen- finess in order; he took with him tenthoutines also, and the Thurines, people of the fand the most expedite of his horse and foot; Brutians, which had yielded themselves to and long before break of day, made all speed Hannibal, returned again to their old alle- thitherward. Fourfcore light horse of the giance. Others would have followed their Numidians ran a great way before him, example, but that one L. Pomponius, who of beating all the wayes, and killing any that a Publican had made himfelf a Captain, and they met, for fear left he, and his troop folgotten reputation by some petty exploits in lowing him, should be discovered. It had forraging the Country, was flain by Hanno ; been often the manner of fome few Numiwith a great multitude of those that fol- | dian horse, to do the like in former times. lowed him. Hannibal in the mean while had Wherefore the Roman Governour, when all his care bent upon Tarentum; which if he he heard tell in the evening, that some Nucould take, it feemed that it would frand midians were abroad in the fields, took it him in good flead, for drawing over that for a fign, that Hannibal was not as yet difhelp out of Macedon, which his Carthagini- lodged; and gave order, that some compaans failed to fend. Long he waited ere he nies should be sent out the next morning, to could bring his defire to pass: and being strip them of their booty, and fend them loth to hazard his forces, where he hoped to prevail by intelligence; he contented him-left with taking in fome poor Towns of the Town: where, according to the tokens Salentines. At length, his Agents within agreed upon, making a light to shew his ar-Tarentum, found means to accomplish their rival; Nico, that was within the Town, anpurpose, and his wish. One Phileas, that was | swered him with another light, in sign that of their conspiracy, who lay at Rome as Em- he was ready. Presently Nico began to set baffadour, practifing with the Hoftages of upon one of the Gates, and to kill the the Tarentines, and fuch as had the keeping watch-men. Philomenes went toward anoof them, conveyed them by night out of the ther gate: and whiftling (as was his man-City. But he and his company the next day | ner)called up the Porter; bidding him make were fo closely pursued, that all of them haste, for that he had killed a great Bore, so were taken, and brought back to Rome, heavy, that scarce two men could stand

mans, as tyrannous oppressours; and spake busied, than his affairs required. what else he thought fit for the present. This Thus with mutual loss on both sides, the done, and having gotten fuch spoil as was time passed: and the Roman forces, growto be had of the Souldiers goods in the ing dayly stronger, 2. Julium Flaccus, with Town, he addressed himself against the Ci- Appins Claudius, lately chosen Consuls, pretadel; hoping that if the Garrison would pared to besiege the great City of Capua. fally out, he might give them such a blow, Three and twenty Legions the Romans had as should make them unable to defend the now armed. This was a great and hafty Piece. According to his expectation it partly growth from that want of men, and of all fell out. For when he began to make his ap- | necessaries, whereinto the loss at Canna had proaches, the Romans in a bravery fallying reduced them. But to fill up these Legions, forth, gave charge upon his men: who fell they were fain to take up young Boyes that back of purpose according to direction, till were under seventeen years of age: and to they had drawn on as many as they could, fend Commissioners above fifty miles round, and so far from their strength, as they durst for the tecking out of such Lads as might adventure. Then gave Hamibal a fign to appear serviceable, and pressing them to the his Carthaginians, who lay prepared ready Wars; making yet a Law, that their years for the purpose: and siercely setting upon the of service, whereinto they were bound by Enemy, drave him back with great flaugh- order of the City, should be reckoned, for ter, as fast as he could run; so that after- their benefit, from this their beginning so wards he durst not issue forth. The Citadel young, as if they had been of lawful age. stood upon a Demi-Island, that was plain Before the Roman Army drew near, the under it. So the Porter opened the wicket: | bal intended to fortifie in like fort against the and forthwith entred two young men, loa- Citadel; to the end that the Tarentines might den with the Bore; which Hannibal had pre- be able, without his help, to keep thempared large enough, to be worthy the look- selves from all danger thence. His work in ing on. While the Porter flood wondring at few dayes went fo well forward, without the largeness of the beast. Philomenes ran him impediment from the besieged, that he conthrough with his Bore-spear: and letting in ceived hope of winning the piece it self, by fome thirty armed men, fell upon all the taking a little more pains. Wherefore he watch; whom when he had flain, he entred made ready all forts of engines, to force the the great gate. So the Army of Hannibal en- place. But whilft he was buffed in his works, tring Tarentum at two Gates, went directly there came by fea a strong supply from Metoward the Market place, where both parts tapontum: which took away all hope of premet. Thence they were distributed by their vailing; and made him return to his former General, and sent into all quarters of the Ci- counsel. Now for a smuch as the Tarentine fleet ty, with Tarentines to be their guides. They lay within the haven, and could not pass were commanded to kill all the Romans, and forth, whileft the Romans held the Citadel: not to hurt the Citizens. For better perfor- it feemed likely that the Town would fuffer mance hereof, Hannibal willed the Conspira- want, being debarred of accustomed trade tors, that when any of their friends appear- and provisions by Sea : whilest the Roman ed in fight, they should bid him be quiet, garrison by help of their shipping, might eaand of good chear. All the Town was in fily be relieved, and enabled to hold out. Aan uproar: but few could tell what the mat- gainst this inconvenience, it was rather wishter meant. A Roman trumpet was unskilfully ed by the Tarentines, than any way hoped, founded by a Greek in the Theater: which that their fleet could get out of the haven; to helped the fulpition, both of the Tarentines, | guard the mouth of it, and cut off all fupply that the Romans were about to spoil the from the Enemy. Hannibal told them, that Town; and of the Romans, that the Citi- this might well be done: for that their Town zens were in commotion. The Governour standing in plain ground, and their streets fled into the Port: and taking boat, got into being fair and broad, it would be no hard the Citadel, that stood in the mouth of the matter to draw the Callies over land, and Haven; whence he might eafily perceive lanch them into the Sea without. This he the next morning, how all had passed. Han- undertook, and effected: whereby the Ronibal assembling the Tarentines, gave them man garrison was reduced into great necessito understand, what good affection he bore my; though with much patience it held out, them; inveighed bitterly against the Ro- and found Hannibal oftentimes otherwise ground; and fortified only with a Ditch Campans felt great want of victual, as if they and Wall against the Town, whereunto it had already been besieged. This happened was joyned by a cawsey. This cawsey Hanni- partly by sloth of the Nation, partly by the great waste and spoyl, which the Romans some of his men had gotten over the enehad in foregoing years made upon their mies Rampart. There was great booty; or grounds. They fent therefore Emballadours (which was all one to the Souldier) an opito Hannibal; desiring him to succour them nion of much that might be gotten in that ere they were closed up, as they feared to Camp. Wherefore some Enfign-bearers be shortly. He gave them comfortable threw their Ensignes over the Rampart, words, and fent Hanno with an Army to supply their wants. Hanno appointed them a they would endure the flame and difficday; against which they should be ready nour following such a loss Fear of such ignowith all manner of carriages, to ftore them- miny(than which nothing could be greater) felves with victuals, that he would provide. made the Souldiers adventure fo desperate Neither did he promife more than he per- ly, that Fulcing, perceiving the heat of his formed. For he caused great quantity of men, changed his purpose, and incouraged grain, that had been laid up in Cities round those that were somewhat backward, to about, to be brought into his Camp, three follow the example of them that had alreamiles from Beneventum. Thither at the time appointed, came no more than forty Carts Camp was won: in which were flain above or Wagons, with a few pack-horfes, as if fix thousand; and taken above feven thouthis had been enough to victual Capua. Such and, besides all the store of victuals, and was the retchlefines of the Campans. Hanno carriages, with abundance of booty, that was exceeding angry hereat: and told them Hanno had lately gotten from the Roman they were worse than very beasts; fince Consederates. This misadventure, and hunger could not teach them to have greathen earer approach of both the Confuls, ter care. Wherefore he gave them a longer made them of Capua fend a pitiful Embafday; against which he made prevision to fage to Hannibal; putting him in mind of ftore them throughly Of all their doings all the love that he was wont to protestunword was fent to the Roman Confuls, from to their City; and how he had made flew the Citizens of Beneventum. Therefore 2. to affect it no less then Carthage. But now, Fulvius the Conful, taking with him fuch they faid it would be loft, as Arpi was lately, strength as he thought needful for the fer- if he gave not strong and speedy succour. vice, came into Beneventum by night; where Hannibal answered with comfortable words with diligence he made inquiry into the be- and fent away two thousand horse, to keep haviour of the Enemy. He learned, that Han their grounds from spoil, whilest he himself no with part of his Army was gone abroad to Awas detained about Tarentum, partly by make provisions; that some two thousand hope of winning the Citadel, partly by the Wagons, with a great rabble of Carters and disposition, which he saw in many Towns other Varlets, lay among the Carthaginians acijoyning, to yield unto him. Among the in their Camp; fo that little good order was Hoftages of the Tarentines, that lately had kept: all thought being fet upon a great fled out of Rome, and, being overtaken, harveft. Hereus on the Conful bade his men fuffered death for their attempt; were ome prepare themselves to aslail the enemies of the Metapontines, and other Cities of the Camp: and leaving all his impediments Greeks, inhabiting that Eastern part of Italy, within Beneventum, he marched thither- which was called of old, Magna Gracia. ward fo early in the morning, that he was These people took to heart the death of there with the first break of day. By com- their Hostages, and thought the punishment ing so unexpected, he had well near forced greater than the offence. Wherefore the the Camp on the sudden. But it was very Metapontines, as soon as the Roman garrison strong, and very well defended: so that the was taken from them to defend the Citadel longer the fight continued, the less desire of Tarentum, made no more ado, but openhad Fulcius to lose more of his men in the ed their gates to Hannibal. The Thurings attempt; feeing many of them cast away, would have done the like, upon the like and yet little hope of doing good. There- realon, had not some companies layn in their fore he faid, that it were better to go more Town; which they feared that they should leisurely and substantially to work; to send not be able to master. Nevertheles, they hele for his fellow-Conful, with the reft of their ped themselves by cunning inviting to their Army 3 and to lye between Hanno and home 5 that neither the Campans should hand: against whom whilest they profiered hand: against whom whilest they profiered depart thence, nor the Carthaginian be able their fervice to Atinius the Roman Captain, to relieve them. Being thus discourfing, they drew him forth to fight, and recoyling and about to found the retrait; he faw that from him, closed up their gates. A little the enemy should break in together with the ling in such a time, to reject the vertue of Romans, in faving Atinius himself, and fend- any good Souldier, how mean soever his ing him away by Sea; as also in consulting condition were. Wherefore they gave him a small while (because perhaps many of their the charge of eight thousand: and he himchief men were unacquainted with the pra- self being a proper man, and talking bravecrice) whether they should yield to the car- ly, gathered up so many voluntaries, as althaginian or no. But this disputation lasted most doubled his number. But meeting not long: for they that had removed the thus with Hannibal, he gave proof of the chief impediment, easily prevailed in the difference between a stout Centurion, and rest; and delivered up the Town to Hanno one able to command in chief. He and his and Mago. This good fuccess, and hope of fellows were all (in a manner) flain, scarce the like, detained Hannibal in those quar- a thousand of them escaping. Soon after ters, whileft the Confuls fortifying Beneven- this, Hannibal had word, that Cneus Fulvius tum to secure their backs, addressed them- a Roman Prætor with eighteen thousand felves to the fiege of Capua. he thought good, as if they had been dif- hind him. charged by the decease of their Leader; so These two great blows, received the one formality they used in pretending fear, left thousand men. The Fathers were unwilmen was in Apulia, very careless, and a man Many difasters befell the Romans, in the infusficient for the charge which he held. beginning of this great enterprise. T. Sempro- | Thither therefore he hasted to visit him: nius Gracelus, a very good man of War, that hoping to deal the better with the main had of late been twice Conful, was flain, strength of Rome, which pointed at Capua, either by treachery of some Lucans, that when he should have cut off those forces, drew him into ambush, or by some Carthagi- that lay in the Provinces about, under men nian stragglers, among whom he fell una- of small ability. Coming upon Fulvius, he wares. His body, or his head, was very ho- found him and his men fo jolly, that needs nourably interred, either by Hannibal him- they would have fought the first night, felf, or (for the reports agree not) by the Ro- Wherefore it was not to be doubted, what mans; to whom Hamibal lent it. He was ap-pointed to lie in Beneventum, there to secure stowed Mago with three thousand of his the back of the Army that should befiege lightest armed, in places thereabout most fit Capua. But his death hapned in an ill time, to for ambush. Then offering battel to Fulvius. the great hinderance of that business. The he soon had him in the trap: whence he Volones or Slaves lately manumifed, for fook made him glad to escape alive; leaving all. their Enfigns, and went every one whither fave two thousand of his followers, dead be-

CHAPIII

that it asked some labour to seek them out, presently after the other, much astonished and bring them back into their Camp. Ne-the Romans. Nevertheles, all care was taken, vertheles, the Consuls went forward with to gather up the small reliques of the broken their work, and drawing near to Capua, did Armies: and that the Confuls should go allacts of hostility, which they could. Mago substantially forwards with the siege of the Carthaginian, and the Citizens of Capua Capua: which was of great confequence. gave them an hard welcome, wherein above both in matter of reputation, and in many fifteen hundred Romans were lost. Neither other respects. The two Consuls sate down was it long ere Hannibal came thither, who before the Town, and C. Claudius Nero, one fought with the Confuls, and had the better; of the Prætors, came with his Army from insomuch, that he caused them to dislodge. | Suessula, to their affistance. They made Pro-They removed by night, and went feveral clamation, That who oever would iffue out waies: Fulvius towards Canna, Claudius into of Capua before a certain day prefixed, should Lucania. Hannibal followed after Claudius, have his pardon, and be fuffered to enjoy all who having led him a great walk, fetcht a that unto him belonged: which day being compals about, and returned to Capua. It past, there should be no grace expected. This lo fell out, that one Marcus Centenius Penula, offer was contumeliously rejected; the Caa flout man, and one that with good com- puans relying on their own strength, and the mendations had discharged the place of a succours attended from Hannibal. Before Centurion, lay with an Army not far from the City was closed up, they sent messengers thence, where Hannibal rested, when he was to the Carthaginian; which found him at weary of hunting after Claudius. This Penu- Brundusum. He had made a long journey in la had made great vaunts to the Roman Se- hope of gaining the Tarentine Citadel: of nate, of wonders which he would work, if which expectation failing, he turned to Brunhe might be trusted with the leading of five dustum, upon advertisement that he should

him of their danger with earnest words; and fended his Trenches against them; and so well were with words as bravely re-comforted. repressed them, that he drave them at He bade them confider, how, a few dayes fince he had chased the Confuls out of their pursuing them to their gates, he received a fields; and told them, that he would prefently come thither again, and fend the Romans after to his grave. Q. Fulvius was held hargoing as fast as before. With this good ander to this talk by Hannibal, and the Carthafiver the Mellengers returned, and hardly ginian Army. The Roman Camp was even at could get back into the City; which the Ro- point to have been loft; and Hannibal his mans had almost intrenched round. As for Elephants, of which he brought three and Hannibal himfelf, he was of opinion, that Capua, being very well manned, and heartily part, or else (for the report varies) being devoted unto his friendthip, would hold out | fome of them flain upon it, fell into the ditch, a long time, and thereby give him leifure to and filled it up in fuch fort, that their bodies do what he thought requifire among the Tarentines, and in theic Eaftern parts of Haly; faid, that Hannibal in this tumult caused whilst the Roman Army spent it self in a te- some fugitives that could speak Latine well, dious fiege. Thus he lingred, and thereby to proclaim aloud as it were in the Confuls gave the Confuls time both to fortifie them name, That every one of the Souldiersthould felves at Capua, and to dispatch the election | thift for himself, and flye betimes unto the of new Magistrates in Rome; whilst he himfelf purfued hopes that never found fue- ready loft. But all would not ferve. The claudius and Fulvius, when their term of office was expired, were appointed to continue the fiege at Capua; retaining the fame Armies, as Proconfuls. The Towns-men often fallied out, rather in a bravery, than likelihood to work any matter of effect; the Enemy lying close within his Trenches, as it felf: and now his defire of winning the Taintending without other violence, to subdue rentine Citadel, had well-near lost Capua; them by famine. Yet against the Campan in respect of which, neither the Citadel, nor horse (for their foot was easily beaten) the the City of Tarentum were to have been Romans used to thrust out some troops, that much regarded. Falling therefore into a defhould hold them fkirmish. In these exercifes the Campans ulually had the better, to tune, that of fo many great victories he had the great grief of their proud Enemy; who made no greater use : on the sudden heenfcomed to take foil at the hands of fuch Re- terrained an haughty resolution, even to set bels. It was therefore devised, that some upon Rome; and carry to the walls of that active and couragious young men should proud City, the danger of War that threatlearn to ride behind the Roman men at arms; ned Capua. This, he thought, would be a leaping up, and again difmounting lightly, as mean, to draw the Roman Generals, or one occasion served. These were furnished of them at least, unto the defence of their like the Velites, having each of them three own home. If they role from the fiege with or four fmall darts: which alighting in time their whole Army, then had he his delire: If of conflict, they discharged thick upon the they divided their forces, then was it likely, Enemies horse; whom vanquishing in this that either he or the Campans, should well kind of fervice, they much diffeartened in enough deal with them apart. Neither did the main. The time thus passing, and sale he despair, that the terrour of his coming mine daily increasing within the City, Han- might so astonish the multitude within nibal came at length, not expected by the Rome, as he might enter fome part or other Romans: and taking a Fort of theirs, called of the City. His only fear was, left the Can-Galatia, fell upon their Camp. At the same pans, being ignorant of his purpose, should time the Capuans iffued with their whole think he had for faken them; and thereupon power, in as terrible manner as they could forthwith yield themselves to the Enemy. devile: fetting all their multitude of unser- To prevent this danger, he sent letters to viceable people by the walls, which with a Capua by a subtle Numidian; who running as loud noise of Pans and Basons, troubled those a fugitive into the Roman Camp, conveyed that were occupied in fight. Appius Claudius himself thence over the innermost Trenches be let in. There the Capuans met him, told opposing himself to the Campans, easily delength back into their City. Nethertheles, in wound that accompanied him in short space thirty, were either gotten within the ramnext hills, for as much as the Camp was alfraud was detected; and the Army having fitten there fo long, had at good leifure strongly intrenched it felf, so as little hope there was to raise the siege by force.

This did extremely perplex the Carthagiginian. The purchase of Capua had (as was thought) with-held him from taking Rome sperate anger with himself and his hard forto be performed with great celerity: no The Messengers of these news came apace, small hope of good success resting in the one after another into the City; some few fuddenness of his arrival there. Wherefore bringing true advertisements; but the most dayes victuals; and prepared as many boats, fear. All the Streets and Temples in Rome as might in one night transport his Army were peftred with women, crying, and prayover the River Vulturmus. This could not be ling, and rubbing the Altars with their hair, done so closely, but that the Roman Gene- because they could do none other good. The rals, by some fugitives, had notice of his pur- | Senators were all in the great Market, or pose. With this danger therefore they ac- place of Assembly; ready to give their adquainted the Senate; which was therewith vice, if it were asked, or to take directions affected, according to the diversity of mens given by the Magistrates. All places of opinions, in a case of such importance. Some | most importance were stuffed with souldiers: gave counsel to let alone Capua, yea, and all it being uncertain, upon which part Hanni-Rome into peril of being taken by the ene- dation, there came news that Quintus Fulmy. Others were fo far from allowing of vius, with part of the Army from Capua, was this, as they wondred how any man could halting to the defence of the City. The Ofthink, that Hannibal, being unable to relieve fice of a Proconful did expire, at his return Capua, should judge himself strong enough home, and entring into the Gates of Rome. to win Rome; and therefore flourly faid, Wherefore, that Fulvius might lose nothing That those Legions, which were kept at by coming into the City, in time of such home for defence of the City, would ferve need, as Act was passed, That he should have the turn well enough, to keep him out and equal power with the Confuls during his fend him thence, if he were founwise as to abode there. He and Hannibal arrived at come thither. But it was finally concluded, Rome, one foon after another: Fulvius hathat Letters should be fent to Fulvius and ving been long held occupied in passing over Claudius, acquainting them perfectly with Vulturnus; and Hannibal receiving impedithe forces, that at the prefent were in Rome: ment in his Journey, as much as the Counwho, fince they knew best what the strength try was able to give. The Consuls, and Fulwas which Hannibal could bring along with vius, incamped without the Gates of Rome, him, were best able to judge, what was need- attending the Carthaginian. Thither they ful to oppose him. So it was referred unto called the Senate: and as the danger grew the discretion of these Generals at Capua, to nearer and greater; so took they more caredo as they thought behoveful: and if it ful & especial order against all occurrences. their fiege, nor yet to put the City of Rome three miles from the Town; whence he adinto much adventure. According to this De- vanced with two thousand horse, and rode cree of the Senate, 2. Fulvins took fifteen along a great way under the Walls, viewing thouland foot, and a thouland horse, the the fight thereof, and considering how he wound, to continue the fiege at Capua.

ling or taking multitudes of all forts and not from the followers of Hannibal; bred

into the City. The Journey to Rome was ages, that fled out of all parts round about. he caused his men to have in a readinessten of them reporting the conceits of their own places else, rather than to put the Town of bal would fall. In the midst of this trepimight conveniently be, neither to raise | Hannibal came to the River Anio, or Anien, choice of his whole Army; with which he might best approach it. But he either went, hasted toward Rome; leaving App. Claudius, or (as the Roman Story faith) was driven who could not travel by reason of his away, without doing or receiving any hurt. Many tumults rose in this while among the Hannibal having passed over Vulturnus, people; but were suppressed by the care and burnt up all his boats, and left nothing that | diligence of the Senators. Above the reft, might transport the Enemy, in case he should one accident was both troublesome, and not offer to purfue or coast him. Then hasted without peril. Of Numidians that had shifthe away toward Rome, staying no longer in ed aside, and fallen (upon some displeasures) any one place, than he needs must. Yet from Hannibal to the Romans, there were found he the Bridges over Liris broken some twelve hundred then in Rome; which down by the people of Fregella: which, as it were appointed by the Consuls, to pass stopped him a little on his way; so it made thorow the Town, from the Mount Avenhim the more grievously to spoil their tine, to the Gate Colliatna, where it was Lands, while the Bridges were in mending thought that their service might be useful, The nearer that he drew to Rome, the grea- among broken wayes, and Garden-walls lyter waste he made: his Numidians running ing in the suburbs. The faces of these men, before him; driving the Country, and kil- and their furniture, wherein they differed fuch miltaking, as caused a great uproar who had sent the As into the Camp. But in among the people : all crying out that Aventine was taken, and the Enemy gotten within the walls. The noise was such, that men could not be informed of the truth: and the ftreets were fo full of cattel, and hufbandmen, which were fled thither out of the Villages adjoyning, that the passage was stopt up: and the poor Numidians pitifully beaten from the house tops, with stones and other weapons that came next to hand, by the desperate multitude, that would have run out at the Gates, had it not been certain how little they esteemed him. To this purwho lay under the Walls. To remedy the like inconveniences, it was ordained, That all which the Carthaginian lay encamped, was which had been Diffators, Confuls, or Cen-fold in Rome: and fold it was nothing under fors, should have authority as Magistrates, till the value, but at as good a rate, as if it had he Enemy departed. The day following Han- been in time of peace. This indignity comnibal passed over Anien, and presented bat- ing to his ear, incensed Hannibal so much, tel to the Romans, who did not wifely if that he made port-fale of the Silver-fmiths they undertook it. It is said, that a terrible shops, which were near about the Market or showre of rain, caused both Komans and Carthaginians to return into their feveral to the houses within the Town were no Camps, and that this happened two dayes together, the weather breaking up and clearing as foon as they were departed afunder: raifed his Tent. But this counter-practice certain it is, that Hannibal, who had brought was nothing worth. The Komans did feek to along with him no more than ten dayes provilion, could not endure to fray there, until had conceived; Hannibal, to make flew of his victuals were all fpent. In which regard continuing in an hope, which was already the Romans, if they fuffered him to waste his past. His victuals were almost spent: and time and provisions, knowing that he could of those ends, that he had proposed unto not abide there long, did as became well himself, this Journey had brought forth none advised men: if they offered to fight with him, and either had the better, or were parted (as is faid) by some accident of weather, the commendations must be given to their fortune. The terrour of Hannibals coming to in wealth was to be gotten, he passed like a the City, how great foever it was at the first, yet after some leisure, and better notice ta- the Eastern Sea so fast, that he had almost ken of their forces, which appeared less than the first apprehension had formed them, was much and foon abated. Hereunto it helped well, that at the fame time the Supply appointed for spain, after the death of the two Scipio's, were fent out of the Town, and went forth at the Gate, whilst one Carthaginian lay before another. In all Pnick terrours, as they are called, whereof there is either no cause known, or no cause answerable to the it. This, and the very return of Fulvin, greatness of the fudden consternation; it is a without any more appearance of Hamibal, good remedy to do somewhat quite contrary to that which the danger would require, were it such as men have fashioned it in their amazed conceits. Thus did Alexander cause his fouldiers to disarm themselves, when they were all on a sudden in a great fear of saint hope was given, by Hanno and Eostar, they wist not what. And thus did Clearchus pacifie a foolish uproar in his Army, by proclaming a reward unto him that could tell again, if means could only be found, how this present example of the Romans, appears withall a great magnanimity; whereby they fustained their reputation, and augmented it no less, than by this bold attempt of Hannibal it might feem to have been diminished. Neither could they more finely have checked the glorious conceits of their enemie, and taken away the difgrace of that fear, which clouded their valour at his first coming; than by making fuch demonstrations, when once they had recovered spirit . pose therefore that very piece of ground, on Common place in Rome; as if his own title whit worfe, than any Roman Citizens could manifest that assurance which they justly other, than the fame of his much daring. Wherefore he brake up his Camp: and doing what spoil he could to the Roman Territory, without sparing religious places, wheretempest over the Country, and ran toward taken the City of Rhegium before his arrival was feared or suspected. As for Capua, he gave it loft: and is likely to have curfed the whole faction of Hanno, which thus disabled him to relieve that fair City, fince he had no other way to vent his grief.

920

2. Fabius returning back to Capua, made Proclamation anew, that whole would yield before a certain day, might fafely do gave the Capuans to understand, that they were abandoned, and their case desperate. To trust the Roman pardon proclaimed, every mans conscience of his own evil deserts, told him, that it was a vanity: and some Captains of the Carthaginian Garrison within the Town, that Hannibal should come to convey such Letters unto him as they should set them free from that cruel reof Bostar and his fellow.

they curse their own malice, which had cast | which he struck off their heads. them into this remediless necessity. How-

would write. The carriage of the Letters venge, which the Enemies fought upon was undertaken by fome Numidiaus; who their bodies. About seven and twenty of running as fugitives, out of the Town into the Senators there were, that liking well the Roman Camp, waited fit opportunity to of this motion, ended their lives together by make an escape thence with their packets. drinking poyson. All the rest hoping for But it happened ere they could convey more mercy than they had deferved, yielded themselves away, that one of them was de-simply to discretion. So one of the Towntected by an harlot following him out of gates was fet open; whereat a Roman Legithe Town; and the Letters of Bostar and on, with some other Companies, entring, dif-Hanno were taken and opened, containing a armed the Citizens; apprehended the Carvehement entreaty unto Hannibal, that he thoginian Garrison; and commanded all the would not thus forfake the Capuans and Senators of Capuato go forth into the Rothem. For (faid they) we came not hitherto man Camp. At their coming thither, the Promake War against Rhegium and Tarentum, consuls laid Irons upon them all, and combut against the Remans; whose Legions, manding them to tell what store of gold and wherefoever they lye, there also should the silver they had at home, sent them into safe Carthaginian Army be ready to attend custody; some to Cales, others to Theanum, them; and by taking of fuch a course, have Touching the general multirude, they were we gotten those victories at Trebia, Thrasy- reserved unto the discretion of the Senate; mene, and Canna. In fine, they belought him, yet fo hardly used by Fulvius in the mean that he would not dishonour himself, and while, that they had little cause of hope or betray them to their enemies, by turning comfort in this adversity. Ap. Claudius was another way; as if it were his only care, that the City should not be taken in his full wound which he had lately received; yet view; promiting to make a desperate fally, was he not inexorable to the Campans; as haif he would once more adventure to fet up- ving loved them well in former times, and on the Roman Camp. Such were the hopes having given his Daughter in marriage to that Pacuvius, of whom we spake before. But But Hannibal had already done his best; this facility of his Colleague, made Fulvius and now began to faint under the burden the more hasty in taking vengeance; for of that War, wherein as afterward he pro- fear, left upon the like respects, the Roman tested he was vanquished by Hanno and his Senate might prove more gentle, than he Partifans, in the Carthaginian Senate, rather thought behoveful to the common fafety, than by any force of Rome. It may well be, and honour of their State. Wherefore he as a thing incident in like cases, that some took the pains to ride by night unto Theof those which were besieged in Capua, had amum, and from thence to Cales; where been sent over by the Hannonians, to ob- he caused all the Campan prisoners to suffer serve the doings of Hannibal, and to check death; binding them to stakes, and scourghis proceedings. If this were fo, justly might | ing them first a good while with rods; after

This terrible example of vengeance, foever it were, the Letters directed unto which the Carthaginians could not hinder, Hannibal, fell (as is shewed) into the Ro- made all Towns of Haly the less apt to follow man Proconfuls hands; who cutting off the vain hope of the Campans; and bred a the hands of all fuch counterfeit fugitives, general inclination, to return upon good as carried fuch messages, whipt them back conditions to the Roman side. The Atellans, into the Town. This miserable spectacle Calatines and Sabatines, people of the Cambrake the hearts of the Campans, fo that the pans, that in the former change had followmultitude crying out upon the Senate, with ed the fortune of Capua, made also now the menacing terms, caused them to assemble like submission, for very fear and want of and confult, about the yielding up of Capua ability to refift. They were therefore used unto the Romans. The bravest of the Se- with the like rigour, by Fulvius; who dealt nators and fuch as a few years fince, had foextremely with them all, that he brought been most forward in joyning with Hanni- them into desperation. Wherefore some of bal, understood well enough whereunto the their young Gentlemen burning with fire of matter tended. Wherefore one of them in- revenge got into Rome; where they found vited the rest home to supper; telling them, means by night-time, to set on fire many that when they had made good chear, he houses, that a great part of the City was like would drink to them such an health, as to have been consumed. The beginning of the fire in divers places at once, argued that it mighty men in that Island, were the Ringwas no casualty. Wherefore liberty was pro- leaders; being incited by Hanno a Carthagiclaimed unto any flave, and other fufficient mian, that promifed the affiftance of his reward to any free-man, that should disco-country. Neither were the Carthaginian in ver who those Incendiaries were. Thus all this enterprise so careless, as in the rest of came out; and the Campans being detected their main undertakings, about the same by a flave of their own (to whom, above his time. Yet it had been better if their care liberty promifed, was given about the fumm had been directed unto the profecution of of an hundred marks) had the punishment that main business in Haly; whereon this answerable to their deferts. Fulvius hereby and all other hopes depended. For it would being more and more incenfed against this have sufficed, if they could have hindred wretched people, held them in a manner as the Romans from fending an Army into Sarprisoners within their Walls: and this ex- dinia. Harsicoras with his followers might treme severity caused them at length to be- well enough have served to drive out Quincome Suppliants unto the Roman Senate; that tus Mutius the Prætor; who lay fick in the some period might be set unto their miseries. Province; and not more weak in his own That whereupon the Senators refolved in body, than in his train. But whilft they the end, was worfe than all that which they fought revenge of that particular injury, had fuffered before. Only two poor women whereof the fense was most grievous; they in Capua (of which one had been an harlot) neglected the opportunity of requiting were found not guilty of the late rebellion. those that had done them wrong, and of The rest were, some of them, with their the securing themselves from all injuries in wives and children fold for flaves, and their the future. Their fortune also in this engoods conficated; others laid in prifon and terprife was fuch, as may feem to have enreferved to further deliberation: but the ge- couraged them from being at the like nerality of them, commanded to depart out charge, in cases of more importance. For, of Campania by a certain day, and confined whereas they fent over Aldrubal, furnamed unto feveral places, as best liked the angry the Bald, with a competent Fleet and Army, victors. As for the Town of Capua, it was affifted in this expedition by Hanno the Aufuffered to stand, in regard of the beauty thor of the rebellion, and by Mago a Gentleand commodious fight: but no corporation man of the Barchine house, and near kinsor form of polity was allowed to be therein; man to Hannibal: it fo fell out, that the only a Roman Provost was every year sent whole Fleet, by extremity of soul weather, to govern over those that should inhabit it, was cast upon the Baleares; so beaten, and and to do justice. This was the greatest act, in such evil plight, that the Sardinians had and most important, hitherto done by the even spent their hearts, and were in a manpeople of Rome, after many great loss in ner quite vanquished, ere these their friends the present War. After this, the glory of could arrive to succour them. Hannibal began to shine with a more dim Titus Manlius was fent from Rome with light than before: his oyl being far spent; two and twenty thousand foot, and twelve and that which should have revived his hundred horse, to settle the estate of that flame, being unfortunately flied; as shall be Island, which he had taken in, and annexed told in place convenient.

ø. XV.

How the Carthaginians, making a party in reputation of those men, and their families, sicil by the Carthaginians and their friends, race after him, were the most ready and best were brought to a quiet and happy end by approved means, to procure the benefit of the industrious valour of the Romans. The the people subdued. Hereby the Romans Sardinian rebellion was great and sudden: held very sure intelligence in every Proabove thirty thousand being up in arms, ere vince, and had alwayes in readiness fit men the Roman forces could arrive there to sup- to reclaim their subjects, if they fell into any unto the Roman Dominion, long before this, in his Confulship. It was a laudable cuftom of the Romans, to preserve and uphold in their several Provinces, the greatness and Sardinia and Sicil, held War against the by whom each Province had been first sub-Romans in those Islands, and were over- dued unto their Empire. If any injury were done unto the Provincials, if any grace were to be obtained from the Senate, or 7 Hilft things passed thus in 11aly, the whatsoever accident required the affistance commotions raised in Sardinia and of a Patron; the first Conquerour, and his press it. One Harsicorus with his Son H50stus, such disorder, as would otherwise have coming of Manlius retained in obedience that had rebelled, followed the example of all that were not already broken too far out. Cornus, and yielded unto the Roman ; who, Yet was Harficoras fo strong in field, that imposing upon them such increase of tribute. Manlius was compelled to arm his Mariners: or other punishment, as best forted with the without whom he could not have made up nature of their feveral offences, or their that number of two and twenty thousand, ability to pay returned back to Calaris with wherof we have spoken before: he landed a great booty, and from thence to Rome leaat Calaris, or Carallis, where mooring his ving Sardinia in quiet. thips, he passed up into the Country, and The war in sicil was of greater length, fought out the Enemy. Hyoftus, the Son and every way more burdenlome to Rome : of Harlicoras, had then the command of the as also the victory brought more honour Sardidian Army left unto him by his Father, and profit, for that the Romans became who was gone abroad into the Country, to thereby, not only favers of their own, as in draw in more friends to their fide. This Sardinia, but Lords of the whole Country. young Gentleman would needs adventure by annexing the City and dominion of syrato get honour, by giving battel to the Ro- | cufe, to that which they enjoyed before. Soon mans at his own differetion. So he rashly ad- after the battel of Canne, the old King of Syventured to fight with an old Souldier; by racuse died; who had continued long a stedwhom he received a terrible overthrow; fast friend unto the Romans, and greatly reand lost in one day above thirty thousand of lieved them in this present war. He left his his followers. Hyoftus himfelf, with the Kingdom to Hieronymus his grand-child, rest of his broken troops, got into Cornus, that was about fifteen years of age; Gelo his the chief Town of the Island; whither Man- Son, that should have been his heir, being lius pursued them. Very soon after this de- dead before. To this young King his sucfeature came Asdrubal with his Carthagini- ceffour, Hiero appointed fifteen tutors; of ans; too late to win all Sardinia in fuch which the principal were Andronodorus Zoihafte as he might have done, if the tem- lus, and Themistius; who had married his pest had not hindred his voyage; yet soon daughters, or the daughters of Gelo. The rest enough, and strong enough to fave the were such, as he judged most likely to pre-Town of Cornus, and to put a new spirit in- serve the Kingdom, by the same Art, whereto the Rebels. Manlius hereupon with- by himself had gotten, and so long kept it. drew himself back to Calaris; where he But within a little while, Andronodorus waxhad not stayed long, ere the Sardinians (such | ing weary of so many coadjutors, began to of them as adhered to the Roman party) commend the fufficiency of the young craved his affiftance; their Country being | Prince, as extraordinary in one of his years; wasted by the Carthaginians, and the rebels, and said, that he was able to rule the Kingwith whom they had refused to joyn. This dom without help of any Protector. Thus drew Manlius forth of Calaris; where, if he by giving over his own charge, he caused had stayed a little longer, Afdrubal would others to do the like; hoping thereby to get have fought him out with some blemish to the King wholly into his hands; which came his reputation. But the fame of Asarubal and to pass in a fort, as he desired. For Hieronyhis company, appears to have been greater mus, laying afide all care of government, than was their strength. For after some trial gave himself wholly over to his pleasures: made of them in few skirmishes, Manlius or, if he had any regard of his Royal digniadventred all to the hazard of a battel; ty, it was only in matter of exterior shew; wherein he flew twelve thousand of the ene- as wearing a Diadem, with ornaments of mies; and took of the Sardinians and Carpeople, and being attended by an armed thaginians three thousand. Four hours the guard. Hereby he offended the eyes of his battel lasted; and victory at length fell to purple, that had never seen the like in Hiero, the Romans, by the flight of the Itlanders, or in Gelo his Son. But much more he ofwhose courages had been broken in their un- fended them, when by his insolent behaprosperous fight, not many dayes before. The viour, suitable to his outward pomp, he gaue death of young Hyoftus, and of his Father proof, that in course of life, he would revive Harficoras, that slew himself for grief, toge- the memory of Tyrants dead long since, ther with the captivity of Asdrubal himself, from whom he took the pattern of his habit. with Mago and Hanno the Carthaginians, He grew proud, lustful, cruel, and dangemade the victory the more famous. The van- rous to all that were about him; so that such quilhed Army fled into Cornus, whither of his late tutors as could escape him by required a greater charge and trouble. The wonn the Town. All other Cities of the Ille

Manlius followed them, and in short space slight, were glad to live in banishment : the rest, being most of them put to death by the | but Grand-children of a banished syracu-Tyrant; many of them dying by their own fian. These grew into such favour with Hiehands, to avoid the danger of his displea- ronymus, that they drew him whither they fure, that seemed worse than death it self. listed. So that when App. Claudius the Ro-Only Andronodorus, Zoilus, and one Thraso, man Prætor, hearing what was towards. continued in grace with him, and were his made a motion of renewing the Confedera-Counfellours, but not of his Cabinet. cy, between the people of Rome, and the King These, howsoever they agreed in other of syracuse; his messengers were dismissed points, were at some differtion about the with an open scoff. For Hieronynnus would main point of adhering, either to the Ro- needs have them tell him the order of the mans, or to the Carthaginians. The two for- fight at Canne, that he might thereby learn mer of them were wholly for the Kings plea- how to accommodate himself; saying, that fure, which was fet on change: but Thraso, he could hardly believe the Carthaginians: having more regard of his honour and profit, fo wonderful was the victory, as they rewas very earnest to continue the amity with ported it. Having thus dismissed the Romans. Rome. Whilst as yet it remained some- he sent Embassadours to Carthage, where he what doubtful which way the King would concluded a league: with condition, at first. incline, a conspiracy against his person was that a great part of the Island should be andetected by a Groom of his; to whom one nexed to his Dominion; but afterward that Theodorus had broken the matter. Theo- he should reign over all Sicil; and the Cardorus hereupon was apprehended, and tor- thaginians rest satisfied with what they mented; thereby to wring out of him the could get in Italy. At these doings Appins whole practice, and the names of the under- | Claudius did not greatly ftir; partly for the takers. Long it was ere he would fpeak indignities that were offered, partly for that anything: but yielding (asit feemed) in the it behoved not the Romans to entertain end, unto the extremity of the torture, he more quarrels, than were enforced upon consessed, that he had been set on by Thra- them by necessity; and partly (as may seem) fo; whom he appeached of the treason, to- | for that the reputation, both of himself, and love or place unto Hieronymus. All these that which happened unto him in his jourof the crime wherewith they were charged. fhrunk for the matter: affuring themfelves, that the resolution of Theodorus bal; who readily entred into good correspon- in Hieronymus the new King. dence with him, that was maintained by But whilst Hieronymus was more desirous Hippocrates and Epicides, Carthaginians born, of war, than well resolved how to begin

gether with many more, that were near in of his City, had received such blemish, by therefore were put to death, being innocent ney, as much discountenanced him when he came into sicil, and forbade him to look But they that were indeed the Conspira- big. The mony that Hiero had bestowed tors, walked boldly in the streets, and never formerly upon the Romans, wherewith to relieve them in their necessity, this Appius was to carry back unto him; it being refuwould yield to no extremity. Thus they all | fed by the Roman Senate, with greater braescaped, and soon after found means to exe- very than their present fortune would alcute their purpose. The King himself, low. But instead of returning the mony with when Thraso was taken out of the way, quick- thanks, as he had been directed, and as it ly resolved upon siding with the Carthagi- had been noised abroad that he should do; nians, whereto he was very inclinable be- the war against Philip King of Macedon fore. Young men, when first they grow Ma- (whereof we have spoken before) compelfters of themselves, love to seem wifer than led the Romans to lay aside vain-glory, and their Fathers, by taking different courses, send word after him, that he should consign And the Liberality of Hiero to the Romans, in that mony over to Marcus Valerius; of whole their great necessity, had of late been such, voyage into Greece, the City had not as might have been termed excessive, were otherwise wherewith to bear the chargeit not in regard of his providence; wherein This was done accordingly, and hereby he took order for his own estate, that de- Claudius (which name in the whole continupended upon theirs. But the young Nephew | ance of that Family is taxed with pride) his taking little heed of dangers far off, regard- errand was changed, from a glorious oftened only the things present; the weakness of tation of the Roman magnanimity, into such Rome, the prevalent fortunes of Carthage, a pitiful tune of thanks-giving, as must needs and the much money that his Grand-father have bred forrow and commiferation in fo had laid out in vain, to shoulder up a fal- true a friend as Hierozor, if it were delivered ling house. Wherefore he dealt with Hanni- after his death, matter of pastime and scorn, it; his own death changed the form of have fought to murder all without diffebetween defire of making himself a sove- nibal had sent them. Wherefore they infinuawife Demarata, that was the daughter of mult, especially of the Roman fugitives, and Hiero, cherished him in his hopes; putting those that had cause to mistrust what should him in mind of that well-known Proverb, become of themselves, when the Romans Sould keep his place, till he were haled out of it Such instruments as these, Andronodorus had by the heels, and not ride away from it on great need of: as also of many other, to help horse-back. But fear, and better counsel, him in his dangerous attempt. He found prevailed fo far, that Andronodorus, having Themistius, that had married Harmonia, the flept upon the matter, diffembled his af- Sifter of Hieronymus, ready to take his part; fections, and deferred his hope unto better as being carried with the like paffices of his Opportunity. The next day he came forth, own, and of his wife. But in feeking to inand made a speech unto the people; telling crease the number of his adherents, he rethem that he was glad to see, how prudent | vealed the matter to one, that revealed all ly they behaved themselves in so great a to the rest of the Prators. Hereupon it solchange; that he had flood in fear, left they lowed; that he, & Themostius, entring into the would not have contained themselves with- Senate, were slain out of hand: and afterin the bounds of discretion; but rather ward accused to the people, of all the evil things, and bred a great innovation in the rence, that any way belonged to the Tyrant; State of Syracuse; which thereby might have and that, fince he beheld their orderly proprospered more than ever, had it been wifely ceeding, and their care, not to ravish their ligoverned. Hippocrates and Epicides, of whom berty perforce, but to wed it unto them for we spake before, were sent about the ever; he was willingly come to them forth of Country with two thousand men, to folicite his strength, and surrendred up the charge the Towns, and perswade them to shake committed unto him, by one that had been off their obedience to the Romans. The an evil Master both to him and them. Here-King himself with an Army of sisteen thou-upon great joy was made, and Prætors chofand horse and foot, went to Leontium a Ci- sen (as in former times) to govern the City, ty of his own Dominion: hoping that the of which Andronodorus was one, and the fame of his preparation, would make the chief. But fuch was his defire of Soveraignwhole Illand fall to him in all hafte; and ac- ty, and so vehement were the instigations cept him for Soveraign. There the Conspiration of his wife, that shortly he began to pratorstook him on the sudden, as he was past- crife with Hippocrates, Epicides, and other fing thorow a narrow street: and rushing Captains of the Mercenaries; hoping to between him and his guard, ftruck him make himfelf ftrong by their help, that were dead. Forthwith liberty was proclaimed ; least pleased with the change. Hippocrates and the found of that word fo joyfully an- and Epicides had been with the Syracufian fwered by the Leontines, that the guard of Prætors, and told them, that being fent from Hieronymus had little courage to revenge Hannibal to Hieronymus, they, according to their Masters death. Yet, for fear of the worlt, instructions of their Captain, had done him, a great largess was promised unto the Soul- whilst he lived, what service they could; diers, with rewards unto their Captains; and that now they were desirous to return which wrought fo effectually, that when ma- home. They requested therefore that they ny wicked acts of the murdered King were might be friendly difmifled, and with a conreckoned up, the Army, as in deteftation of voy, that might keep them from falling inhis bad life, suffered his carkass to lye unbu- to the hands of the Romans, and set them ried. These news ran quickly to Syracuse ; safe at Locri. This was easily granted; both whither some of the Conspirators, taking al- for that the Syracusian Magistrates were fo of the Kings horses, posted away; to signi- well contented to earn thanks of Hannibal, fie all that had passed, to stir up the people with such a little courtesse; and for that to liberty, and to prevent Andronodorus, if they thought it expedient, to rid their Town he or his followers would make offer to quickly of this troublesome couple, which usurp a tyranuy. The Syracusans hereupon were good souldiers, and gracious with the prefently took arms, and made themselves Army, but otherwise lewd men. It was not Masters of their own City. Andronodorus the desire of these two Sicilians, to be gone on the other fide fortified the Palace, and fo hastily as they made shew; they were the Island; being yet uncertain what to do: more mindful of the business for which Hanraign Lord, and fear of fuffering punishment ted themselves into the bosomes of such as as a Tyrant, if his enterprise miscarried. His were mest likely to fill the Army with tuwhich Dionysus had used; That a Tyrant and Syracustans were come to agreement.

CHAPIII

which they had done, whilest Hieronymus | many acts of hostility against the Romans: lived, as by his authority; and now fince at- first in secret, afterward more openly and tempted, in feeking to usurp the tyranny boldly. Marcellus, rightly understanding themselves. It was also declared, that the the purpose of these two brethren, sent word daughters of Hiero and Gelo were accessary to this dangerous treason: and that the un- broken the league; and that the peace would quiet spirits of these women would never never be kept sincerely, untill this turbulent cease to work, untill they had recovered pair of brethren were expelled the Island. those royal ornaments and Soveraign power, whereof their family was now dif- brothers proceedings, and more defirous to possessed. These daughters therefore of set forward the war, than to excuse any Hiero and Gelo were also condemned to breach of peace; went himself unto the dye, and executioners prefently fent by Leontiner, whom he perfwaded to rebel the enraged people, to take away their against the Syracusian. For he said, that lives. Demarata and Harmonia had perhaps deserved this heavy sentence : but there was little reason why the Leontines Heraclea, the daughter of Hiero, and wife of should not be enfranchised by his death, as Solippus, being altogether innocent, was murdered, together with her two young daugh- ther, all things confidered; fince in their ters, in the hasty execution of this rash judg- streets the Tyrant was slain, and liberty first ment. Her husband sosppus was a lover of proclaimed. Wherefore, fince they of sythe Common-wealth; and in that respect so racins were not contented to enjoy the freehated by Hieronymus, that being fent Em- dom purchased among the Leontines; but bassadour to King Ptolemy, &c. he durst not thought it good reason, that they should return home, but stayed in Egypt as a bani- | bear Dominion over those that had broken shed man. This consideration, when it was the Chain, wherewith both the one and the too late, together with some pitiful acci- other were bound: his advice was, that such dents accompanying the flaughter, so affect- their arrogancy should be checked betimes, ed the multitude, that (pardoning them- ere it could get any colour of right by prefelves) all cryed out upon the Authors of fo | scription. Hereunto occasion was given by foul a butchery. Being thus incenfed against one article of the League, made of late by the Senate; and knowing not otherwise how the Romans and Syracusians. For it was to satisfie their anger, they called for an agreed, That all which had been subject to election of new Prætors, in the room of Hiero and Hieronymus, should henceforth be Andronodorus and Themistius, that were late- Vassals unto the State of Syracuse. Against ly flain: meaning to substitute such in their this article, if the Leontines would take explaces, as the Senators should have little ception, and thereby challenge their own cause to like. At the election were present | due; Epicides told them, that in this novela great rout, not only of the poorer Citi- ty of change, they had fit opportunity to zens, but of fouldiers that prefied into the recover the freedom, which their fathers throng. One of these, named Epicides Præ- | had lost not many ages before. Neither was tor; another named Hippocrates: and the it unreasonable, which this crastry Carthagiless that the old Prætors and Senators ap- mian propounded; if the Leontines had been proved this nomination, the more eager was subdued by the same hand, which took lithe multitude; and by a general cry forced | berty from the Syracustans. But seeing they them to be accepted. These being made | had long since yielded unto Syracuse, and Prætors did what they could to hinder the been subject unto that City, by what form agreement that was in hand, between the foever it was governed; this claim of liber-Syracusians and the Romans. But having stri- ty was rather seasonable, than just. Neverven in vain, and feeing that the people stood theless, the motion of Epicides was highly in fear of Ap. Claudius, and of Marcellus that approved: insomuch that when messengers was lately come into sicil; they gave way came foon after from spracuse, to rebuke the unto the time, and suffered the old league of Leontines, for that which they had done Hiero to be re-confirmed, which afterward against the Romans; and to denounce unto they purposed to dissolve by practise. The Hippocrates and Epicides, that they should Leontines had some need of a garrison; and to get them gone, either to Locri, or whither them was fent Hippocrates the Prætor, at- else they listed, so that they stayed not in tended by fuch fugitives, and mercenary sicil: word was returned, That they of fouldiers, as were most burdensome to Syra- | Leontium had not requested the Syracusiani, cufe. Thither when he came, he began to do to make any bargains for them with the unto the Syracusians, that they had already Epicides, fearing to fustain the blame of his fince they had all of late ferved one Mafter. well as the Syracusians; yea or much ra-

Romans, nor thought themselves bound to | so presented themselves to the Army. Six trary fort. It was faid, that he had flain Man, Woman, and Childe, and put the Town to observe the covenants, which others with- hundred men of Crete were in the vantout warrant had made in their names. This guard; that had been well used by Hierongperemptory answer was forthwith reported mus: and some of them greatly bound unto unto Marcellus by the Syracusians; who Hannibal, who had taken them prisoners in offered him their affistance in doing justice the Italian war, and lovingly dismissed them. upon the Leontines their Rebels; with con- These Cretians therefore welcomed the two dition, That when the Town was taken, it brethren, and bade them be of good chear, might be theirs again. Marcellus required faying, That no man should do them harm, no better fatisfaction: but forth-with took as long as they could use their weapons. the business in hand, which he dispatched in Herewithall the Army was at a stand; and one day. At the first assault Leontium was the rumour of this accident ran swiftly taken, all fave the Castle; whereinto Hippo- | from man to man, with general approbation. crates and Epicides fled: and stealing thence | The Prætors thought to help the matter by away by night, conveighed themselves into severity, which would not serve. For when the Town of Herbesus. The first thing that they commanded these two traitors to be Marcellus did, when he had won the Town, | laid in Irons, the exclamation was fo violent was the same, which other Roman Captains against them, that fain they were to let all used after victory, to seek out the fugitive alone, and return, uncertain what course to Roman flaves and renegado's, whom he caus- take, unto Megara, where they were lodged ed all to die: the rest both of the Towns- the night before. Thither when they came, men and Souldiers, he took to mercy, for- Hippocrates devised a trick, whereby to help bearing also to strip or spoyl them. But the himself, and better the uncertain case fame of his doings was bruited after a con- wherein he stood. He caused Letters, of his own penning, to be intercepted by some of his most trusty Cretans, directed (as they fack. These news met the syracusian Army made shew) from the syracusian Prators to upon the way, as it was going to joyn with Marcellus. The contents hereof were, That Marcellus, who had ended his business be- Marcellus had well done, in committing all fore. About eight thousand Mercenaries to the sword among the Leontines: but that there were, that had been sent forth of sy- it further behoved him, to make the like racuse, under sosis and Dinomenes, two of dispatch of all the mercenaries belonging to the Prators, to serve against the Leontines Syracuse; which were offensive, all of them and other rebels. These Captains were ho- in general, to the liberty of the City, and nest men, and well affected to their Count the peace with Rome. When this counterfeit try: but the Souldiers that followed them, Epistle was openly rehearsed, the uproar had those diseases, with which all mercena- was such, that softs and his fellow Prator, ries are commonly infected. They took the were glad to for sake the Camp, and fly for matter deeply to heart, that their fellow their lives. All the syracufians remaining fouldiers (as now they termed those against behind, had been cut in pieces by the enwhom they went) had been fo cruelly but- raged Souldiers, if the two Artificers of the chered: and hereupon they fell to mutiny; sedition had not faved their lives; rather though what to demand, or with whom to to keep them as pledges, and by them, to be angry, they could not tell. The Prætors win their friends within the Town, than for therefore thought it best, to turn their un-quiet thoughts another way, and set them chievous knave, that had served amongst the awork in some place else: for as much as at Leontines, to justifie the bruit of Marcellus Leontium there was no need of their fervice. cruelty, and to carry home the news to Sy-So towards Herbesus they marched; where racuse, as an eye-witness. This incensed not lay Hippocrates and Epicides, the architects only the multitude, but some of the Senate; of all this mischief, devising what further and filled the whole Town with causeless harm they might do; but now fo weakly indignation. In good time (faid some) was accompanied, that they seemed unable to the avarice and cruelty of the Romans deescape the punishments belonging to their tected: who, had they in like fort gotten offences past. Hereof the two brethren were into Syracuse, would have dealt much worse, no less well aware: and therefore adven- where their greedy appetites might have tured upon a remedy little less desperate been tempted with a far greater booty. than their present case. They issued forth of Whilst they were thus discoursing, and de-Herbefus unarmed, with Olive branches in vising how to keep out the wicked Romans, their hands, in manner of Suppliants; and Hippocrates with his Army came to the unless for want of help, they would be betrayed to their enemies. The Prætors, with the best and wisest or the Senate, would fain labour was disappointed, and his hope of have kept him out: but the violence of the prevailing by open force, taken from him by fouldiers to force a gate, was no whit greather ill fuccess of two or three of the first after, than the head-ftrong fury of those with- faults. Yet was it not the vertue of the Dein the Town, that laboured to break it open. fendants, or any strength of the City, that So he entred, and immediately fell upon the bred fuch despair of halfy victory. But there P. etors, whom (being for laken by all men) lived at that time in Syracuse Archimedes the he put to the fword, and made flaughter of noble Mathematician: who at the request them and their followers until night. The of Hiero the late King, that was his kinfman, next day he went openly to work: and, af- had framed fuch engines of war, as being in ter the common example of Tyrants, gave this extremity put in use, did more mischief liberty unto all flaves and prisoners; and to the Romans than could have been being fortified with adherents of the worst wrought by the Canon, or any instruments and baselt fort, made himself and his bro- of Gun-powder; had they in that age been ther Prætors, in Title, but in effect, Lords known. This Archimedes discoursing once of syracuse. great alteration, he thought it no time for wherein it is, if there were some other him to fit still, and attend the further issue. earth, or place of sure footing, whereon a He fent Embassadours to Syracuse, that were man might stand. For proof of this bold not admitted into the Haven, but chased out affertion, he performed some strange works: as enemies. Then drew he near with his Ar- which made the King entreat him to conmy: and lodging within a mile and a half | vert his fludy unto things of use: that might of the Towa, fent before him, fome to 1e- preferve the City from danger of enemies. quire a parkee. These were entertained with- To such Mechanical works, Archimedes and out the walls by the two new Prators: to the Philosophers of those times, had little whom they declared, That the Romans were affection. They held it an injury done uncome thither, not with purpose to do hurt, to the liberal sciences, to submit learned but in favour of the syraculians, which were | Propolitions, unto the workmanship, and opprefied by Tyrants; and to punish those gain, of base handy-crafts men. And of that had murdered and banished so many of this opinion Plato was an Authour: who the principal Citizens. Wherefore they re- greatly blamed some Geometricians, that quired, that those worthy men, their Confederates, which were chased out of the by making it vulgar. Neither must we rash Town, might be suffered to return and en- ly task a man so wife as Plato, with the imjoy their own; as also that the Authors of putation of supercilious austerity, or affethe great flaughter lately committed, might cred fingularity in his reprehension. For it be delivered up. Hereto Epicides briefly hath been the unhappy fate of great invenanswered, that if their errand had been to tions to be vilified, as idle fancies, or dreams, him, he could have told what to fay to before they were published: and being once them: but fince it was directed unto others, made known, to be undervalued; as falling they should do well to return, when those within compass of the meanest wit; and to whom they were fent, had the govern- things that every one could well have perment in their hands. As for the war which formed, Hereof (to omit that memorable they threatned, he told them, they should example of Columbus his discovery, with the find by experience, That to beliege syracuse much different forts of neglect, which he unwas another manner of work, than to take der-went before and after it) in a familiar Leontium. Thus he sent them gone; and and most homely example we may see most returned back into the City. Immediately apparent proof. He that looks upon our began the fiege, which endured longer than | English Brewers, and their Servants, that are the Romans had expected, The quick and daily exercised in the Trade; will think it easie winning of Leontium, did put Marcellus | ridiculous to hear one say, that the making in hope, that fo long a circuit of walls as of Malt, was an invention, proceeding from compassed syracuse, being manned with no some of an extraordinary knowledge in nabetter kinde of Souldiers, than those with tural Philosophy. Yet is not the skill of gates, exhorting the Citizens to let him in, Wherefore he omitted no violence or terwith Hiero, maintained that it were possible When Marcellus was advertised of this to remove the whole earth out of the place whom he had lately dealt, would in some the inventors any whit the less, for that the part or other, be taken at the first affault. labour of workmanship grows to be the trade of ignorant men. The like may be faid nichal trade, or teach the Art of murdering of many handy-crafts: and particularly in men, it was besides his purpose. the Printing of Books; which being devifed des published, were such as tended unto ve- charge. Neither knew Marcellus how to ry commendable ends. They were Engines, overcome these difficulties, or to take away ferring unto the defence of syracuse; not from his men, that fear, against the cause fit for the Syracufians to carry abroad, to whereof he knew no remedy. If the Engines the hurt and oppression of others. Neither had stood upon the walls, subject to firing, did he altogether publish the knowledge, or any such annoyance from without; he how to use them, but reserved so much to might have holpen it by some device, to his own direction; that after his death more make them unferviceable. But all, or the most of the same kind were not made, nor those of them were out of sight, being erected in of his own making were employed by the the streets behind the walls, where Archime-Romans. It sufficed unto this worthy man, des gave directions how to use them. Where-

CHAPIII

918

Marcellus had caused certain of his Quinand bettered by great scholars and wise quereme Gallies to be fastened together, and men, grew afterward corrupted by those, to Towers erected on them to beat the defenwhom the practice fell; that is, by such as dants from the wall. Against these Archimecould flubber things eafily over, and feed des had fundry devices; of which any one their workmen at the cheapest rate. In sort might have repelled the assailants: but this respect therefore, the Alchymists, and all all of them together shewed the multiplicity others that have, or would feem to have of his great wit. He shot heavy stones, and any fecret skill, whereof the publication long pieces of timber, like unto the yeards might do good unto mankind, are not with- of flips; which brake some of the Gallies by out excuse of their close concealing. For their force and weight. These afflicted such it is a kind of injustice, that the long travels as lay far off. They that were come nearer of an understanding brain, beside the loss the walls, lay open to a continual volly of of time, and other expence, should be cast shot, which they could not endure. Some away upon men of no worth; yield less be- with an Iron grapple were taken by the nefit unto the Author of a great work, than prow, and hoyfred up, shaking out all the to meer strangers; and perhaps his ene- men, and afterwards falling down into the mies. And furely, if the paffion of Envy water. Some by strange Engines were lifted have in it any thing allowable and natural, up into the Air, where, turning round a as having Anger, Fear, and other like Affe- while, they were broken against the walls ctions: it is in some such case as this; and or cast upon the rocks: and all of them were ferveth against those, which would usurp so beaten, that they durst never come to any the knowledge, wherewith God hath denied | fecond affault. In the like fort was the Landto indue them. Nevertheless, if we have Army handled. Stones and timber, falling regard unto common charity, and the great upon it like hail, did not only over-whelm affection that every one ought to bear unto the men, but brake down the Roman Engines the generality of mankind, after the exam- of battery; and forced Marcellus to give over ple of him that suffereth his Sun to shine upon the affault. For the remedy hereof it was the just, and unjust: it will appear more conceived, that if the Romans could early commendable in wife men, to inlarge them- before day get near unto the walls, they selves, and to publish unto the world, those should be (as it were) under the point-blank, good things that lay buried in their own bo- and receive no hurt by these terrible Instrufoms. This ought specially to be done, ments; which were woond up hard to shoot when a profitable knowledge hath not an- a great compass But this vain hope cost manexed to it some dangerous cunning, that ny of the assailants lives: For the shot came may be perverted by evil men to a mischie-down right upon them; and beating them voususe. For if the secret of any rare An- from all parts of the wall, made a great tidote, contained in it the skill of giving some slaughter of them, all the way as they fled deadly and irrecoverable poilon: much bet- (for they were unable to tarry by it) even terit were, that such a Jewel remain close in till they were gotten very far off. This did the hands of a wife and honest man, than be- so terrifie the Romans, that if they perceived ing made common, bind all men to use the any piece of timber, or a ropes end, upon the remedy, by teaching the worst men how to wall, they rann away, crying out, That Ardo mischief. But the works which Archime- chimedes his Engines were ready to disthat he had approved unto the vulgar, the fore the Roman had no other way left, than dignity of his Science; and done especial be- to cut off from the Town all provision of nefit to his Country. For to enrich a Mecha- victuals, both by Land and by Sca.

931.

For the enemies having to goodly an Ha- the disposition of the Islanders changed to ven; the Sea in a manner free; and the Carthaginians that were frong by Sea, willing come from Rome, which escaped from Himil. to supply them: were not likely so soon to co, and safely arrived at Marcellus his Camp; be confumed with famine, as the beliegers to yet many places revolted unto the Carthagibe wearied out, by lying in Leaguer before mians, and flew or betrayed the Roman Garfo strong a City, having no probability to risons. carry it. Yet, for want of better counsel to follow, this was thought the best, and most forced both parts to take breath a while; honourable course.

Carthaginian Fleet, that had waited long given over the fiege, went unto Leonlium, about Sicil, being by Hippocrates advertised where he lay intentive to all occasions. In the of these passages, went home to Carthage, and beginning of the Spring he stood in doubt, there so dealt with the Senate, that five and whether it were better to continue the latwenty thousand Foot, three thousand borious work of besieging spracule, or to Horse, and twelve Elephants, were committed unto his charge, wherewith to make mileo and Hippocrates. But it would greatly war upon the Comans in Sicil by Land. He took many Towns; and many that had anciently belonged unto the Carthaginians, did yield unto him. To remedy this mifchief and to stay the inclination of men, which following the current of Fortune, began to turn unto the Carthaginians; Marcellus with a great part of his Army, role remaining as before; and no likelihood to from Syracuse, and went from place to place take the City by force or famine; yet was about the Island. He took Pelorus and he not without hope, that continuance of Herbesus, which yielded unto him. He took time would bring forth scmewhat, which also Megara by force and fackt it: either to might fulfill his desire. Especially he assayterrifie others that were obstinate, especialed to prevail by treason; against which no ly the Sgracusans, or else because Rome was place can hold out. And to this end he dealt at this time poor, and his Army must have with the Syracusian Gentlemen that were in fomewhat to keep it in heart. His especial his Camp; exhorting them to practife with defire was to have faved Agrigentum: whitheir friends that remained in the City. This ther he came too late; for Himileo had got- was not easie for them to do, because the ten it before. Therefore he returned back Town would hearken to no parlee. At length toward Syracuse; carefully, and in as good a flave unto one of these bamished men, make order as he could, for fear of the Carthagi ing shew to run away from his Master, got nian that was too strong for him. The cir- into syracuse; where he talked in private cumfrection that he used, in regard of Hi- with some few, as he had been instructed mileo, flood him in good ftead against a danger that he had not mistrusted. For Hippohis brother, had lately issued out of the City, refused it. Bomilear also a Carthaginian, en- looking upon the wall, and wanting the tred with a great fleet into the Haven of 8y- more compendious Art of Geometry, fello

This was a very desperate piece of work. | racuse, and victualled the City. After this,

In the midst of these troubles, Winter enand Marcellus, leaving some of his Army be-In the mean while, Hinnileo, Admiral of a fore Syracuse, that he might not seem to have have impaired his reputation, if he had gone from Syracuse, as unable to prevail; and he himfelf was of an eager disposition, ever unwilling to give ground, or to quit, as not feisible, an enterprise that he had once taken in hand. He came therefore to Syracuse: where though he found all the difficulties Thus began Marcellus to have intelligence within the City: whence the Conspirators crates, leaving the charge of syracuse unto used to send him advertisement of their proceedings, by a fisher-boat that passed forth with ten thouland foot, and five hundred in the night: but when they were grown to horse, intending to joyn his forces with Hi- the number of fourscore, and thought themmilco. Marcellus fell upon him, ere either selves able to effect somewhat of imporwas aware of the other: and the Romans, tance, all was discovered; and they like being in good order, got an easie victory Traitors, put to death. In the mean while, against the dispersed and half unarmed sy- one Damassippus a Lacedemonian, that had racustans. The reputation hereof helped a lit- been sent out of the Town as an Embassador tle to keep the sicilians from rebellion. Yet to Philip King of Macedon, was fallen into the it was not long, ere Himileo, joyning with hands of Marcellus. Epicides was very defir Hippocrates, ran over all the Island at his ous to ransome him : and many meetings pleasure, and presented battail to Marcellus, were appointed for that purpose, not far even at his Trenches; but the Roman wifely from the walls. There, one of the Romans

the walls, which he took by scalado. syra- faint hope of hearing any good news. cuse was divided into four parts (or five, if The Sicilian Souldiers that remained alive

numbring the stones: and making an esti-led the rest to dislodge. The Romans were mate of the height, judged it less than it had (though somewhat les) afflicted with the been formerly deemed. Herewith he ac- same postilence, insomuch that Bomilear did quainted Marcellus: who causing better no- put the City of Carthage in hope, that he tice to be taken of the place; and finding might be taken where he lay, if any great that ladders of no extraordinary length forces were fent thither. This Bomilear wantwould reach it; made all things ready, and ed no defire to do his Country fervice : but waited a convenient time. It was the weakest his courage was not answerable to his good part of the Town, and therefore the most will. He arrived at Pachynus with a strong throngly guarded: neither was there hope to fleet: where he staid; being loth to double prevail by force against Archimedes, if they the Capesfor that the winds did better serve failed to take it by surprise. But a fugitive the enemy than him. Thither failed Epicides out of the Town brought word, that a great out of Syracuse: to acquaint him with the out of the Lown brought word, that a great force of syrange. To acquaint film with the feaft was to be held unto Diana, which was local three dayes: and that, because other good chear was not so plentiful within the With much intreaty, at length he came forgood chear was not so plentiful within the three but meeting with the Roman seet, City, as in former times, Epicides, to gratifie the people, had made the more large discovered by the people, had made the more large discovered by the people of the p fribution of wine. A better opportunity Sicil farewell. Then durst not Epicides recould not be wished. Wherefore Marcellus turn into Syracuse, but went to Agrigentum: in the dead of the Festival night, came unto where he expected the issue; with a very

Epipole were reckoned as one) each of which of Hippocrates his Army, lay as near as they were fortified as diffinct Cities. When there- could fafely, unto Marcellus, and some of fore Marcellus had gotten fome pieces, he them in a strong Town three miles off. These had the commodity of a better and fafe had done what good they could to syracule. lodging, with good store of booty; and bet- by doing what hurt they could unto the R_{θ} ter opportunity than before, to deal with mans. But when they were informed, that the reft. For there were now a great many, the State of Sicil was given as desperate by as well of those in Acradinia and the Island, the Carthaginians: they fent Embassadours inner parts of the Town, as of those that to treat of peace; and made offer to comwere already in the hands of Marcellins, that pound, both for themselves, and for the began to hearken unto composition, as being Town. Hereunto Marcellus willingly gave much terrified by the loss of those parts, ear: for he had stayed there long enough; which the Romans had taken and fackt. As and had cause to fear, that after a little for the weapons of Archimedes, little harm, while, the Carthaginians might come thirther or none they did, unto those that were shell strong again. He therefore agreed, both with tred under strong houses: although it may the Citizens, and with the Souldiers that lay feem, that the inner walls were not altoge- abroad; That they should be Masters of their ther unfurnished of his help; fince they own, enjoying their liberty and proper laws; held out a good while, and were not taken yet fuffering the Romans to possess whatsoby force. The Roman fugitives and Renega- ever had belonged unto the Kings. Hereupdo's, were more careful then ever to defend on they, to whom Epicides had left his the rest of the City:being sure to be reward- charge, were put to death, new Prætors ed with cruel death, if Marcellus could pre- chosen; and the gates even ready to be vail. Hippocrates and Himilco, were daily ex- opened unto Marcellus: when suddenly the pected; and Bomilear was fent away to Car- Roman fugitives disturbed all. These perthage, to bring help from thence. It was not ceiving their own condition to be desperate, longere Hippocrates and Himileo came: who perswading the other Mercenary Souldiers. fell upon the old Camp of the Romans, That the Citizens had bargained only for whilst Epicides sallied out of Acradinia upon themselves, and betrayed the Army to the Marcellus. But the Romans made such de- Romans. Wherefore they presently took fence in each part, that the Assailants were Arms, and fell upon the new chosen Prærepelled. Nevertheless, they continued to tors; whom they slew, and made election beset Marcellus: whom they held in a man- of six Captains that should command over ner as straightly besieged, as he himself did all. But shortly it was found out, that beliege the Town. But the pestilence at there was no danger at all to the Souldiers; length confumed, together with the two excepting only the fugitives. The Treaty Captains, a great part of the Army, and cau- was therefore again set on soot, and wanted Bbbbbb

CHAPIIL

ed; either by some fear of the Citizens, that make a bargain under-hand against them had feen (as they thought) proof of the Ro- | with a Captain of the Mercenaries? These man avarice in the fack of Epipola, Tyche, and things were objected against Marcellin, at Neapolis, the parts already taken; or by fome his return home: but the Senators thought defire of Marcellus to get the Town by force, it a great deal better, to comfort the Syracuthat he might use the liberty of a Conquer- stans with gentle words, and promise of good or, and make it wholly subject to Rome. Me- ulage in time to come; than to restore the ricus a Spaniard was one of the fix Captains | booty, and give over the Dominion of a Cithat had been chosen in the last commotion: ty, so great, wealthy, strong, and many waves a man of fuch faith, as usually is found in important. Nevertheless if we consider the Merceparies; holding his own particular be- many inconveniences and great milehiefs nefit above all other respects. With this Cap- whereunto Syracuse was obnoxious; both tain, Marcellus dealt fecretly: having a fit in- by evil neighbours, and by that very form ftrument, of the same Nation, one Belligenes, of policy, after which it was governed: we that went in company with the Roman Emmay truly affirm, That it received no small baffadors, daily paffing to and fro. This benefit, by becoming subject unto Rome, For crafty Agent periwaded Mericus, That the thereby it was not only affured against all Romans had already gotten all spain: and forraign enemies, domestical conspiracies, that if ever he purposed to make his own and such Tyrants as of old had reigned fortune good, either at home in spain, or therein: but freed from the necessity of baany where elle; it was now the only time to nishing, or murdering, the most worthy do it; by conforming himself to the will of Citizens; as also from all factions, intelline the Roman General. By such hopes the spa- feditions, and a thousand the like miseries, nish Captain was easily won, and sent forth that were wont to grow out of the jealousie, his own brother among the syracufian Em- wherein they held their liberty in vain. baffadours to ratifie the covenant with Neither enjoyed that City, from her first Marcellus.

This under-hand dealing of Marcellus against the syracusians, cannot well be commended as honest: neither was it afterwards throughly approved at his coming to Rome. For the benefits of Hiero to the Romans had been fuch, as deserved not to be requited with the ruine of his Country: much less, that the miferies of his people, oppressed (though partly through their own folly) by an Army of Mercenaries, should minister unto the people of Rome, advantage against them. The poor Citizens could not make good their parts against the hired Souldiers; and therefore were fain to yield unto the time, and obey those Ministers of Hannibal, that ruled the Army. But as long as they were free after the death of Hieronymus; and now of late, when they had gathered courage by the flight of Epicides: it had been their chief care to maintain amity with the people of Rome. They had lately ilain many left untouched; lave only the houses of those the principal of Epicides his followers; and | banished men, that had escaped from Hippomany of themselves had also been slain, both crates and Epicides, into the Roman Camp. lately and in former times, because of this Among other pitiful accidents; the death their desire unto the peace. What though of Archimedes was greatly lamented, even by it were true, that the Rascality, and some Marcellus himself. He was so busie about his ill advised persons, joyned with the souldi- Geometry, in drawing figures, that he hearers in hatred of the Romans, by occasion of kened not to the noise, and uproar in the the flaughter which they heard to be done City; no, nor greatly attended the rude at Leontium, and afterward beheld in those Souldier that was about to kill him. Marcelparts of their own City which was taken? Its took heavily the death of him; and cau-Ought therefore the Roman General, in a | fed his body to be honourably buried. Up-little of conclusion: which yet was delay- treaty of peace held with the Syracustans, to foundation any fuch long time of happiness, as that wherein it flourished, when it rested fecure under the protection of Rome; and was no more molested, by the disease of ambition ; wherewith by Marcellus his victory it was throughly cured. But fuch benefit, arifing from wrongs done, ferves not to make injustice the more excusable: unless we should approve the answer of that Thief, who being found to have stollen a filver cup from a fick man, faid, He never leaves drink-

> By the treason of Mericus, the Roman Army was let into possession of all Syracuse: wherein, the booty that it found, was faid to have been no less, than could be hoped for, if they had taken Carthage it felf; that mair. tained war by Land and Sea against them. All the goodly works and Imageries, wherewith Syracuse was marvellously adorned, were carried away to Rome; and nothing on his Tomb (as he had ordained in his life- that the vain-glorious envy of Hanno cartime) was placed a Cylinder and a Sphere, ried him unto the fight, upon a foolish desire with an inscription of the proportion be- to get victory, without the help of Mutines tween them; which he first found out. An their Country-men. Wherefore they sent invention of so little use, as this may feem, unto the Roman General, and bade him be pleased that great Artist better, than the deviling of all those Engines, that made him so to shew themselves his enemies that day, but famous. Such difference is in the judgment only look on, and see the proud Carthaginiof learned men, and of the vulgar fort. For ans well beaten by whom they had been mifmany an one would think the mony loft, that used. They made good their promise, and had been spent upon a Son, whose studies had their desire. For Marcellus, finding likein the University had brought forth such lihood of truth in their message, did so lustifruit, as the proportion between a Sphere | ly fet upon the enemies, that he brake them and a Cylinder. in Sicil yielded unto the Romans, except Agrigentum. Agrigentum and a few places thereabout. At Agrigentum lay Epicides with one Hanno a follow the directions of one, that was a bet-Carthaginian, and Mutines an African, that ter man of War than himself, and not to confident; for that it was not their purpole at the first charge; and with the slaughter After the taking of Syracuse, all the Towns of many thousands, drove them back into

If Hanno could have been contented, to

was lately fent from Hannibal. This Mutines | have hazarded a battel without need; the by many good pieces of fervice, had added Romans would shortly have been reduced some credit to the beaten Carthaginian side; into terms of great difficulty in their Siciliand withall made his own name great. By an War. For Marcellus was shortly after to his perswasions, Hanno and Epicides adven- leave the Province; and soon upon his detured to meet Marcellus without the Town, parture, there landed in the Island a supply and not behave themselves as men expect- of eight thousand foot, and three thousand ing to be besieged. Neither was he more Numidian horse, that were sent from Carvaliant in counsel, than in execution. Once thage. The fame of this new Army drew and again he set upon the Romans, where many of the Sicilians into rebellion. The they lay encamped, and drove them fear- Roman Army confifting (for the most part) fully into their Trenches. This bred envy of the Legions of Canna, took it very hainoufin Epicides and Hanno; especially in Hanno, | ly, that no good service done, could bring that having been lately fent from Carthage, them into the favour of the Senate; but that, with commission and authority from the as banished men, they were sent far from State, thought himself wronged greatly by home, and not suffered to return back to Hannibal; in that he had fent unto him this Rome with their General. Mutines had paci-Mutines, to be his companion, and to take | fied his Country-men the Numidians, and upon him, like as good a man as himfelf. The like an honest man, did what he could for indignity seemed the greater, when Mutines | those whom he served, without contending being to step aside into Heraclea, for the pa- against the foolish pride of Hanno; finding cifying some troubles there among the Nu- that there was a great alteration; and a greamidians; advised (as directing Hanno and ter might have been, if the Army lately over-Epicides) not to meddle with the enemy, un- thrown had been entire. M. Cornelius the til his return. So much therefore the ra- Roman Prætor, used all diligence, both to ther would Hanno fight; and offered battel pacifie his own men, and to hinder the Carunto Marcellus, before he fought it. It is like, thaginians. He recovered those In-land towns that a great part of the Roman Army was left that had rebelled : and though he could not behind in Syracuse, as need required; which | hinder Mutines from over-running all the made the Carthaginians the better able to Country; yet he hindred the Country from deal with those that came against them. But revolting unto Mutines. Above threewhatsoever disproportion was between the score Towns, great and small, the Carthatwo Armies; far greater were the odds be- ginians held in Sicil: of which Agrigentween the Captains. For howfoever the peo- tum was the principal, and far bigger than ple of Carthage would give authority by fa- any of the rest. Thence issued Mutines as vour; yet could they not give worth and often as he pleased, in despight of the Roability, in matter of war. The Numidians, mans: not only to the succour of his own having before conceived some displeasure adherents, but to the great waste of those against their Captains; and being there-that followed the contrary part. But Hanno, fore some of them gone away to Heraclea, instead of being pleased with all these go od were much more offended, when they saw services, was filled more and more with en-

Bbbbbb 2

He had (belike) received instruction from cy of the Romans, that henceforward conold Hanno at Carthage, not to suffer Hannibal, tinued Masters of the whole Island. or any Hannibalian, to have share in the honour of these Sicilian Wars: which were gentum, did sharp execution of justice upon therefore perhaps the more diligently sup- all the Citizens. The principal of them he plied; whilft Haly was neglected, that should scourged with rods, and afterwards beheadhave been regarded more than all the rest. ed, as was the manner of the Romans: all the Wherefore to shew his authority, and that rest of them he sold for slaves, and confiscait was not in the power of Hannibal, to ap- ted their goods; fending home to Rome the point unto him an Affiliant, or Director: mony that was raifed of the booty. This was He took away from Mutines his charge, indeed a time, wherein Rome ftood in no less and gave it to his own Son; thinking there-necessity of gold, than of steel: which may by to discountenance the man, and make have been the reason, why Lavinus dealt him little estcemed, as one out of Office, so cruelly with the Agrigentines. Nevertheamong the Numidians, But it fell out quite less, the fame of such severity bred a terrour contrary: and this spightful dealing occa- among all the Dependants of the Carthagifioned the loss of what loever the Carthagini- nians, fo that in great haste they sought to ans held in Sicil. For the Numidians were fo make their peace. About forty Towns yieldincenfed by the indignity offered unto their ed themselves quickly unto the Romans; Country-man, being such a brave Comman- twenty were delivered up by Treason; and der, that they offered him their service to six only stayed to be wonn by sorce. These require the wrong; and were thenceforth things done, Levinus returned home to absolutely at his own disposition. M. Vale- Rome; carrying with him about four thourius Levinus, the Roman Conful, was newly and men from Agatirna; that were a compacome into the Province, when this fell ny of out-laws, bankrouts, and banished men, out: and with him did Mutines enter into accustomed to live by spoil of others in these intelligence. For he could no longer brook troublesome times. He bestowed them about these indignities; but being neither a Car- Rhegium in Italy, where they might exercise thaginian, nor favoured by those that bore their own occupation against the Brutians; a all the sway in Carthage: He thought it thievish kind of people, that were enemies the wisest way, to play the best of his own unto those of Rhegium, and to the Romans. As game, and for sake that City, which was for Mutines, he was well rewarded, and made likely to perish by the evil counsel that go- Citizen of Rome: where he lived in good acverned it. He did not therefore, as his compt; accompanying the two Scipios in Country-men had lately done, content him- their journey against Antiochus, and therein felf to see his Adversaries reap the bitter doing (asit is said) very especial service. So fruits of their own malicious over-weening: by this enterprise of Sicil, the Carthaginians and to fuffer that harm, in doing whereof wasted much of their forces, that with greahe would not bear a part; but conspired ter profit might have been employed in Itaagainst them to deliver up Agrigentum, and ly: leaving yet unto the Romans, in the end to help to expel them utterly out of sicil. of this war, the entire possession of this The Consul was glad of his friendship; and Island; which they wanted when it began. carefully followed his advertisements. Neither was there much cunning needful, to the performance of that which Mutines had undertaken: For he with his Numidians did forcibly feize upon a gate; whereat they let in some Roman Companies, that lay near in a readiness for the purpose. Hanno, when first he heard the noise, thought it had been no worse matter, than good services done in the Island of sicil, fome such tumult of the Numidians, as he he had granted unto him the honour of had been well acquainted with of late. But the leffer Triumph, which was called 0vawhen, making halte to pacifie the trouble, tion. The greater Triumph was denyed he saw and heard, the Romans intermixed, him: because he had not finished the war, among those discontented followers of Mn- but was fain to leave his Army behind him tines, forthwith he betook himself to flight: in the Province. He stayed not long in vy, against the man that performed them. Army and Adherents in Sicil, to the mer-

Levinus the Conful having taken Agri-

ø. XVI.

How the War passed between the Romans and Hannibal in Italy, from the taking of Capua to the great victory at Metaurus.

CHortly after the winning of Capua, Mar-Cellus came to Rome: where for his and faving himfelf, with Epicides, in a small Rome, before he was again chosen Consul Bark, fet fail for Africk; leaving all his together with M. Valerius Levinus, who fucceeded him in the Government of Sicil, and to further confideration. The Senate could too much rigour of Marcellus; yet not reftoring the booty that he had taken, nor words, and hopeful promifes, as hath been shewed before. The two new Consuls Marwar, as their lots should fall out; the one in Italy, the other in Sicil. The Isle of Sicil fell unto Marcellus; which Province he willingly changed with his Colleague; to the end that the syraculians (whole cause had not as yet been heard in the Senate) might not feem hindred by fear, from uttering their grievances freely. Afterwards, when his bufiness with them was dispatcht, he gently undertook the patronage of them: which remained long in his Family, to the great benefit of their Country in times following. So Valerius, the other Conful, was fent into Sicil. whose doings there have been already rehearfed: but Marcellus was employed against Hannibal.

Before the Consuls departed out of Rome, they were much troubled with preffing of

was, at the time of his election, making war ill tell, what to determine or do, in a case of against King Philip in Greece. Great Com- such extremity. For manifest it was, that plaint was made against the Consul Marcel- the multitude had already indured so much lus, by the Syracustans, for that which he had as well it could undergo; and somewhat done unto them : they alledging their great more, than could with honesty have been friendship to the people of Rome, in the time imposed upon it. Nevertheless it was imposeof their late King Hiero; and affirming, that lible to maintain the war against the Cartheir City did never willingly break the thaginians; or to keep the Macedonian out of alliance excepting when it was opprefied by | Haly without a strong sleet. Wherefore some fuch Tyrants, as were not greater enemies were of opinion; That fince the common to Rome, than to all good men that lived in Treasure was so empty, the people must be Stracufe. The Conful, on the other fide, recko- forced, by right or wrong, to take the burned the labours and dangers whereunto they den upon them. At last the Consuls began to had put him: willing them to be moan them- lay, That no perswasions would be so efselves to the Carlaginians that had holpen sectual with the people, as good examples: them in their necessity; and not unto the and that if the Senators would follow the Romans, whom they had kept out. Thus Confuls, like it was that the people also each part having some good matter to al- would follow the Senate. Wherefore they ledge, the Senate made such an end of the propounded, and it was immediately concontroversie, as best agreed with the benefit cluded, That every one of them should bring of their own Common-wealth: blaming the forth, and put into the Treasury, all the mony that he had; and that no Senator should keep any veilel of gold, or plate whatfoever; making the Syracusans free from their sub- excepting one Salt-feller, and a Bowl jection, but comforting them with gentle wherewith to make their offerings unto the gods; as also a Ring for himself, with such other tokens of ingenuity for his wife and cellus and Levinus, were appointed to make children, as every one diduse, and those of as small value as might be. This advice of the Confuls was not more thankfully accepted by the Senate, than the ready performance thereof by the Senate was highly applauded, and hastily followed by the Gentlemen of Rome. Neither did the Commonalty refuse to do that, which their betters had openly done before them. For fince the publick neceffity could no otherwise be holpen; every one was contented, that his private estae Mould run the same fortune with the Common-wealth, which if it suffered wrack, in vain could any particular man hope to enjoy the benefit of his proper substance. This magnanimity deserved well that greatness of Empire, whereof it was the foundation.

Convenient order being thus taken for an Army and Fleet: Marcellus went forth of the Souldiers to the war, and most of all, with | City against Hannibal; and Lavinus toward getting Mariners for their Navy. They were | Sicil. The Army of Hannibal was grealy diall of the poorer fort, that used to be em- minished, by long and hard service: neither ployed in Sea-services, especially in rowing. did his Carthaginians seem to remember him, These could not live without present wa- & think upon sending the promised supply, ges: neither was there mony enough in the or any such proportion as he needed. His cre-Treasury to give them pay. Wherefore it was dit also among his Italian friends, was much ordained, that they should be set out at wakened, by the loss of Capua: which gave the expence of private men; who in this ne- them cause to look unto themselves; as if in ceffity of the State, were driven to sustain his help there were little trust to be repoall publick charges. Hereat the people mur- | fed, when they should stand in need. This he mured, and were ready to fall into fedition; well perceived; yet could not tell how to had not the Consuls deferred the matter un- remedy. Either he must thrust Garrisons in-

beable to keep the field: or else he must appointed that Asarabal should forthwith leave them to their own fidelity, which now take his journey into Haly, of which there began to waver. At length his jealousie had been so much talk. These news did not grew fo outragious, that he facked and wa- more comfort Hannibal and his followers. fted those places that he was tinable to dethan terrifie the Romans. Wherefore each fend: thinking that the best way to enrich didtheir best; and the Romans, to prevent himself; and make unprofitable to his ene- the threatning mischief, and win as much as mies, the purchase from which he could not they could upon Hannibal, before the comhinder them. But by this example, many ing of his Brother; Hannibal, on the contrawere quite alienated from him; and some of ry, to hold his own, and weaken the Romans those, whom before he had least cause to as much as he was able. He had intelligence. doubt. The Town of Salapia yielded unto that Cn. Fulvius, a Roman Prator, lay near Marcellus; and betrayed unto him a gal- unto Herdonea, to get the Town by practice. lant Regiment of Numidian horse, the best It was not long since, near unto the same of all that ferved under Hannibal; which place, another Cn. Fulvius had lost his Arwas a greater loss, than the Town it felf. Bla- my. Therefore Hannibal made great marches fus the author of this rebellion, could not thitherward; and came to Herdonea ere Fulbring his defire to effect; without getting vius heard news of his approach. As soon as the consent of one Dassius, that was his bitter he came, he offered battel to the Roman Præenemy. Wherefore he brake the matter to tor; who accepted it with more hastethan this Dasfus in private, and was by him accu- good speed. The Roman Legions made good sed unto Hannibal. But when he was conven- refistance a while, till they were compassed ted and charged of Treason, he so stoutly round with the Carthaginian horse. Then fell denyed it, and by way of recrimination, to they to rout, and great flaughter was made vehemently prefled his accuser with the of them. Fulvius himself, with twelve Trifame fault: that Hannibal thought it a mat- lunes or Coronels, were loft: of the common ter devised out of meer malice; knowing well | Souldiers, that were slain, the number is unwhat enemies they were; and feeing that certain; some reporting seven, others thirneither of them could bring any proof of teen thousand. The Town of Herdonea, bewhat he affirmed. This notwithstanding, Bla- cause it was at point to have yielded unto fins did not cease to press his adversary anew, Fulvius, Hannibal did set on fire; and putting and urge him from time to time, with such those to death that had practised with the lively reason; that he who could not be be- | Enemy carried away the multitude; whom lieved by Hannibal, was contented at length | he bestowed among the Thurians and Metato win the favour of Marcellus. Presently af- pontines. The Conful Marcellus hearing of ter this, the Conful took by force, Maronea this, wrote unto the Senate: and exhorted and Meles, Towns of the Samnites; wherein them to be of good chear; for that he would he flew about three thousand of Hunnibal shortly abate the enemies pride. He followed but was fain to catch advantages; where he fought with him a battel: which beginning might get them; the Romans now being at nine of the clock in the morning, lasted grown ftronger in the field than he. The beft was, that his Carthaginians, having wearied themselves with ill speed in many petty enterprises, and laid aside all this while the ther Marcellus followed him. At Venusia they care of Italy, to follow business of far less im- met, and had many skirmishes; but none of portance; had now at length resolved, to importance. Hannibal removed often; and fend presently the great supply, that had been | sought to bring the enemy within danger of fo long promised and expected. This, if they fome ambush. But Marcellus, though he was had done in better featon; Rome it self might very eager of battel, would yet adventure have been strucken down, the next year af- | nothing, but by open day-light, and upon ter that great blow received at Canna. But fair ground. fince that which is past cannot be amended; Hannibal must force himself to make a good us Maximus, and Q. Fulvius, he that lately countenance; and tell his followers; that had taken Capua, were chosen Consuls. Fathis mighty faccour would come time bins confidering how much the Roman afenough. For Mafanifa was at Carthage with fairs were bettered by the taking of Capua,

to all Towns that he suspected, and there-by so diminish his Army, that he should not for spain; whither, when he came, it was the Carthaginian apace; and overtaking him Hannibal could not look to all at once; at Numiftre in the Country of the Lucans,

Thus passed the time away, until 2. Fabi-

Marcellus was so impatient of this disho- rentum. nour, that he rated his men, as Pefants, and purposed that year to besiege Tarentum : hope; and the enemy, not with standing their which if he could win; like it was, that late victory, as ready to molest them as bescarce one good City would afterwards re- fore. In this second battail Marcellus got the main true to Hannibal. Wherefore he vche- victory: which he purchased at so dear a mently exhorted his Colleague, and Mar- rate; that neither he, nor Hannibal, had cellus, (to whom was continued the command of those Legions that served under him if eight thousand of the Carthaginians were the year before) to press the Carthaginian so slain, and three thousand of the Roman side, hard, as he might have no leifure to help in this next battail, the difference was no Tarentum. Marcellus was very glad of this greater, than even to recompence the late charge: for he thought no Roman fitter than received overthrow: especially since the himself, to deal with Hannibal in open field. number of the Romans that were wounded, He followed him therefore to Cannusium, was so great, as disabled Marcellus from purand thence from place to place : defiring fuing Hannibal; who dislodged by night. ever to come to battail, but upon equal Nevertheless it sufficed, that Fabine the Conterms. The Carthaginian had not minde to ful hereby got leifure, to follow his bufiness hazzard much in fight : but thought it at Tarentum without any disturbance. Q. Fulenough to entertain his enemy with fkir- vius the other Conful about the same time, mish; as being desirous to keep his Army took in many of the Hirpines, Lucans, and ftrong untill the coming of Afdrubal. Yet Volfcentes, that willingly yielded themselves, could he not avoid the importunity of Mar- and betrayed the Garrisons of Hannibal that cellus, nor brook the indignity of being dai- lay in their Towns; whom Fulvius enterly braved. He therefore bade his men to be tained in loving fort; gently rebuking them lufty, and to beat foundly this hot-spirited for their errours past, without punishing Roman Captain, that would never fuffer those that had been authors, or busie doers them to be at quiet; untill they once had in the rebellion. That rabble of Sicilian cooled well his courage, by letting him thieves, which Levinus had lately brought blood. Hereupon followed a battail; where- from Agaterna, was then also set on work to in Hannibal had the victory; took fix En- besiege Caulonia, a Town of the Brutians: figns; and flew of the Romans almost three and nothing was omitted, that might serve thousand, among which were some of mark, to divert Hannibal, from the succour of Ta-

2. Fabius the Conful having taken Manbase cowards: telling them, that they were duria a Town of the Salentines, sate down the first of the Roman Legions, which had before Tarentum: making all preparation been beaten by Hannibal, by plain force and | that feemed needful to carry it either by afmanhood, without being circumvented by fault or long fiege. Of the Garrisons in the any stratagem. With these and many other Town, a good part were Brutians, placed the like words, which they were ashamed there by Hannibal, under a Captain of their to hear, he did so vex them; that thinking own Nation. This Captain fell in love with themselves better able to endure any vio- a Tarentine wench; whose brother served lence of the enemy, than fuch displeasure of under Fabius. Hereof the gave notice by lettheir General; they belought him to par- ters to her brother, as thinking belike to don them, and lead them forth once again draw him from the Roman fide; by telling to fight. He did so: and placing those him how rich, and of what great account Companies formost, that had lost their En- her lover was. But her brother made the figns the day before, bade them be careful Conful acquainted with these news: and to win a victory; whereof the news might faid, that if the Brutian were far in love, he be at Rome, before the report of their might perhaps be won, by intreaty of his shameful overthrow. Hannibal was angry, Mistris, to do what she would have him. to see that nothing could make this Enemy | The Conful hearing this, and finding likeliquiet: and therefore was ready to fight hood in the matter, willed his fouldier to again; fince all other motives continued convey himself into the Town as a fugitive, the fame, and his men had been heartned by and try what good might be done. It fell the late victory. But the Romans were stir- out according to his defire. The Souldier red up with defire of revenge, and of repair- grew acquainted with this Brutian Captain: ing their honour loft, which affections gave and partly by his own perfuations, partly a sharp edge unto their valour: whereas the by the flattering entreaty of his fifter; wan Carthaginians were grown dull, and weary him to betray the Town to the Romans. by seeing themselves disappointed of their Whenthey had agreed upon the business, and resolved how to order it; the same hasted away to relieve Tarentum. But when Souldier got out of the Town by night, and he came within five miles of the City, he acquainted the Conful with his proceedings: had news that it was loft. This grieved him. telling him in which part that Brutian kept yet he faid no more than this, The Romans watch, and what might conveniently be have also their Hannibal; we have lost Tarendone. So in the night time, Fabius gave an tum in such fort as we got it. That he might alarm to the City; especially about those not seem to turn back amazed, or in any fear parts of the wall, which were farthest from of the victorious Consul; he incamped a the place where he meant to enter. The few dayes together, so near as he was unfo Captains in the Town, prepared to make Tarentum: and thence departing to Meta-refiftance in those places, where the noise did threaten them with greatest likelihood list in a trap. He caused the chief of the of danger. But Fabius himself with the Metapontines to write unto Fabius, and offer choice of his men, came in great filence to to betray into his hands, the Carthaginian the quarter of the Brutians: who being Garrison; with condition, that he should in wrought by their Cartain, helped the Ro- that respect, forgive them all offences past. mans to get up, and break open the next These letters were sent by two young men gate, whereat the Army was let in. The Ta- of the same City; who did their errand so rentines and Carthaginian Souldiers, made well, that the Conful wrote back by them head against Fabine in the Market place: but unto the Metapontines, and appointed the (as hapneth in like cases, where the main day, when they should expect him. Hereof confidence is already taken away) not very Hannibal was exceeding glad: and at good obstinately. Nico, Democrates, and Philomenes, leifure made ready his ambushes for the wawith those that before had let in Hannibal, ry Fabius. But whether some secret notice of used now the last of their courage in dying the plot were given; or whether indeed (as against the Romans. Carthalo, who comman- it is related) some tokens in sacrificing, terded the Garrison within the Town, offered rified the superstitious Roman; the journy himself prisoner: hoping to be well used, to Metapontum was deferred. Hereupon the because of his hospitality that had passed same two Messengers were employed again: between his Father and the Conful. But he but being apprehended, and threatned with was flain by the way, ere he could come at torture, they discovered all. Fabius. The Romans did put all indifferently to the fword, in such fort, that they spared all their wars: for they got every where, few of the Brutians. This flaughter of the fave only at Caulonia; where they loft a Brutian, was thought to have been made company of fuch lewd fellows, that it may by appointment of the Conful, to the end | feem good fortune, to have so been rid of that he might feem to have wen the Town | them. But their common poverty, and disabiby force and not by treason: though he lity to maintain their charge, continued, and thereby failed of his purpose; and neither grew greater than it was before. Thirty had the glory which he expected, nor pre- Roman Colonies were then in Italy: of which, ferved his reputation of faithful dealing, and twelve refused to contribute any longer to keeping his word. The booty found in Ta- the Wars. For it was confidered; that the Lerentum was very great: whereof the Roman gions of Canna, and those unhappy Com-Treasury, whither it was carried, had great panies that had been beaten under the one need. As for the Imageries, and other curi- and the other Cn. Fulvius, were transported ofities that were in the City, Fabius was con- into Sicil; where they lived, in a fort, as tented to let them alone: and being told of banished men. This grieved their friends at fome Idols that feemed worthy to be car- home, and made them reckon up the more ried away, being very goodly pieces, in fuch diligently those other miseries which they habit and positure as if they were fighting: daily felt. Ten years together they had been he faid, Let us leave unto the Tarentines their exhausted with levies of men, and impositiangry gods.

939

lus, fell upon those that besieged Caulonia. In this case the least that they could fear; They fled at his coming: but he was so near, or rather the best that they could hope; was that they were fain to betake them to a hill, to fall into the hands of the enemy to be which served to no other purpose, than to made prisoners. For Hannibal did gently send bear off the first brunt. There they defen- home their people that was taken by him: ded themselves a little while, and then they whereas the Romans did banish from their

This year was happy to the Romans, in ons of money: in every of which years Hannibal being gotten clear from Marcel | they had received some notable overthrow. yielded. When this business was done, he homes, those that had escaped. It was thereneither men, nor mony. It was well for the arrival. Romans, that the other eighteen Colonies, tion of their ill deferving.

hopeful and fortunate fuccess. Nevertheless, many of the Hetrurians, especially the Are-

fore likely to come to pass within a while, they were fain to open their most prive that they should be all consumed : since new | treasury; and thence take out the gold that fouldiers were daily preffed forth of their had been laid up to serve them in cases of Towns; and the old ones never returned. greatest extremity. Of the mony thus extra-Such talk was frequent among those of the sted, one quarter was delivered to Fabius Colonies: especially where they that were the Consul, to set him well out against the transported into sicil, had most compassio- Turentines; all the rest was sent into Spain nate friends. Wherefore it was concluded by to Scipio, for the maintenance of his Army; the people of Ardea, Sutrium, Alba, and and to provide that Afdrubal might not pass other good Towns, to the number of twelve, from thence into Italy. It is likely that That they should boldly deny unto the Ro- | Fabius did not spend all his mony; finding mans their farther help. This was thought such easie success at Tarentum, as was shewthe likeliest way to obtain peace : where- ed before. But to stop the journey of Asdruof otherwife they faw little hope, as long as | bal; neither the mony fent into Spain, nor Hannibal lived. When the Confuls heard any victories won by scipio could fuffice. Nethe Embaffadours of these Towns make such vertheless, it fell out happily for the people declaration, and protest their disability of of Rome, that this year, and the next were giving any farther help; they were much | fpent, before his coming; and they better amazed. They willed the Embassadours to | prepared, than at less warning they could return home, and bring a better answer, have been to entertain him. Here it were not for a fmuch as this was none other than trea- amiss to note, That since the Romans, being son: they bade them to consider, that the in so great a necessity of mony, were driven people were not Campans or Tarentines, but to furnish the Army in Spain, with the greathe off-spring of the Romans; and no less test part of all their stock that was lest: it partakers of the Empire, than they that in- must needs be that either the booty taken in habited the Mother-City. But all would new Carthage, was far less than same had renot serve, the Embassadours continuing to | ported it; or else that Scipio had not as yet protest, that they had already done what won it: howsoever Livie rather inclines to they could; and that they had remaining, those, who say that he got it soon after his

M. Claudius Marcellus, and T. Quintus did not imitate these twelve; but shewed | Crispinus, were chosen Consuls after Fabius themselves willing to undergo whatsoever and Fulvius. In their year it was that Asdrushould be laid upon them, without shrinking | baltook his journey out of Spain, though he under the burden. This their offer was fo came not into Italy until the year following. highly pleafing to the Confuls; that the Em- | After the great battel at Canna, Hannibal balladours of those faithful Colonies, were had lost much time about Cuma and Naples, brought unto the Senate, and produced into in Geking to make himfelf Master of a the Assembly of the people: where, with good Haven, for the landing of those succommemoration of all their former good fer- | cours that were promifed from Carthage. The vices, this their present love unto the State | hope that he reposed in Philip, caused him to was magnified, and thanks accordingly be- turn his principal care to the Eastern parts flowed upon them; with promise, that it of Italy; where he made ready a fair enshould not be forgotten. As for the Embas- trance for the Macedonian, if he had been sadours of those twelve Colonies, that refu- | ready to come; but since his hope was vanishsed to contribute; it was thought best, nei- ed, and the long promised succour of Asdruther to detain them in the City, nor yet to bal was (though far later than had been exdismiss them, nor take any notice of them at pedient) ready to arrive: he began to all; but leave them to their own confidera- | deal with the people of Hetruria, through whose Countries his Brother was to pals, It may greatly be doubted, what the ex- that therein he might make a party against ample of these twelve people would have the Romans. The loss of Capua, Tarentum, and wrought in those that were so willing to many other Towns, might have terrified all help the State, if Afdrubal had been then other of the Italian Towns, from hearkening coming into Italy. For then must the Romans to any solicitation of the Carthaginians. Yet have betaken themselves wholly to their the poverty of the Romans, & the weariness own defence; whereas now, to the great of their adherents, together with the fame comfort of their subjects, they employed of a greater Army coming than that which their forces in the conquest of Italy, with Hannibal brought into Italy; did imbolden

Ccccc

tines, to take such counsel as they thought of Hannibal to waste their Army by little and most expedient for themselves, without re- little: which to do, he neglected no advangard of their fidelity to Rome. The Roman tage. There lay between him and them an Senate, hearing the rumour of their conspi- Hillock, overgrown with wood, that seemed racy, fent Marcellus the new chosen Conful fit to cover a number of men : who lying into Hetruria: whose coming did so terrefie there undiscerned, might fall upon such as them, that they refled quiet for a while. All thould ftraggle from the Roman camp; and the year following they were deviling how cut them off. Therefore he fent thither by to break out: as contrariwise the Roman night some companies of Numidians: whom Propretors, partly by terrour of severe judg- he willed to keep themselves close, and atments and inquilitions; and partly by the tend their best advantage. To this piece of force of two or three Legions, with which ground the Confuls thought it fit to remove they vifited all suspected places, kept them their camp: Marcellus thinking that he nehonest against their wills, and took many ver lay near enough unto Hannibal. Thither Hostages for better assurance. The two Con- therefore both of them rode to view the fuls had an earnest desire, to make strong place, accompanied with the son of Marcellus. War upon Hannibal without more tempo- a few Colonels, and other principal men: rifing: perfivading themselves, that in battel they should be too strong for him. Crispi-most of them Hetvurians. The Numidian Cennue had further his particular defire, to make | tinel gave warning of their approach to his his Confulfhip notable by the winning of fellows who discovered not themselves, until fome good Town: as Fulvius and Fabius they had furrounded the Confuls and their had gotten honour by Capua and Tarentum. train. The Confuls, as necessity compelled Therefore he went about the fiege of Locri; them, defended themselves: hoping to be one of the best Cities which the Carthagini- quickly relieved from their camp that was an then held in Italy: and brought thither near at hand. But the Hetrurians ran away all forts of engines; fending for a Fleet out from them, at the first; and left them in that of sicil to help him. But Hannibal was not great danger, to the weak affiftance of no flow to relieve the City: the fame of whose more than sorty horse men, that were of the approach, made Crispinus desist from his en- Colonie of Fregella. These Fregellans abode terprise, and retire unto his Colleague, that by the Confuls, and did what they could to lay at Venusia. Thither followed Hannibal; have brought them safe off. But when Marto whom the Confuls daily offered battel. | cellus was ftricken thorow with a Lance, and This great man of War had no need to stand fell down dead; then began every one to upon his reputation: which was already fo shift for himself, and escape as they might. confirmed, that his refusing to fight, was crispinus the other Consul, had his deaths not likely to be afcribed unto fear; but ra- | wound, being stricken with two Darts; and ther deemed as part of his wildom. He en- young Marcellus was likewise wounded; yet tertained the Confuls with many light skir- these two recovered their camp: The rest milnes, and fought to take them at some ad- of the Colonels and Officers, together with wantage; referving his own numbers as full | the Lictors that carried the bundle of Rods as he could, unto a time of greater imploy- and Axes before the Confuls, were all slain ment. In this lingring manner of War, Mar- or taken. To the dead body of the Conful cellus took no pleasure: but fought to com- Marcellus, Hannibal gave honourable Funerpell the Enemy to battel, whether he would al, according to the custom of those times: or no. The Admiral of the Roman Fleet and bestowing his ashes in a silver pot, coabout Sicil, L. Cincius, was commanded again vered it with a crown of gold; and so fent to affail the Town of Locri: which might them to young Marcellus, to be by him inwell enough be forced, if Hannibal continued | terred, where he thought good. as he began, to trifle away the time at Venufia. To the same purpose a part of the Garri- himself, how that the signet Ring of Marfon that lay in Tarentum, was appointed to go cellus was faln into the custody of Hanniby land to the affiltance of Cincius. But Han- | bal; who might use it to his own purposes, nibal had an eye behind him. He laid an am- ere that which had hapned were well known bush in the way, between Tarentum and Lo- abroad. Wherefore he sent word unto all cri, whereinto the Romans fell: and having the Towns about; that his Colleague was lost above three thousand of their Company, slain, and that Hannibal had gotten his Ring: were well glad, the rest of them, to quit their wishing them in that regard, to give no creenterprise, and save their own lives within dit unto any letters therewithal figned This Turentum. As for the Confuls, it was the defire providence of Crispinus was not more than

Presently after this, Crispinus bethought

requisite. For his messenger was but a little | not to commit their Army unto rash heads. fenger arrived there fent from Hannibal, C. Claudius Nero, was the most eminent. He that had therein been betrayed. The salapi- ing the beginning of this War. After their ans hereupon bethought themselves, how to Consulship, wherein they did good service, back the Messenger, which was a Roman su- judgment by the people : and this Livius gitive, without letting him perceive any condemned; Amilius hardly escaping. pared all things in a readiness, for the enter- | yet I cannot forbear to remember it again: tainment of such a friend. Late in the night | how it pleased God to upbraid the unthankhe came thither; with a troup of Roman fu- ful Romans, with the malicious judgment, gitives armed Roman-like, leading the way. given by their multitude upon honourable These all talking Latine together, called unto the Watch, and bade open the gate; for parent, what lamentable effects the memory the Consul was there. The gate was opened of their injustice wrought: when L. Emilius fair and leisurely, and the Port-cullis drawn rather chose to yield to the froward ignoup no higher than needs it must be, to let rance of his Colleague; and afterward to them enter. But when fix hundred of them | die in the greatest overthrow that ever fell were gotten in, down fell the Port-cullis | upon the State of Rome, than by refishing the again: and they that thought to have taken | pernicious courses of Terentius Varro, to cast others, were taken themselves; being laid himself anew upon the danger of the populy made an end with them.

this stratagem, hasted away to Locri; where- | years together after his condemnation, had unto Cincius the Admiral of the Roman fleet he been absent out of the City, and lived about Cicil, did lay hard fiege. The first ap- in his Country Grange; still vexing himpearance of the Numidians, Hannibal his felf with the indignity of his condemnation. Vanteurrors, made the Romans in all confu- Marcellus and Lavinus, being Confuls two fed hafte, run to their ships: leaving all their or three years ago, had brought him into engines, and whatsoever was in their Camp, Rome: where he lived private in disconto the enemies disposition.

dents, sent unto Crispinus the surviving Con- of his long hair and beard; which in that ful, and requested him to name a Dictator | time were the badges of men afflicted. Very that might take charge of the Common- lately he was compelled by the Cenfors, to Magistrates, with other business; whereunto where he used to sit silent, and signifie his himself was disabled by his hurts. He did so: affent or dislike to what was proposed, eiand soon after died. Then was it thought ther in short formal words, or in passing needful, that new Consuls should be chosen from fide to side, when the house was dividout of hand: forasmuch as two Roman Are ed. At length it hapned, that in some business mies lay so near unto the Enemy, without weightily concerning one that was his kinf-any General. Especially it was desired, that man; he stood up and made a set speech: Election flould be made of fuch men as whereby he drewall the Fathers to attentiwere not only valiant, but well advised:
on; and bade them enquire of him, and take fince the best, and most fortunate of their great Darers, M. Marcellus, by losing himself the control of the sent the sent was much altered fince

before come to Salapia, when another Mef- Among those that stood for the Consulship, bringing letters in the name of Marcellus, and was of great Nobility, a good Souldier, and fealed with the captive Ring; whereof the one, whose many services in this present contents were: That it was his purpose to War, did forcibly commend unto the place come the same night unto Salagia; where Yet he seemed a little too violent; and one, he willed, that the Souldiers of the Garrison whose temper needed the allay of a more should be in a readiness, for such imploy- staid wit. The fathers therefore endeavourment as he should think needful. The device ed to joyn unto him in the Consulship, M.Liwas plain, and no lefs plain was the revenge-ful minde which he bare against that City; long before. This M.Livius had been Conful because of his brave Numidian companies with L. Amilius Paulus, in the year foregotake their enemy in his own snare. They sent they had both of them been called into fign of distrust in them. This done, they pre- Though it hath been once already noted; at on all hands by the Salapians, that quick- lar fury. As for M. Livius, he is even now ready, and will so continue, to tell the peo-Hannibal being thus over-reached with ple of their faults in a divers manner. Eight tented fort, as might appear, both by his The Roman Senate hearing of these acci- carelesses in apparel, and by the wearing wealth, and dispatch the election of new | poll his hair, and come into the Senate: fo strangely, had given them a fair warning, he had left it; many brave men were lost;

20 fill up the number, than to answer to the had, four served in Spain, two in Sicil, and dignity of the place: and they that were two in Sardinia: the reft were so disposed left of ancient standing, had even spent their in several parts of Italy, where need seemed Vertues to no great effect. Wherefore all to require, that only two Legions were left began to fay; that it was great pitty, so wor- to each of the Confuls. But the Confuls were thy and able a man as this Livins, had been men of execution; and would not be tyed to all this while forgotten; one of whom the the punctual observance of what the Senate Common-wealth stood in great need, yet thought fit. M. Livius would not stir out had not used in this dangerous war. Now of Rome, against so mighty a power as followfeeing that the Confuls ought, one of them, ed Afdrubal, until he had first obtained. to be chosen a Patrician, the other of necessity that he might carry with him as many as ty a Plebeian: and fince neither Fabius, nor could well be spared from other employ-Valerius Lavinus, being both of them Patricians, could be joyned with Claudius Nero: fen Companies. It was true, that two Legions every one was of epinion, that there could appointed to ferve under Lucius Porcius a not be chosen and coupled together, two Prætor of that year, among the Cifalpine fitter men than C. Claudius, and this Marcus | Gauls, might be reckoned as an additament Livius, But Livie would not endure to hear to the forces of Livius; to whom the War of this. He said it was unreasonable, that one against Afdrubal was allotted. So might also condemned as a dishonest man, should after- two other Legions, that were among the wards be chosen Ruler of the City. If they had done ill to trust him with one Consulthip, what meant they then to offer him another? With these, and the like phrases he refifted their defires : till by periwafions, and cial inftance of Livie, did obtain, that all examples rehearfed, of fuch as had patiently digested injuries done by the people, and repayed good for evil; he was contented to ac-

Here we may behold a true figure of that Emblem, with which Themistocles checked the ingratitude of the Athenians: resembling himself to a Plane-tree, the branches and boughs whereof men break in fair weather; but run under it for shelter in a storm. Such of the City; each his several way. The unthankfulnefs, to well-deferving men, is not rarely found in the outragious multitude. Neither was the late example hereto lius Paulus, and C. Terentius Varro, were sent much unlike, of Philip the second King of against Hunnibal. They did no longer take Spain his dealing with the Duke of Alva. For upon them, to direct their Generals, or bid although he had committed the Duke to them dispatch, and win the victory betimes: prison, upon some small offence conceived, but rather they stood in fear, lest all diliwithout all regard of his former deferts: gence, wildom and valour should prove too yet when his intended Conquest of Portugal, little. For fince few years had passed, whererequired the service of a man, more than or- in some one of their Generals had not been dinarily fufficient; he stood no longer upon | slain; and since it was manifest, that if etthe feanning of late displeasures; but em- ther of these present Consuls were deseated, ployed the same Duke, whom he had newly or put to the worst; the two Carthaginians difgraced. Thus is wisdom often taught by would forthwith joyn, and make short work necessity.

C. Claudius Nero, and M. Livius were chosen them should return home Victor; and come Confuls. Afdrubal was already come into off with honour, from fuch mighty oppoli-Erance, and waited only, to have the wayes tion, as he was like to find. With extreme of the Alps thawed by warm weather, for difficulty had Rome held up her head, ever his passage into Hals. The Romans used at since the battel of Canne: though it were this time the service of three and twenty Le- so, that Hamibal alone, with little help from gions: and wanted not employment for ma-

new ones were chosen; such as rather served and maintain them. Of these which they ments ; and those, or the most of them, cho-Salentines, near unto Tarentum, under another of the Prætors, be accounted a part of Claudius his Army, that was fent against Hannibal. Nevertheless, the Consuls, by the espemight be left to their own discretion. For news came that Afdrubal was already paffing the Alps; the Ligurians, who dwelt in the Country about Genua, with their neighbour people, were in readiness to joyn with him; and L. Porcius fent word, that he would adventure no further, than he fafely might. When all was ordered as themselves thought best, the two Consuls went forth people of Rome were now quite otherwise affected, than they had been, when L. Amiwith the other: it feemed a greater happi-It was a dangerous year toward, when ness than could be expected, that each of ny more, if they had known how to levy But there was now arrived another son of Amilear; and one, that in his prefent Expe- | Brother of Hamibal it was thought needful, this Afdrubal in the same places, had multithe last year; but saw neither of them return sent away all his mony with the Elephants alive, from a less dangerous War. Particu- before him: but stay'd behind himself to ly, old Q. Fabius gave his accustomed ad- sustain the Romans a while, until his carvice to M. Livim, that he should abstain riages might be out of danger. Herein he from giving, or taking bat:el, until he well had his defire. Afterwards, he gathered his understood the Enemies condition. But the broken troops together; and retyred in such Conful made him a froward answer, and fort, that Scipio thought it not good to purfaid, that he would fight the very first day: sue him, and so passed over Tagus. Then for that he thought it long, till he should taking unto him the forces assigned for his either recover his honour by victory; or by expedition, he marched away toward the feeing the overthrow of his own unjust Ci- Pyrences: leaving the care of Spain unto his tizens, satisfie himself with the joy of a great, Brother Mago, and to Askrabal the Son of ing was better than his words.

inage, cident: Afarubal had wrestled with many ment, Coming into Gaul, and following the m difficulties in Spain; by reason of those Cap- steps of his Brother Hannibal: he found the courfes undertaken, it cannot be known; of the Alps were closed up with Ice and us remaining only a few broken pieces. But over the Alps, were eafily won to take part by the spightful dealing of Hanno in Sicil with Astarubal, when he travelled thorow

dition, had seemed a man of more sufficien- by these mischievous Partizans of Hanno, to ey than Hannibal himself. For whereas in lufe the violent opposition of more carnest that long and dangerous march, thorow malice. Nevertheless, Afarubal was a good barbarous Nations, over great Rivers and Patriot; and therefore endured patiently Mountains, that were thought unpaffable, such indignities, as Elutines could not long Hannibal had loft a great part of his Army: digeft. His Journey into Italy being refolved upon: he lay with part of the Army at plied his numbers; and gathering the people, Betula, not far from the Mines of Silver; that he found in the way, defeended from whence he was to furnish his Expeditions. the Alrs like a rowling Snow-ball, far grea- Thither came scipio; and drave him out of ter than he came over the Pyrenees at his his Camp; though he were strongly lodged, first setting out of Spain. These considerati- before the other Carthaginian Captains ons, and the like, of which fear presented could, or would come to his affiltance. The many unto them; caused the people of Rome, overthrow seems not to have been so great, to wait upon their Confuls out of the Town, as it must have been supposed, if no way lay like a pensive train of Mourners: thinking open to those that fled. Rather it appears, upon Marcellus and Crispinus; upon whom that Asdrubal dealt like a provident man, and in the like fort they had given attendance feeing that his Camp was likely to be forced, though not an honest revenge. But his mean- Gesco; that thought himself the sittest man for the administration thereof. Fain would Of the overthrow that Asilrubal received Scipio have stopped him on his Journey, by in Spain by Scipio, a little before he took his fending to defend against him the ordinary Journey into Italy; such mention hath al- way of the Mountains. But whether Afdruready been made, as agreed with the report | bal took another way, or whether he forced of that noble Historian Livie. Yet I think it the guards that scipio had set to keep the not amiss to add in this place, what may be Pyrenees (as the defence of hard passages be gathered out of the remaining fragments commonly forts to no good effect) he was of Polybius his History concerning that ac- not letted in his voyage by any such impeditains that were sent from the City of Car. Nations that lay in his way so well affected, thage, to joyn with him in the administration either to him or to his mony, that no passaof that Province: they being, as it may ges were defended against him, nor any fort feem, of the Hannonian faction; which is to of refiftance made, but he, and his Army fay, thus far forth Traytors, that they pre-ferred the advantage of their own fide, be-creafed, by access of fuch as were defirous fore the good of their Common-wealth. In to take his pay. Of these he had the better what particulars they wronged this worthy choice: for that he was driven to winter Son of Amilear, and how they hindred his in their Country; whilst that the passages fince of those Books, wherein Polybius hath Snow. The Mountainers likewise, that had exactly handled these matters, there are to so greatly molested Hannibal in his Journey with Mutines, a better man of War than him-their Country. For these poor men, at the felf, whom Hannibal had fent into the first coming of Hannibal, were verily perswa-Island: we may conceive, that against the ded, that it was his purpose to rob them of little wealth which they had painfully ferato fight. It feemed perhaps unto Hannibal, ped together out of the defolate rocks. But who knew the Country very well; that his now in process of time, they were better in- Brother might with little impediment, overformed. Therefore, understanding that come the way to Canussium: where, if he there were two mighty Cities, far dif-joyned could once again deal with both the Conafunder, which made War upon each other, fuls, and all the Roman forces together, he by Land and Sea; and that the Alps did only lye in the way: they gladly condescend- as once he had gotten in the same openCouned to take their part in the fortune of the try. If this had so faln out; Rome would Invaders. The like affection upon greater have been undone for ever. But the Carthacause, was afterward found in the Cisalpine ginians should not have needed to wish any Gauls. The Ligarians also joyned with second victory, in the naked Campans about Afdrubal: and so would the Hetrurians have Canne; if such as Army an this which Afdrudone, if he had arrived in their Country. There was no other Roman Army near, than bal, when he was in his full strength; and the L. Portius with his two Legions; of whom Romans not able to keep the field. Wherethere was no great fear. Therefore did of fore this worthy General had good reason drubal set upon Flacentia, a Koman Colony: afterward to say that Hanno was the man, in hope to make his coming the more ter- who by delaying the supply, did beat him rible, by the destruction of that Town. But out of Haly; which eile no power of the there he lost a great deal of time, and final-Romans could have done. Iy was driven to quit the enterprise: by undertaking which, he gave the Roman ans, and thought it enough to hinder them Consuls leisure to make ready for him; and from meeting with the Army that was comcaused his Brother Hannibal (who upon ing to their succour: he was advertised of the first bruit of Asdrubal he so timely, and Asdrubal his approach; by Letters and Mefeafily passing the Alps, was about to leave sengers intercepted, as they were going to his wintring Camps, and go forth to meet with him) to fit ftill a while, as well aware, had left the fiege of Placentia, and drew onthat Placentia would not be taken in wards apace: being already come within and ftop him from joyning with his Brother. Nero was nothing joyful. For if Hamnibal He had about forty thouland foot, and five could once be joyned as head unto that great hundred horse: with which he daily offer- body of an Army, which Afdrubal brought ed battel to the Carthaginians; and had of with him: it was most apparent, that howhim the better in many (kirmilhes. Hannibal) foever the fortune of Rome (hould avoid, for was once driven to make a tedious march the present, any great calamity; yet the vefrom the borders of the Salentines and Apulians, unto the Country of the Brutians, there to encrease his forces; which were otherwifetoo weak for the Journey intend- twelve of the thirty Roman Colonies had ed. Afterward coming to Grumentum, a Town of the Lucans; he there fought unprosperoully with Nerothe Consul. Never- ture, than to suffer the conjunction of two theles, he got off, and marched away to Vennsta. But Nero followed him, and had there fluence, if not on the sudden, yet within few again the better of him. Wherefore he was driven to return to Metapontum. where effects.It feemed apparent, that his Colleague joyning with Hanno, that had made ready a good Army, he affayed again, to make way neither were there any good Legions in a by force to his Brother. So he passed on readiness, that could do service in such a ward, and came again to Venusia, having needful case; excepting those, that were al-Nero (till at his heels. Thence went he over ready imployed under the two Confuls. had obtained his most memorable victory, charge, which was the war against Hami-There also did Nero sit down by him; and bal: but rather that it behoved him, to help their cattel; and to make fooil of that both of them refted, without making offer bal now brings, had come to second Hanni-

Whilst Nero waited upon the Carthaginitwo hundred miles of his Brother; notwith-C. Claudius Nero the Roman Conful, made | flanding all opposition that could be made what fpeed he could to meet with Hamibal, by Livie the Conful. Of these news Claudius ry continuance of fo strong a war at home, would enforce the Latines, and other faithful Affociates, to faint under the burden; as already done. Wherefore he refolved, that it were better to make any desperate advenfuch malevolent Planets: whose pestilent inyears, was like to work most lamentable. was unable to stay the progress of Afdrubal: the River Auffelus, to Canussum, where he sate Hereupon he concluded, that it was not down, not far from the place, in which he expedient for him to tye himself to his own where more necessity required; and to car- mans to come to battel, having long de-

Ty part of his forces unto his Colleague. This fired it, and hitherto not found occasion becould not be without much danger. Yet forc. But when he had put his men in order, fince the meeting of the two Carthaginian and was riding before the head of his Army, Brethren, was far more dangerous to the to behold the Enemies countenance: it Roman Common-wealth: it feemed the best seemed to him, that they were more than way to put Fortune in trust, with that they had been; and some of their arms and which was of the less importance. Six thou- horses looked as though they had wanted find foot, and a thouland horse he therefore dreffing, after a long Journey. Hereupon he took, that were the very choice of his Ar- began to withdraw his Army back into the my: and making flew, as if he would on-ly step aside, to do some small piece of ser-ners could be taken, by whom he might be vice near at hand; away he posted as fast as certified of the truth; yet should there good he could, to affift his fellow-Conful. His observation be made, whether the Enemies Messengers ran before him, to give warning | Camp were enlarged, or no; or what other to all Towns by which he was to pass, alteration could be noted, that might shew that they should be ready to meet him with their forcesto be encreased. The Camp, as victuals, and all other necessaries for his hath been said, was not extended: but the Army. Livius the other Conful, at that trumpet, that founded only once in the time, lay encamped near unto Sena Gallica; Quarter of L. Porcius the Prætor, did now, and Afdrubal, within half a mile of him. In contrary to former custom, sound twice in fix dayes Nero had finished his Journey thithe Quarter of Livius the Consul. Hereat After and when he drew near, sent Messender drubal greatly mused: and being well acgers before him, to give notice of his com-quainted with the Roman orders, held this ing. Livie thought it fittest that he should for a sure token, that the other Consul was ftay in some place of covert until dark night, there arrived. How this might be, if Hanniand then enter secretly into the Camp: lest balwere alive, and in good case, he was not the Enemy, perceiving this access of able to conjecture: but thought it the best strength, should accordingly frame his coun- way, to go leisurely to work, till he might fels. This was done; and a token given, that be better informed. Upon confidence in his the Colonels, Captains, and all Souldiers, as own forces, he had not cared hitherto, well horse as foot, that Nero had brought how near he lay to the Romans; nor trouwith him, should be lodged and entertained led himself perhaps with over-strongly forby men of their own fort. Their Company tifying his own Camp. Yet when he now was somewhat increased by Voluntaries that perceived, that somewhat was fallen out joyned with him on the way. Nevertheless befide his expectation, he changed his reso-it was not needful that the Quarter which lution; and held it no dishonour to remove received them, should be enlarged; since a little further off. So he dislodged secretly they had brought with them nothing but by night, intending to get over the River their arms. The next day they held a Metaurus; whereby to keep himself as long Counsel of War: wherein some were of opinion, that it was best for these new arrived whether it were so, that his guides did steal Companies to refresh themselves a few days away from him in the dark, so that he could after their weary Journey, before they not find the way to the Foords; or whether should be drawn forth to battel. But against his carriages were too heavy, and hindred this, Nero was very earnest: and befought his speed: far he had not gone, ere the Conhis Colleague, to make use of him out of ful Nero was at his heels with all the Roman hand; that he might betimes return to his horse, and stayed him from passing any furown Camp, ere Hannibal should have no ther. Soon after came L. Porcius with the tice of his absence. The Souldiers also of light armature: whom the other Consul Nero were full of spirit; pereceiving that followed anon with all the Legions; in the honour of the victory was like to be good order, and ready for battel. Afdribal, theirs: forafmuch as the battel would not feeing himfelf overtaken with necessity to have been undertaken, without this their fight, omitted no care and circumspection. coming to help. Finally, it was agreed when His Gauls, in whom he repoted leaft confithe Counsel brake up, that the sign of bat- dence, he placed in his left wing upon a tel should be hung out; which was com- Hill, which the Enemy should not, withmonly a Purple Coat over the Generals Pa- out much difficulty, be able to climb: in the right wing he ftood himfelf with his Afdrubal was no less willing than the Ro- Africans and Spaniards; his Ligurians he placed

placed in the midst, and his Elephants he be-the guide had in readiness a Mallet and a frowed in the front of his battels. On the Chizzel, wherewith he gave them a stroke Roman fide, Nero had the leading of the between the ears, in the joynt of the neck, right wing, Livius of the left, and Porcius of next unto the head, wherewith he killed the the battel. Both Romans and Carthaginians beafts upon a fudden. This speedy way of well underftood, how much depended uppreventing fuch harm as the Elephants, beon the fortune of this day; and how little ing hurt, were wont to do to the squadrons hope of fafety there was unto the vanquish-following them, is said to have been the deed. Only the Romans herein seemed to have vice of Afdrubal himself, who dyed in this had the better in conceit and opinion ; that | battel. they were to fight with men defirous to have they were to ngut with men demous to have fled from them. And, according to this pre-bal, both by Polybins, and by Livie. He is fumption, came Livius the Conful with a faid at all times to have shewed himself worproud bravery, to give charge on the Afri- thy of Amilear his Father, and Hamibal his cans, by whom he was so sharply entertained, Brother; to have striven with great patience that the victory scemed very doubtful. The against many difficulties, whereinto he fell Africans and Spaniards were front Soul- by the means of those Captains that were diers, and well acquainted with the manner fent from Carthage into spain; to have perof the Roman fight. The Ligurians also were | formed in this last battel all duties of a wora hardy Nation, and not accustomed to give thy General; and finally, when he saw the ground; which they needed the less, or were los irrepairable, to have ridden manfully able now to do, being placed in the midft. Li- into the thickest of his Enemies; where, wins therefore, and Foreins found strong fighting bravely, he was slain. Of the numopposition: and with great slaughter on ber that died with him in this battel, the reboth fides, prevailed little or nothing. Befides port of Livie and Polybius do very much difother difficulties, they were exceedingly agree. For Livie faith, that the Charthagitroubled by the Elephants, that brake their nians had no less an overthrow, than was first ranks; and put them in such disorder, as that which they gave to the Roman at Canthe Roman Enfigns were driven to fall back. | ne: that fifty fix thouland of them were All this while Claudius Nero, labouring much | flain, five thousand and four hundred taken in vain against a steep Hill, was unable to come to blows with the Gauls, that flood Citizens, whom they had captives with opposite unto him, but out of danger. This them, delivered, and set at liberty. He saith made Asdrubal the more confident; who, also, that of the Romans and their Associates feeing his own left wing fafe, did the more boldly and fiercely make impression on the booty, that it was exceeding great not only other fide, upon the left wing of the Ro- in other kinds, but in gold and filver. Conmans. But Nero perceiving that the place cerning the booty, Polybius hath no mention wherein he ftood, was fuch as would com- of it. Likely it is to have been as rich as Lipel him to remain idle till the fight were vie reporteth it; for Afdrubal came well stothem round behind the forces of Porcius and desire to make this battel of Metaurus, a paevery fide, the greatest part was flain. The the honour of themselves, and of their Ligurians and Gauls escaped as they could; Country, above their lives. the Elephants, four were taken alive: the Rome, than had been the fear of the event. and faved themselves by timely slight. Of rest were slain: some by the Enemies wea- For ever since it were known in what sort pons, others by their own guides that rode Nero had left his Army, the whole City was them. For when any of them, being fore troubled, as much as lately at Hannibal his Great commendations are given to Aldruprisoners, and above four thousand Roman there were flain eight thousand: and of the ended; took a part of his forces, and led red with mony. But Polybius (who had no Livius: which having compassed, he fell rallel unto that of Canna) reports no more upon Asdrubal, and charged him in the than about ten thousand of the Carthaginian flank. Here began the victory to be mani- fide; and two thousand of the Roman, to have fest on the Roman side. For Nero, sinding been slain. The number of the prisoners he none to relift him in front, ran all along the doth not mention : but only faith, That some depth of Aldrubal his battel; and falling up of the Carthoginian Princes were taken on the skirts thereof, disordered the Ene alive; and that all the rest died in the batmies, and put all to rout. Of the spaniards tel. Whereby it may feem that they were therefore and Africans, that were laid at on all Barchines: for a for a finishment as they preferred

The joy of this victory was no less in wounded, began to wax unruly, and ruth coming thither. Men thought it strange, that back upon their own battels following them, the Conful should make such a great adventure, as thus to put the one half of all the wards to flow, till it could not be contained Vows and Prayers; and the Senators were would believe it. Afterwards, when Messenonly great and joyful concourse of all sorts openly the head of Afdrubal before the Car- very well discharge the place. For this cause enough to certifie Hannibal of the miladven- well deserved. But for a fmuch as it was well ture, without doing wrong to the dead known, what interest Nero had in the late body of Asdrubal: especially since Hanni- victory:order was so given, that not only Libal, in honourable, and far different vie with his Army should come home; but manner, had given burial to Gracchus and likewife Nero, though leaving his Army be-Marcellus; yea, to all the Roman Generals, | hind him, to confront Hannibal. So the howhose carkasses fell into his hands. But it nour of triumph was granted to them both: may feem, that howfoever the People of in the pomp whereof, Livie made the grea-Carthage wanted much of the generous dif- ter shew, as riding in a Chariot, and followposition, which was found among the Ro- ed by his Souldiers; because in his Province, mans, in their love unto the Common-weal: and upon his day of command, the victory yet in dealing with enemies, they were far was gotten: his Army also being present at more civil, and less prone to the infolency tye triumph. But Nero that rode on horseof revenge. The best excuse of this outrage back, and without such attendance, was the done by Nero, is that he hoped much more | more extolled by the People and Souldiers; by the sudden terrour of such a spectacle, by whom, the victory was in a manner wholthan by the simple relation of that which ly ascribed unto his great worth. Neither passed, to make a deep impression of fear wanted L. Veturius Philo, and Q. Cecilius Meinto the Carthaginians. It may also be tellus, Lieutenants to the Generals, the due faid, That he forgot himself, being over-joyed with the greatness of his prosperity. For they were commended unto the People, For it was the battel of Metaurus that as men worthy to be chosen Consuls: and weighted down the ballance, and turned the | Confuls they were chosen for the year fol-

Roman forces unto hazzard of the Dice.For within any banks: Hannibal having loft in what if Hannibal should chance to have no- this unhappy fight (besides the worthy Gentice of this his departure, and either purfue tleman his brother) all the hope that so him, or fet upon the Army that staid behind, long sustained him in Italy, withdresy himself much weakned, and without a General? into the Country of the Brutians: and this Thus did they talk; yet referving their ther he caused all the Lucans, that were of censure unto the success; with liberty to ap- his party, to remove; as likewise all that prove or condemn, according to the iffue. In dwelt in Metapontum. For he wanted men to the mean time the people filled the Market- defend so many places, as he held at the place, the Women ran to the Temples with present, because they lay too far asunder. Wherefore he drew them all into a leffer daily in counsel, waiting still ready at hand compass, in the utmost corner of Italy, it beupon the Magistrates; as if some great mat- ing a country of much fastness, and the peoter were likely to fall out, that would ask ple exceedingly devoted to his service. In every ones help. In brief, they were all so this business Nero gave him no memorable full of melancholy, that when the first news impediment : either because Hannibal was of victory came, there were not many that too strong for him, having all his forces united; or because it is likely that this remove gers arrived from the Confuls, with Letters of the Lucans and Metapontines, was not becontaining all that had passed, there was not fore the end of Summer, when their harvest was gathered in: at what time the Senate of men unto the Temples, but the very face | called him home to Rome. M. Livius the other of the City was altered; and men from Conful tarried among the Cifalpine Gaules thenceforth began to follow their private until the end of summer; there to set things business; making contracts one with ano- in such order, as he thought requisite: which ther (which they had long forborn to do) done, he wrote unto the Senate, that there & attending their own affairs in fuch wife, as was no more need of him and his Army in if Hannibal were already driven out of Italy. | that Province, but that L. Porcius, with the Nero returning to his camp, threw forth two Legions that were there before, might thaginians: and producing his African pri- he defired leave to return home; and that foners bound, fent two of them loofe to he might bring his Army with him. The give Hannibal notice of what had hapned. Senate well understood his meaning: which These two pisoners might have served well was to have the honour of triumph as he Tide of the Roman fortune: which being lowing. But nothing was done by them, then at the lowest Ebbe, ceased not after- worthy of memory in their Consulship. Nei-

Dadddd

thirteenth of the present war, until the nia (which is now Portngal) whither the eighteenth year wherein it ended, was Romans had ill means to follow; being althere any matter of importance wrought in together unacquainted in those parts. Maeo Italy fave only the taking of Lecri from the had foon ended his business, and returned Carthaginians by furprile. For Hannibal into Spain: where he met with one Hanno wanted (trength, wherewith to make any (the lame perhaps that had lately been imgreat offer; and the Romans had little mind ployed in sicil) who brought new forces to provoke him, but thought it well that he out of Africk; and came to succeed in was quiet. Such opinion had they conceived place of Afdrubal the Barchine. It is not unof him, that though all about him went to likely that Spain was now the better, and ruine, yet in him alone, they thought there more readily furnished with men and all was force enough to hold himself upright, things needful from Carthage: when that for And furely, very notable are the commen- of Amilear, whose authority had been greatdations given unto him by Polybius, whom eft, was thence departed. For hereby might Livie therein follows. That making war up- the factious diligence of old Hanno approve on a People, of all other the most war-like, it felf, against that noble race of Warriors; he obtained fo many victories by his own when it should appear, that things did progood conduct: and that leading an Army, compounded of fo many fundry Nations, Africans, Spaniards, Gaules, Carthaginians, Italians and Greeks, which were neither in Language, Laws, Conditions, or any other confidence in the forces that he brought thing, one like to another; he held them all in over: Hanno took the field, and led Mago with fuch good order, that they never fell to fedi- him; as purpofing afresh to fet upon the Rotion among themselves, or against their Ge mans. So he entered into the country of the neral. But that which Livie adds hereto, is Celtiberians, not very far from new Canthage: yet perhaps of greater admiration: That he where, by money and over perfwafions, he fustained his Army, without help from other levied above nine thousand men. places, from this time forward, upon the hungry soil of the Brutians: which when it was himself in the Eastern parts of Spain: attenbest manured in time of peace, could hardly tive, as it may seem to the proceedings of fuffice to nourish the Inhabitants. It's there- Afdrubal, the fon of Amilear; against, whom fore apparent, that by his proper worth and he is reported by some Writers to have sent vertue, he kept his Army in such order and part of his forces into Italy, of to the affiobedience, rather than by any greatness of stance of C. Claudius Nero, and M. Livius the reward and booty; fince after the death of Confuls. But hearing of the levy made by Afdrubal, he made no invasion upon the Hanno and Mago among the Celtiberians, he wealthier parts of Italy; but held himself still fent M. Syllanus the Propretor, with ten among the poor Brutians. Where we must thousand foot, and five hundred horse. sylleave him; until he be drawn into Africk by lanus got intelligence by some fugitive celti-Scipio; whose doing will henceforth enter- berians, who became his guides, that their

ø. XVII.

How P. Cornelius Scipio the Roman made entire conquest of Spain.

†. I.

from the Continent into the Isle of Gades.

when Afdrubal the fon of Amilear depart- among whom, Hanno had the ill luck to be ed thence into Italy. These agreed toge- taken prisoner; though he kept himself out ther, that Mago should make a voyage to of the fight until all was lost. As for the Cellithe Baleares; there to levy a supply of men; berians, they knew better how to make shifts ther indeed from this year, which was the and Afdrabal withdraw himself into Lustrafper much the better by being left unto the handling of other men. Whether it were upon defire to make good fome fuch opinion raifed of him at home, or whether upon

P. Scipio in the mean while contained tain, and lead us unto the end of this War. | Countrymen incamped apart from the Carthaginians in great disorder: as men searing no danger, because they were at home. Wherefore as closely as he was able, he drew neer to these Celtiberians ; and falling upon them on the sudden, gave them such an overthrow, that Hanno and Mago coming to their fuccour, instead of heartning and re-inforcing them, became partakers of the loss. How the Carthaginians were driven by Scipio Mago faved himself with all the horse, and old Companies of foot, which were about two thousand: and in ten dayes journey Ago and Astrubal the son of Gesco, brought them safe to Astrubal. The rest of took upon them the charge of spain, the Africans were either flain or taken: and faved most of themselves by running in- relying upon those, that might perhaps beto the woods.

CHAP. III.

ttaly frood, by the coming thither of Afdru- Winter, to raise three thousand foot, and five bal, Ten thousand foot, and eighteen hun-hundred horsefor his service: he resolved to dred horse he did therefore send out of make use of those, and some few others, that spain (as it is reported by some Authors to might help to make a shew; and yet not be the defence of his own Country; or was per- able to do any great harm, if they would haps, about to fend them : and thereupon re- revolt. So with five and forty thousand mained at new Carthage, intentive to the foot, and three thousand horse, he sought necessity and success of his Country-men at out the Enemy; near unto whom he inhome. But when he had word of the great | camped. At his first coming, Mago and victory at Metaurus, which fell out long be- Majanissa fell upon him; with hope to take forethe end of the Summer, then might he him unprepared, whilft he was making well adventure, to take in hand the entire his lodgings. But he laid certain troops of conquest of Spain; which must needs be horse in covert: which, breaking upon much alienated from the Carthaginians, by them unexpected, caused them to fall off. the report of such an overthrow. The spa- They made at first an orderly retreat: but nish Souldiers that served under Hannibal, being more hardly pressed, they shortly & those that had been sent over into Africk, betook themselves to plain slight. After this were as pledges heretofore, by whom their Country was held obnoxious to the Cartha- the Romans, and abated the prefumption of ginians. But when it was roifed abroad, that the Carthaginians, there were daily fkirall which had followed Asdrubal into Italy, mishes between the horse and light armawere fallen into the hands of the Ro- ture, on both fides; wherein was nothing mans; and that Hannibal with his Army done of importance. Asdrubal drew forth his was closed up in a straight, whence he could Army, and arranged it before his Trenches: not get out: then did it greatly behove the the like did scipio; each of them to shew Spaniards to conform themselves unto the that he durst fight, yet not proceeding any will of the Victors. That it was the fuc- farther. Thus they continued many dayes: cess of things in Italy, which gave such considence unto Scipiosit was the more probable, in the morning; and the first that, in the because he took not this great enterprise in evening, withdrew himself into his Trenches. hand, until the Summer was almost spent. The Spanish Auxiliaries were placed on both Asdrubal therefore used the benefit of the sides in the wings; the Carthaginians were feafon; and by disposing his Army into ma- in the midst, with their Elephants before ny Garrisons, hindered the Enemy from do- them; and opposite to these on the other side ing any great exploit before winter. So the were the Roman Legions. When they had in very length of way, and the time of the year, this order confronted one another, though caused Scipio to return back: without any at far distance, many dayes together: it other matter performed, than that his Bro-ther L. Scipio took by-affault the Town of should shortly meet in the same form; and him on the other fide very doubtful of order at the Hill foot, upon which he

tray him in his greatest need. Yet since one It could no otherwise be, but that Scipio Colchus, that was Lord of eight and was much troubled with the danger wherein twenty Towns, had promifed him the laft incounter, which added fome courage to Afdrubal being still the first that issued forth be matched on each part, with the enemies Against the next years danger, Asdrubal long before defigned. But Scipio, when he prepared a great Army: and spared not cost, | purposed indeed to fight, altered the form of nor travel, in strengthening himself, for the his Army; and withall, came forth earlier tryal of his last fortune in Spain. With than he had been wont. He caused his men feventy thousand foot, four thousand horse, and horses to be well fed betimes in the and two and thirty Elephants, he took the morning before day: and then fent forth his field : which number I believe, that he could horse and light armature, to train out the hardly have raised, without boldly deny- Carthaginians with their bellies empty:using ing the truth of those reports that came herein the same trick, whereby he might refrom Italy. Scipio thought his Roman Legions member that Hannibal had beaten his Fatoo weak to incounter with fuch a multi- ther in the battel of Trebia. His Roman Legitude. Wherefore he judged it needful to use ons he bestowed in the wings; his Spaniards the help of his Spanish friends. But the death in the battel. Asdrubal sent forth his horse in of his Father and Uncle, that were cast away all haste, to entertain the Romans; whilst by the treason of such false Auxiliaries, made he himself arranged his men, in their wonted incamped.

Dddddd 2

could not be discerned which part had the kens to no perswasion. The Camp of Asdrabal better: fince, being over-pressed on either had that day been taken, if a storm of rain, fide, they had a fafe retrait unto their foot; which fell violently on the fudden, and bred and one troop seconding another by course, some superstition in the Romans, had not returned to charge. This fight was protra- caused them to give over. cted by scipio to a great length : because his men, having well fed themselves, were like his men; but caused them, hungry, and to hold out better than the enemy. Eut over-laboured as they were, to take pains about noon he caused his wings to advance in fortifying the Camp; wherein he feared to a good pace; leaving their battel of spa- be assaulted. But little assurance could be niards far behind them, that came on lei- have in the strength of his Trenchess, when furely, according to direction. The spanish he had lost the hearts of his spanish souldiers. Mercenaries that flood in Afdrubal his wings, were no way comparable, fave only in num- tani, fled from him to the Romans, with a ber, to the Latine and Roman Souldiers that great Band of his subjects: many followed came against them; for they were fresh Soul- this example; and soon after two strong diers levied in hafte; and fighting only in respect of their pay. Being therefore charged | Garrisons betrayed. It seems that the perverse in front by the Legions, and in flank, at the fortune of this late battel, whereupon Afdrufame time by the Roman Velites, and by some | bal had set his rest, bred in the Spaniards a cohorts, that were appointed to wheel about | disposition, to believe the more easily those for the same purpose, they were forely pref | reports which they heard from Italy. For fed, and with much difficulty made re- henceforward, they never did good office to fiscance. The Carthaginians would fain have the Carthaginians. Asdrubal, perceiving this, fuccoured them; but that they durst not withdrew himself, and marched away faftir out of their places, because of the Spa- | ster than ordinary pace, toward the Ocean nijb battel which was coming against them; Sca. Seipio sollowed the next morning, and though it were as yet far off. Thus the best overtaking the Carthaginians with his horse, part of Afdrubal his Army stood idle, caused them so often to make stand, that adventured to meet with the Spaniards, he | Legions. Here began a cruel flaughter: for must have cast himself into the open space there was no resistance made, but all fell that lay before him between the Roman to rout, fave only seven thousand that with wings: to the depth whereof when he had Afdrubal himself recovered a very strong arrived, he should have found himself in- piece of ground, which they fortified in closed in such fort, as was the Conful Pau- | haste. The place he made shift a while to departs; or those perhaps the more, that were set fail for Gades. When Scipio understood incamped. In the skirmishes of the horse it by the obstinate passion of sear, which hear-

The same night Afdrubal gave no rest to One Attancs, that was Lord of the Turde-Towns were yielded up to Scipio, and the until the wings were broken. For, had he they were at length attached by the Roman lus at the battel of Canna. Wherefore he fend:but wanting there necessaries to sustain did only imploy his Elephants; which did, | himfelf long, he was forfaken by some of according to their manner, no greater harm | those few, that continued hitherto partakers to his Enemies, than to his friends. When of his fortune. Wherefore he resolved to they were chafed with wounds, they could make shift for one; and stealing from his no longer be ruled by their guides : but ran, Company by night away to the Sea fide, that as chance led them, and troubled both was not far thence, he took shipping, and the more unwilling to kill them. In pro- that Asdrubal was thus gone, he left syllanus cess of the fight, the Romans, who had well with ten thousand foot, and a thousand refreshed their bodies in the morning, horse, to besiege their Camp (which was not endured lufty; when the others began to taken in haste, for Mago and Masanissa staid faint with travel and heat of the day. in it) whilst he with the rest of the Army, Wherefore perceiving their advantage, they did what was needful in the Country followed it the more hotly; and gave not abroad. It was not long ere Mago and Majaover, till they had forc't the enemy to nassa followed Asdrubal to Gades: and their change his place, and run from him. Afatru- | Army dispersed it self; some slying over to bal did his best to have made an orderly re- the Romans, others taking what way they treat; and afterward again to have caused liked. So upon all the Continent of spain, his men turn head at the Hill foot. But the there were only three Towns left, Illiurgi, Romans would not suffer the victory to be so | Castulo, and Astapa, that made continance of extorted from them: neither was it easie to war against the Romans: of which only Caput fresh courage into the vanquished, led finlo had a Carthaginian Carrison, consisting of fuch as had faved themselves by slight in of which in all likelihood he might easily be faw lying on the pile ready to melt.

returned home to Carthage, with seven Gal- formance, he as readily brake. lies : leaving Mago behind him, to wait upon occasion, if any should be offered. He visited in his way home, syphax, King of the Mafafil, a people of the Numidians; hoping to Funeral games held by Scipio. A Duel between win him to the friendship of the Carthaginians. But he met with Scipio, as it were with his evil Angel, in the Kings port: who landing at the fame time, carried syphax quite another way. For Scipio having driven the Carthaginians out of spain, did forthwith be- year, upon those of Illiturgi, Castulo, and think himself, how to finish the war, by put- Astapa, as hath been said before. The conting them to the like diffres in Africk. Here- quest of the Country being then in a manner unto it seemed that the help of syphax would at an end; he performed at new Carthage, with be much available : a King that had many great folemnity, some Vowes that he had timesfallen out with the Carthaginians, and made, and honoured the memory of his Fa-

the late overthrows. Hereby it feems that moved to feek revenge. He had also been bethe report of those Historians was ill ground-holding to P. and Cn. Scipio, that sent him ed, who said, that Castulo yielded long fince over a Captain into Africk; who instructed unto the Romans; though Hannibal took a him fo well in marshalling his forces, as he wife in that City. For this was one of the last thereby often became victorious. Upon these three towns that held out on the Carthagi-reasons, the Numidian King sent Embassadors mian side. Illiturgi had sometimes been inclin- to Rome, and made league with the City in able to the Romans; if not altogether at time of great extremity. So that hereby P. their devotion. Yet after the death of the Scipio conceived hope of laying a good fountwo elder Scipio's, following too earneftly dation to the War, which he intended in the Carthaginian fortune, it not only rebel- Africk, upon the friendship of this ill neighled, but with great cruelty betrayed and bour to the Carthaginians. For which cause flew the poor men that escaped thither from he sent over C. Lalins his Embassador, to deal the overthrows. Aftapa was a town that still with Syphax: who declaring that the Caradhered to the Garthaginians; and, which thaginians did very ill in Haly, and had nowas worse, had thriven by the spoyl of the thing now at all to do in Spain, easily per-Romans and their Confederates. Wherefore swaded the King to take part with those that (though not untill the next year) Scipio had the better and were without question went against these, and took himself Illitur- his better friends. Only Syphax requested that gi, and Castulo: Illiturgi by assault, and with the Roman General should visit him in pera general flaughter of the Inhabitants; Ca. fon, to conclude the League; by which he fulo, by treason of one Cerdubellus. Astapa was to enter into conditions of more imporwas taken by Lucius Marcius; or rather tance, than in any former Treaty. Hereto destroyed by the Inhabitants. For a great scipio condescended; thinking the friend-pile of wood was raised in the Market-place: ship of so great a King, that was neighbour whereinto was thrown all the gold, and fil- to Carthage, and not far distant from Spain; ver, with whatfoever elfe was precious; the well worthy of the adventure. So with two women and children standing by it under a Quinquereme Gallies he took Sea, and arrifure guard, that should kill and burn them | ved in the Kings Port, at the same time with if the Romans got into the Town. This pro- Astrubal. This would have been very danvision being made, all the Inhabitants that gerous unto him, had he been descryed by could bear Arms, rushed forth desperately, his enemies further at Sea: but in the Haven and fell upon the Roman Camp; where stri- they forbare to make offer one upon the ving beyond their power, they were every other. Syphax might well be proud; feeing one flain. Then was the Town forthwith set at one time, two such Captains of two most on fire, by those that had taken charge to do powerful Cities, came to desire his friendit: and many of the Romans confirmed with thip. He would have brought them to treat the flame; whilst they rushed over-hassily of peace: but the Roman excused himself, to catch the gold and filver, which they by want of fuch Commission from the Senate. He feasted them together : and short-Asdrubal being beaten into the Island of ly dismissed scipio, with whom he readily Gades, found no cause of long stay there:but entred into Covenant; which in time of per-

7. II.

two Spanish Princes. A digression concerning Duels;

Ccipio returning into Spain, and refting Othat Winter, took vengeance the next sustained much hurt by their procurement; ther and Uncle, with funeral games, especialCHAP III

to the manner of the times. Neither was it there was a great Combat fought between needful that he should trouble himself with Edmond Ironside, and Canntus the Dane, for preparing flaves for that spectacle, to hazard no less matter than the Kingdom. Theuse their lives, as was used in the City of Rome: of them was very frequent in the Saxon for there were enow, that either offered, times; almost upon every occasion, great themselves as Voluntaries, or were sent from or small. In the reign of Edward the third their Princes, to give proof in fingle combat, who fulfained the party of Mountfort of the valour that was in their feveral Counagainst the Earl of Blogs, contending for the tries. Some also there were, that being in Dutchy of Britain; there was a fight for contention, which they could not, or would honour of the Nations, between thirty of the not otherwise end, agreed to refer the de- Britons, and thirty English: two of which cision of their Controversies, to tryal of the English, were Calverlie, a brave Captain; fword, in fingle fight. Among these, the and that Sir Robert Knolles, who afterwards most eminent, were Corbis and Orsua; Cosen-became a renowned Commander in the germans: that contented for the principa- French wars, and did highly honour his lity of a Town called Ibes. Corbis was the blood, whereof the Lord Knolles is descendelder, and the elder brothers fon: where- ed. It were infinite to reckon the examples fore he claimed the Lordship, as eldest of of the like, found in English, French, and Hathe house, after the manner of our Irish lian Histories. Most of them have been Tamftry. But the father of Orsua stood lately combats of bravery, and of gayeté de ceur, as feized of the principality: which though himself received by the death of his elder brother; yet this his fon would not let it go back, but claimed to hold it as heir unto his father, and old enough to rule. Fain would Scipio have compounded the matter. But they answered peremptorily, That all their friends and kindred had already laboured in wain, to take up that quarrel; and that neither God nor Man, but only Mars, their god of battel, should be Umpire between them. So they had their wills: and the elder, who was also the stronger, and more skilful at his weapon, easily vanquished the fool-hardi- | Goliah, or that between the Horatii and Cuness of the younger.

Such combats have been very ancient; and perhaps more ancient, than any other kind of fight. We read of many performed before the War of Troy; by Theseus, Hercules, Pollux, and others: as also of two Boulinbrook Duke of Hereford, and Monbray more at the War of Troy, the one between Duke of Norfolk. There was a combat per Rich Paris and Menelaus; the other between formed by Sir John Ansley and one Cattring-Hettor and Ajax. Neither want there ex- ton: whom Ansley charged with treason; and Ansley amples of them among the Hebrews: whereof that between David and Goliah; and others performed by some of Davids Worthies, against those that challenged them, are between a Navarrois, and one Well of greatly celebrated. Unto the same kind appertains the fight between twelve of the treason: but, being beaten in fight, confef-Tribes of Juda, and as many of the Benja- | fed that he had belyed him, and was theremites. The Romans had many of them: fore drawn and hanged. Whether our tryal whereof that was principal, in which they by battel do determine, that the falle accuventured their Dominion upon the heads of fer, if he be vanquished, shall suffer the puthree brethren the Horatii, against the three nishment which had been due to the offenafter, of Valerius Corvinus, with two Cham- if he which is accused of treason, or accord-Roman; were of less importance, as having Rape, or burning of places (offences punish-

ly of those that fought at sharp, according only reference to bravery. In England the French term it; for honour of several Nations; for love of Mistresses; or whatfoever else gave occasion unto men, desirous to fet out themselves. But besides those of this fort, there are two other natures of combats; which are, either upon acculation for life, or upon trial of Title and Inheritance, as in Writ of right. And of this latter kind, was that, of which we spake even now, between Corbis and Orfua. Unto these (me thinks) may be added, as of different condition from the rest, the combat upon Wager; fuch as were that between David and ratii: in which without regard of Title, the Dominion of Nations, one over the other, is adventured upon the head of Champions. Upon an accusation for life, there was a combat appointed between the Lord Henry of proved it upon him, by being victorious. No. 3 The like was fought between Robert of An. 4 Mountfort, and Henry of Effex. The like also, He. 1. Grimsby, whom the Navarrois accused of brethren, Curatii, that were Albans. The der, if the acculation had been proved; I combat of Manlius Torquatus; and shortly cannot affirm. But we every where find, That pions of the Gauls, which challenged any ing to the customs of Normands, of Murder, is the Appellant or Defendant bound to of Faith, had fent the Lye unto the Emperor hight in person, but he may try it by his Charles the fift, thereby to draw him to a Champion, as did Paramour and Low, or offored to do in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. France, in imitation of their Master, made And in this case, he that is beaten or yeeldeth lofeth only his cause, not his life. Neither it a matter of no small glory, to have it said. are the combats upon accusation, or tryal of That the meanest Gentleman in France right, fought in open field, as are those of would not put up, what the great Emperor bravery; but in Camp close, that is, within Charles the fift had patiently endured. rails. Now this tryal by combat was fo ordipary in France, before the time of S. Lewis and Philip the fair his grand-child, as every Lord of Fee, Ecclefialtical or Temporal, had power to grant it within his own Jurifsimi-hereby. For in the * Memorials of the Chamthe ber of Accounts, is found an Article to this ef- are founded upon meer private Anger, yea, fect; That if a Combat were once accepted, or upon matter feeming worthy of anger in and after, by consent of the Lord, were taken the opinion of the Duellists. So that in these up, each of the parties should pay two shilbert Archbishop of Sens, and to others; dependencies thereof, are deduced. Yea, wherein he rebukes the judgement of their there are (among many no less ridiculous) heali Churches, that had ratified fuch challenges | some so mystical curiosities herein, as that it functionis of combat. But this liberty and kind of tryal, is held a far greater dishonour, to receive some was retrencht by S. Lewis, and Philip the from an enemy a slight touch with a Cane, at a fair; for that no man could decree or grant than a found blow with a Sword; the one the state of the s granted, though more sparingly, by the souldier. I confess that the difference is pret-French King, as to the Lord of Carogues, a- ty: though for my own part, if I had had (mitis ad wherein Sir Henry Knevet, Father to the an exchange; and have given him the point him pro. Lord Knevet now living, was Patron to Ro- of honour to boot. Markit, mero that had the victory; and lastly to the Lord of Chaft. Now in those challenges, fence of this terrible word, the Lye; with their was Eule upon accufation of Treason, Murder, or conditions who are commonly of all other other offence deserving death (and in those the most tender in receiving it. I say, that the only) the rule held, That le defendeur effoit most of these, who present death on the &c. tenu de proposer ces deffences par un dementir; points of their swords to all that give it The defendant was bound to plead not guilty, by them; use nothing so much in their conversa-

ed by death) be overcome, He shall suffer ment confesser le crime ; silently confess the the pains appointed for those crimes. In com- crime. But after such time as Francis the bats for tryal of right, it is not fo: neither French King, upon some dispute about breach personal combat; every petty companion in giving of the Lye mortality it felf; holding

From this beginning is derived a challenge of combat, grounded upon none of those occasions that were known to the Ancient. For, the Honour of Nations, the Tryal of Right, the Wager upon Champions, or the diction. And it seemeth, that the French | Objection and Resultation of capital offen-Kings, and other Lords, made their profit | ces, are none of them, nor all of them together, the argument of half so many Duels, as dayes, wherein every man takes unto himlings fix pence; but if it were performed, felf a Kingly liberty, to offer, accept, and then should the party vanquished forfeit an appoint personal combats, the giving of the hundred and twelve shillings. And upon this Lye, which ought to be the Negation only custom grew the French Proverb, which in accusations for life, is become the most they use when as any man hath had an hard | fruitful root of deadly quarrels. This is held and unjust judgment; saying, That He was a word so terrible, and a wrong so unpartryed by the Law of Loray, or Berne; on le donable, as will admit no other recompence, battupage l'amende, where he that is beaten than the blood of him that gives it. Thus gives the recompence. Of these frequent try- the fashion, taken up in haste by the French als by battel that great learned man Tvo, Bi- Gentlemen, after the pattern of their King, shop of Chartres, did often complain, and is grown to be a custome: whence we have specially against the French Church-men: as derived a kind of Art and Philosophy of appears by * his Letters to the Bishop of quarrel; with certain grounds and rules, Orleans, to the Arch-deacon of Paris, to Rem- from whence the points of honour, and the gainst Jaques le Gris; and to Julian Romero any such Italianated enemy in former times, the Spaniard, against Moro his countriman; I should willingly have made with him such

But let us examine indifferently the ofgiving the accuser the Lye: otherwise it was tion and course of life, as to speak and swear concluded, that the Defendant did taifible- fallly. Yea, it is thereby, that they shift and

few are there among them, which, having af- to tax any man in publike with an untruth fumed and fworn to pay the moneys and (if it be not pernicious, and to his prejudice other things they borrow, do not break their against whom the untruth is uttered:) But word and promife, as often as they ingage it? all that is rude, ought not to be civillized Nay, how few are there among them, that with death. That were more to admire and are not Lyars by Record, by being fued in imitate a French custome, and a wicked one. fome Court or other of Justice, upon breach than to admire and to follow the counselof of word or bond? For he which hath pro- God. But you will fay, that these discourses mifed that he will pay money by a day, or favour of cowardize. It is true; if you call promifed any thing elfe, wherein he faileth; it cowardize to fear God or hell: whereas hath directly lyed to him to whom the pro- he that is truly wife, and truly valiant, mise hath been made. Nay, what is the pro- knowes that there is nothing else to be fearfession of love that men make now-adayes? ed. For against an Enemies sword, we shall What is the vowing of their fervice, and of find ten thousand feven-penny-men (waged all they have, used in their ordinary comple- at that price in the wars) that fear it as lirments, and (in effect) to every man whom the, or perchance less, than any profest they bid not good morrow, or falute, other Sword-man in the world. Diligentillima in than a courteous and Court-like kind of tutela sui Fortitudo; Fortitude is a diligent lying? It is (faith a wife French man, deri- preserver of it felf. It is (faith Aristotle) a meding therein the Apish custome of his Coun- diocrity between doubting and daring. sitry) un marché & complot fait ensemble, se cut non Martyrem pana; sic nec fortem pugmocquer, mentir, & piper les un les autres ; A na, sed causa : As it is not the punishment kind of merchandise, and complet made among that makes the Martyr: so it is not fighting them, to mock, belye, and deride each other: that declares a valiant man: but fighting in a and so far now-adayes in fashion, and in good cause. In which, whosoever shall resoluse; as he that useth it not, is accounted vedly end his life, resolvedly in respect of either dull or Cynical. True it is notwith- the cause, to wit, in defence of his Prince, ftanding (omitting the old diffinction) that | Religion, or Countrey: as he may justly be there is great difference between these man- numbred among the Martyrs of God; so nerly and complemental lyes, with those may those that die with malicious hearts, which are sometime perswaded by necessity in private combats, be called the Martyrs upon breach of promise; and those which of the Devil. Neither do we indeed take men use out of cowardize and fear; the lat- our own revenge, or punish the injuries ofter confessing themselves to be in greater | fered us, by the death of the injurious. For awe of men, than of God; a vice of all other | the true conquest of revenge is, to give him, ftiled the most villanous. But now for of whom we would be revenged, cause to the Lye it felf, as it is made the subject of all repent him: and not to lay the repentance our deadly quarrels in effect: to it I fay, of another mans death upon our own con-That whosoever giveth another man the sciences; Animasq; in vulnere ponere; And Lye, when it is manifest that he hath lyed, do drown our souls in the wounds and blood of doth him no wrong at all; neither ought it our enemies. Hereupon you will again ask to be more hainoully taken, than to tell him, | me, if I condemn, in generous and noble fpihe hath broken any promise which he hath rits, the defence of their honours, being otherwise made. For he that promiseth any prest with injuries? I say that I do not, if thing, tels him, to whom he hath promised, the injuries be violent. For the Law of Nathat he will perform it; and, in not per- ture, which is a branch of the Eternal Law: forming it, he had made himselfa Lyar. On and the Laws of all Christian Kings and the other fide, He that gives any man the Lye, States; do favour him that is affailed, in the when he himself knowes that he, to whom it slaughter of the assailant. You will secondis given, hath not lyed; doth therein give ly ask me, Whether a Noble-man, or a the Lye directly to himself. And what cause Gentleman, being challenged by Cartel by have I, if I say that the Sunshines when it one of like quality, be not bound in point doth shine, and that another fellow tels me of honour to satisfie the challenger in pri-I lye, for it's midnight; to profecute fuch an vate combat? I answer, that he is not: beone to death, for making himself a foolish cause (omitting the greatest, which is the Ruffian and a lyar in his own knowledge? point of Religion) the point of the Law is For he that gives the Lye in any other dif- directly contrary and opposite to that, pute, than in defence of his Loyalty, or which they call the point of honour; The Life; gives it impertinently, and Ruffian-like. Law which hath dominion over it, which thuffle in the World, and abuse it. For how I will not deny but it is an extream rudeness

publike combat. For as they dared not to the Common-weal. brave the Law; fo did they disdain to submit themselves unto the shameful revenge power to save every mans same and reputathereof; the same revenge (because it dete- tion, as far as reputation may sustain injury steth murder) that hath declared against a by words, I think no man doubteth. For to common Cut-purse or other Theeves: repent us of any evil words that we have Nay let it be granted that a pardon be procured for fuch offenders yet is not the man-him wrong, unto whom we have flayer freed from his pardon. For these two given them, is a sufficient satisfaction; and as remedies hath the party grieved notwith- may fall out, more than fufficient. For he standing; that is, to require justice by Grand that gives ill words in choler, and suddenly Affize, or by battel, upon his appeal, which denyes them, or repents himself of them up-Schwarz (Rith Sir Thomas Smith) is not denyed; and on advisement hath the disadvantage in point of reputation. Concerning blows, That if the Defendant (to wit, the man | Which are indeed not to be given but to deniand. flayer) be convinced either by great Assize | those that are servile, whether sufficient reor by Battel, upon that appeal; the man-compence will be made for them, it shall apflayer)shall die notwithstanding the Princes pear by a notable example of a most worthy pardon. So favourable (faith the fame learn- | Gentleman Monfier de Plessis, that was strick-Gentleman) are our Princes, and the Law of en in France not long fince by a Baron of the our Realm, to justice & to the punishment of same Nation. The satisfaction which was blood violently shed. It may further be de- given him by a judgement of the Constable manded, how our Noblemen and Gentlemen and Marshals of France, was this In the open shall be repaired in honour, where an ene- Court, wherein the Constable gave judgemy, taking the start either in words or blows ment, M. de Plessis was set in a chair under shall lay on them an infamy unsufferable : the degrees where the Constable and Mar-Hay, that a Marshals Court will easily give shals sate: the Baron, who had given him satisfaction in both. And if we hold it no the blow, did kneel before him on both his difgrace to submit our selves for the recovery knees, holding in his right hand a sword with of our Debts, Goods, and Lands, and for all the point towards himlelf, and in his left things else by which the lives of our selves hand the like cudgel or bastinado, whereour wives, and children, are sustained, to with he had stricken M.de Plessis, both which the Judges of the Law; because it may be weapons he delivered into Plessis hands, subfelony to take by violence even that which mitting himfelf to fuch revenge, as it should is our own: why should we not submit our please him to take with either of those felves unto the Judges of honour in cases of weapons; the Constable and Marshals havhonour; because to recover our reputation ing formerly lest it to the will of Plessis, to by strong hand, may be murder? But yet ule his own discretion in the revenge of his again, it may be objected, That the loss of own wrongs. Now whether the Baron had can judge it, which can destroy it; except lands, or of our lives; and I say so too. But you will stile those Acts honourable, where what is this honour, I mean honour indeed, the Hang-man gives the Garland. For, fee- and that which ought to be fo dear unto ing the Laws of this Land have appointed us:other then a kind of Hiffory, or fame folthe Hang-man to second the Conqueror, lowing actions of vertue, actions accompaand the Laws of God appointed the Devil nied with difficulty or danger, and under-to-fecond the Conquered, dying in malice: taken for the publick good? In the content of the publick good? Hav, that he is both base and a fool, that is imployed and trusted, if he fail in the peraccepts of any Cartel so accompanied. To formance, either through cowardize, or this, perchance it will be answered, That any other base affection; it is true that he the Kings of England, and other Christian loseth his honour. But the acting of a private Kings, have feldome taken any fuch advan-combat, for a private respect, and most comrage over men of quality, who upon even monly a frivolous one, is not an action of terms have flain their private enemies. It is vertue, because it is contrary to the Law of true, that as in times of trouble and com- God, and of all Christian Kingsmeither is it bustion they have not often done it; so did difficult, because even and equal in persons our Noble-men and Gentlemen in former and arms: neither for a publick good, but ages, in all important injuries, fue unto the tending to the contrary; because the loss or King, to approve themselves by battel and mutililation of an able man, is also a loss to

Now that a Marshal of England hath honour ought to be much more fearful unto reason to please himself, as one beforehand us, than either the loss of our goods, of our in point of honour, (who struck M. de Plessis

Leecee

956

the advantage of company, and his horses than the permission. ready, shifted himself away on the sudden; but being afterwards taken, was taught IV. of France also endeavoured) hath done to repent himself in this shameful manner:) a most Kingly and Christian-like deed in or whether Monfier de Plefsis (of whose scotland, which the most renowned of all valour no mandoubted) had not far just- his Predecessors could never do : in beating er cause to rest satisfied, since he might at down and extinguishing that hereditary his pleasure have beaten or wounded his profecution of malice, called the deadly fendenemy, but forgave him: let any wise man judge. To this, if it be faid, That the Baron was confirmined to make his submission more. And we have cause to hope, that his that his repentance was enforced, and not royal care shall be no less happy in preventvoluntary; and therefore no difgrace unling the like mischief, which threatens Engto him: I answer, that one may fay as well, | land, by the audacious, common, and brave, that it is no difgrace to a Thief, when he yet outragious vanity of Duelifts. is brought to the Gallows, to repent him of the Robberies by him committed, be- of man-flaughter, it must be added, That cause his repentance also is constrained. And each of these are of great Latitude, and it is true, that enforced repentance is no worthy of reproof and vengeance proportigrace in respect of a force, but in respect of onably, more or less, in their several degrees, the sast: which (but for our sims to God.) There is much difference between Lies of makes all repentance shameful: because all necessity upon breach of promise, or comforced repentance is inflicted upon us for plemental lies; and fuch pernicious lies, as fomewhat unworthy of a Gentleman, and proceed from fear and cowardize, or are of an honest man. Nay, voluntary repentance uttered by false witnesses: the former fort it felf, as it hath relation to men, arifeth ei- being excusable by weakness or levity; the ther out of the fear of the ill that may befall latter being altogether detestable. No les, us, or out of the acknowledgement of our if not more, difference there is, between kilown weakness. Certainly as wife men, and ling of a man in open field, with even weavaliant men do rather deride petty injuries pons, and that killing, which the Scriptures or sudden injuries, that are not offered call killing by guile, dolo or per insidia; though from malice fore-thought, than revenge our Laws do not much diftinguish them in them formen, apt to quarrel, do common- | punishment. For in the latter, God, forsaly suspect their own valour; and rather de- king his own priviledge, commandeth that them to be of great daring, than know any from the protection of his Altar. Neither fuch resolution in themselves. For he that is every guilefull murder performed by the knows himself indeed to be an honest man, fword, nor by overt violence : but there is a fcorss to hunt after opinion.

ble and Marshals of France have, hath also a is found, between coming presumptuously every mans reputation may be preserved; we may therefore as well submit our selves to such manner as the net is spread before the the Judge of honour in all disputes of honor, eyes of the Birds. Francis the first, Queen as we do submit our selves in all controver- Mary of England, and the Kings Majesty now fies of livelihood and life, to the Judges of reigning, have given notable teltimony of the Law. And, out of doubt, the infittution of this Court of Chevalrie in England, in France, and elsewhere: was no less charita- King Francis upon the Lord of Talard: who bie than politick. For the blood of man, being (faith the French Historian) de haute violently spilt, doth not bring forth homp bees as that of Euls doth, which sting but the singrandes. alliances; who being of high and an arrange of the state of Euls doth, which sting but the singrandes. gers, or the face:but it produceththat mon- cient linage, and supported by divers great ftrous beaft, Revenge, which hath ftung to alliances, of which the Cardinal of Belloy in death, and eaten up, of feveral nations, fo especial favour with the King) was one; many noble personages; as there is nothing wasnotwithstanding delivered over into the more lamentable, nor more threatning the hands of the Hangman, Queen Mary, upon a like a Ruffian coming behind him, & having wrath of God upon supream Governours,

His Majesty therefore (which Henry the a conquest, which shall give him the honour of Prudence and Kingly power for ever-

Unto this that I have spoken of lying, and fire, that thereby the world should believe the guilful murderer be drawn by force, Book a guilful murder also, by poyloning: and by Now the same power which the Consta- the pen, or by practice. For such distinction Marshal of England, or his Deputies: by upon a man, to flay him with guile; and b. England whose judgement in all disputes of honour, ing in wait for blood privily, for the innecent, promise Noble man of her own Religion, and in ma- d'une imaginare faveur, qui pour fin de jeu le jefty, upon a Baron of Scotland; whose alwayes in themselves, and not to suffer their house was no less ancient and faithful, than consciences to float upon the waves of imaginahimself valiant, and greatly friended both ryfavour, which in the end overwhelms them. at home and abroad. Of killing guilfully And as for the Admiral, though it might by poyfon, and of punishment following have been answered unto his friends, if any fach wicked Artifans, every age hath had bewail his calamity as undeferved, That he too many examples. Of killing guilfully by was tryed, according to his own defire, by Essens, the pen (that I may not speak of any Eng- the Laws of his Country, and by the Judges Again to pure the Author of the French Re- of Parliament; yet the Kings justice, surfit mourir Montaigu grand Maistre de France, and his Estate. pour contenter l'opinion celuy dont il estoit lors idolastre; & Dieu permit que depuis il fut pendu & estrangle ; Who caused Montaigu great Master of France to die to content his The last Acts of Scipio in Spain, His return to mind (to wir, the Duke of Burgoyne) whom at that time Elhars worshipped as his Idol; but God permitted, that he himself was soon after hanged and stranged and stranged. The other was of the in spain, grew by the rebellion of the ny other respects very dear unto her. His Ma- Submerge; A fair lesson to all Judges, to dwell cherches gives unto us two notable instances: mounting all other his passions, gave back the one of des Esbars, who (faith Pasquier) unto him his Honour, his Offices, his Liberty,

t. III.

Rome, where he is chosen Consul.

Creat Francis the first, upon his Chancellor people, and mutiny of his Souldiers. He Poper:who, to satisfie the Kings passion, pra-fell dangerously sick, in such fort that the clifed the destruction of the Admiral charrumour of his death ran current throughbot; a man most nobly descended, & of great out Spain. This encouraged Mandonius and fervice. For as in other men, fo in Kings Indibilis, petty Kings, that had forfaken the the passion of love grows old, and wears Carthaginians, and followed Scipio a while out by time. So the Kings affection being before, to take arms against the Romans. changed towards the Admiral, he charged They were vainly perswaded, that after the him with some offences which he had for- Carthaginians were driven out; they themmerly committed: The Admiral prefuming felves should become the mightiest in all upon the great good service which he had spain. But seeing now, that things were no done the King in Piemont, and in the defence way answerable to the greatness of their of Marfeilles against the Emperour, gave the hopes; they thought it best, to take the pre-King other lauguage than became him; and fent advantage, and hammer out their own defired nothing so much, as a publick trial. fortunes. So they rashly fell upon the suesses Hereupon the King (it being easie to pro- tani and Sedetani, Confederates of the Rovoke an ill disposition) gave commission to mans; and wasted their Country. Part of the the Chancellor, as Prefident, and other Roman Armylying at Sucro, instead of mak-Judges, upon an information of the Kings ing head against these Rebels, grew to be af-Advocate, to question the Admirals life; The | feeted with the like distemper. They had not Chancellor, an ambitious man, and of a large reped such prosit of the Roman conquests, as conscience, (which is not rare in men to- might satisfie their desires; or as they thought wards the law)hoping highly to content the easie to be gotten if they might be their King; wrought with some of the Judges with own Carvers. Wherefore, when the death of fo great cunning; with others with fo sharp | Scipio was reported, they thought that the threats; and with the rest, with so fair pro- time served very well, to enrich themselves miles; as albeit nothing could be proved with the spoil of the Country. Many outrages against the Admiral, worthy of the Kings di- they committed : and, which was greatest spleasure, yet the Chancellor subscribed, and of all, driving away their Colonels, that got others to subscribe, to the forfeiture of should have bridled their fury; they chose his Estate, Offices, and Liberty, though not out of their own number two base fellows, able to prevail against his life. But what was Albinus Calenus, and Atrins Umber, to their the Chancellors reward (the King hating | Commanders. These took upon themall the fallhood in so great a Magistrate) other than Ensigns of Pro-consuls, or Pro-pretors; as his own degradation, arraignment and con- if this their election had been like to that, demnation? Belle les on certes (saith Pasquier)a wherein Lucius Marcius was chosen by the tout Juge pur de-meurer toufiours en soy, & ne Souldiers after the death of the two scipio's: laisser stuctuer sa conscience debans les vagues But whilest they were devising what ex-Eeeeee 2

ploits they might do, for the enriching of came directions from Carthage, that letting themselves, in a time of such combustion as all care of spain alone, he should thence dewas expected, there arrived more certain part from his Fleet into Haly;& there wage news.that Scipio was both alive, and in good an Army of Gaules and Ligurians, to joun health. Therecame also new Colonels, sent with Hannibal. For this purpole, was money unto them from their General: who mild- fent unto him from Carthage; and he himself ly rebuking their want of confideration, and laid hold upon all that he could find in the feeming to be glad that they had no further Town of Gades; without sparing either priover-shot themicives; led them to Cartha- vate men, the common treasury, or the Temgena, there to receive their pay. Before their ples. In his voyage thence, he landed at coming, Scipio had refolved to do exempla- Carthagena; hoping to have taken it by furry justice on the principal offenders; and to prise. But he failed in the attempt, and was put the whole multitude of them in fear of so beaten to his ships, that he returned back what they had deserved. Therefore he to repose himself a while at Gades. The Gacaused Syllanus to make ready the Compa- ditanes, offended with the robberies and nies which lay before in the Town, as it were | spoil that he had made at his taking leave of to make an Expedition against Mandonius and Indibilis: he caused Albins and Atrius with some thirty other of their Complices, to be secretly apprehended in their ledgings: he called the Mutiners to Assembly; & having them unarmed as they were, encircled round by syllanus and his companies, prepared for the purpose; he bitterly inveighed against them all as Traitors. This done, Albius and Airius, with the other prisoners were haled to the stake; where they were ever. whipt and beheaded, as was the Roman cuftome toward fuch offenders. The rest of the Souldiers, to the number of cithgt thou- of Mago. Then did Scipio deliver up the Profand, were caused to take their oath of obedience anew; and received every man his payswhen he was fworn.

arms:notwithstanding that they had certain it was denied him:for that it had as yet been word of Scipio his life and health. Well they granted unto no Proconful, excepting to could have been contented to be quiet : but | fuch, as received that dignity after a Conby the feverity used to the Roman Souldiers, they stood intear, as being spaniards, and make amends for this repulse, the election greater offenders, of harder measure. Scipio of new Consuls being then in hand, by genewent against them, and found them in a val- ral voice of the City, P. Cornelius Scipio was ley, that was scarce large enough to hold chosen Consul, and P. Licinius Crassus joyned all their Army. In the entrance thereof he with him. This Crassus, being high Priest, or fought with them : and fending Lelius with | Bishop of the Romans, might not by the cuall his horse, to setch a compass about the stome of those times, go far from the City; hils, and charge them in rear, he overthrew asbeing to intend the matters of their superthem. Indibilio and Mandonius had after this, Stition: though Cofar, and other, who in ages no hope remaining to preserve themselves following held the same office, were stayed and their estates, otherwise than by making by no such religious impediment, from befubmillion. Mandenius therefore came to ing far and long absent. Hereby it came to Scipio and humbly craving pardon, both for pals, that Scipio, defiring to have the war himself and for his brother Indibilis, obtain- transferred into Africk, was in no danger ed his request, yet so, that they were taught to lose that honourable charge, by any misto acknowledge themselves less free Princes chance of lot, in the division of Provinces; than formerly they had been.

Afterwards Scipio went toward Gades: employment fo far off. and was met on the way by Masanissa; who fecretly promifed to do him all fervice, if the people of Rome would fend him to make war in Africk. Unto Mago that lay in Gades, them, would not fuffer him again to enter into their City. By this he foresaw, that it would not be long ere they became Roman. Wherefore fending Meffengers into the Town, to complain of this uncourteous dealing he allured their Magistrates forth unto him; whom, not with standing all the excuse that they could make, he whipt and crucified. This done, he followed his former intended voyage; bidding Spain farewell for

The Isle and City of Gades, was yielded to the Romans, presently after the departure vince, to those that were fent from Rome to succeed him therein: & himself with tenships returned home. At his coming to Rome, he Mandonius and Indibilis continued in made fuit for the honour of a triumph. But fulfhip, as it were by prorogation. But to for that his Colleague was not capable of

ø. XVIII.

S. XVIII.

drubal and Syphax.

meeting of the Senate in the Capitol: purpose, did the Spanish Embassages avail much in the Senate; especially that of the Saguntines: who magnified his actions highly and deservedly; faying, That they were they being present, had seen him chosen Conful, and should carry home such joyful news. The Saguntine Embassadors were lovingly and to the Romans) had well deferved. Nevertheles, when Scipio proposed, that Africk might be decreed unto him for his Province, the fame kind. He alledged many reafons against the purpose of the Consul; whereof the found it expedient. chief were. That the Treasury was unable to fustain the charges of a war in Africk; and that it was extreamly perillous to hazzard fo great forces, where they could not at pleafure be recalled unto the defence of Rome it felf, if need required. Hereunto he added many words concerning the danger wherein Italy stood, not only of Hannibal, but of Mago his brother, that was arming the Ligurians: as also concerning the honour of the Consul;

greatly to be feared, lest the like might happen again 32 and that a new Army, notwith-Scipio obtains leave to make war in Africk. Standing the good success of Scipio, (if it His preparations. Of Masanisla who was hapned to be good) might be sent from Carjoyned with Scipio. The victories against Af- thage, to the utter endangering of Rome, whileft the Roman forces were employed abroad. But the main point which he urged, Web.Cornelius Scipio, and P Licinius Craf was, That neither the Senate had ordained, fur, entring into their Confulthip, held a nor the People commanded, Africk to be that year a Province: which the Conful neverwherein it was decreed, that scipio should theless propounded in such wife, as if it were be allowed, to bestow part of the money a matter already concluded, and no longer which he had brought out of spain into the to be argued. Scipio on the other fide. in fifted treasurie; upon the setting forth of solemn upon this one point; That it was better to plays, that he had vowed to make whileft he make an offenfive, than a defenfive war, efpewas busied in his Spanish wars. This helped | cially against such as the Carthaginians, who well to revive the memory of his victories al- | being ill provided of able men at home did ready gotten; and to give hope unto the furnish themselves, by help of mony, with le-People of greater victories in the war, which vies made abroad. As for the care of Haly, he he intended to make in Africk. To the fame doubted not, but P. Licinius his Colleague would be as well able to discharge it now as others had done in times of greater danger. So promifing to draw Hannibal into Africk, for defence of his own home; and taxing as the most happy of all their countrimen, since civilly as he could, the envy of Fabius, which withftood fuch a gallant enterprife, he proposed the matter again to the Senate. Much altercation there was about the manner of entertained by the Senate: as their faith to his proceeding: for a fauch as it was notifed Rome (though costly it were both to them | abroad, that if he could not bring the Senate to his mind, he would carry it by the people. This offended many of the ancients: who refented in this honourable man, a little spice there wanted not many, even of the princi- of that arrogancy, which in following ages pal men, that vehemently gainfaid him. Of grew to be much hotter, in those that had these was Q. Fabius Maximus the chief: who commanded long abroad. But in conclusion, feems to have been troubled with that di- Scipio referred himself wholly to the Senates fease, which too often caused men, renowned good will and pleasure; whereby he obtainfor long approved vertue, to look afquint up- ed thus much, That the Isle of sicil might on the actions of those, that follow them in be appointed unto him for his Province; with leave to pass over into Africk, if he

Want of money, and no great liking to his voyage, made the Roman Senate have little care to furnish out Scipio to the war, by him intended upon Africk Herewithall it fell out, that Mago, coming on the fudden from the Baleares to Genua, and winning the Town, bred a fear of no less terrible invasion upon Italy, than that which Afdrubal had lately made. He could not indeed raife any great Army of the Ligarians; for that he which would (he faid) be greater in fetting found them distracted with civil wars. Italy free from enemies, than it could be in Therefore he was driven to make choise of doing any harm to Africk. Neither did he his party; and to help those whom he forget, both to elevate the Spansh wars, as of thought fittelt for his turn, against the othersless moment than the intended voyage a- This troublesome business, though it occupigainst Carthage, nor withall to lay great ed more of histime than he could willingly blame upon scipio, for having suffered Af- have spared: yet it got him reputation by his drubal to pass inta Italy: thewing, that it was victories; and made the unsteady Gauls reafperfed Legions of the Romans, that under felf upon the advice of many, shall often Proconfuls, and Prætors, lay ready to be em- find himfelf deceived: the counfel of those ployed where need flould require; were di- many being wholly directed by the Empire rected unto the bord is of Lombards and of a few, that over-sway the rest. Q. Fabius Liguria, there to make head against Mago. But all his menaces passed away in vapour. his wary nature sorted well with the bus-For a flect, either coming to his aid from ness, that fell out in the chief of his employ-Carthage, or by him fent thither (the report | ment. Unto him therefore 2 Fulcinus ad. is uncertain) loaden with the booty that he hered, with other of the Senators, that were had taken, fell into the hands of the Roman grown old in following one course; from Prætor, that governed in Sardinia. This did | which they could not shift, as the change of much disable him : and though after a times required. But the People (who though while, there came letters from Carthage, together with store of mony, heartning him in his proceedings; yet some impediments which he found, and that fatal voyage of Scipio into Africk disturbed all; and made him be re-called home.

Against Hannibal was nothing done this year Neither was any thing done by him, of Axes, Beed-hooks, Hand-mils, and thelike which the Roman Historians have been pleafed to take notice. Only it is faid, that he fpent the Summer by the Temple of Juno Lacinia, where he raifed an Altar, with a huge Title of all that he had performed, graven in Punick and Greek letters. Such accompt of winnings past, is commonly in Gamesters that are at the height of their fortune, a cause of compass of five and forty dayes he had both remussion and carelesnes; in those that are upon the losing hand, a cause both of the same for the present, and shortly after of dejection, when they find a notable change. A | sicil he found, besides other forces, two Legreat pestilence, infesting both the Carthaginian and the Roman Camp, is faid to have old Souldiers, and (as he himself well knew) been the occasion of this years idleness; which fell out not much amiss for the City of | had long undergone a heavy censure. They Rome, that was marveloufly impoverished by | had ferved under Marcellus and Lavinus, at this war; and had already tryed the utmost | the taking of many Cities and strong pieces: way to defray the charges, which grew in- in which regard, they were like to be of fupportable. To relieve the present necessity, good use to him in Africk, where would be it was well thought upon that a great part | store of such employment. For increasing of Campania (not many years fince confisca- the number of his horse, he pressed three ted) should be sold, or let out: in which bar- | hundred sicilians, all wealthy young men, gain, that the City might receive no loss, the | & such as loved well their ease. These heaftenth part of the fine was ordained, as a re- | terward discharged from the War, highly to

to Scipio. Neither was he allowed to make to as many Roman Gentlemen, which he press of Souldiers for his African voyage; brought over with him for the purpole. neither did he over-much labour to obtain Whilest he was providing to have things in it. That which the Senate refused, the people | a readiness for Africk, the banished Locrium, did for him: or rather they did it for them- that followed the Roman fide, made him acfelves; that were therein wifer then the Senate. It is usually found in Councels of estate, hoped to recover their City. Some handthat the busie, or obstinate heads of a few, crasts-men, that wronght for the Garthaginia do carry all the rest. And many times men in one of the Citadels of Locri, (for there make a furrender of their own judgments, to the wisdom that hath gotten it self a name, by giving happy direction in troubles if they might be ransomed and rewarded.

dy to enter into his pay. Hereupon the di- forepast. Therefore, he that reposeth himwas accounted the Oracle of his time : for they could not well advise, and deliberate. yet could well apprehend) embraced the needful resolution of Scipio: in such sort, that besides his Roman forces, he had from divers parts of Italy about seven thousand Voluntaries. He had also provision from the feveral Towns: Corn, Iron, Canvas for fails, implements; Firre for building of ships, many thousands of Targets, Helmets, and Spears of all kinds: every place furnished him with that commodity, which it best could afford.

Unto this willingness of the People, the diligence of scipio was correspondent. In the fell'd his Timber, built, and lanched twenty Trireme, and ten Quinquereme Gallies; wherewith he transported his Army into Sicil. In gions, that had ferved at Canna: which were not guilty of the overthrow; for which they ward unto the detectors of lands concealed. their contentment : but with condition, that Of this, or other mony, none was given they should deliver their Horse and Arms, quainted with an intelligence, whereby they Scipio being advertised of this gave order high commendations at their return. to have the attempt made by night: which Scipio had already employed Latitis in Apriled. The other Citadel was ftrongly de- work any other great effect of war. He took fent to Hannihal for aid. The Romans in like to the Carthaginians ; who faw their affairs fort, fearing left their own paucity should to be upon terms of chang. But the greatest make them to weak for Hannibal, craved fruit of his journey was, That speaking help of the Conful Scipio. The Towns-men with Masanisa, he well informed himself of were doubtfully affected: but the best, and the state of Africk; and knew what was to most of them inclining to the Romans, kept be expected of these two Kings, that had Hombal out; whom the comming of scipio promiled to joyn with the Romans at their caused thence to depart; and caused likewise landing.

happily succeeded, and that Citadel was sur- friek; rather to make discovery, than to fended by the Carthaginian Garrison, which a great booty : and struck no little terror in-the Carthaginian Garrison to abandon the other Citadel Many outrages were commit-carthaginians, and his compact made underted by the Roman Souldiers, that were left hand with the Romans, Livie doth profess, Livib, 21. by Scipio in custody of the Town. Where- That there was no such evident cause therefore a vehement complaint was made by the of at the present; but that the long continu-Locrians unto the Roman Senate; not only ance of his faith and constancy, in following against those of the Garrison : but much times, must help to prove, that this his more against Pleminius the Captain, who change, was not without some good cause. gave bad example, and was worse than all But Appianus (an Historian far inferiour to the rest. Besides many Murders, Robberies, Livie, both in worth and time) gives one Rapes, and other villanies, the Temple of reason so probable of this, and many acci-Proserpina, that had a great fame of sanctity, dents thereto belonging, as that it carryes was spoyled by these barbarous Theeves, with it a great appearance of necessary truth. The Locrians therefore advised the Senate Only the doubt is. How it could any way to make present amends to the goddess for come to pass, that the knowledge of such a this facriledge: faying that the like had ne- matter should have escaped the diligence of ver been committed, without notorious re- Livie, if it had been true: unless we should venge by her taken upon the Authors. The | believe, that he wilfully forbare to rehearfe Senate gave good ear to this complaint, a Tragedy; the forrow whereof would cause comforted the Locrians, and redrefled the men to think amis of Scipio. Howsoever it injuries done unto them; fent for Fleminius, was, thus * Appian tels it: and many circum- * Appian. with other principal offenders; whom they stances of things done, confirm it. Afdrubal, Alexani, de Bellevanie. cast into prison, and used according to their the son of Gesco, had a fair daughter, whom deferts : as also they restored unto Proserpina both King Syphax and Masanissa loved, Maher money twice told. But old Q. Fabius was Janissa, being brought up at Carthage, and benot herewithall contented. He laid much of | ing withall a goodly Gentleman of person, the blame upon Scipio, that had placed fuch and excellent in qualities, was chosen by a man in Locri; and had not carefully Afdrubal to be his fon-in-law. When the Virhearkened to the complaints made against gin was betrothed unto him, he went into him, but suffered him to run on in these his | Spain, and there did great service. But afterwicked courses. By the sharp invective that | wards, the Carthaginian Senate thought the Fabius made, others took courage to speak marriage of Afdrubals daughter to be a matwhat they pleafed, as well against the de- ter of State: and bestowed her upon symeanour of scipio, as against the dissolute- phax, without standing to acquaint her faness of his Army; which lay, as they said, idle ther or. Masanissa therewithall, This they in sicil, neither mindful of any fervice to- | did, for that syphax was the more mighty ward, nor fit for it if need should require. Prince; and for that the indignity of the re-Finally, things were fo far urged, that ten pulse, had made him become their enemy, Legars were fent over into Sicil, together Hereof Mafanissa was advertised; and forthwith the Prætor appointed for that Island; with entred into intelligence with Scipio, setwo of the Tribunes, and one of the Ædiles; cretly as he thought; yet not so secretly, but who should examine these matters; and ei- some notice was taken of it: which would ther cause the General to return into Italy, or have cost him his life, had he not with great continue him in his charge, as they thought circumspection conveighed himself home, fit. The end of all was, they found him fo into his fathers Kingdom. Thus far forth well prepared against Carthage, as that they we may believe Appianus: all the narration hastened him on his journey, and gave him well cohering with things past, and following. Only it feems, that howfoever sopho- [sicil about the fame time, which was little misha, the daughter of Afdruhal, was pro-mised by the Carthsginians unto Syphax: his promife lately made: and fignified his vet fince this their course fie proceeded from alliance with the Carthaginians; adding fear, he thought it wisdom to continue and That he could not choose but fight for the increase the same their fear, by making fair defence of Africk, wherein he was born and have promifes to the Romans, untill Afdrubal bad reigned; and for the defence of his beloved fent for his danghter from Carthage, and the wives Country, if it were invaded. Nevermarriage was confummated. In other mat-theless he promised to remain a Neuter so ters concerning the war it self, wherein Ap- long as the Romans and Carthaginians held vian differs much from Livie, and from war abroad, far enough from Africk, as hi-Polybins, whom (as appears by the therto they had done. This mellage haftened broken pieces of his works remaining) scipio in his expedition, much more than take little heed unto his reports. Numidians: whose father dying, the Crown the assent of the Senate, and the forwardness descended, by order of the Country, unto of many Adventurers. Lest therefore the Defalces the brother, not unto Mafanifa the failing of this hope, should work too great fon. But this Uncle of Mafanissa shortly dy- a change in common opinion, He thought it ed: and his elder fon, who took possession the best way, to prevent all discourse, and of the kingdom, was vanquished, and slain fet the war undertaken immediately on foot. in battel by a Rebel, that made himself Pro- The Embassadours he dismissed in halte, tector over the younger which was a child. with letters to their King: wherein he wil-The Traitor fortified himself against Masa- | led him to consider, that what he had pronissa, whose return he feared, by Alliances mised, he had also sworn; and therefore with the Carlhaginians and Syphax. But all should do well to make it good. Having sent would not serve: He and his Pupill, were them away, He called his Souldiers togedispossessed of their Estates by Masanista; ther; and bade them make ready for the that was a skilfull Warriour, and well belo- voyage, which he intended no longer to ved for the memory of his father Gala. The defer. For, faid he, Majaniffa hath been with Carthaginians in reason would have been Lalius: and Syphax hath newly sent to glad, that Masanissa, who had done them me; greatly wondring upon what I should notable fervice, was thus confirmed in his thus ftay; and faying, That they will Estate, had they not been guilty of the injury by them done unto him; whilest his Uncle or Coufin reigned, and he feemed unlikely to stand them in any stead. But Syphax, by their procurement, and perhaps by his own mellage of these Embasiadors: whose solmalice, towards his Corrival, warred upon lowers had been feen walking up and down him; and over-charging him with numbers, | Syracuse. And lest anything should afterdrave him out of his Kingdom. Nevertheless | wards break out, that might hinder the buff-Masanissa, still retained the hearts of his peo- ness, Scipio immediately sent about his seet ple; and thereby remained ftrong enough, to infest both Syphax and the Carthagini- M. Pomponius, that was Prætor in Sicil, to ans; though he was often put in diffress, by | meet him there; hafted thither with his Arof Africk.

CHAP. III

than could be expected from the good will they were points of ordinary care, and of poor Masanisa, sent an Embassage into which it is like that neither he, when he

Livie did follow; it will be no offence, to any perswassion could have done. For, the promifed affiftance of syphax had not a little Mafanissa was the son of Gala, a King of the advanced his enterprise; in procuring both provide for themselves, if I sail their expectation by tarrying any longer. This fine tale prevented all further inquilition, that might else have been made concerning the unto Lylibaum: and requesting by letters great forces that were fent against him. He my At Lylibaum he agreed with the Prætor, therefore keeping much about the lester Syr- about the division of the Legions between tis, between the borders of the Carthagini- them, which to leave behind for defence of ans, and the Nation of the Garamants, expe- the Island; and which to carry with him incted the coming of the Romans: yet fo, as to Africk. What numbers he transported, it is he made long roads over all the Country, not certain : fome Historians reckoning even as far as Hippo; and when Lelius arri- only ten thousand foot, and two and twenty ved therereabouts, exhorted and encoura- hundred horse; others increasing them to ged him to hasten on scipio to the invasion five and thirty thousand, horse and soot. Concerning his directions for embarquing, But syphax, in whose great aid and suc- and other matters belonging to their course, cour was reposed more hope of good success, I hold it needless to set them down: since took his voyage into Spain, nor others upon better advise them to set sail for Utica, and fo word for word fet down by an Historian, doors. who borrowed them from Livie, and fitted them to a Prince of later age.

like occasions, have omitted; they being al- make war upon the Enemies at their own

The Carthaginians had at time neither any Captain of great worth at home, nor This Roman Army landed in Africk, near to better Army than of raw Souldiers; that a fore-land then called the fair Promon- were levied, or to be levied in halte. Aldruor toward what point of the Compass, I been chasted out of Spain by Scipio, was their cannot precifely affirm; because its uncer-tain, whether it were that Cape or Head-haps he was thought by Hanno and his felland which bore the name of Mercury, and lows, of whole faction he was: or if ought lay to the North-east of Carthage; or whether that of Apollo, which lay Northerly bility, together with the affinity of King Syfrom Carthage, and by West. The coming of phax, made him passable. He was then with Majanissa unto Scipio at his first arrival, helpt the King his fon in-law, working him no to confirm the opinion of Xylander, who doubt against the Romans: when letters thinks the fair Promontory to have been the were brought from Carthage, both to Syphax fame, that was also called Mercuries Cape, and to him, informing them of the Invasion: fince with little difficulty Mafanissa might entreating the one of them to give affistance come thither from the leffer syrtis, where- and commanding the other to make his reabout was his common abiding. But foraf- pair unto the City, where he was chosen much as without any memorable impedi- General. But ere these could be ready, sciment soon after his arrival, Scipio encamped pio had beaten the troop of Carthaginian before Utica, that stood Westward from horse, that were sent out of the City to di-Carthage beyond the River Bagradas: it may frurb his landing; and flain Hanno a young rather seem, that he landed within the Pro- Gentleman, that was their Leader. He had montory of Apollo; whence the way to Utica also taken and sacked a Town of the Carthawas not long. This is also strongly proved; ginians; wherein, besides other booty, he for that out of Carthage were fent, the next took eight thousand prisoners; all which he day, five hundred horse to trouble him in his conveighed aboord his Hulks or Ships of dif-embarking. Neither was it so hard for burden, and sent them back loaden into si-Masanissa, that roved about the Country cil. He took likewise a Town called salera, with a troop of horse, to find out the Romans, which he held and fortified. In Salera lay though they landed far from the place to the another Hanno, with four thousand Numidiwhich he usually reforted, like as before he an horse: whose service being fitter for the had met with Lælius at Hippo that was far- field, than for defence of walled places, ther off; as it would have been for scipio, made scipio to perceive the unskilfulness of with his Army&Carriages, to overcome the their Leader, that had thus housed them. trouble of a long journey and fetch a great Wherefore he lent Masanissa before him: who compass to Utica, by Land; when he might rode up to the gates; and, by making a have disembarqued nearer unto it. Never- bravado, trained out the improvident Hantheless it may pass as a conjecture. That sci- no so far, that he drew him unto a place. pio came first of all to Emporia, a plentiful where the Romans lay in wait for him. The Region about the leffer Syrtis; fince he gave victory was eafily gotten, and Hanno either charge to the Masters of his ships, at the taken, or slain. With those that fled, the letting forth from Lilybaum, to shape their Romans entered pell-mell into the Town, course for that coast. The Countrey there- which presently they made their own. about was very rich, and fit for fustenance Thence went Scipio to Utica, a City of great of an Army: neither were the Inhabitants importance, of which mention hath been warlike, or well provided to make refi- formerly made, and fate down before it. stance. Thus much perhaps Masanissa had Forty dayes he spent about it, assailing it fignified unto Lelius, when he spake with both by Land & Sea, & using all his engines him at Hippo: thinking that the Romans, of battery, whereof he had plenty, yet was howfoever they made brave promifes, would in no likelihood of prevailing. And now the not come strong enough to fight at head. But Summer was quite spent : so that it was time when he faw their Fleet and Army to be for him to chole a place, and fortifie his such , as not only served to invade the lands Winter-Camp, which must be well stored of Carthage, but threatned a conquest of the against the year following. Whilest thus City and whole Estate: then might he necessity urged him to leave Otica: and Ffffff enterorife, rather than any hope of better little entreaty to withdraw himfelf home ence of the control o pretence to leave the fiege. Afarubal had King, had been highly entertained and homade a levy of hirry thousand foot, and noured in the City of Carthage, which was three theuland herfe: yet adventured not near at hand, as often as during this Winter with this ill trained Army to draw near un- it had pleafed him, or as he had been invithe Romans, before the coming of spphase, ted, to make a step shither and repose him-Syphax brought with him unto Carthage fifty felf a while : his wife Queen sophonicha lythousand foot, and ten thousand horse: ing also there at the same time, to chrish which joyning unto the forces of Askruhal, him in his resolution. Howsoever it were, they marched bravely toward scipio; who syphax did only make an overture of peace: thereby took occasion to dislodge. He propounding it as reasonable, That Hannichose for his Winter-Camp the banks of bal should be recalled out of Italy by the an In-let, that had good harbour for his Na- Carthaginians; and that the Romans in like vy. His foot-men he lodged on a Promonto- fort flientld quietly depart out of Africk, and ry, joyning to the Continent by an arm of so make an end of the war: wherewith now Land: his horse-men he bestowed upon both Africk and Europe were disquieted. lower ground, on the other shoar: in the Unto this would not Scipio at the first give bottome of the creek he mored his ships; and car: yet being pressed carnestly by many there he quartered the Mariners, with all mellages from Syphax, and defiring to conthat belonged unto the Fleet. The whole tinue the intercourse of Embassadors; he camp he firongly fortified, and so attend- began to make shew, as if he would consider ed the season of the year, when it should of the motion. He was given to understand ferve him again to fight. Of cattel and by those whom he had fent unto the King, other boory Mafanifa had brought in great that the Enemies had their camps without store, by driving the Countrey, before any great defence of earth, full of wooden the coming of Ajdrubal and Syphax. Corn Cabins, and covered with boughs and that also he had gotten some : and great store the Numidians, such of them as came first with was fent him from Sicil and Sardinia. Syphax, used coverings of Matsand Reeds; Likewife apparel for his Souldiers, was fent others, that came later, had thatched their from home, or from sardinia: though lodgings with dry boughs and leavs: under fearce enough to ferve turn, for that it was which they lay carelefly without their a matter of more coft. The ships that Trenches. Upon this advertisement he bebrought these things, he fraighted home- thought himself, That it would not be hard wards with fuch part of his booty, as he for him to fet their camps on fire, and therecould best spare : especially with captives by give them a notable overthrow. Withto be fold for flaves. Afarubal and Syphax out help of some such stratagem, he foresaw encamped near unto Scipio: not so strongly that it would be a work of great difficulfortifying themselves, as did the Romans, ty for him, to proceed in his wars when time either for that they wanted the seuere insti- should serve. It was a plain open Country tution, which the Romans used in the disci- wherein he lay: and the Enemies had great pline of war, or for that they prefumed up- advantage of him in number, especially in on their multitude, against which they horse; which, upon such ground, could not found in Scipio no disposition to issue forth be resisted by the Roman Legions. The lowof his firength, and fight. So the Winter ger therefore that he thought upon the passed without action.

it good to affay his old friend the Numidian on their Camp. To this end he sent many King, if perhaps he might be won by per- Embassadours, under pretence of treatingswasions to forsake the Carthaginians. It about the Peace; but indeed of purpose to was confidered, that those Barbarians were discover all that might concern the intended naturally unconfrant; and particularly, furprife. With these Embassadors besent, as that syphux had given proof before this of Attendants, many old Souldiers, disguised his much levity. It might therefore be like flaves; that wandring (as it were) hoped, That having wearied himself by idle up and down the Camp, might observe lodging a whole Winter in the Camp: and the wayes and entrances, with whatfobeing peradventure no less weary with fati- ever else was needful. When he had learnety of his wife, who had caused him to enter ed as much as he desired : upon the flyme of taking the repaife in his first great into this war: he might be moved with a matter; the more needful he found it for When Spring drew near, Scipio thought himself, to make some sudden attempt up-

fudden he fent word to syphax, that it was have taken by cafualty upon the Numidians vain to hold any longer Treaty, forasmuch that lay farther off, whereas if it first apas he could not get the confent of his Coun- peared in the camp of Afdrubal, it would be cil of war; without whole approbation, suspected as the doing of enemies, and give all that himself could do, was no more, than the good will of one man. This he did, to end therefore Scipio marched fair and foftthe end that, without any breach of faith, lysthat Lelius and Mafaniffa, who had a lon-The might put his delign in execution. The ger journey, and were to fetch a compass Truce being thus cut off, Afdrubal and Sy- about for fear of being discovered, might phase were very penfive; as having lately have time to get before him, and do their perfwaded themselvs, that their trouble was feat. It was about two or three a clock in the almost at an end. But since it could be no morning, when the camp of Syphax began to better, they began to devile, by what art | blaze: which not only the Numidians, but they might draw Scipio out of his Camp, their King himself, imputed unto casualty; and provoke him to battel in those Plains, as thinking themselves safe enough from This if they could do, they hoped to make enemies, for that the Carthaginians lay inhis Council of war repent as greatly the re- terpofed between them and the danger. fusal of peace, as did Marcus Atilius after | Wherefore as if there were no more to do, the like prefumption. But if he should re- some starting half asleep; and others that fuse to come forth of his Trenches, what else had sitten up late at drinking, ran out of remained than to befiege him? Which they their Cabbins to quench the fire. But fo themselves were well able to do by land 3 great was the tumult, that they neither and the Carthaginian Fleet should do by Sen, could rightly understand in what case they that was making ready for the purpole. were, nor give any remedy to the mischance By fuch discourses these two comforted as it was supposed. Many were smothered themselves; recompending (in conceipt) the and burnt into the flame, which grew grealoss of their hopes past, with that victory to ter and greater:many, leaping into the Trencome. But herein they were extreamly and ches for fear of the sudden mischief, were worthily disappointed: for that consulting trampled to death by the multitude that folabout the future, they provided not against lowed them. They that escaped the fire fell present danger, but continued in the same upon the enemies sword, which was ready negligence, which was grown upon them to receive them. Especially Masanissa, that by the long discourse of peace. As for Scipio, best knew the Country, did great executihe was not idle; but made preparation on upon them; having laid all the waves.by out of hand, as it were to do somewhat which he foresaw that they would seek to against Utica. Two thousand Souldiers he escape. The Carthaginians perceiving this had made ready, and appointed to take the fire, thought none other than that it was a fame piece of ground, whereon he lay pittiful mischance: so that some ran out to against Utica before. This he did, partly to help the poor Numidians; carrying only keep fecret that which he had in hand, left what would ferve to quench the fire. being suspected by his own Souldiers, the Others ran up to the Rampart: where fear-Enemy might happen to have notice of it; less of any danger toward themselves, they partly to hinder those of Otica from setting stood beholding the greatness of the flame; upon the few, that he purposed to leave be- and lamenting the misfortune. This fell hind him in his Camp. He caused his men out right as Scipio would have it. He therethat night to sup well, and betimes that they fore lost no time: but setting upon those might be ready for the journey. After sup-per, he appointed such Companies as he he killed some, and pursued the rest back inthought fit, to the defence of his Camp; all to their camp, which in a little while he the rest of the Army he led forth, about nine made to burn as bright, as did that of syof the clock at night. The Carthaginians phax. Afdrubal feeing this, and knowing that lay from him seven miles and an half: whom the Romans were there, did not stand to he purposed to undertake himself with the make resistance, but shifted only for himself, one half of his Army; the other half he and escaped with a few of his horse about committed to Lalius and Masanissa, whom he him. If Hannibal, or any of the Barchine factifent before him to fet upon the camp of sy- on had been taken in fuch a manner: it is phax, that was farther off. It was his mean- more than probable that old Hanno would ing, that the camp of syphax should be have judged him worthy to be crucified. It on a light fire, ere he would meddle with the would then have been faid, that with less Carthaginians. For the fire might seem to than one half of 30000, men, he might at them that were taking pains in kindling needs be valiant, and make countenance of these fires, had he not been only careful war: but their strength not being answerahow to fave his own fearful head. Ne- ble, they were foon taken by Scipio, who abandoned them to the pleasure of his Soul-except. vertheless Polybius acknowledgeth, and it is abandoned them to the pleasure of his Soul-except. vertheless Polybius acknowledgeth, and it is abandoned them to the pleasure of his Soul-less. This being done, he returned to the Aldrubal, or any of those about him, would | siege of Viica. have firicken to flew valour, when the Camp was once on fire: He should not they had good reason, when in stead of eithereby have done any manner of good, ther Peace or Victory, which they lately because of the tumult and consternation. I hoped for, they heard news of such a lashall not need to tell what a fearful thing it mentable overthrow. Necessity enforced was, to hear the cries of fo many thou- them to make halty provision for the fufands that perished by fire and sword, or ture: but how to do it, few of them saw to behold the cruel flame that confumed any means. Some gave advice to crave peace them; which (as Polybius affirms) none of Scipio: others, to fend for Hannibal out of that bath being is able to describe. It is Italy, but the most, and they which finally enough to fay, That of those many thou- prevailed, were of opinion, That not withfands, very few did escape; which accompa- standing the loss of this Army, they might nied Asarbal and Syphax in their several well defend themselves against the Romans. wayes of flight. Befides these also there by raising new forces: especially, if Sypham were fome featterers, especially of the Nu- would not leave them. It was therefore conmidians, that faved themselves in the dark: cluded, that they should bend all their care but they were not many, as after shall ap- this way, levying in all haste another Army; pear. Surely it must needs have been very and sending Embassadours to deal with hard to tell, how many were burnt or other- Syphax, who lay then at a Town called Abba, wise made away, and what numbers escaped not passing eight miles from Carthage. Immein the dark of night. Wherefore Livie, who diately the fame their unfortunate Commanin the rest of this Relation, as often else- der, Astrubal the son of Gesco, was employwhere, doth follow Polybins, may feem to ed to make new levies of men: and Queen have followed some less worthy Author, and Sophonisba went forth with Embassadours him no good Arithmetician, in casting up to her husband syphax, who having gathethe fumm. For he reckons only two thou- red together as many as he could of his fubfand foot, and five hundred horse, to have jects that had escaped from the late slaughescaped; forty thousand to have perished ter, was thinking to return into his own by fword or fire: and above fix thousand Kingdome. Sophonisha laboured so with her to have been taken prisoners: the whole husband, that at length she won him to number of all which together, is far short her own defire. And it fell out at the same were in these two Camps.

by preserved it self from all manner of ber. So they incamped in a Region called, least have given some bad recompence, to loss. The two next Towns adjoyning would

The Carthaginians were fore troubled, as of fourfcore and thirteen thousand, which time, that four thousand Spaniards, waged by the Carthaginians, were brought over to Asdrubal, putting himself into the next serve in Africk. Of these were made such Town that was very strongly fortified, brave reports, as if their courage, and the thought there to find the Romans work, un- Arms which they used, were not to be retil the Carthaginians at good leisure might sisted. Even the multitude within Carthage repair their Army. He had with him no believed these tales, and were more glad more than two thousand foot, and five hun-than they had cause to be; which is great dred horfe: which he thought sufficient to wonder, since in one Age, the whole coundefend the Town; if the Towns-men would try of Spain had been twice conquered; first, not be wanting to themselves. But he found by the Carthaginians themselves, and after the Inhabitants of the place very earnest in by the Romans. But with Syphax these tales contention, whether it were better to fight, prevailed much : which the Carthaginian or to yield. Unto this disputation, he well Embassadors helped with a lye; saying, That foresaw, that the arrival of scipio would soon there were come ten thousand of these tergive an end. Wherefore, left they should lay rible Spaniards. Upon this confidence, the hold upon him, and feek the Victors favour people of Carthage and their friends gather by delivering him up: he shrunk away red such spirit, that in thirty dayes they betimes, and made all haste to Carthage. As made up an Army, confisting wel-near of for the town which he left; it opened the thirty thousand men, reckoning the spaniards gates to Scipio, at his first coming and there- and Syphax with his Numidians in the num-

The great Fields, about five dayes journey and scipio stayed behind, carrying the war been time for Afdrubal to follow the exam- of the war in spain and Haly. What to do in mander, or else, it was not in his power, to neither durst they make bold to trouble give such directions as best pleased himself. their own subjects with any violent exactiwherein the Romans were marshalled by Sci- their own free will were likely to give little pio after their wonted manner, having their help. Very much it grieved them to fend for Italian horse in the right wing; and Masa. Hannibal out of Italy: yet since there was no nissa with his Numidians in the left. On other hope remaining, than in him and his the contrary fide, Afdrubal and his Carthagi- good Arny; it was decreed, That Embasianians had the right wing; Syphax, the left; dors should be forthwith sent to call him and the spaniards, the battel. The victory home. Some there were that gave advice, to was gotten without many blows : for the fet out a fleet against that of Scipio, that untrained followers of Syphax and Afdrubal, rode before Vtica, weakly manned, and could not fustain the first charge of the Ita- easie to be taken, whilest Scipio himself was lians, or of Masanissa. Only the Spaniards busied in the Island Countreys. Some were of fought a long time, even untill they were all opinion, That it should be their principal in a manner flain: rather as men desperate, care, to fortifie by all means the City of and not hoping for mercy, fince they were | carthage: upon the fafety whereof they faid thus come over to fight against scipio, who all depended: adding, that whilest they had otherwise deserved of them, than upon were true, and at unity among themselves, any likelihood or conceit of victory. This they might well enough subsist, and expect their obstinacy was beneficial to those that those opportunities, with which Fortune fled; for that it hindred the Romans from (doubtlefs)would prefent them. These counmaking any great pursuit. Hereby Asdrubal, fels were not rejected; but order was forthand Syphax escaped: Asdrubal, to Carthage; with taken, both for all things concerning and syphax home to his own Kingdom: whi- the defence of the City, and for the attempt ther his wife was either gone before, or im- upon the Roman fleet at Utica. Nevertheless, mediately followed him.

the field, took counsel about the prosecuti- cing their own affairs towards likelihood on of the war. It was resolved upon as the of victory, no, though it should fall out, best course, That he himself, with part of that all the ships at Viica might be taken, or the Army, should attempt the Cities round destroyed. Wherefore the determination about him: and that Masanissa, with his Nu- held concerning Hannibal, That he should midians, and Lalius, with some of the Ro- immediately come over into Africk, as the man Legions, should follow after syphax; last refuge of Carthage. The Council was no not permiting him to take rest within his sooner broken up, than all the Senators beown Kingdom, where easily else he might took themselves to the execution of that repair his forces, and put them to new trou- which was decreed: some, to the fortificable. This advice, it feems that Masanissa tion of the Town: some, to make ready the gave : who knew best the quality of the Fleet; and some, appointed thereunto, Numidians; and what good might be done forthwith to embarque themselves for Italy. among them, by the reputation of a victory.

The leaft that could be expected, was his Tunes, a City in those dayes very ftrong, and refitution into his own Kingdom, usurped standing in prospect almost of every part by syphax: which to accomplish, it no less of carthage. This place, or rather some deconcerned the Romans at the present, than it fensible piece adjoyning, he easily took; did himself. According to this order con- the garrison forsaking it, and running away, cluded, Lelius was sent away with Masanisa: as soon as he drew near. But whilest he from Utica. scipio hearing of this, came from town to town. Many places yielded from Vica thither, to visit them: leaving be- for fear; many were taken by force; and hind him his impediments, with some part all the subjects of Carthage wavered in their of his Army, to make a shew of continuing sidelity, as if the time were now come, the fiege. Two or three dayes, after the meet- wherein they might take notice of those uning of both armies, passed away in skirmish, reasonable burdens, which their proud Mawithout any great thing done. It had now sters had laid upon them, for maintenance ple of the Roman Fabius, and feek to weary this case, the Carthaginians could hardly reout the Enemy by delayes. But either folve. Fortune was their enemy; they had (which is likely) he was a far worse Com- lost their Armies and many of their Towns: The fourth day the Armies met in battel: on of men or money; who nevertheless of it was confidered, that thereby they should Scipio, having thus gotten the mastery of only protract the war; without any advan-

was about there to incamp, and fortifie him- one occasion of that small loss that followwas about the City, he might perceive the ed. They that flood upon the Bridge were Carthaginian Fleet fetting forth, and making neither able to relieve them, nor yet could towards Utica . What this meant, he readily freely bestow their weapons among the Carconceived; and stood in great fear, lest his thaginians, as before; for fear of lurning own ships that were very ill prepared for these their friends, that were intangled and Sea-fight (as being heavily loader with en- mixed among the enemies. The Carthaginigines of battery, and wholly difpofed in fuch ann had brought with them grapplinghooks, gines of Dattery, and Wholly Chapter hanging at Iron chains. Thefe they threw uporter, as was most convenient for assaulting hanging at Iron chains. These they threw uporters are the state of the stat the town) should make bad refissance, on the masts & yards, which served as arches against a fleet appointed for that special ser- to joyn the bridge together: then rowing vice. Wherefore he hafted away towards | backwards, they tore all afunder; in fuch Vica, to affift with his presence in this need- fort, that one ship followed another, and all ful case. It fell out well, that he had sent his the first rank was broken, or defaced. The carriages, and all the great booty which he Defendants had no other way, than to fave drew along with him, thither before, at his themselves as hastily as they could, by shiftgoing to Tunes. For had not be now made ing into the next rank of flips, that lay begreat expedition, he should have come too late. Neither could he indeed have been there in due time, if the Carthaginians had in this laborious work: but having haled used such diligence as was convenient. But they rested one night in harbour by the way: and at their coming to Otica, they tarryed a while to make a bravado; presenting themselves in order of battel, as if the Romans would have put forth to Sea against though it were of small importance. them. But Scipio had no fuch intent: he thought it would be sufficient, if he could preserve his Gallies. As for the pleasure of their bravery at Sea; it should little avail be defired. The same of the victories althe Carthaginians, if they got nothing by it, ready gotten, restored Masanissa to his Kingand lost their whole estate by Land. Where- dom, without farther contention: the Mafore he took his ships of burden, and fastning | feffili, his subjects, joyfully receiving him, and them together with cables, in four ranks, one forfaking the usurpers. But here they stayed bornby the force of the Gallies; and were For to this purpose chiefly are they come hind them untouched. Neither did the Carthaginians trouble themselves any further away fix ships of burden, and towed them out of the Haven, returned home to Carthage. Their welcome was greater than their victory; because among so many grievous losses, only this exploit had succeeded well.

968

Whilest things thus passed about Carthage, Lalius and Mafanissa, in their journey against syphax, found as good success as could behind another, made a four-fold bridge not : neither indeed would syphax permit over the Channel of the Haven; whereon them to be quiet. He had fuch abundance he placed a thousand of his choice men, with of men and horses, that he felt not greatly ftore of Darts, and other casting weapons, the losses past: and therefore being folicited to make defence. Some open spaces he lest, by Astrubal and Sophonisha, he prepared whereat his Frigots, and other small Vessels, again for war. But beside the instigation might run out and back again upon any ad of his beloved wife; the loss of the Malelyli vantage or need: but thele he covered with would let him take no rest: neither was it planks, using the masts and yards of his the purpose of Lelius and Masanissa, to give Thips instead of rafters, to joyn all together, him any breathing time. It is common in that his men might help one another, and men, to depart no less unwillingly from that the bridge it self not be torn asunder Scarce which they have gotten by extortion, than was this work finished, when the Carthagini- from their proper inheritance; but to think ans, seeing none issue forth against them, came all alike their own, whereof they are in into the Haven. The fight between them possession, be the title unto some part neverand the Romans that were in the Hulks, was fo unjust. Hereunto alludes the fable of rather like to the affaulting of a wall, than the young Kite; which thought that she to any Sea-fight. For they that flood upon had vomitted up her own guts, when it was the bridge, had fure footing, and threw their only the garbage of some other fowl, that weapons downwards, with their whole she had hastily swallowed, and was not able ftrength and violence; which the Carthagi- to digeft. But whether or no, spphas, like nian out of their Gallies, that were lower the young Kite, believed the Kingdom of and unsteady, could not do, but the Roman the Masafili to be part of his entrails! Leli-Frigots and long boats, adventuring forth us and Mafanissa will shortly give him some from behind the bridg, were greatly over- what that shall make him cast his gorge. profecuting his hope of victory: fome Ro- in the Kingdom. man fquadrous of Foot came against him

so fire. It concerned the Romans to disposition and fled, and that their King, upon whom all fels (if it might be) the King, whose false depended, was in the Romans hand. Masanifand hollow friendship towards them, had Jatold Lalius, that this victory should make been converted into strong enmity; as al- an end of the Numidian war, if presently foto fet in his place another, who might do they hasted away to Cirta the chief City of them fuch good offices, as Syphax had lately the Kingdom; whither he himself defired done unto the Carthaginians. How eafily this to be fent before with the Horse, carrying might be effected, Majaniffa knew best, as Syphax along with him. Hereunto Lalius being well acquainted with the nature of agreed. Masanissa coming to Cirta, before those Countries; wherein, even to this day any news of the Kings mischance was there though there be many strong Towns, yet the arrived, called our the chief of the City to fortune of a battel is enough, to translate parlee: wherein by many fair promises and the Kingdom from one Competitor to ano- [threats, but especially by shewing unto them ther. So they met with syphax, who came syphax bound, he prevailed fo far, that the against them with no less an Army, than his gates were forthwith opened unto him; and former, and marshalled in the Roman order, every one strove to get his favour, that was according to the skill, which he had learn- like to be their King hereafter. Among the ed of the Roman Centurion, long ago fent rest, Queen Sophonisba yielded her self inunto him out of Spain from Cn. Scipio. But to his hands, and vehemently befought him, though he could teach his men how to that the might not be delivered up unto the march in order; yet could be not teach them Romans. Her youth, and excellent beauty, fo to fight couragiously. They were a rabble commended her fuit, that Masanissa forthof all forts, gathered up in hafte : and few of | with granted it; and to make good his prothem had feen war before. Encamping neer mile, marryed her himfelf that very day; unto the Romans, it fell out, as commonly, thereby to prevent Lalius and Scipio from that some small troops of horse on both determining otherwise of her, since she was fides, encountred one another in the mid- his wife. But Lalius, when he came thisher, way: and they that had the worst, were se- took the matter hainously, so that at sirst he conded by other of their fellows. By conti- would have haled her away, together with nuance of the fkirmish, more and more were syphax and other prisoners, and have sent drawn out from either Camp: fo that at her unto scipio. But being over intreated length Syphax, unwilling to dif-hearten his by Mafaniffa, he fuffered the matter to rest men by taking any foil at their first meet- a while as he found it, and referred all to ing with the Enemy, came up with all his | scipio's discretion; to whom he sent away horfe, which were the best part of his forces, softwar and other captives immediately 3 and therewith over-charged Mafaniffa, whose following shortly after himself with Mafanumbers were far less. But whilest he was missa, when they had done what was needful

At the coming of syphax, there was through their own troops of horse; which great joy in the Roman Camp: the mighty fell to the fides, and made a lane for them. Armies which he had lately brought into So their battel standing now more firm, than the field; and his entertainment of Scipio alittle before; spphax was unable, though he laboured much in vain, to make them and Adarthage together fought his friendship; give ground. Masanisa likewise, and his with such other commemoration of his past troops grew confident upon this affiftance: and present fortune, ministring to every and charging afresh the Enemy, that could one a large argument of discourse. Scipio not make way forward, caused him to give demanded of him, what had moved him, not back. Herewithall the Legions came in fight: only to forfake the Roman friendship, but to which terrified fo the Numidian horse, that make war upon them, unprovoked. He they began prefently to dif band. Fain briefly answered, That his wife had moved would syphax have frayed them from him fo to do; calling her a Fury, and a peflight: and to that end made head in per- stillent creature: and saying, that Masanissa fon against the Romans; with hope, that was no wifer than himself, fince he had his men would be athamed to leave him. now taken the fame woman to his wife, But it fell out unhappily, that he was cast who would shortly draw him to the same from his horse, which received a wound, courses. Hereat Scipio was greatly troubled: and so taken prisoner. Of others that were and stood in great doubt, lest this perilous flain or taken, the multitude was not great. woman should deprive him of Masanissa, It sufficed, that they for look the place, las she had done of Syphax. It was not long, both of whom together he lovingly welcomed; and highly commended in publick, for their notable fervice in this Expedition. Then taking Masanisia apart, he brake with him, as touching Sophonisba; letting him understand that the Romans had title to her head, and that the was a milchievous enemy of theirs. Wherefore he intreated him to moderate his affections: and not to deface then afterwards to make his claim unto her, the memory of his great fervices already wherein he should have no wrong. Heredone (for which he should be highly rewarded to his own contentment) by com- fanissa accompanied the messengers, as it miting a great offence upon little reason. were to deliver her: but making her ac-Mafanifa bluffir, and wept: and finally pro- quainted with the necessity, gave unto her a miled to be governed by scipio, whom he cup of poilon, wherewith the ended her life, nevertheless intreated, to think upon his before they came that should have apprefaith given to Sophonisha, that the should hended her. So he shewed unto the Romans not be delivered into the Romans power. So he departed to his own Tent, where, after The sudden violence of Masanissa his love, fome time fpent in agony, he called unto him and the ready confent of sophonisha to mara servant of his that had the custody of his 119 with him : add not so much credit unto poyfon (which Princes used then to have in this relation of Appian, as doth the want of poyion (which Times died then to all other evident cause (which Livie notes) Lib. 48: make them unwilling to live:) and temper- of the fudden falling out between him and ing a potion for sophonisha, fent it unto her the Carthagians, under whom he had been with this mellage; That gladly he would trained up, and done them great service. have had her to live with him as his wife : Howfoever it were; Scipio, hearing of this but fince they who had power to hinder him tragical accident, fent for Masanisa, and comof his defire, would not yield thereto, he fent her a cup, that should preserve her from falling alive into the hands of the Romans; willing her to remember her birth and estate, and accordingly to take order for her felf.

At the receit of this Message and Present, she only said; That if her husband had no better token to fend unto his new wife, fhe must accept of this; adding, That she | gold, with other Royal ornaments. This might have dyed more honourably, if the was indeed the ready way to divert his had not wedded so lately before her funeral. | thoughts from the fad remembrance of that And herewithall she boldly drank off the poison. Thus Livie reporteth. But Appian varies from this; and fets it down agreeably to that which hath been spoken before, concerning the præcontract between Mafamiffa, and Sophonisba. He faith, That after the taking of syphax, Emballadours from deserved: yet would not the Title have re-Cirta met with Lalius and Masanissa upon their way thither, yielding up their City, and the Kings Palace ; and that Sophonisba, for her own private, fent messengers to excuse her marriage with syphax, as made against her will, by compulsion of those in whose power she was. Masanissa readily admitted this excuse; and accepted her to wife. But when scipio had received information from syphax, how cunning in persuasion the Romans; he might nevertheless have sophonisha was : and that all her thoughts recovered his proper inheritance, by the laboured for the good of Carthage; he fell love of his own subjects without other out about her with Masanissa at his return, help, when syphax had once or twice been ere Masanissa and Lelius came unto him : and challenged her, as a part of the boots belonging to the Romans, Majaniffa faid, the was his own wife, and unto him betrothed many years before. But scipio would not hear of this: or if it were true, yet he faid it was no reason, that Masanissa should keep her in possession, as long as it was disputable, unto whom the might appertain. Wherefore he willed him first of all to produce her, and withal he fent to fetch her away : and Maher dead body, which he royally interred. forted him as well as he could, lest his melancholy should lead him to some inconvenience. Having therefore gently rebuked him for his rashness, he brought him forth in prefence of the Army: where extolling his noble acts, and shewing how highly he had deferved of the City of Rome, he proclaimed him King, and gave unto him a Crown of which was past, unto the more chearful contemplation of good fortune, that began to smile upon him.

This was the first time that the Romans took upon them to create or proclaim a King. Which henour though Masanissa well dounded unto his great benefit; neither should he have been much beholding to them for it, if he had not by their means recovered possession of his Country, together with the greatest part of syphax his Dominions. It feemeth not unlikely, that had he remained a Neuter in these wars, and sustained himself with his troop of horse, in such fort as he did before the coming of vanquished. As for the inlargement of his their Privy Councel, to make suit for peace. iclyes; neither could they have wished a and of those that sate in Councel with him, Pelph liss. fitter opportunity, than of such a man upon hom to bestow it, that was their assured their speech that followed. They confessed fathers Kingdome, desiring friendship of the this it appears, that these Embassacours were Romans, and promising by all means to deno Barchines; but rather, that they were Hanferve their love, requested therewithal, that | 110, and the choice of his company; who had they would call him King. But though it now their long defired work in hand, of fuwere fo, that never any before him had made ing unto the Romans for peace. What soever this a matter of fuit : yet the Roman Senate they were, it must needs be that they were was puntilious herein, and answered very most insolent men over those that were subhan, gravely, That it was not their custome to ject unto their power, for they would not give the honour of that appellation, fave on- have made such adoration to the Romans in ly unto fuchKings, as had greatly deferved of their own necessity, unless they themselves their City. Thus they made it a matter of had expected the like, wherein they had the State; and in process of time grew so proud advantage. of this their imaginary prerogative, that they imputed as a fingular benefit unto Kings

ø. XIX.

The Carthaginians defire Truce, and break it.

their mortal enemy, had got possession of so often victorious in the field. Scipio therehis Kingdome. To increase their fear, fore accepted their submission, and told scipio returned again to Tunes in view of them, That though he came into Africk, to their City: where he made an end of that make a conquest, and not Peace: yet having Fortification, which he had begun at his the Conquest as it were in his hand, he would last being there. The Carthaginians had not deny to grant them the Peace which neither forces, nor courage, to withfrand they defired; for thereby should all Natihim: but their hearts fo failed them, ons understand, that the people of Rome did

Kingdome, it was not more than he deferv- These being admitted into the presence of ed: neither were the Romans then in case, Scipio, did not only prostrate themselves to make a conquest of Numidia for them on the ground; but killed the * seet of him, *Except.

friend, & passable with al among the Numidi-themselves to have unjustly broken the ans as being (for the Mafefyli were a Numidi- Peace between them and Rome; and to have an Tribe)a great Prince of the same Nation. deserved whatsoever punishment it should Yet this liberality of the Romans, was noised please the Romans to inflict upon them. Yet abroad as very glorious : and the Romans they humbly belought Scipio and the rest, themselves, in a politick fort of gravity, took that in common regard of those misfortunes highly upon them; as if even their faluting whereto all men are subject, they would him by the name of King, had been a matter shew mercy unto the City of Carthage, and of great confequence. He thrived indeed let it remain, as a monument of their clewell after it: & by their maintenance waxed mency; which, by the folly of her Citizens, mighty in times following, increaching upon had now twice deserved to be overthrown. his neighbours on all sides; but most of all Herewithal they did not forget, to lay the upon the State of Carthage, whereat they were blame upon Hannibal: who without their little displeased. Hence it grew that Vermina appointment had begun the War; and was the fon of Syphax (of whom we shall shortly maintained in his doings by a Faction, withspeak more) which held some pieces of his out the good liking of the whole City. By

It was not unknown to Scipio, or to his affiftants, in what poor case the City of Rome that no way depended upon them, the falu- then was; and how unable to defray the tation by *that name, though it were not ac- charges of continuing the war. Neither (m. tation by*that name, though it were not accompanied with any other favour or profit were the Carthaginians, notwith Itanding the lack of 6 many. Armies in fuch ill cafe as the loss of fo many Armies, in fuch ill case, as the Romans themselves had very lately been. For they had money enough, wherewith to wage more men: they had a City far stronger than Rome; and they had the Sea free. But they wanted the Roman resolution: and "He Carthaginians were extreamly dif-therefore distrusted the wals of Carthage; mayed, when they heard of the great though Otica, a weaker City, had all this calamity, that was befaln their good friend while held out against scipio, and could not syphax, and understood that Masanissa yet be forced by him and his Army, though that they fent forth unto them thirty Em-balladours, Princes of the city, which were war, and inconcluding it. The Conditions prisoners that they had taken, together with thage, by terror of their great Names and all Renegadoes and fugitive flaves: That they Armies , upon more easie conditions, an nenegative and together haves, that they wherefore they made an idle discourse of should withdraw their Armies out of Italy Wherefore they made an idle discourse of mound without with the found not meddle in the League, that was concluded between and Ganle: That they should not meddle in and Game: I had they mound not medically them and Ludatine Catalus, at the end Spain, nor yet in any Island between Haly them spam, nor yet in any mand deliver up all of the former war. This League they faid, and Africk: That they should deliver up all of the former war. and Apriles: That they means delivered; and that all things well confidered, did ftill remain their ships of war, save twenty; and that they should pay a great summ of mony, with in force: neither had there since been any certain hundred thouland buffiels of wheat war at all, between the people of Rome certain numered thousand outside of these Articles, and the Carthaginians. For it was only Hanand parity. 10 connect of their Articles, nibal, that without any leave from carhad approved them, he granted a Truce; thage, had of his own head belieged and

Gggggg

The fifth Book of the first Part

Roman Senate. had been already at an end. syphax was a their Melage was none other, than to delittle before fent with Lelius unto Rome: fire, that the League before spokenos, made where the fame of these victories filled men in the time of Catulus, might hereafter sand with joy, and gave hope, that the long en- in force 5 as indeed it hitherto did, and dured miferies would be shortly at an end. ought to do. The Senators had cause to Wherefore all the Temples were fet open, wonder at this tale, hearing the Embassaand an holy day appointed for thankfgiving and supplication to their gods. Lelius was accompanied with Emballadors from King them a great many questions, concerning Masanissa: who gratulating the happy suct that peace made by Lustains, and other cess of the Romans in their African war, and passages following between the two Cities. giving thanks unto the Senate for the be- But they excused themselves, by their age: nefits done by Scipio unto their Mafter, made (for they were all young men) and faid, request for the Numidians, such as were That those things were beyond their knownow his Subjects and prisoners in Rome, that ledge and remembrance. Forthwith it aprendring them to liberty, should do an act they fought no other than to gain time, they might be bestowed upon him, who by very plaufible, that would make him graci- until they might repair the war. Wherefore ous among his people in the beginning of they were fent home in company of Lalius, his reign. The Roman Senate were not be- without any conclusion at all of peace, and in hind with Masanisa in complement: but effect, without answer. This notwithstandshewing themselvs to be highly pleased with ing, we find in Polybius, That the Senate reall that Scipio had done, and should do for ceived advertisement from Scipio, of that him, they called him King again; released his which had passed between him and the Numidians that were captives; and fent him Carthaginians in this Treaty of peace: aptwo purple Cassocks, that had each of them proved the Conditions by him propounded, one gold button, with fuch other prefents, as and gave him licence thereupon, to proceed in time of their poverty might ferve to tefti- unto Conclusion. This may with good reafie their good will. Scarcely were these and son be believed, since it was not unknown Lalius gone from Rome, when the news that if the war continued, all these goodly came, that Embassadors from Carthage were hopes must rest upon the most uncertain arrived to defire peace. These Embassadors issue of one battel between Hannibal and were not admitted into the City, but were scipio: wherein if fortune should be averse lodged without : until Lalius being sent to them, their forces in Africk were no betfor, came back from Oftia, to be present when terthan quite lost. their demands were to be heard. Then was audience given them in the Temple of Bellotte the Carthaginian Embatiadours came back ma 5 that frood in the Subburbs. The errand from Rome, a Fleet out of sicil, wherein were of these Embassadors, was peace, but the two hundred ships of burden, and thirty meaning of them and of their City was on- Gallies, being bound for Africk, to victual ly to win time, and get respite for war; the Roman Camp, was over-taken by until Hannibal and Mago should come out foul weather at Sea, and hardly ecaping which he imposed upon them, were these; of Haly, either to chase the Romans out which he imposed upon them, were then, of Africk, or to obtain peace for Carthat they might fend Embafaadors unto the razed the Town of Saguntum: and after This done, Mesamissa was dismissed, and mission, to pass the Mpes, and trouble (as he went home into his Kingdome, as if the war had done) the quiet of Italy. This being fo

wrack, was dispersed, and driven aground stians; where he is in a manner besieged, and after an unusual manner of hummility, confes-

in divers parts of the Bay of Carthage, even | unable to stir : so that ye are like to find his in view, and under command of the City. help wanting in your greatest need. Or let it be There was at that time, as we find in Appian, Supposed that he were now in Africk, and ready distinct and may gather out of Polybius , a great to give us battel : yet should it well agree with dearth of victuals in Carthage, which caused your wisdome to doubt what might befal, rethe people to cry out upon their Magi- membring that he is a man, and not invinciftrates, that they should not let such a boo- cible. Now if it should happen that he were tyescape them, faying, that the danger of fa- overcome, what refuge have ye left unto your mine was greater and worse, than of break- Selves against hereafter? What gods will ve ing Truce. Whether it were so, that hunger either fivear by, to be believed, or call upon in urged them, or that they yielded to their your mifery? What words, and lamentable own greedy desires: the multitude in Car- gesture, will ye hencesorth use, to move compasting understood (as it seems) that all this sim? Surely ye have already wasted all your discourse of Peace in hand, was no better force of persimasion, and shall not again deceive than meer mockery, and therefore cared w, if ye refuse the grace, whereof at this prenot for observation of particular points, fent ye are capable. It is no marvel though when they meant deceit in the whole It was the Carthaginians were angry, when they the manner in Carthage, as likewise in Alex- heard themselves upbraided with the base andria, for all the rafcality, together with demeanour of their Embassadors. For it was women and boys, to be medling in uproars: not the general opinion of the City, that the the clamors of the boys being in fuch tumults | Truce was broken by themselves: though it no less violent than of the men. Wherefore had pleased Hanno, or such as were of his fait is no marvel, if little regard were had of ction, to gratifie the Romans with all manner reason, or of honour, in any such commotion. of submission; and to renounce not only A Fleet was fent out under Afdrubal, to ga- their hope of the future, but all justification ther up the differred Roman ships of burden of matters past. And indeed it seems, that the (for the Gallies, by force of Oars, recovered | Roman Embassadors were very much delighthe station whereto their camp adjoyned) ted, in the rehearfal of that point which and bring them into Carthage; which was was veilded unto them, as knowing that done. Scipio was hereat much offended not | thereon depended the justice of the quaronly for the loss; and for that the Town rel. But the Carthaginians took this in foill was thereby relieved: but for that by this part, that hardly they could refrain from breach of Truce, he forefaw the intention of | doing violence unto the men, who had used the Carthaginians to renew the war, and put unto them such insolent speeches. Yet the him to more trouble. Wherefore he fent Em- | fury of the multitude was in some fort apbaffadors unto them, both to require fatis- appealed; either by Hanno, whom Appian, faction for the injury done; and to deterr (Iknow not why) calls Hanno the Great: or them from entertaining any other hope, by the very reverence due unto the place of than in the peace which they had so much those that had uttered such liberal words. defired. These gave the Carthaginians to un- So they were dismissed in friendly fort, alderstand, that Letters were come from Rome | though it were without answer to their unto Scipio, with allowance to conclude Proposition. There were also two gallies apthe Peace; upon those conditions which he pointed for their fafe convoy home; though had propounded. But (fay they) we hold it with little intent of good unto their persons. strange, That ye, who so lately have cast your selvs Asdrubal was then in the mid-way, as men to the ground before us, and kiffed our feet failed from Carthage towards Utica. He, whether only defirous to please the multi-Ing your selves to have perfidiously broken the tude, of whose disposition he was inform-League that was between us, and thereby to ed, or whether directed by publick order have deserved such punishment as is due unto to cut off these Embassadours in their way Rebels; should so soon forget what ye then ut- homeward, lay waiting for them behind a tered, and run headlong again into the same Cape, that was a little beyond the mouth of crimes for which ye acknowledged your felves the river Bagradas. Their Convoy having worthy to be destroyed, having only recourse brought them on the way, as far as to the unto our mercy. We are not ignorant, that it mouth of Bagradas, wished them a good voyis the confidence which ye repose in Hannibal, age; and so took leave of them, as if they that thus emboldens you. Tet were it not amis, had been then in safety, fince the Roman that ye should consider, how long he hath been Camp was even in fight. The Embassadors Pent up in a corner of Italy, among the Bru- took this in ill part; not as fearing any dan-

Gggggg 2

dants did so abruptly leave them. But no soo- what: but their diligence was in a manner ner had they doubled the Cape, than Afdru fruitles. In some skirmishes with Hannibal, bel fell upon them, in fuch manner, as they they had the better; in some the work: might well diferen his purpole: which was and a few poor Towns they got from him, to have fremmed them. They rowed hard as it were by fealth; his care being more therefore : and being in a Quinquereme, to preserve his Army, than to keep those that had more banks of Oars, than had any places that were weak. Gallie of Afdrubal, they flipt away, and made him over-shoot himself. Yet he gave them chase, and had well-near surprised enemy was become not the chief part of them. But they discovered some Roman Compainies on the shoar over against them, and therefore adventured to run their Vessel aground: whereby they faved their own lives, though a great part of their company were flain, or hurt. This practice of the Carthaginians was inexcusable: and for the same cause perhaps were the Citizens heartned in such a dishonourable attempt, by those that were defirous to continue the war; that thereby they might be driven to study nothing elfe, than how to get the victory, as in his behalf, that if he could have entred having none other hope remaining. Yet their Country ftrong, it might have proved likely it is, that the same fear, which had no less needful for scipio to return home out caused them to make such earnest suit for of Africk, than shortly it was for Hamnibal peace, would also have caused them to be to make speed unto the defence of Carthage. better advised, than thus to abandon all hope | These dangers caused the Romans to imploy of Treaty 5 had they not been given to un one of their Confuls or Pro-confuls, with an derstand, that Hunnibal was already landed Army, among the Hetrurians; another in Africk, in whom they reposed no small among the Gaules; and a third among the confidence, but verily perswaded themselvs, | Ligurians: for a fmuch as it was uncertain, that he would change their fortune, and teach the Romans to hold themselves con- Being thus busied, it is no wonder though tented with more easie conditions, than they forbore to overcharge Hannibal with were those that scipio, in the pride of his any great power. fortune, had of late propounded.

994

ø. XX.

were diversity affected by Hannibals departure.

Ver fince the loss of that battel at Metry of the Erutians, waiting for another to have shaken the Enemies to pieces. The Supply from Carthage. The Roman Con- Legions at the same time gave a loud shout: fuls that succeded unto Claudius and Livi- and strained themselves hard, as if at that us, by whom Afdrubal was overcome and brunt the victory should have been carried flain, were contented to be quiet all their before them. But Mago opposed his Eleyear. Neither did Licinius the Colleague phants to the Horfe: the fervice of those of Scipio, ought worthy of remembrance beafts being fitter for such use, than against against Hannibal, being hindred by the Pe-the squadrons of Foot. The sigure sent and filence that was in his Army. Sempronius braying of these Elephants, did so affright the Conful, who followed Lictinis; and the Horfe, that they started aside, and were ger toward, but thinking themselves too | Cn. Servilius Capio, who followed Sempromuch neglected, forafmuch as their atten- nins, were earneftly bent to have done forme-

The Romans had at this time so many great pieces of work in hand, that their chief their care. Their thoughts were mainly bent upon Africk, wherein they were at no small charges to maintain the Army, which (as was hoped)should bring the War to a short and happy conclusion. They stood nevertheless in much fear of Mago, the brother of Hannibal: who took exceeding pains among the Ligurians and Gaules to raise an Army, wherewith to kindle anew the War in Italy, that began to wax cold. Mago folicited also the Hetrurians, and found them fo ready to stir opon which fide Mago would break out:

As for Mago, when things were in some readiness for his setting forwards, he met in the Country of the Insubrians, which is about Milan, with M. Cornelius the Roman Procon-In what fort Hannibal spent the time after ful, and P. Quintilius Varrus one of the Prathe Battel of Metaurus : The doings of tors. With these he fought a battel, where-Mago in Italy. Hannibal and Mago in though his vertue shewed it self worthy called out of Italy. How the Romans of his Father and Brethren: yet his fortune was Carthaginian. The fight continued a long while doubtful; in such fort that the Roman Commanders began to distrust the issue. Wherefore Quintilius the Prætor takraurus. Hannibal remained in the Couning unto him all the Roman Horfe, thought

Numidians got advantage upon them: whose way homewards. manner of fight was more available against | those that were loose, than against the the like command from Carthage, to return troops that were close and thick. Then fell into Africk. He heard it with great impatithe Elephants upon the Legions: which en- ence; gnashing his teeth, and groaning, and tertained them after the accustomed man- hardly keeping in the tears, that were ready ner, with a shour of darrs, and killed four to burst out, whilest the Embassadours were of them; caufing all the rest to give back. delivering their errand. When their message This notwithstanding the same Legions were | was done : He told them, That this was net so vehemently pressed by the Enemy; that plain dealing. Fer, said He, They that now diheld their ground. The Proconful there- closely and crookedly they went to work, by thould most require. Against these, Mago Shall not need to brag, that he hath drawn me provided every one for himfelf: So the Rocost: as purchasing the death of about five thousand enemies, with the loss of two thoufand and three hundred of the Prætors Army, b fides those that dyed of the Proconfuls Legions; also besides divers Colonels, feem that the Enemies did not fall to rout, his time. before they had recovered some ground that might affure them from pursuit. However it were, this victory would have much im-feattered over the field; their Riders be- ment, and imbarqued fhortly his Army; ing unable to manage them. Hereby the but dyed of his wound about Sardinia, in the

About the same time Hannibal received more for shame of running away, than by rectly bid me come home, have long ago done any great force to make refistance, they their best to hale me out of Italy; though more fore brought up those forces, which he had fopping the supply that should have enabled me kept unto the last, to succour where need to manage the War here. Scipio therefore imployed some of his Gauls, whom he had home by the heels : it is Hanno that hath in readiness for the like occasion. But the wrought this noble feat; and overwhelmed the Gauls discharged their parts very ill. They house of the Barchines, for lack of other means were foon beaten off, and recoiled fo hasti- | to do it, with the ruine of Carthage. He had ly, that they brought fear upon all the before prepared a Fleet in readiness, doubtrest. When Mago saw that his men began | ing that which after came to pass : wherein to shrink, He put himself in the head of his he imbarqued, besides his own men, as ma-Army; and held them so well to it, that ny of the Italians as were content to be parkeeping their order, they made a fair Re- takers of his fortune. Many there were that trait, with their faces toward the Enemy. shrunk back from him, and refused to do But at length he received a grievous wound | service in this expedition: of whom, such as in his thigh; whereof shortly after he he could take, he slew; not sparing those that dyed. He was taken up, and carryed out fled into the Temple of Juno Lacinia, which of danger by fome of his own men: the had been held an inviolable Sanctuary unto rest of them, after little further resistance, that day. He was indeed then wholly transported with rage; and departed out of Italy mans obtained victory, not without great no less passionate, than men are wont to be, when they leave their own Countreys to go into exile. He looked back unto the shoar : accusing both gods and men; and cursing his own dulness, in that he had not led his Army from Canna, hot and bloodyed as it was, Captains, and Gentlemen of mark that fell directly unto the walls of Rome. With such in this hot piece of service. Neither were vexation of spirit He quitted the possession there any prisoners taken; whereby it may of Italy; wherein he had lived almost half

If it could have been foretold unto the Romans; in the first beginning of this War, with what exceeding joy in times following ported for the affurance of Italy, if the they should entertain the news of Hannibal State of Carthage could longer have permit- his departure out of Italy: they would (I ted these valiant sons of Amilear to abide think) less earnestly have pressed the Cartherein. But Mago with-drawing himself thaginians to send him over thither. When (by case journeys, because of his wound) sure advertisement was brought unto the into Liguria, found there Embaffadours from City, that Hannibal was gone with all his Ar-Carthage attending him: who gave him to my: an Holy-day was appointed for thankfunderstand the pleasure of their City, which giving unto their gods; and extraordinary was, That both he and Hannibal should pre great sacrifices publickly made, for joy fently repair home with all their forces; of fuch happy tydings. Yet old 2. Fabius not fraying any longer to think upon the was of opinion, That the danger did still reconquest of Italy, since Carthage it self was main the same, though the place were changready to be lost. He obeyed this Command- ed: for that Hannibal at his coming into

CHAP. HII.

of work, than he had been troubled with at only of good Souldiers, but of brave Capany time before; and would do greater matters in his own Country, than ever he was ple of Rome, faying, That Scipio was like to able to perform abroad in a land of firang- meet in battel with many that had flain Roers. The remove of the War from their own man Practors, yea, and Confuls with their doors, and the conceit of that victory for own hands: with many that had been first which they hoped; was enough to make in getting overthe Trenches of feveral Rothem prefume further, than at other times man Camps, or in winning the tops of walls they would have done. When therefore the at the fiege of towns; briefly, that he fhould Sagunt ine Embassadors brought unto them a now be opposed by an Army, as good as ever great mass of Gold and Silver, together with had served in war, and following the dreadsome Agents of the Carthaginians taken by ful name of Hannibal. them in Spain : only the Carthaginian prifoners were accepted, the treasure was rendred back unto the Eaguntines that had furprifed ir. Upon like confidence of the future, a | Hannibal in Africk prepares to fight with Scilittle before this, order was taken for the repayment of those moneys that had been borrowed in time of more necessity from private men. Hence also proceeded the severe chastifement laid upon those 12. Colonies, that for want either of means, or of good will, had refused to give aid to the Romans. They were commanded, and inforced to give double Carthage, Eastward from the Headland of the number of Foot to that which they had Mercury, and formewhat more than one debeen wont to let out for the Wars, with a gree to the South. He was ill provided of proportion of Horse answerable to the very Horse; which it was not casse for him to most of their ability. So consident were the transport out of Haly. Therefore it behoved Romans grown (though their wealth were not as yet sutable to the greatness of their the enemy; that he might furnish himself of fpirit)upon the good fuccels of the battel at these and the like needful helps against the Metaurus, and the hopes which they reposed day of battel. From Leptis he passed on to in Scipio. All this notwithstanding, when Adrumetum, and so along through the Inthey considered more nearly of that which land Country gathering friends unto him by might happen: and were informed that the the way. Tycheus a Numidian Prince, and terrible Army, whereof Italy had been few familiar friend of syphax, was faid to have dayes fince discharged, was landed safe in A- in those dayes the best Horses of service, frick : they began to revolve a thousand that were to be found in Africk. Him therefearful matters in their heads, and to stand in fore did Hannibal allure unto his party: doubt, left 2. Fabius (who died about the making him understand, that if the Romans fame time) would be found a true Prophet. got the victory, it should be easie for Mass-For, bethinking themselves of that which mfa, by their countenance and help to opmight comfort them in their hopes: they press both him, and as many other of the found in the victories against syphax and Af | neighbour Princes, as hindred his prospect. drubal no specialty of such great worth, as This argument, and the same of him that might promise the like success against ano- used it, pevailed with Tycheus, who shortly ther manner of General, followed by other after brought unto the Carthaginian two manner of men, than were either of those thousand Horse. Appian further adds. That two. The Numiclian King had been wont to Mezetullus, (the same who had made himbring into the field a raical multitude of half lelf Protector over Majaniffa his Coulins; skullions, that were good for nothing; be- and was Head of a Family, and adverse to ing himsef a fit Captain for such Souldiers. the Numidian Kings of that race) brought Likewisc Afarubal the son of Gesco was a Com- to Hannibal another thousand Horse; as mander well thought of by the Carthaginian likewife, that Vermina the Son of Syphax, Senate, but otherwise, one, that in the field holding a great part of his Fathers Kingdom, was only good at faving himself by a swift began at the same time to assail the places

Africk, would find P. Scipio other manner in Roman blood, and wearing the spoils not

ø. XXI.

pio; treats with him about peace in vain: loseth a battel at Nedagra, and persivades the Carthaginians to sue for peace. Of the peace granted from Rome to Carthage.

Annibal disembarqued his Army at Leptis, almost an hundred miles from retrait. But now there came an Army of men, that yielded obedience to Mafaniffa. This hardened from their childhood with incredible patience, fleshed many hundred times than 16. thousand men (for he lost more was too late.

The Carthaginians were at this time in fuch hard estate, or (at least) so impatient of the frate wherein they were; that they could not attend the leifure of those prepartions, which would have made the victory affured. When they confidered the worth of Hannibal, and the greatness of his Acts: it offended them to think, that they had been fo base as to make humble suit unto the Romans for peace; whilest they had such a brave Champion alive, to maintain their cause by War. But when as they bethought themselves of their own sufferings, which, for want of Roman magnanimity to endure them, appeared greater than indeed they were: then cryed they out earnestly that it was no time to linger, but presently to fight; that so they might see an end of these troubles, either good or bad; and to this purpole they fent their Mandates to Hannibal: requiring him without any further protrathere encamped.

Foot together, Masanissa had with him ; the Carthaginians were so earn's in preffing that were lent unto him by scipio, to do him Hannibal to fight. service in the establishing and inlarging of

had been at Rome, returned back under the standing this, admired the bravery and cou-

than so many) to succour Hannibal when it conduct of Lalius and Fulvius: who brought them fafe into the Roman Camp. There when they arrived and understood what had lately passed, especially how their Citizens had behaved themselves towards the Roman Embafladours : they made little doubt, how their own heads should answer for fuch notorious outrage. To confirm them in this opinion.

M. Babius one of the late Embaffadours that had been in Carthage, being left by Scipio to take charge of the Camp, laid hands upon them and detained them; fending word unto his General, who was gone abroad to make War in the Country, that he had them in his power, and that now the Carthaginians might be repaid in their own Coyn, for the injury by them lately done. Scipio was very glad to hear of this; and commanded Babius to use them with all posfible courtefie, and fend them fafe home. By thus doing, He brake the hearts of his enemies; and caused them to acknowledge ction, to do what he could do out of hand. themselves (which was a great victory) far Hannibal made answer, That they were his less honourable than the Romans. This notgood Lords, and had power to dispose of withstanding, he made more cruel War uphim and his Army; but fince he was General on them than before: taking their Towns of their forces, He thought it reasonable by force; and putting them to sack, without that they should suffer him to do as a Gene- hearkning to any Composition. It was the ral ought to do; and to choose his own manner of the Romans, as often as they took times. Nevertheless, to give them satisfacti- a Town by assault, to put all that came in on, He made great marches to Zama; and their way to the fword, whatfoever they were, without regard. This they did, to make The breach of Truce made by the Cartha- | themselves terrible: and the better to work ginians: The violence done to his Embaf- fuch impression in the minds of those, with fadours: and the news of Hannibal his being whom they had to do; they used oftentimes landed in Africk, made scipio to understand to kill the very Dogs and other Beasts, that the resolution of the Carthaginians, which ran athwart them in the streets : hewing Except. ? was, not to yield unto any conditions un- their bodies afunder: as men delighted in profitable for themselves, as long as they sheet of blood. This being their practice were able to make refistance. Wherefore he at other times; it is likely that now they fent unto Mafanissa: and informed him of omitted no piece of cruelty; when they all that was fallen out; praying him to come meant to give proof of their vehement inaway with speed, and lay all other business dignation, and revengful minds, for the inapart. Ten Roman Companies, of Horse and juries received. Hence it partly grew, that

Hannibal being incamped at Zama, fent his Kingdom. But he well understood, that forth his Scouts and Spies, to discover where those and many more besides all his own the Romans lay, what they were doing, and forces, would but little avail him; if Han- as much as might be, of their demeanour. nibal should drive the Komans out of Africk. Some of these were taken, and brought un-Wherefore taking fuch order as he could to Scipio: who instead of truffing them upon the sudden, for the safety of his own up, gave them free leave to view his Camp at pleasure, appointing one to conduct them up and down, and shew them whatsoever they defired. This done, He gave Soon after the beginning of these new them leave to depart; and sent them away troubles, the Carthaginian Embassadours that safe unto their General. Hannibal under-

den he grew to desirous to have an Enter- peradventure suffice to teach thee moderation, view, and personal conference; and signi- For I am that same Hannibal, who after my fied so much unto him by a messenger sent vistory at Canna, won the greatest part of of purpose. Of this motion the Roman liked Italy; and devised with my felf, what i well : and returned answer, that He would should do with your City of Rome, which r meet him floortly in a place convenient. The boped verily to have taken. Once I brought next day Mafaniffa came with his Army : mine army to your walls, as thou haft fince whom scipio taking with him, removed un- brought thine to ours of Carthage: but now to a Town called Nedagara ; near unto fee the change! I stand here intreating thee which he face down, in a place otherwife to grant us peace. This may ferve as a docommodious, & close by a water that might cument of Fortunes instability. I have fought opportunely serve his Camp. Thence he sent with thy father Scipio; He was the first of the word unto the Carthaginian, That the time Roman Generals that ever met me in the and place did fitly serve, if he had ought field. I did then little think, that the time to fay to him. Hannibal thereupon removed | would come, that I should have such business, from Zama, and came within four miles of as now at the present, with his son. But this is the enemy; where he incamped well to his even one of Fortunes pageants, whereof the own good liking in all things elfe; except- bath many. And thou mailt have experience of ing that his men were driven to take much the like in thy felf, who knows how soon? Think pains in fetching their water fomewhat uponM. Atilius: If he would have hearkned unto far ofi. Then was order taken for their fuch perswasions, as I now use to thee, he might meeting: and the two Generals each of have returned home to Rome an happy man, them with a troop of Horse, rode forth of and so mailt thou do now, if any reasonable their Camps, till they came unto a piece of offer will give thee satisfaction. How sail ground ; which was before well learched thou? Canft thou be contented, that all Spain, for fear of ambush. There they will their Sicil, Sardinia, and what sever Islands else followers to stand off: and themselves with are scituate between Italy and Africk be each of them one Interpreter, encountred abandoned by the Carthaginians for ever, each other in the mid-way between their and left unto the Romans, to bear dominion Companies. They remained a while filent, therein? Thou shalt have glory enough by effeviewing one the other with mutual admi- ding thus much: and the Romans may well ration. Then began the Carthaginian, sa- be glad of such a bargain. As for us, our own luting the Roman, to deliver his mind to this quiet shall henceforth give us contentment. effect: That it had been better both for And the same contentment of ours, shall make Carthage, and Rome, if they could have li- us faithfully observe the peace with you. But if mited and contained their ambition within thou thinkest all too little, I must desire thee the shores of Africk and of Italy; for that to ponder well how great an hazzard thou the Countreys of Sicil and Spain, about must undergo for obtainining a very little which their fathers and themselves had more, than that which thou mailt have withftriven, were no sufficient recompence for so out contention. It is now in thine own power many Fleets as had been loft, and of so much to lay hold upon good fortune, if it please thee: blood as had been shed, in making those stay but until to morrow night, and thou maist costly purchases. But since things past could take such fortune as it please the gods. The ishe not be recalled: He faid, That it was meet of battel is uncertain, and many times berather fix his mind upon uncertain hopes, begun. than upon a contemplation of that mutability, whereto all humane affairs are fub- no ambitious defire of ruling in siell and rage of his enemy: with whom on the fud-ject. Tet (faid he) mine own example may for them to confider, unto what extream guileth expectation. Men and freet we shall dangers their own Cities had been exposed, each of us bring into the field; but of the viby the greedy defire of extending their Em- Ctory neither of us hath affurance. Let us therepires abroad; and that it was even time for fore without more ado make peace. And do not them now at length to make an end of their tell me that some false hearted citizens of obstinate contention, and pray the gods to ours dealt fraudently of late in the like treaty: endue them with greater wisdom hereaster. It is I Hannibal that now desire peace with And to fuch peaceable disposition, He affirm- thee, which I would never do, if I thought it ed that his own years, and long tryal of not expedient for my country. And thinking Fortune, both good and evil, had made it expedient, I will alwayes maintain it, like him inclinable. But much he feared, that as I have maintained, unto my power, as long Scipio, by want of the like experience, might as the gods did not enery me, the war by me

Hereunto Scipio made answer, That it was

enter into this or the former War: but that ples, or small Battalions, with a reasonable the defence of the Mamertines, and after distance between them: Not far behind these wards of the Saguntines, their confederates, followed the Principes, likewise divided: and had caused them to put on those arms; which so after them the Triarii. But herein Scipio the gods by the final iffue of the Warshad altered a little the ordinary custome of the approved, and would approve to be most Romans: He placed not the Maniples of his just. As for the mutability of Fortune, he Principes opposite unto the void spaces faid, that he was not thereof ignorant; and between the Haftati, that fo the Haftati, as that without any note of infolence or over- was usual, might fall back between the weening, he might well refuse the conditi- Principes; but he placed them directly one ons offered. For was it not plain that all behind another, as it were, in File. This he these Countreys, with which the Carthaginians did, because of the Elephants, whereof Hannow so willingly departed, were already won nibal had many. For of those beasts the from the Romanse If, faid he, these conditions danger was less whilest there was open way had been propounded whilest as yet ye detained to let them through. Therefore he took fome part of Italy, they might peradventure fuch order, that when they had passed not have been rejected. But as the case now through the spaces between the first Battastands, I see no reason why I should remit unto lions, they should not come upon the Prinyou any one piece of these my former demands, cipes in Front. Unto his Velites, or those to which the Carthaginians have pielded al- of the light armature that were to begin ready, and thought me to be gracious in dea- the fight he gave direction, that when they juries which they have done me fince have made by the Enemies, or (which was most to be them unworthy of obtaining peace upon so feared) by the Elephants, they should run friendly terms. But I cannot blame thee, Han- back through those lanes that were between nibal, though thou would ft be glad to make thy the Maniples; and that those which were Citizens understand, from how much of their | swiftest, or otherwise best able, should conburden they are by thy means eased. Only thou tinue on their flight, untill they were got must think, that in like sort it concerns me in fleet, and their violating our Embaffadours? nied you peace.

his men after the Roman manner: placing which confider themselves to be, and in Spain which had moved the Romans to first the Hastati , divided into their Maniling fo moderately. Rather I fay, that the in- | found themselves to be overcharged, either behind all their own Army; thereby leavhonour not to let them be gainers or favers by ing room enough unto those that were the wrongs which they have done of late. Thou wounded, or cast behind, to save themselves knowest well, that besides those offers which on the void ground, that was betwixt the thou here hast made, they were well contented first and second, or the second and third to restore unto us ransome-free, all prisoners battels, without cloying up the way bethat they have of ours, to pay us five thousand tween the Maniples, which he defired to talents, to deliver up their Gallies, and to de- keep open. His Italian horse he placed in liver hoftages for affurance of fair dealing, the left wing, under C. Lelius. In the right And must they now be discharged of all this wing was Masanissa with his Numidians. He by their breach of truce, their spoiling of our himself riding up and down, exhorted his men to do valiantly; using words, not ma-Not fo, But if they can be contented, besides all ny, but forcible. He bade them remember this, to make such amends as I shall require, for what they had atchieved, fince their comthese injuries newly done; then will I take ad- ing into Africk. He told them, that if this vice with my counsel what answer to give day were theirs, the War was at an end: and you; otherwise you may even prepare for war, that their victory in this War, should make and blame your own selves for that I have de- them Lords of all the World, for that afterwards, none would be found able to refift Hereupon they brake off: and returned them. On the contrary, if they were beaten, each to his own Camp, with no other news he asked them whither they would flie. than war; bidding their Souldiers prepare They were far from home, yea, and far for a battel, wherein should be decided the from their own standing Camp: neither quarrel betwen Rome and Carthage. The was there any place in Africk, that would next morning at break of day they issued give them shelter: if they fell into the Carinto the field: a notable march, and fuch as thaginians hands, they knew what to expect. hath very feldom been found; whether we And therefore there was none other way, regard the Generals, their Armies, the two but death or victory: unless they would live Cities that contended, or the great impor- like wretched flaves under most merciless tance of the battel at hand. Scipio ordered enemies. In such necessity he said, that they have never been known to fail of getting That it was one P. Scipio, even the father of

Hhhhhh

980

Hannibal on the other fide placed his Elephants, that were more than fourfcore in Legions, which they yonder beheld, were Front of his Battel. Next behind these he made his Vant-guardall of Mercenaries, Ligurians, Gaules, Balcares and Moors. Then dastardly slight out of fundry battels, could followed his Battel; which was of Carthaginians and Africans, more interessed in the quarrel than were those Mercenaries; though not fo good fouldiers: but to help (if it might be)their want of courage, they had with them four thousand Macedonians, lately fent from King Philip. More than the space of a furlong, behind these came his Rereward, confisting of those brave Souldiers which had ferved him in his Italian wars; and were the only men, in whom he reposed | vincible. any confidence. Opposite to Lalius, in his own right wing he bestowed the Carthaginian Horse. Tychaus and the Numidians he gether, the Numidian horsemen on both sides placed in his left wing against Majaniffa. He began to skirmith The Trumpets, and other was indeed far too weak for the Enemy in instruments of war, sounded to battel: and Horse both in number and in goodness. For Hannibal commanded his Elephants to break Tychicus and Mezetullus had no more than upon the Romans. Or these Elephants (as three thousand and those not so well exer- they were alwayes an uncertain kind of cifed, as were the four thouland of Masanif | help) those that stood near unto the point Ja. The Carthaginians also were no more, nor of the left wing, turned back for fear: and none other, than fuch as could be levied in ran upon their own Numidian horse; which the haste of a few days; and the remainder they affrighted and disordered. Masanifa of those, that had of late been often van- espying this gave charge upon the same Nuquished, and accustomed to flye. But it was midians; and not suffering them to rally no time for Hannibal, neither had he perhaps authority, to make these his companions | The rest of those beasts made a great spoil alight and serve on foot, setting better men of the Roman Velites, whom they followed in their faddles. All that he could have done, into the spaces between the Maniples: but was to ftay a little longer, and expect more without any harm to the Battalions themhelp. Had I ermina the fon of syphax come felves; which gave them open way, accordthither, as he did in a few days after, with ingly as scipio had well provided Divers of fixteen thouland and upwards, the most of them receiving many wounds, and growing them Horfe, the advantage of number might therewith furious, could no longer be gories bountiful rewards 5 threatning the Carthaginians with inevitable servitude if they huge Army which they had flaughtered rous violence of these untrained Barbarians.

take resolution answerable therereunto, at Canne. He willed them to remember, this man, whom they had first of all compelled to run away. He told them, that thefe for the most part of them, the very worst of the Roman Souldiers ; even fuch, as for their no longer be trufted to bear Arms in their own Countrey. As for the rest, they were young men, the fons of Cowards, and bred up in the continual fear of those weapons, by which their fathers were daily flain or chafed. Wherefore he intreated these his old companions, upon whose vertue he meant wholly to repose himself, that they would this day strive to make good their honour, and to purchase the same of men in-

Such exhortations used the two Generals before the fight. When they drew near tothemselvs, drave them quite out of the field. have ferved well to supply all other defect. verned, but ran back upon the right point Yet fince the Lords of Carthage would brook of their own battel, and beyond that into no delay, Hannibal must be fain to comfort the open field. Herewithal they disordered himself with the hope that he reposed in the Carthaginian Horse, which were in that his old Halian fouldiers, whose vertue had wing:against whom they gave to Lalius the wrought greater wonders, when it was more fame advantage that Mafaniffa had against ftrongly opposed. He encouraged therefore the Numidian; which he used in like fort. In his men, with words agreeable to their feve the mean while, the battels of foot advancral conditions:promiting unto the Mercena-ed, and drew near together with a flow and frately pace, till they were almost within a weapons cast: at what time they gave a shout lost that day: but especially animating his and ran one at the other. The Mercenaries old fellow fouldiers, by the many victories for a time feemed both in audacity, and in which they had obtained against far greater | quickness to have the better of the Romans; numbers. He bad them to look upon wounding many, and doing more harm, the Enemies and make an estimate, whether than they took. But the Roman discipline asthey were any thing like formany, as that ter a while prevailed against the boisteWhereunto it helped not a little, that the when they had overcome the bad way, all in flain, through their own indifcretion, by over-bearing them by meer violence, comtheir own Mercenaries. The Roman Hastati | pelled them to fall to Rout, in like fort, fighting with desperate men in a way. In fuch case, if he should fight with resist. that warlike Army, which he faw before battel of the Principes, following somewhat one Front with the Hastati, and made of near after the Haltati, encouraged their fel- them his two Cornets. This done, he advanlows&shewed themselvs ready, if need were, | ced towards Hannibal: who entertained to relieve them. Contrariwife, the Merce- him after another manner, than ever he had paries, received no manner of help or com- been received in his life before. All the days fort, from those that should have seconded work till now, seemed to have been a matthem. For the new-levied carthagians and ter of pastime, in regard of the sharp Con-Africans, when they saw their hired souldi- flict, that was maintained between these noers give back, did also themselves retire. This table Souldiers. The Romans were encoucauled the Ligurians, Gaules, and the rest, raged by their having prevailed all the day to think themselves betrayed: whereupon | before: they were also far the more in numthey enclined unto flight. The Carthaginian | ber. But these old Souldiers of Hannibal Battel was herewith more terrified than be- were fresh; (and perhaps the better men.) fore, so as it refused to give way unto the They fought with such obstinate resolution, Mercenaries for their fafe retreat; and yet | that no man gave back one foot; but rather withall forbore to make head against the chose to die on the ground whereon he Enemies, that purfued them. It was no time | flood. So that, after a long time it was unto ask them what they meant by this: Fear | certain which part had the worfe: unless it and Indignation caused those that were at | may feem, that the Romans were beginning once chased by the Romans, and betrayed, as to shrink; for a smuch as the return of Ma-* Except. they thought, by their own fellows, to turn familia and Lalius from pursuit of the Ene-Polyb List. their arms with an heedless fury against mies Horse, is said to have been most happy, both the one and the other. Thus were and in a needful time. These upon a sudden many of the Carthaginians beaten down and charged the Hannibalians in the Rear; and

In this battel there dyed of the Romans throng, had their hands so full of work, sifteen hundred and upwards: on the Carthat the Principes were fain to come up unto | thaginian fide, above twenty thousand; bethem, and help to over-bear this great | fides as many that were taken; of whom, somedley of enemies, that were together by pater Captain of the Macedonians was one. the ears among themselves. In this place | The fingular skill that Hannibal shewed in was made a great flaughter, both of the this his last fight, is highly commended by Mercenaries and of the Carthaginians: which | Polybins; and was acknowledged, as Livie hindering one another, could neither fight, | reports, by scipio himfelf. But the Enemies nor easily flye. Such of them as escaped, were too strong for him in Horse: and being ran towards Hannibal: who kept his ground, | enjoyned, as he was, by the State of Carthage, and would not stir one foot, to help or save to take battel with such disadvantage, he these Run-awayes. He caused his men to could work no marvels. He saved himself bend their Pikes at those of his own side, with a few horse; and stayed not in his that would have ruthed upon him: whom journey, till he came Astrumetum. Thence he he thereby compelled to turn afide beyond was fent for to Carthage; from which he his battel, and fave themselves in the open had been absent fix and thirty years. At his field. The ground over which, the Ro- coming into the Senate, He faid plainly, mans were now to march, ere they could That there was none other way left, than to meet with Hannibal, was covered with take such peace as could be gotten. Whereheaps of dead bodies and weapons; and so fore the carthaginians not knowing what flippery with blood, that scipio began to other course to take, resolved to send Emftand in great doubt, lest the orders of his bassadors again, and try the favour of Battalions should be dissolved in passing that | Scipio, whose Arms they could not now

Scipio having spoiled the Enemies Camp. him, remaining yet entire, and without returned back to Utica: where he found fear expecting him: He might be well affured P. Lentulus newly arrived, with fifty Galto receive a notable overthrow. He caused lies and an hundred Ships of burden. With therefore the Hastati to make a stand there this Fleet, and that which he had before, He where they were, opposite to the main bat- thought it best to make towards Carthage: tel of the Hannibalians. Then drawing up rather of purpose to terrifie the City, than his Principes and Triarii, he placed them, with any hope to take it. His Legions he committed unto Cn. Off avius; whom he wil- there. But a Dictator was chosen of purpose. ctory, fet fail from Vtica towards Carthage. He was encountred on the way by ten Em. turned back to Utica, and called back Octahind him, and twelve hundred taken prifo-Hannibal at Nadagara, they should have been far better conducted, and might well have changed the Fortune of the day; which the Carthaginian loft by default of Horse. But God had otherwise determined. It is not to be doubted, that this victory, though it were no great access unto the former; yet served well to daunt the Carthaginians, and imprint in them the greater fear of Scipio. When he came to Tunes, there met him thirty Emballadors from Carthage: whose behaviour, though it was more pittiful than it had been before, yet procured it less commiseration, by reason of their late false dealing, after they had in like fort humbled themselves. Nevertheless it was considered, what a long and laborious work it world prove, to befiege the mighty City of Carthage. And particularly, Scipio stood in great doubt, lest led to meet him there by land. Then fending to restrain the ambition of this Conful Lalius away to Rome with news of the vi- Servilius. After him followed Tiberius Claudius, who made fuit for the same Province of Africk: and was therein fo earnest, that bassadors from the City: who bearing up though neither the Senate, nor People, would with the Admiral Gally, began to the grant him his defire; yet he needs would be pittiful gefture of fuppliants. But they re- going, procuring only leave of the Senate, ceived none other answer, than that they that he being Consul might join with scipio, should meet him at Tunes, where he would were it with no more than equal authority. give them audience. So rowing along be- But ere he could have his Fleet, and all before the City, and viewing it more in bra- things in a readiness for the journy, wherein very, than with meaning to attempt it; he re- no man cared to further him, Winter came on, and he was only toft at Sea with foul vius thicher, with whom in person he set for- weather; first upon the Coast of Hetruria, wards to Tunes. As they were in their journy and afterwards by Sardinia; where his thither, they heard the news, that Vermina | Confulfhip expired, and so he returned the fon of syphax, was coming with an Army home a private man. Then came the joyof more horse than foot, to the succour of sul news to Rome, of the victory obtained those that were already vanquished. This against Hannibal, and that the war was now Vermina seems to have been both careless of even at an end. Yet was Lentulus the new getting intelligence how things paffed, and | Cenful fo paffionate, in defiring Africk for his very defective in all other duties requifite in Province, that he said he would suffer nothe Commander of an Army. Part of the thing to pass in the Senate, until he had first Roman foot, with all their power of Horse, his will, Much ado there was about this and was fent against him: which did not only after many contentions, both in the Senate, beat him, but so compass him in, that he and before the people, at last it was ordehardly cleaped himfelf with a few; leaving red, That if peace were granted, ir flould fifteen thousand of his followers dead be- be granted by Scipio; if the war continued, Scipio should have command therein by ners. If this good company had been with Land, and the Conful at Sea. The ambition of these men, caused scipio to give the more favourable answer unto the Carthaginian Embassadors. He willed them to consider what they had deferved and in regard thereof to think themselves well dealt withal; in that he was contented to leave unto them their liberty and their own Laws, without appointing any Governour over them, or Garrison to hold them in subjection; leaving also unto them their possessions in Africk, fuch as they were at the beginning of this war. As touching the rest he was at a point, that, before he either granted them peace or truce, they should make satisfaction for wrongs which they had done, whilst the late Treaty was in dependance. Hereunto if they would yield, then required, He, That immedithey should deliver up to the Romans all prisoners fugitives and renegado's, that they had of the honour of this war, if it were protracted, theirs: likewife all their Gallies, excepting ten: should be taken out of his hands, and given and all their Elephants. That they fould make to one of the Confuls. Cn. Servilius Capio, that no war at all thenceforth out of Africk, not Conful who had charge of the war against ther yet within Africk, without licence of Hannibal at such time as he departed out of the Romans : That the Countreys , Towns, Italy: was hold to pass over into the Isle of goods what sever, belonging any wife unto Sicil (as it were in chase of Hannibal by him Masanisia, or to any of his Ancestors, which terrified and driven away) with a purpose were in their possession, should be all by them thence to have proceeded into Africk, and reftored unto him: That they should find corn taken from Scipio the command of the Army for the Roman Army, and wages for their Auxiliaries, during the time of Truce, untill | company of Scipio his Embassadours, who

Hhhhhh 2

With these conditions the Embassadours returned home, and reported them unto the City. They were very unpleafing ; and vain Oratour, by the unquiet, yet unwarand what their errand was.

At this time Hanno, and they of his Facti- | with men and money. on, were become wife and honourable men, by the miseries whereinto Carthage was to open a way into Greece and the Eastern fallen, through their malicious counfels. Af- Countreys, helped well the Carthaginian drubal, surnamed the Kid, a venerable man, Embassadours in their solicitation of Peace. and a great friend of Hanno, was chief of They appeared a very reverend company, the Embailages which they fent to Rome for when they entred into the Senate: and Afobtaining peace. They went thither in drubal above the rest was much respected, as the Peace were fully concluded; that they related unto the Senate and People these (bould pay ten thousand Talents of Silver, in joyful news. About the same time arrived the term of fifty years, by two hundred Ta- at Rome Embassadours from Philip King of lents a year, and that for observance of Con- Macedon: who, together with the Carthaditions, they should give an hundred hostages: ginians, were fain to wait a while for audifuch as Scipio would choose, being none of ence, till the election of new Consuls, then in them under fourteen years of age, nor above hand was finished; and order taken, for the Provinces of them, and the new Prætors: Then were the Macedonian Embassadours called into the Senate: who first answering unto some points, wherein the Romans had therefore one Gesco stood up to speak against lately signified unto their King, that they them: and exhorted the people, who gave found themselves grieved; returned the good attention, that they should not conde- blame upon those Greeks themselves, that feend unto fuch intolerable demands. But had made their complaint at Rome. Then ac-Hannibal perceiving this, and noting withal cufed they Marcus Aurelius: who being one what favourable audience was given to this of the three Embassadours, that had lately been fent from Rome unto King Philip, tarried like multitude, was bold to pull him down in Greece behind his fellows, and there levyfrom his standing, by plain force. Hereat ing men, made war upon the King, without all the people murmured, as if their com- any regard at all of the league, that was mon liberty were too much wronged, by between him and the Romans. Further they fuch insolence of this presumptuous Cap- defired of the Senate, That one Sopater, a tain. Which Hannibal perceiving, role up | Macedonian Gentleman, with other of their and spake unto them, saying; That they Countrymen, that had lately served Hanniought to pardon him, if he had done other. | bal for Pay; and being taken prisoners in wife than the customes of the City would Africk, were kept in bonds by scipio, might allow; forasmuch as he had been thence be released and delivered unto them. Unto absent ever fince he was a Boy of nine years all this M. Furius, whom Aurelius had fent old, untill he was now a man of five and to Rome for that purpole, made a sharp anforty. Having thus excused himself of the swer. He said, that the Greeks, which were disorder, he discoursed unto them concern- | confederate with Rome, enduring so many ining the Peace: and perswaded them to ac- juries at the hands of Philip, that M. Aurelius cept it, as wanting ability to defend them- was fain to fray behind, to help them as he felves, had the Demands of the Enemy been | might; which else were like to be brought yet more rigorous. Finally, upon good ad- under the Kings subjection. As for sopater, vice they resolved to yield unto the Con- he affirmed him to be one of the Kings ditions propounded by Scipio: to whom Counsel, and very inward with him: one they paid out of hand five and twenty thou- that served not for money, but carryed mofand pounds weight in Silver, in recompence | ney with him, and four thousand men, fent of damages, and injuries by them done to from the King to the aid of Hannibal. About his Fleet and Embassadours. Scipio granted these points, when the Macedonian Embasthem Truce for three moneths, in which | fadours could make unto the Senate no good time they might negotiate with the State of answer, they were willed to return, and tell Rome, about confirmation of the League. their Master, That war he fought, and war But herewithall he gave injunction, that he should find, if he proceeded as he had they should neither in the mean while send | begun For in two main points He had bro-Embassadours any whither else, nor yet dis- ken the League, that was between him and miss any Embassiadours to them sent, without the Romans: first, in that he had wronged first making him acquainted what they were, their Confederates; and secondly, in that he had aided their Enemies against them,

These quarrels with Philip, that promised

CHAP III

mans from necessity of sending Emballa- appointed by the Senate to joyn with scipio dours to Carthage, upon the like errand. He in commission. liberally granted, that the justice of the quarrel had been wholly on the Romans fide; was given, and accepted, without any confaying, that it was the fault of some violent troversie or disputation. The Prisoners, Fumen, through which the Peace was broken. gitives, and Renegado's, were delivered up Yet could he not altogether excuse the City, to Scipio: likewise the Gallies, and the Elethat had been too vehement, in the profe-phants. Scipio took more vengeance upon cution of bad counfel. But if Hanno, and the Renegado's than upon the Fugitives; himself might have had their wills, the Carthaginians, even at the best of their Fortune, the Latines, or other Halians. The Latines he should have granted the peace, which they beheaded: the Romans he crucified. About now defired. Herewithall he commended the the first payment of their money, the Carthamoderation of the Romans, as no finall ar-ginians were fomewhat troubled. For gument of their valour; by which alwayes though perhaps their common Treasury they had been victorious. To the fame ef- could have spared two hundred Talents for fect spake the rest of the Embassadours: all the present; yet since the pension was annuof them entreating to have the peace ratifi- al, and to continue fifty years: it was ed; though some with more lamentable thought meet to lay the burden upon the words than others, according to the diversi- Citizens. At the collection of the sumthere ty of their fille. They had patience enough was pitcous lamentation, as if now the Ro-

those that violate their Leagues.

984

Senate from proceeding unto conclusion of than your tears. For ye should have wept when peace; for that hereby he was like to lofe Je gave gave up your ships and Elephants, and the honour, which he purposed to get by when ye bound your own hands from the use of making war in Africk. But the matter was arms, without the good leave of the Romans propounded unto the people, in whom reft- first obtained. This miserable condition keeps us ed the Soveraign Command of Kome; and under, and holds us in affired fervitude. But by them referred wholly unto the pleasure of these matters ye had no feeling. Now, when of the Senate. So it was decreed, That Scipio, a little money is wrung out of your private especial friends; of whom they gave in wri- the remedy. ting almost two hundred names. Whereupon the Senate ordained, that two hundred ced Masamisa, and magnified him in presence of those Prisoners, which the Embassadours of the Army, with high commendations not would choose, should be sent over into undeservedly. To him also he configned Africk, and be freely restored to liberty by over those towns of King Syphax, which Scipio, when the peac was fully concluded. the Romans at that present held; wherein, So they took leave, and returned home, in to fay truth, he gave him but his due; and one, whose good offices had kept the Ro- company of the ten Delegates, that were

At their coming into Africk, the peace and upon those of the Romans, than upon to endure such reproof of Perjury, as they man yoke had begun to pinch them; so as themselves might have laid upon the Ro- many, even of the Senators, could not formans, if their diligence and fortune had bear weeping. Contrariwife, Hannibal could been fuch as the Romans was. Among the not refrain from laughter. For which, when rest, when one of the Senators demanded, he was checked by Asarubal Healus, and told, by what gods they would five ar to keep the That it worft of all befeemed him to laugh, peace hereafter: Afdrubal made answer; since he had been the cause why all others Even by the Same gods, that are so severe unto did weep; He answered, That laughter did not alwayes proceed from jey; but sometimes Lentulus the Conful, interpoling the au- from extreamity of indignation: Tet, faid He, thority of his office, would have hindred the My laughter is more scassinable, and less absurd, with ten Delegates, fint unto him from purfes, ye have thereof some sense. God grant Rome of purpole, should make a League with that the time come not hereafter, wherein ye the Carthaginians, upon such Conditions as | Shall acknowledge, that it was the very leaft feemed best : which were none other, than part of your misery for which ye have fled these the same which he had already propound tears. Thus discoursed Hannibal unto thok, ed. For this fayour the Carthaginian Embal. who tafting the bitter fruits of their own fadours humbly thanked the Senate; and malicious counfel, repented when it wastoo craved licence, that they might vifit their late; and instead of curfing their own dif-Countrymen, which were priloners in Rome: orders, which had bred this grievous diafterwards, that they might ransome and sease, accused the Physician, whose noble carry, home with them fome that were their endevours had been employed in procuring of the Romans, to infult over the calamities African.

that which otherwise he knew not well how of mighty Princes, by leading them contuto bestow. But the love of the Romans, and meliously in Triumph; yea, though they friendship of scipio, was fully answerable, were such, as had alwayes made fair and now and hereafter, to all the defervings of courteous war. But hereof we shall have this Numidian King. About Carthage there better example ere the same age pass. It refled no more to be done. Wherefore the was neither the person of syphax, nor any Romans embarqued themselves for Sicil: other glory of the spectacle, that so much where when they arrived at Lylibaum, Scipio beautified the Triumph of Scipio; as did the with some part of his Army took his way contemplation of that grievous war past, home to Rome by land; and fent the rest whereof the Romans had been in a manner Except, & before him thither by Sea. His, journey without hope that ever they should fet Italy free. Polyb. through Italy was no less glorious than any This made them look cheerfully upon the lib. 16. triumph : all the people thronging out of Author of so great a conversion; and filled the Towns and Villages, to do him honour them with more joy, than they well could as he passed along. He entred the City moderate. Wherefore they gave to Scipio the in Triumph : neither was there ever be- Title of the African: stilling him by the name fore, or after, any triumph celebrated with of that Province, which he had subdued. fo great joy of the people, as was this This honourable kind of furname, taken of Scipio; though, in bravery of the pomp, from a conquered Province, grew afterthere were others in time shortly follow- wards more common, and was usurped by ing, that exceeded this. Whether syphax men of less desert: especially by many of were carryed through the City in this Tri- the Cafars, who fometimes arrogated unto umph, and dyed foon after in prison; or themselves the title of Countreys, wherewhether he were dead a while before: it in they had performed little or nothing; cannot be affirmed. Thus much may be as if fuch glorious Attributes could have avowed. That it was a barbarous custome made them like in vertue unto Scipio the

CHAP. IV.

Of Philip the father of Perseus King of Macedon; his first Asts and War with, the Romans, by whom he was subdued.

How the Romans, grew acquainted in the East-Countreys, and desirous of War there. The beginning of many Princes, with great Wars, at one time. The Atolians over-run Peloponnesus. Philip and his Associates make war against the Atolians. Alteration of the State in Sparta. The Ætolians invade Greece and Macedon, and are invaded at home by Philip.

F the great fimilitude found in observed in the change of Empires, before worldly events, the limitation those times whereof we now write, how the of matter hath been affigned as Affyrians or Chaldeans invaded the kingdom a probable cause. For fince Na- of the Medes, with two hundred thousand ture is confined unto a subject Foot, and threescore thousand Horse; but that is not unbounded; the works of Na- failing in their intended conquest, they beture must needs be finite, and many of them came subject within a while themselves unto relemble one the other. Now in those acti- the Medes and Persians. In like manner ons, that feem to have their whole depen- Darius, and after him Xerxes, fell upon the dance upon the will of man, we are less to Greeks with such number of men, as might wonder, if we find less variety: fince it is no have seemed resistless. But after that the Pergreat portion of things which are obnoxi- sians were beaten home again, their Emous unto humane power; and fince they pire was never secure of the Greeks: who at are the fame affections, by which the wills all times of leifure from intestine War, of fundry men are over-ruled, in managing devifed upon that conquest thereof, which the affairs of our daily life. It may be finally they made under the great Alexander.

with his well-trained Army, had made at- Philip and Alexander had shewed a way: tempt upon Greece 5 the iliue might, in hu-which, or perhaps a better, they might learn, mane reason, have been far different. Yet by getting more acquaintance with the Nawould it then have been expedient for tion. them, to employ the travel and vertue of their men, rather than the greatness of their ended, which followed foon after the wars names against those people; that were no of Pyrrhus and of the Tarentines; then less valiant, though less renowned, than their tets variant, though tets renowned, to all the news in Greece; and to entertain any own. For the menacing words used by Cyrus, and some small displeasures done to the good occasion, that should be on that side Greeks (in which kind it may be, that Nabuckodonofor likewife offended the Medes and rersians) were not so available to vi-Ctory, as to draw on revenge in the future. Great Kingdoms, when they decay in be withed, that the Hyrian Queen Testa strength, suffer as did the old Lion, for the oppression done in his youth; being pinched by the Wolf, gored by the Bull, yea and ing their Towns, only because they were kickt by the Afs. But Princes are often carryed away from reason, by mil understanding the language of Fame : and despising the vertue that makes little noife, adventure flow to give them cause. And their happy ac Lib, co. to provoke it against themselves; as if it complishing of that war, which they made latter were not possible that their own glory should be foiled by any of less-noted excellence. Against the same stone, whereat Xerxes, and before him (as I take it) Evilmerodach, thing hapned: though they fent Embaffahad flumbled, Fyrrhus the Epirot had dasht dours, as it were to offer themselves; by fighis foot. He was not indeed the King of all | nifying, that for the love of Greece they had Greece; though most of mark, and a better Souldier than any other Greekifb King, when the first acquaintance betwirt the Greeks he entred into the war against the Romans. and Romans: which afterwards encreased This war he undertook as it were for his very haftily, through the indifcretion of minds take; having received no injury; but King Philip the Macedonian; whose business hoping by the glory of his name, and of the Greeks that ferved under him, to prevail ry, it is meet that we should relate (though to eafily against the barbarous Romans, that they should only serve as a step to his further intended conquests, of Sicil and Africk. spana pre- But when the Romans by their victory readed in against Pyrekus had found their own vertue in the most of all Countreys known; and 3, in the most of all Countreys known; and 3, in the most of all Countreys known; and 3, of the greatest Navy, be- to be of richer metal, than was the more ing beaten shining valour of the Greeks: then did all the bravery of the Epirot (his Elephants, and whatfoever elfe had ferved to make him ter- the third of the Olympiad following. For what what he was to make the Romans, in in this time died Selencus Cerannus King of in this time died Selencus Cerannus Cer spain; and time following, to think more highly of having broken the themselves. * For since they had overcome the best Warrior in Greece, even Him, that, Fleet that being thus beaten by them, could in a year after make himself Lord of Greece and Macedon: what should hinder them from the conquest of all those unwarlike Provinces, which in compass of 12. years a Macedonian King of late memory had won? Cercount of his preparatainly there was hereunto requifite no

If Nabuchodonofor with his rough old Soul- Greece: all the reft, this done, would foldiers, had undertaken the Medes : or Cyrus low it felf. How to deal with the Greeks,

CHAP. IV.

When therefore the first Punick war was presented. They had also then a strong Fleet: and were become, though not otherwife very skilfull Marriners, yet good fighters at Sea. So it fell out as happily as could made at the same time cruel war upon the Greeks: wasting their Countrey, and fackunable to refift, though they had done her none offence. Into this quarrel, if the Romans were desirous to enter; the Queen was not with Her, was, in their own opinion, a matter not unworthy to make their Patronage to be defired by the Greeks. But no such undertaken this Illyrian war. Thusbegan with them, being now the subject of our stosomewhat briefly) the beginning of his reign, and his first Actions. It was like to prove a busie time in the world, when, within the space of 4. years, new Kings began to reign of them young boyes, in 3. of the greatest kingdoms. This hapned from the third year of the hundred thirty ninth Olympiad, nnto Asia and Syria, in whose room succeeded his brother Antiochus, afterwards called the Great. Ptolomy Philopater fucceeded in the Kingdom of Egypt unto his father Energetes. And Philip the fon of Demetrius, being 16, or 17. years old, received the Kingdom of Macedon, together with the Patronage of the Achaans and most of the Greeks, by the decease of his Uncle Antigonus Doson, that was called the Tutor or Protector. About the more, than to bring to their own devotion fame time also was the like change in capby some good means, the whole Country of padocia, Lacedamon, and the Countreys about Mount Taurus. For Ariarathes then began his Army. He suffered them to pass quietly reign in Cappadocia. Lycurgus found means along with their booty, through a part of to make himself King over the Lacedamoni- the Country, wherein he might very easily ans, whose Common-weal, fince the flight of have distressed them; and afterwards prefof Cleomenes, had continued in a manner fed them so near, when they had recovered headless; and Achama a kinsman of Antiochus, ground of advantage, that they easily debut a Rebel unto him, occupied the Regions feated all his Army. So they departed home near unto Mount Taurus, and kept a while rich, and well animated to return again. the State of a mighty King. Lastly, in the As for the Acheans, they got hereby onfecond and third years of the one hundred ly the friendship of the Messenians: with and fortieth Olympiad it was, that open war whom, by licence of King Philip, they made brake out between Rome and Carthage; Confederacy. Shortly after, the Ætolians and that Hannibal began his great Invalion invaded Pelopounesus again: having no more upon Italy. Those troubles of the Western to do, than to pass over the narrow world, which were indeed the greatest, Straights of the Corinthian Bay, called we have already followed unto an end: now the Gulph of Lepanto, where they might Of Antiochus, Ptolomy, and the rest; we shall land in the Countrey of the Eleans. There speak hereafter, when the Romans find joyned with them, in this their second inva-

them out.

reign, came into Peloponnesus; greatly defired them by the Romans, of setting out no ships of the Acheans, and many other his depen- of war unto the coast of Greece: made bold dants. That Countrey, having freed it felf to feek adventures again, and did great mifby the help of Antigonus from the danger chief. Demeirius Pharius, a creature of the (accounted great) of an easie subjection unto Romans, commanded a part of these Illyri-Cleamenes; was now become no less obnoxi- ans: who shortly repented him of this his ous to the Macedonian, than it should have voyage; which caused him to lose his Kingbeen to the spartan; and therewithal it lay dome, as is shewed before. But this Demetrius open unto the violence of the Ætolians; who went another way, and fell upon the Islands despised even the Macedonian Kings, that of the Cyclades in the Egean sea: whence rewere Patrons thereof. The Etolians were no turning, he did some good offices for King men to be idle:nor were much addicted unto any other Art than war. Therefore wanting employment, they fell upon the Mcffenians that were their own Clients, and (excepting the Eleans, that were anciently of their ponnesus: who made greater havock in the confanguinity) the only good friends which Country now, than in their former Ezpedithey had at the prefent in Peloponnesso. Their tion, and returned home without finding invasion was no less unexpected, than it was any resistance. unjust: whereby with greater case they made spoil of the Countrey; finding none unto Philip, when he came to Corinth. And prepared to make refistance. The Acheans, because men were desirous to satisfe themwere called by the Messenians to help: which | selves with some speedy revenge: there they did the more willingly: because the were that urged to have some grievous pu-Ætolians passing without leave through nishment laid noon the Lacedamonians; who their Territory, had (as was their manner) were thought underhand to have favoured done what harm they listed. Old Aratus the Ætolians, in meer despight of the Achaans could hardly abide these Ætolians; as both and Macedonians, by whom themselves had knowing well their nature, and remembring lately been subdued. It is true, that the the injuries, wherewith most ingratefully Lacedamonians had been so affected: and they had requited no small benefits done to (which was worse) at the arrival of Philip, them by the Achaens. He was therefore so they slew such friends of his, as having hasty to fall upon this their Army, that he checked their inclination, seemed likely to could hardly endure to flay few dayes until appeach them of the intended rebellion. the time of his own Office came; being Neither durft they well commit themselves chosen Prator of the Achaans for the year to judgement but intreated the King, that following. But his anger was greater he would abstain from coming to them with than his courage: and he shewed himself a an Army: since their Town was lately much man fitter (as hath been already noted of disquieted with civil discord, which they fion, a great number of the Illyrians: who. Philip, foon after the beginning of his neglecting that Condition imposed upon Philip, or his friends. The rest of the Illgrians under scerdilaidas, or scerdiletus, having gotten what they could elsewhere by roving at Sea, accompanied the Ætolians into Pelo-

Of these things great complaint was made him) for any other service, than leading of hoped soon to appease, and meant always to remain Iiiiii

ever the Spaniards gathered together, made ac988

fatisfied with this: not for that he (or rather culed, until Philip (of whole meaning they old Aratus, who then wholly governed him) needed not to have made any doubt) should did mif-understand the Lacedamonians: but first proclaim the war. The Messenians, for for that a greater work was in hand, which whose cause the war was undertaken, exought not to be interrupted. There met at Co- cufed themselves, by reason of a Town which rinth in presence of the King, the Embasiadors of the Acheans, Baotians, Epirots, and faid, that they durft not be over-bold, until Acarnanians: all complaining upon the Æto- that bridle were taken out of their mouths, lians: and defiring to have war decreed As for the Lacedemonians, the chief of them against them, by common assent. Philip sent studied only, how to manage the treason his letters unto the Atolians, requiring them for which their City had been so lately parto make ready their answer in some conve-doned; and therefore dismissed the Embasnient time: if they could alledge any thing fadors of the Confederates, without any in excuse of that which they had done. They answer at all. They had three years togereturned word, that a Diet should be holden ther continued subject aganst their wils to at Rhium for that purpose: whither if it plea- the Macedonians, expecting still when Cleafed him to come, or fend, he should be well menes should return out of Egypt to reign informed of them and their whole meaning. over them again, and maintain, as he was The King prepared to have been there at wont, the honour of their City. In this the day. But when the Etolians understood regard they chose not any Kings, but were this for certain, they adjourned the Councel contented with the rule of Ephori. Of these unto a further time: laying, That luch weigh ty matters ought not to be handled, fave lick fafety to confift, in holding their faith in the great Parliament of all Ætolia. This trick of Law notwithstanding, open war was proclaimed against them. And they, as it were, to shew how well they had deserved it, made election of Scopas to be their Prætor, that was Author of these Invasions made on Peloponnesus; and the only man, in a fort, upon whom they must have laid the blame of these actions, if they would have shifted it from the publick.

The fifth Book of the first Part

After this, Philip went into Macedon, where he prepared builly for the war against the year following. He also assayed the Illyrian, scerdilaidas, with fair words and promises; forasmuch as the Ætolians had couzened courses to set forward their desire. Neither him of his share, when he was partner with did it suffice, that about these times there them in their late robberies. In like fort the came certain report of Cleamenes his death. Acheans, who had first of all others promore mighty, were nevertheless more cunning and reserved: so that they stood upon fame. Some of the most working spirits remain at his devotion. Fhilip was eafily a needless point, and defired to be held exthem. And hereto they referred all their counsels: being perhaps a little moved with respect of the benefit, which might redound unto themselves, by adhering firmly to those which at the present bore rule over them. Others, and those the greater part were still devising, how to make all ready for Cleomenes against his return; and sought to joyn with the Ætolians, which were the most likely to give him ftrong affiftance. The Macedonian faction had the more authority, and durst more freely speak their minds: but the contrary fide was the more passionate, and spared not by murders or any other violent which these intended; fancying unto themsent unto the Acarnanians, Epirots, Messeni- selves the glory of their Ancestors in such ans, and Lacedamonians: requesting them Ages past, as it were not like to come again. forthwith to declare themselves, and to denounce war unto the Etolians; without stay- to restore them unto their greatness & hustres ing (as it were) to await the event. Hereun- which once he had in a manner performed: But fince he was dead, and that, without to the qualities of those with whom they injury to his well-deferving vertue, they dealt. The Acarnanians, a free-hearted and might proceed to the election of new Kings: valiant, though a small Nation, and borde- Kings they would have, and those of the ring upon the Etolians, of whom they frood race of Hercules, as in former times; for that in continual danger; faid, that they could without such helps, they must continue life. not honestly refuse to shew their faithful the better than subjects unto the Macedonimeaning in that war, which was concluded an, and far less by him respected, then were by general affent. The Epirots that were the Acheans. Thus were they transported among them, procured the Ætolians to fend they first made preparation. Philip was not divers Towns; whereof two he retained, the Acheans. and annexed unto the State of Lacedamon. After such open hostility, the Lacedæ-

an Embaffie to Sparta: which propounded ready: the Epirots gave uncertain answer: the matter openly unto the people, whereof the Messenians would not stir: all the burno one of the Citizens durft have made him- den must lye upon themselves and the poor felf the Author. Much disputation, and hot, Acarnanians, whom the Ætolians, by fathere was, between those of the Macedonian vour of the Eleans, could invade at pleaparty, and these their opposites:in such wife sure, as they were like to do; and by help that nothing could be concluded; until by of the Lacedamonians, could affail on all maffacre or banishment of all, or the chief, parts at once. It was not long ere the Ætothat spake against the Ætolians: the di- lians, passing over the Bay of Corinth, surversity of opinion was taken quite away. prised the Town of Agira: which if they Then forthwith a League was concluded be- could have held, they should thereby grievbetween the Lacedamonians and Etolians: oully have molested the Acheans, for that it without all regard of the Macedonians or stood in the mid-way between Egium and Acheans, who had spared the City, when they Sycion, two of their principal Cities, and might have destroyed it. Then also they gave open way into the heart of all their went in hand with the election of new Kings: Country. But as Agira was taken by furwherein their diligence was fo nice, and fo prife: fo was it prefently loft again, through regardful of their ancient Laws, as touching greediness of spoil; whilest they that should the choofing of the one King, that we may have made it their first care, to affure the justly wonder, how they grew fo careless place unto themselves, by occupying the ciin making choice of the other. In the one tadel and other pieces of strength, fell heedof their Royal Families they found Agestoo- lesly to ransack private houses, and thereby is, the son of Agestpolis, the son of King cle-ombrotus: and him they admitted to reign whom they were driven with great slaughover them, as heir apparent to his grand-ter back unto their Fleet. About the same father. This Agospolis was a young Boy, time, another Atolian Army landing among standing in need of a Guardian; and had an the Eleans, fell upon the Western Coast of Uncle, his Fathers Brother, that was fit for Achaia; wasting all the Territory of the the Government. Yet because the Law re- Dymeans and other people, that were first quired, that the son, how young soever, should beginners of the Achain Confederacy. The have his fathers whole right and title: the Dymeans and their neighbours made head Lacedamonians, though standing in need of against these Invaders; but were so well beaa man, were so punctual in observation of ten, that the enemy grew bolder with them the Law, that they made this child their than before. They fent for help unto their King, and appointed his Uncle Cleomenes to Prætor, and to all the Towns of their Sociebe his Protector. But in the other branch ty in vain. For the Acheans having lately of the Royal Family, though there was no been much weakened by Cleomenes, were want of heirs: yet would not the people now able to do little of themselves: neither trouble themselves about any of them, to could they get any strength of Mercenaries; examine the goodness of his Claim; but forasmuch as at the end of cleomenes his war made election of one Lycurgus, who having they had covetoully with-held part of their no manner of title to the Kingdome, be- due from those that served them therein. So flowed upon each of the Ephori, a Talent, through this disability of the Acheans, and and thereby made himself be saluted King insufficiency of their Prætor; the Dymeans, of sparta, and a Gentleman of the race of with others, were driven to with-hold their Hercules. This Lycurgus to gratifie his Par- contribution heretofore made for the pubtilans, and to approve his worth by action, lick service, and to convert the money to invaded rhe Country of the Argives: which their own defence. Lycurgus also with his Lalay open and unguarded, as in a time of cedamonians, began to win upon the Arcadipeace. There he did great spoil, and won ans, that were confederate with Philip and

Philip came to the borders of the Ætolians, whilst their Army was thus employed a monians declared themselves on the Ætoli- far off in Peloponnesus. The Epirots joinlian side; and proclaimed war against the ed all their forces with him: and by such their willing readiness, drew him to the siege Thus the beginnings of the war fell out of a Frontier piece, which they defired to get much otherwise, than the Acheans and into their own hands; for that, by commotheir Confedederates had expected, when dity thereof, they hoped shortly to make themselves Masters of Ambracia. There he whereto he was vehemently solicited by fpent forty dayes, ere he could end the the Achean Embassadors; news came out bufiness; which tended only to the benefit of Macedon, that the Dardanians were of the Epirots. Had he entred into the heart ready with a great Army to fall upon the of Ætolia at his first coming in it is thought Country. These Dardanians were a barthat he might have had an end of the war. barous people, divided by Mount Hamns But it happens oft, that the violence of great from the Northern part of Macedon, and Armies is broken upon small Towns or were accustomed to seek booty in that Forts: and not feldome, that the impor- wealthy Kingdome, when they found their tunity of Affociates, to have their own defires fulfilled, converts the preparations of that Philip was about to make a journey great Kings to those uses for which they into Peloponness ; they purposed in his never were intended; thereby hindering absence, which they thought would be the profecution of their main defigns. long, to get what they could for them-Thus was our King Henry the eighth led felves in his Countrey: as had been their afide, and quite out of his way, by Maximanner upon the like advantages. This milian the Emperour to the fiege of Tourmany: at fuch time as the French King Lewis bassadors, (whom he should have accomthe twelfth, hearing that the ftrong City panied home with his Army) and to of Termin was loft, and that his Cavallery, bid them have patience until another wherein rested his chief confidence, two year. So he took his way home-wards: thouland were beaten by the Earl, of and as he was palling out of Acarnania Effex with seven hundred English; was into Epirus, there repaired unto him Dethinking to withdraw himself into Britain, metrius Tharius, with no more than one in fear that Henry would have come to Ship; that was newly chased out of his

The fifth Book of the first Part

The stay that Philip made at Ambrachus, in fuch fort, as their Prættor Scopas adventu- returning in his last Voyage from the Cyclared to lead all their forces out of the Coun- des, was ready at their first request, to take try; and therewith not only to over-run part with Philips Captains. The fe, or the like Thessale, but to make impression into Mace- considerations, made him welcome unto don. He ran as far as to Dium, a City of the Macedonian King: whose Counsellor he Macedon upon the Egean Sea: which, being was ever after. The Dardanians hearing of forfaken by the Inhabitants at his coming, the Kings return, brake up their Army, and he took, and razed to the ground. He spared gave over for the present their invasion of neither Temple, nor any other of the good. Macedon, towards which they were already ly buildings therein, but overturned all: and on their way. among the reft, he threw down the Sta All that fummer following the King refted tua's that were there erected, of the Macedo at Lariffa in Theffalie, whilest his people nian Kings For this he was highly honoured grthered in their Harvest. But the Ætolians by his Country-men at his return; for a fmuch refted not. They avenged themselves upon as hereby they thought their Nation to be the Epirots: whom for the harms by them grown terrible, not only (as before) unto and Philip done in Etolia, they requited Peloponnesus, but even to Macedon it self. with all extremities of War, among which, But this their pride was foon abated; and the most notable was the ruine of the most they rewarded thortly at home in their own famous Temple of Dodona. When Winter Country, for their pains taken at Dium. grew on, and all thought of war, until ano-Philip having dispatched his work at Am-ther year, was laid aside: Philip stole a bracus, made a ftrong invafion upon Æto- journy into Peloponnesus, with 5000. Foot, & lia. He took Phatia, Metropolis, Oeniade, about 400. Horse. As soon as he was within Peanium, Eleus, and divers other Towns Corinth; He commanded the gates to be and Castles of theirs: of which he burnt shut, that no word should be carryed forth fome, and fortified others. He also beat of his arrival. He sent privily for old Arathe the Ætolians in fundry skirmishes: and tus to come thirher unto him: with whom wasted all the Countrey over, without he took order, when, and in what places, receiving any harm. This done, while he would have the Achean Souldiers ready he was about to make a cut over the to meet him. The enemies were then abroad Straights into Peloponnessus, and to do the in the Country, without somewhat more like spoil in the Country of the Eleans, than two thousand Foot, and an hundred

Kingdom by the Romans. This Demetrius had lately shewed himself a friend to Antidid wondroully embolden the Ætolians: gonus Doson in the wars of Cleomenes: and fition. Indeed they had little cause to fear: him, that he could not overtake them, till fince the Achaans themselvs were not aware they had covered themselves within the that the King was in their Land with his Town of Samicum; where they thought to Macedonians; until they heard, that these have been fafe. But Philip affaulted them two thousand Eleans, Etolians, and their fel- therein so forcibly, that he made them glad lows, were by him furprized, and all made to yield the place; obtaining license to deprisoners, or flain. By this exploit which he part with their lives and arms. Having perdid at his first coming, Philip got very much formed so much in this expedition, the King reputation, and likewise he purchased reposed himself a while in Megalopolis, and both reputation and love, by divers actions then removed to Argos, where he fpent all immediately following. He won Pfophis, an the rest of the winter. exceeding strong Town, in the borders of Before the Kings arrival in Peloponnesus, Arcadia, which the Eleans and Etolians the Lacedemonians, with Lycurgus their then held. He won it by affault at his new King, had gotten somewhat in Arcadia; first coming: wherein it much availed and threatned to do great matters. But when him, that the Enemy, not believing that he they were admonished, by the calamity that would undertake fuch a piece of work at fell upon the Eleans, of the danger hanging such an unseasonable time of the year, was over their own heads; they guitted their careless of providing even such store of wea- winnings, and withdrew themselves home. pons, as might have served to defend it. The This Lycurgus, as he had no other right to Town was preferred by the King from fack; Kingdome of Sparta, than that which he and given to the Acheans of his meer moti- could buy with mony, so was he neither free on, before they requested it. Thence from danger of conspiracies made against went he to Lasion, which yielded for very him: nor from those jealousies, with which fear; hearing how easily he had taken Pfophis. Usurpers are commonly perplexed. There This Town also he gave to the Achaans. The was one Chilon, of the Royal blood, that like liberality he used towards others, that thinking himself to have best right unto the had ancient title unto places by him recove- Kingdome, purposed to make way thereunto red. Then fell he upon the Country of Elis, by massacre of his opposites; and afterwards where was much wealth to be gotten: for to confirm himself, by propounding unto the that the people were addicted to husbandry, multitude such reformation of the State as and lived abroad in Villages; even such as was most popular: namely, by making an were of the wealthier fort among them. So equal distribution of all the lands among the he came to the City of Olympia: where have whole number of the Citizens, according to ing done facrifice to Jupiter, feasted his Cap- the ancient institution of that Commontains, and refreshed his Army three days: He wealth. He won to his party some two hunproceeded on to the spoil of those, that had dred men; with whom he fel upon the Ephori. taken pleasure to share with the Ætolians, as they were together at supper & slew them in the spoils of their otherwise-deserving all. Then went he to Lycurgus his house: who neighbours. Great abundance of Cattel he perceiving the danger, stole away and fled. took, with great numbers of flaves, and It remained that he should give account much wealth of all forts, fuch as could be of these doings to the people, and procure found in rich villages. Then he fell in hand them to take part with him. But their with the Towns, whereinto a great multi- minds not being hereto predisposed; they so tude of the Country people were fled. Some little regarded his goodly offers, as even of these were taken at the first assault. Some whilst he was using his best perswasions, they yielded for fear. Some prevented the labour were consulting how to apprehend him. Chiof his journey, by fending Embassadors to lon perceived whereabout they went, and yield before he came. And some that were shifted presently away. So he lived afterheld with Garrisons against their wils, took wards among the Acheans a banished man, courage to fet themselves at liberty, by see- and hated of his own people. As for Lycurgus ing the King so near: to whose Patronage he returned home: & suspecting thenceforth thenceforth they betook themselves. And all those of Hercules his race, found means many places were spoiled by the Ætolian to drive out his fellow-King young Agestpolis Captains; because they distrusted their whereby he made himself Lord alone. His ability to hold them. So the King won more doings grew to be suspected, in such fort, as Towns in the Country, than the sharp- once he should have been apprehended by

Horse; little thinking to meet with oppo- the Ætolians: but they made such haste from ness of winter would suffer him to stay there the Ephori. But though his actions hitherto days. Fain he would have fought with might have been defended; yet rather than to adventure himself into judgment, to take and whip them. If any of them ofhe chose to slie for a time, and sojourn among fered (as there were some of them that his friends the Ætolians. His well-known could not refrain) to help their fellows; wehemency in opposition to the Macedoni- them he laid by the heels, and punished as ans had procured unto him fuch good liking Mutiners. Hereby he thought to bring it to among the people, that in his absence they passby little and little, that they should be began to consider the weakness of their own qualified with an habit of blind obedience: furmifes against him; and pronouncing him and think nothing unjust that pleased the innocent, recalled him home to his Estate. King. But these Acheans were tenderly sen-But in time following, he took better heed lible in matters of liberty: whereof if they unto himself: not by amending his conditi- could have been contented to suffer any liton (for he grew a Tyrant, and was fo ac- tle diminution, they needed not have trouknowledged) but by taking order, that it bled the Macedonians to help them in the fhould not be in the power of the Citizens war against Cleomenes. They be moaned to expell him when they ilifted. By what themselves unto old Aratus: and besought actions he got the name of a Tyrant; or at him to think upon some good order, that what time it was, that he chased Agesipolis they might not be oppressed by degrees. out of the City; I do not certainly find. Aratus forthwith dealt earnestly with the Like enough it is, That his being the first of King; as in a matter more weighty than at three usurpers, which followed in order first it might feem. The King bestowed one after another, made him to be placed in gracious words upon those that had been the rank of Tyrants; which the laft of the wronged, and forbade Apelles to follow the three very justly deserved. Whatsoever he course begun. Hereat Apelles was inwardprovident man, and careful of his Countreys good.

ø. II.

How Philip was misadvised by ill Counsellors: who afterwards wrought treason against the Ætolians a second time : and forceth them to sue for peace: which is granted unto them.

Hilest the King lay at Argos devising upon his business for the largest devising. lowing, some ambitious men that were ting him know, that as long as he continued about him, studied so diligently for their to make much of Aratus, he must be sain own greatness, as they were like to have to deal precisely with the Achaans, and as it spoiled all that he took in hand. Antigonus Doson had left unto Philip such Counsellors, the Contract: whereas if he would be pleaas to him did feem the fittest men for governing of his youth. The chief of these was Apelles; that had the charge of his perfon, and also the ordering of his Treasures. be quickly brought to conform themselves This man, seeming to himself a great Politician, thought that he should do a notable such persuasions, he drew the King to be piece of service to his Prince, if he could present at Ægium, where the Achaans were reduce the Acheans unto the same degree of to hold election of a new Prætor. There fubjection, wherein the Macedonians lived, with much more labour, than would have Tobring this to pass 3 during the late Ex- been needful in a business of more imporpedition he had caused some of the Mace- tance, the King by fair words and threatdonians to thrust the Achaans out of their nings together, obtained so much, That Epelodgings, and to strip them of the booty ratus, a very insufficient man, but one of that they had gotten. Proceeding further, Apelles his new favourites, was chosen Præas occasion fell out; he was bold to chastile tor, instead of one more worthy, for whom fome of that Nation; causing his Ministers Aratus had laboured. This was thoughta

was toward fome private Citizens, in the war against philip, he behaved himself as a Project, that he could not endure to lay it afide ; being perhaps unable to do the King any valuable fervice, in business of other nature. He purposed therefore hereafter to begin at the head : fince, in biting at the tail, the fish had shot away from his mouth. It could not otherwise be than that him; and were justly punished. He invadeth among the Acheans there were some, who bore no hearty affection to Aratus. These he enquired out, and fending for them, entertained them with words of Court : promifing to become their especial friend, and commend them unto the King. Then brake he his purpose with the King himself: letwere by Identure, according to the letter of fed, to give countenance unto those others whom he himself commended, then should the Achaens, and all other Peloponnesians, unto the duty of obedient Subjects. By good introduction unto greater matters ning to the Kings offers. All this was a falle that should follow. The King from thence | lye, divised by Apelles himself, upon no other passed along by Patras and Dyma, to a very ground than his own malice. Philip had ftrong Castle held by the Eleans, which was no sooner heard this tale, but in a great called Tichos. The garrison yielded it up rage he sent for the two Arati, and bade Afor fear, at his first coming : whereof he pelles rehearse it over again to their faces. was glad, for that he had an earnest defire Apelles did so, and with a bold countenance, to bestow it upon the Dymeans, as he pre-talking to them as to men already convicted.

while he heard of no mellengers from the this clause, as it were, in the Kings name: Since Eleans, to fue for peace. For at his departure out of their Country the last Winter, wretches; it is his meaning to hold a Parliahe had let loofe one Amphidamus a Captain ment of the Acheans; and therein having of theirs, that was his prisoner; because he made it known what ye are, to depart into found him an intelligent man, and one that Macedon, and leave you to your felves. Old undertook to make them for fake their alli- Aratus gravely admonished the King; That ance with the Ætolians, and joyn with him whenfoever he heard any accutation, efpeupon reasonable terms. This if they could be cially against a friend of his own, or a man contented to do, he willed Amphidamus to of worth, He should forbear a while to give let them understand, That he would render | credit, untill he had diligently examined the unto them freely all prisoners which he had | business. For such deliberation was Kingly, of theirs 3 That he would defend them from and he should never therof repent him. At all forrain invalion; and that they should the present he said there needed no more, hold their liberty entire, living after their than to call in those that had heard his talk own Laws, without paying any manner of with Amphidamus, and especially him that Tribute, or being kept under by any garri- had brought this goodly tale to Apelles. For fon. These conditions were not to be despifed, if they had found credit, as they might King should make himself the Author of a have done. But when Philip came to the report in the open Parliament of Achaia, Caftle of Tichos, and made a new invation upon their Country: then began the Eleans, (that were not before over-hafty to believe fuch fair promiles) to suspect Amphidamus as a Traitor, and one that was fet on work for no other end, than to breed a mutual diffidence between them and the Ætolians. Wherefore they purposed to lay hands upon him, and fend him prisoner into Ætolia. But he perceived their intent, and got away to Dyma: in good time for himself; in betfellor, thereby took occasion to supplant discerned. Aratus. He faid that old Aratus, and his fon ing this message; nor the Eleans in heark- which drave away flyes out of the chimny;

And when he had faid all the rest, ere either The King thought it strange, that all this Philip or they spake any word; He added the King hath found you fuch ungrateful whereof there was none other evidence, than one mans yea, and anothers no. Hereof the King liked well; and faid that he would make sufficient inquiry. So passed a few dayes: wherein whilest Apelles delayed to bring in the proof, which indeed he wanted, Amphidamus came from Elis, and told what had befaln him there. The King was not forgetful, to examine him about the conspiracy of the Arati: which, when he found no better than a meer device against his honourater for Aratus. For the King (as was faid) ble friends; he entertained them in loving marvailing what should be the cause, that manner as before. As for his love to Apelles, he heard no news from the Eleans, concernthough it was hereby fomewhat cooled; yet ing the offers which he had made unto by means of long acquaintance and daily them by Amphidamus: Apelles his Coun-employment, no remusiion therein could be

The unrefiful temper of Apelles, having together, had fuch devices in their heads, as with much vehemency brought nothing to tended little to the Kings good : And long Fals, began (as commonly Ambition uleth) of them he faid it was, that the Eleans did to fwell and grow venemous for want of thus hold out. For when Amphidamus was his free motion. He betakes himfelf to his dismissed home, the two Arati, (the father cunning again: and as before, being checkt and the fon) had taken him aside and given in his doings with those of the vulgar, he had himto understand, that it would be very prepared a snare for the Arati: so failing of prejudicial to all Peloponnesus, if the Eleans them, he thinks it wisdom to lay for the King once became at the devotion of the Mace- himself, and for all at once which were donian: And this was the true cause, why about him. In such manner sometime, the neither Amphidamus was very careful in do- Spider thought to have taken the Swallow but was carryed (net and all) into the Air by spiracy with Leontius and Megaleas: bindthe bird, that was too firong to be caught, ing himself and them by Oath, to cross and and held by the subtle workmanship of a bring to nought, as well as they were able. Cob-web. Of the four that next unto Apel- all that the King should take in hand. By so Cob-web. Of the four that next time Appear and that the Ming month take in hand. By so doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that doing, they thought to bring it to pass, that doing, they thought to bring it to pass, they want of ability to do any thing without them; should make him speak them fair, and be glad to submit himself to their discovered to the pass of the submit to not be corrupted. The other two, Leontius rections. The King it is like had flood in Captain of the Targettiers, and Megaleas some awe of them whilest he was a child: chief of the Secretaries, were eafily won and therefore these wise men perswaded to be at Appelles his disposition. This politician therefore studied how to remove the and imputing unto him all that fell out ill other two from their places, and put some through their own milgovernment of his Creatures of his own into their rooms. A- affairs, they might rule him as a child fill. gainst Alexander he went to work the ordi- Apelles would needs go to Chaleis, there to nary way, by calumniation and privy detra-take order for the provisions, which wereto fron. But for the supplanting of Taurion he come that way out of Macedon: The other used more finencis; loading him with dai- two staid behind with the King, to play ly commendations, as a notable man of war, their parts; all more mindful of their wickand one, whom for his many vertues the ed oath, than of their duty. King might ill spare from being alwayes in His Fleet and Army being in a readines: his prefence. By such Art he thought to have Philip made countenance, as if he would removed him, as we fay. Cut of Gods bleff- have bent all his forces against the Eleans; ing into a warm Sun. In the mean feasion to whose aid therefore the Atolians sent Aratus retired himself: and sought to avoid men, little fearing that the mischief would the dangerous friendship of the King, by have fallen, as soon after it did, upon themforbearing to meddle in affairs of State. Selves. But against the Eleans and those that As for the new Prator of Achaia, lately came to help them, Philip thought it enough chosen by such vehement instance of the to leave the Acheans, with some part of his King; He was a man of no dispatch, and one and their Mercenaries. He himself with the that had no grace with the people. Where- body of his Army putting to Sea, landed in fore a great deal of time was loft, whilest the lile of Cephalenia: whence the Etolians, Philip wanted both the money and the dwelling over against it, used to furnish Corn, wherewith he should have been fur- themselves of shipping, when they went to nished by the Achaans. This made the rove abroad. There he belieged the Town King understand his own errour: which he of Palea, that had been very serviceable to wifely fought to reform betimes. He per- the Enemy against him and his Confedefwaded the Acheans to rejourn their Parli- rates; and might be very uleful to him, if he ament from Egium, to sycion, the Town of could get it. Whilest he lay before this Aratus. There he dealt with the old man and Town, there came unto him fifteen ships of his son, perswading them to forget what was war from Scerdilaidas; and many good past; and laying all the blame upon Apelles, Souldiers, from the Epirots, Acarnanians, on whom thenceforth he intended to keep a and Messenians. But the Town was obstinate; more diligent eye. So by the travel of these and would not be terrified with numbers. worthy men, he easily obtained what he It was naturally fenced on all parts save one, would of the Acheans. Fifty talents they gave on which fide Philip carryed a Mine to the him out of hand; with great store of Corn; wall, wherewith he overthrew two hunand further decreed, That fo long as he him- dred foot thereof. Leontius Captain of the felf in person followed the wars in Pelepon- Targettiers, was appointed by the King to nesus, he should receive ten talents a moneth make the assault. But he, remembring his Being thus enabled, he began to provide covenant with Apelles, did both wilfully fhipping, that so he might invade the Atoli- forbear to do his best : and caused others to ans, Eleans, and Lacedamonians, that were do the like. So the Macedonians were put maritime recople, at his pleasure, and hinder to foile, and many slain, not of the worst their excursions by Sea.

things go forward to well without his help 3 if the Treason of their Captain, and some even by the minifrry of those whom he most by him corrupted, had not hindred the hated. Wherefore he entred into con- victory. The King was angry with this,

Souldiers: but fuch as had gotten over the It vexed Apelles beyond measure, to see breach, and would have carried the Town,

thought upon breaking up the fiege. For it got not to raze a goodly Temple, the chief was easier unto the Towns-men to make up of all belonging unto the #tolians; in rememthe gap in their wall, than for him to make brance of their like courtefie, shewed upon it wider. Whilest he stood thus perplexed the Temples of Dium and Dodana. This burand uncertain what course to take : the ning of the Temple, might (questionless) Messenians and Acarnanians lay hard upon more for the Kings honour have been forhim, each of them defirous to draw him into born. But perhaps he thought, as Monlieur their own Countrey. The Messenians alledg- du Gourgues the French Captain told the ed, that Lycurgus was busie in wasting their Spaniards in Florida, That they which had Countrey: upom whom the King might no faith, needed no Church. At his return come unawares in one day; the Etestan winds from Thermum, the Ætolians laid for him: which then blew, ferving fitly for his Navi- which that they would do, he believed begation. Hereto allo Leonius perfwaded; fore, and therefore was not taken unawares, who confidered that those winds, as they would easily carry him thither, so would ing in ambush, fell upon his skirts: but he they detain him there perforce (blowing all the Dog-dayes) and make him spend the Summer to small or no surpose. But Aratus gave better counsel, and prevailed: they were busily charging in Rear the Aratus gave better counsel, and prevailed: he shewed how unfitting it were, to let the my that went before. So with slaughter of Etolians over-run all Theffaly again, and the enemy, he returned the same way that some part of Macedon, whilest the King he came; and burning down those places that withdrew his Army far off to feek small he had taken before, as also wasting the adventures. Rather, he faid that the time | Country round about him, He fafely carried now served well to carry the war into Æto- all that he had gotten aboard his fleet. Once lia: fince the Prætor was gone thence abroad the Ætolians made countenance of fight, ifonroving, with the one half of their strength. Suing out of stratus in great bravery. But As for Lycurgus, he was not strong enough they were beaten home faster than they to do much harm in Feloponnesus: and it came, and followed to their very gates. might fuffice, if the Achaens were appointto this advice, the King set sail for Ætolia, (as commonly happens) by any finister acciborders; and joyned with him as many of his fellow Megaleas. They came because they

but there was no remedy: and therefore he | ing all that could not be carried away, for-

The joy of this victorious expedition beed to make head against them. According | ingevery way compleat, and not deformed and enters the Bay of Ambracia, which di- dent; it pleafed the King to make a great feaft vided the Ætolians from Acarnania. The unto all his friends and Captains. Thither Acarnanians were glad to fee him on their were invited among the rest Leontius, with them as could bear arms, to help in taking could not choose: but their heavy looks vengeance upon their bad neighbours. He argued, what little pleasure they took in the marched up into the inland Countrey: and Kings prosperity. It grieved them to think, taking some places by the way, which he that they should be able to give no better filled with Carrifons to aflure his Retreat; account unto Apeller, of their hindering the Hepassed on to Therman, which was the Receive for the Etolians, and surest place of be shewed anon, had played his own part defence in all extremities. The Countrey with a most mischievous dexterity. Finding round about was a great fastness, environed Aratus on the way home to his Tent: they with rocky Mountains of very narrow fleep, fell to reviling him, throwing flones at him, and difficult ascent. There did the Atolians so that they caused a great uprore: many use to hold all their chief meetings, their running in (as happens in such cases) to take Fairs, their election of Magistrates , and part with the one or the other. The King their folemn Games. There also they used sending to enquire of the matter, was truly to bestow the most precious of their goods, informed of all that had passed. Which made as in a place of greatest security. This opi- him send for Leontius and his fellows. But nion of the natural strength, had made them Leontins was gotten out of the way: Megacareless in looking unto it. When Philip leas, and another with him, came. The King therefore had overcome the bad way, began to rate them for their disorder: and there was nothing else to do than to take they, to give him froward answers: insospoil: whereof he found such plenty, that he much, as they said at length, That they thought the pains of his journy well recom- would never give over, till they had repenced. So he loaded his Army: and confum- warded Aratus with a mischief as he deser-

Kkkkkk

ward. Leontius hearing of this comes boldly Countrey. All Greece and Macedon was up to the King, with his Targettiers at his heels: in arms against them, and their weak Allies and with a proud grace demanded, who it the Eleans and Lacedamonians. Neither was was that had dared to lay hands upon Me- it certain, how long the one or other of galeas, yea, and to cast him into priton? Why these their Peloponnessan friends should be faid the King, it was even I. This resolute answer, which Leontius had not expected, enough to keep the field, but had already made him depart both fad and angry; fee- fuffered those miseries of war, which by a liting himself out-frowned, and not knowing the continuance would make them glad, each how to remedy the matter. Shortly after to feek their own peace, without regard of Megaleas was called forth to his answer, and their Confederates. Wherefore the Atolians was charged by Aratus with many great readily entertain'd this negotiation of peace: crimes: Among which were, The hin- and taking truce for thirty dayes with the derance of the Kings victory at Palea, and the King, dealt with him by intercession of the Compact made with Apelles: matters no less same Embassadours, to intreat his presence touching Leontins, that flood by as a looker at a Diet of the Nation, that should be held on, than Megaleas that was accused. In con- at Rhium; whither if he would vouchafe clusion, the prefumptions against him were to come, they promised that he should find fo strong, and his answers thereto so weak; them conformable to any good reason. that he, and Crinon one of his fellows, were condemned in twenty Talents: Crinon being tins and Megaleas thought to have terrified remanded back to prison; and Leontius be- the King, by raising sedition against him in coming Bail for Megaleas. This was done the Army, But this device forted to no good upon the way home-wards, as the King was effect. The fouldiers were easily and quickly returning to Corinth.

finels of this year. For as foon as he was at were not rewarded with fo much of the Corinth, he took in hand an Expedition booty, as they thought to belong of right against the Lacedamonians. These and the unto them. But their anger spent it self in a Eleans had done what harm they could in noise, and breaking open of doors, without Peloponnesus, whilest the King was absent. further harm done. This was enough to in-The Acheans had opposed them as well as form the King (who easily pacified his men they could; with ill fuccess, yet so, as they with gentle words) that some abouthim were hiudred them from doing such harm as else very falle. Yea, the Souldiers themselves rethey would have done. But when Fhilip came, he over-ran the Country about Lace- the Authors of the tumult fought out, and demon: and was in a manner at the gates of punished according to their deferts. The Sparta, ere men could well believe that he King made shew as if he had not cared to was returned out of Atolia. He took not in make fuch inquisition. But Leontius and Methis Expedition any Cities, but made great galeas were afraid, lest the matter would waste in the fields: and having beaten the foon come out of it self to their extream danenemy in some skirmishes, carried back with ger. Wherefore they sent unto Apelles, the him to Corinth a rich booty of cattel, flaves, and other Country spoil. At Corinth he sting him speedily to repair unto Corinth, found attending him, Embassadors from the where he might stand between them and Rhodians and Chians, that requested him to the Kings displeasure. Apelles had not all fet Greece at quiet, by granting peace unto this while been wanting to the bufiness, the Etolians. They had gracious audience: undertaken by him and his treacherous and he willed them to deal first with the companions. He had taken upon him, as a Ætolians, who if they would make the same man that had the Kings heart in his own requeft, should not find him unreasonable. hand : and thereby was he grown into The Atolians had feed ill that year:neither fuch credit, that all the Kings Officers in faw they any likely hopes for the years following. The Army that they had fent forth unto him, and received from him their dito waste Thessay and Macedon, found such in severy business. Likewise the Greek opposition on the way; that not daring to in all their flattering Decrees, took co proceed, it returned home without bringing casion to magnifie the vertue of Apeller, any thing to effect. In the mean feafon they making flight mention (only for fallihad been grievoully afflicted, as before is on fake) of the King: who feemed no

ved. Herencon the King committed them to | shewed, by Philip in the centre of their own able to hold out, fince they were not ftrong

The fifth Book of the first Part

Whilest these things were in hand, Leonincenfed against many of the Kings friends, Philip dispatched well a great deal of bu- who were said to be the cause, why they penting of their insolence, defired to have Head and Architect of their treason, reque-

this Politician obtained his hearts defire. fame time. Now taking his journey from Chalcis in the else he would have been, to take away the Multitude.

better than the Minister and Executioner sink under the burden of his own poverty, of Apelles his will and pleasure. Such was the By this the King understood more perfectly arrogancy of this great man, in fetting him the fallhood, not only of Megaleas, but of felf out unto the people : but in managing Apelles; whose cunning head had laboured the Kings affairs, he made it his special care, all this while to keep him so poor. Wherethat money and all things needful for the fore he fent one to pursue Megaleas that publick service, should be wanting. Yea, was fled to Thebes. As for Apelles, he comhe enforced the King for very need, to mitted both him, his fon, and another that fell his own Place and houshold vessels: was inward with him, to prison; wherein thinking to resolve these and all other dif- all of them thortly ended their lives. Meficulties, by only faying, sir, beruled wholly galeus also, neither daring to stand to trial, by me, and all shall be as you would wish. Here- nor knowing whither to flie, was weary to if the King would give affent, then had of his own life; and flew himfelf about the

The Atolians, as they had begun this Ifle of Eubwa, to the City of Corinth where war upon hope of accomplishing what they Philip then lay: he was fetcht in with great lifted in the Nonage of Philip: so finding that pomp and royalty, by a great number of the vigour of this young Prince tempered the Captains and Souldiers; which Leon- with the cold advice of Aratus, wrought tius and Megaleas drew forth to meet him very effectually toward their overthrow: on the way. So entring the City with a they grew very defireus to make an end of goodly train, he went directly to the Court, it. Nevertheless, being a turbulent Nation, and towards the Kings chamber. But Philip and ready to lay hold upon all advantages, was well aware of his pride, and had vehe- when they heard what was happened in the ment suspition of his falihood. Wherefore Court, the death of Apelles, Leontius, and one was fent to tell him, that he should wait Megalers, together with some indignation a while, or come another time, for the King thereupon conceived by some of the Kings was not now at leisure to be spoken with. It Targettiers, they began to hope anew, that was a pretty thing, that fuch a check as this these troubles would be long lasting, and made all his attendants for fake him, as a man thereupon brake the day appointed for the in difgrace; in such fort, that going thence to meeting at Rhium. Of this was Philip nothing his lodging, he had none to follow him fave forry. For being in good hope throughhis own Pages. After this, the King vouch-fafed him now and then fome flender graces: it much to concern his own honour, that but in consultations, or other matters of pri- all the blame of the beginning and contivacy, he used him not at all This taught Me- nuing the War should rest upon themselves. galeas to look to himself, and run away Wherefore he willed his Confederates to betimes. Hereupon the King fent forth Tau- lay afide all thought of peace, and to prerion his Lieutenant of Peloponnesus, with all pare for War against the year following; the Targettiers, as it were to do some piece wherein he hoped to bring it to an end. of service, but indeed of purpose to appre- Then gratified he his Macedonian Souldiers, hend Leontius in the absence of his follow- by yielding to let them winter in their own ers. Leontius being taken, dispatched away Country. In his return homeward, he cala messenger presently to his Targettiers, to led into judgement one Ptolomy, a companifignifie what was befaln him: and they on with Apelles and Leontius in their Treaforthwith fent unto the King in his behalf. fons: who was therefore condemned by They made request, That if any other the Macedonians; and suffered death. These thing were objected against him, he might were the same Macedonians, that lately not be called forth to trial before their re- could not endure to hear of Leontius his turn: as for the debt of Megaleas, if that were imprilonment; yet now they think the man all the matter, they said they were ready to worthy to die that was, but his adherent. make a purse for his discharge. This affection So vain is the confidence, on which Reof the fouldiers made Philip more hasty then bels use to build, in their favour with the Traitors life. Neither was it long, ere letters During his abode in Macedon, Philip won of Megaless were intercepted, which he tome bordering Towns, from which the wrote unto the Etolians; vilifying the King Dardanians, Etolians, and other his ill with opprobrious words, and bidding them neighbours, were accustomed to make rodes not to hearken after peace, but to hold out into his Kingdom: when he had thus proa while, for that Philip was even ready to vided for fafety of his own; the Atolians. Kkkkkka

Rhodians and Chians, with others from Ptolo- pleasure dispute about finishing War bemy King of Agyt, and from the City of tween themselves, without being molested Fizantium, recontinuing the former foliciby the Barbarians. For when once either tation about the peace. This fashion had the Romans or Carthaginians had subdued been taken up in matters of Greece, ever one the other; it was not to be doubted, fince the Kings that reigned after Alexander, that they would forthwith look Eaftward, had taken upon them to fet the whole Coun- and feek by all means to fet footing in try at liberty: No fooner was any Province Greece. For this cause he said it were good, or City in danger to be oppressed and subdued by force of war, but presently there in it self: and that rbitip, if he were were found Intercessors, who pittying the effusion of Greekish blood, would importune the stronger to relinquish his advantage, his Dominion, by winning somewhat in By doing such friendly offices in time of Italy. need, the Princes and States abroad fought to bind unto them those people, that were howfoever weak in numbers, yet very good fouldiers. But hereby it came to pass, that the more froward fort, especially the Etolians, whose whole Nation was addicted to fallhood and robbery, durst enter good counsel, that they invited the Roboldly into quarrels with all their neighbours: being well affured that if they had the worst, The love of Greece would be sufficient for to redeem their quiet. They had, fince the late Treaty of Peace, done what harm they could in Peloponnefur: but That every one should keep what they being beaten by the Achaans, and standing in fear to be more foundly beaten at home, they defired now, more earnestly than be- past. fore, to make an end of the War as foon as they might. Philip made fuch answer unto the Embassadours, as he had done the former year; That he gave not occasion to the beginning of this War, nor was at the present afraid to continue it, or unwilling to end it : But that the Ætolians , if they had a defire to live in rest, must first be dealt withal, to signific plainly their determination, whereto himself would return such answer as he should think to the Peace, being a young Prince, and in away, till the great battel of Canne: after hope to increase the honour which he daily got by the War. But it happened in the hath been shewed before. Demetrian Phamiddelt of this Negotiation, that he was rim bore great malice unto the Romans; advertised by latters out of Macedon, what a and knew no other way to be avenged upon notable victory Hannibal had obtained them, or to recover his own loft Kingdom, against the Romans in the battel at Thrasymene. These letters he communicated unto Demetrius Pharius: who greatly encouraged to take part with their enemies. It had to take part with their enemies. him to take part with Hannibal: and not to otherwise been far more expedient for Phifit still, as an idle beholder of the Italian lip, to have supported the weaker of those War. Hereby he grew more inclinable than two great Cities against the more mighty. before unto Peace with the Etolians: which For by fo doing, he should perhaps have was concluded shortly in a meeting at Nau- brought them to peace upon some equal patius. There did Agelaus an Atolian make terms; and thereby, as did Hiero, a far

might well know what they were to expect. | a great Oration: telling, how happy it was But there came again Embassadors from the tor the Greeks, that they might at their own that their Country should be at peace withdefirous of War, should lay hold on the opportunity, now fitly ferving to enlarge

> Such advice could the Ætolians then give, when they frood in fear of danger threatning them at hand: but being foon after weary of rest, as being accustomed to enrich themselves by pillage, they were so far from observing and following their own mans into Greece, whereby they brought themselves and the whole Country (but themselves before any other part of the Country) under servitude of strangers. The Condition of this Peace was simple, held at the present, without making restitution, or any amends for dammages

ø. III.

Philip, at the persuasion of Demetrius Pharius, enters into League with Hannibal against the Romans. The tenour of the League between Hannibal and Philip.

His being agreed upon: the Greeks betook themselves to quiet courses of life; and Philip to prepare for the business of Italy, about which he consulted with Philip had at this time no great liking un- Demetrius Pharius. And thus rafted the time which he joyned in league with Hannibal, as than by procuring the Macedonian, that was weaker Prince, have both fecured his own Nations with which we hold friendship in Italy, Atolians did put him to in Greece; and the King Philip and the Macedonians, and other Peace which they made with him for a the Greeks his Affociates, be faved and pretime, upon such Conditions that might ea- ferved by the Carthaginian Armies, and by the fily be broken, have been related in another Uticans, and by all Cities and Nations that place, as belonging unto the second Punick | obey the Carthaginians, and by their Associates War. Wherefore I will only here fet down and Souldiers, and by all Nations and Cities in the tenour of the League between him and Italy, Gaule, and Liguria, that are of our busie piece.

The Oath and Covenants be-Macedon.

friends, familiar, and brethren, upon Cove- mon confent. nant, that the fafety of the Lords the Carthaginians, and of Hannibal the General, and those that are with him, and of the Rulers of Provinces of the Carthaginians, using the same Laws, and of the Uticans, and as many Cities and Nations as obey the Carthaginians, and of the Souldiers and Affociates, and of all Towns and

Estate, and caused each of them to be de- Gaule, and Liguria, and with whom we shall firous of chief place in his friendship. The hold friendship, or make alliance hereafter in issue of the counsel which he followed, will this Region; be preserved by King Philip and appear soon after this. His first quarrel with the Macedonians, and such of the Greeks the Romans, the trouble which they and the as are their Affociates. In like manner, shall Carthage, which may feem not unworthy Alliance, or Shall bereafter joyn with Us in to be read, if only in regard of the form it Italy. We Shall not take Counsel one against self then used: though it had been over- | the other, nor deal fraudulently one with the long to have been inferted into a more other. With all readiness and good will without deceit or subtlety. We shall be enemies unto the enemies of the Carthaginians, excepting those Kings, Towns, and Havens, with which We have already league and friendship. We also shall be enemies to the enemies of King tween HANNIBAL General of the Philip, excepting those Kings, Cities, and Na-Carthaginians, and XENOPHANES, tions, with which we have already league and Embassaduri, and Philip King of friendspip. The War that We have with the Romans, have ye also with them, untill the Gods shall give Us a new and happy end. Te shall aid Us with those things whereof we have "His is the League ratified by Oath which need, and shall do according to the Covenants Hannibal the General, and with him between Us. But if the Gods shall not give Mago, Myrcal, and Barmocal, as also the se- unto rou and Us their help in this War against nators of Carthage that are present, and all the Romans and their Associates; then if the the Carthaginians that are in his Army, have Romans offer friendship, Weshall make friendmade with Xenophanes the son of Cleoma- Ship in Such wife, that ye shall be partakers of chus Athenian, whom King Philip the son the same friendship, With Condition, That of Demetrius hath sent unto us, for himself and they shall not have power to make War upon the Macedonians, and his Affociates: Before Tou: Neither shall the Romans be Lords over Jupiter, and Juno, and Apollo, before * the the Corcyraans, nor over those of Apollonia, God of the Carthaginians, Hercules and To- nor Dyrrhachium, nor over Pharus, nor Dilaus: before Mars, Triton, Neptune: before | malle, nor the Parthini, nor Atintania. They the Gods accompanying Arms, the Sun, the Shall also render unto Demetrius Pharius all Moon, and the Earth: before Rivers and that belong unto him, as many as are within Meddows, and Waters: before all the Gods | the Romans Dominions. But if the Romans that have power over Carthage: before all the | (after such peace made) shall make War upon Gods that rule over Macedon, and the rest of Tou or Us; We will succour one another in Greece: before all the Gods that are Presidents that War, as either shall have need. The of War, and present at the making of this same shall be observed in War made by any League. Hannibal the General hath faid, and other, excepting those Kings, Cities, and all the Senators that are with him, and all the States, with whom we hold already league Carthaginians in his Army: Be it agreed be- and friendship. To this league, if We or tween You and Us, that this Oath stand for Ye Shall think fit to add or detract, Such adfriendship and lowing affection, that We become dition or detraction shall be made by our com-

ø. IV.

and grows bateful to the Achæans.

vertuous Prince. And though with old man: but talked in private with such of more commendation of his wildom, he might the Meyerians as repaired unto him. He have offered his friendship to the Romans, asked the Governours, what they meant to that were like to be opprefied, than to the stand thus disputing : and whether they had Carthaginians, who had the better hand: not Laws to bridle the insolence of the unyet this his medling in the Punick War, ruly Rabble: Contrariwife, in talking with proceeded from a royal greatness of mind, the heads of the popular Faction, he said it with a defire to fecure and increase his own was strange, that they being so many would estate, adding therewithal reputation to suffer them elves to be opposed by a few as his Country. But in this business he was if they had not hands to defend themselves guided (as hath been faid) by Demetrius from Tyrants. Thus whilest each of them Pharius: who looking throughly into his prefumed on the Kings affiftance; they nature, did accommodate himself to his de- thought it best to go roundly to work, ere fires: and thereby fhortly governed him as that he were gone, that should countenance he listed. For the vertues of Philip were not their doings. The Governours therefore indeed fuch as they feemed. He was luftful, would have apprehended fome feditious bloody, and tyrannical: defirous of power Orators, that were, they faid the stirrers up to do what he listed, and not otherwise list- of the multitude unto sedition. Upon this ing to do what he ought, than fo far forth, occasion, the people took Arms : and runas by making a fair shew he might breed in ning upon the Nobility and Magistrates, kilmen fuch good opinion of him, as thould led of them in a rage, almost two hundred. help to serve his turn in all that he took in Philip thought, it seems, that it would be easie hand Before he should busie himself in Italy, to worry the Sheep, when the Dogs their he thought it requifite in good policy, to guardians were flain. But his falshood and bring the Greeks that were his Affociates, under a more absolute form of subjection Hereunto Apelles had advised him before: tell him of it in publick, with very bitter and he had liked reasonably well of the and disgraceful words. The King was ancourse. But Apelles was a boysterous Coun-gry at this. But having already done more fellor, and one that referring all to his own than was commendable, or excusable; and glory, thought himself deeply wronged, if yet further intending to take other things he might not wholly have his own way, but in hand wherein he should need the help were driven to await the Kings opportuni- and countenance of his best friends; he was ty at other times. Demetrius Pharius could content to smother his displeasure, and well be contented to observe the Kings make as fair weather as he could. He led humours: and guided, like a Coach-man, old Aratus afide by the hand; and wentup with the reins in his hand, those affections into the Castle of Ithome, that was over which himself did only seem to follow. Messene. There he pretended to do sacri-Therefore he grew daily more and more fice: and facrifice he did. But it was his in credit: 6 as, without any manner of con- purpose to keep the place to his own use: tention, he supplanted Aratus; which the for that it was of notable strength, and violence of Apelles could never do.

Faction among the Mejjenians, between the which he had already, commanded the en-Nobility and Commons: their vehement trance into that Country. Whilest he was thoughts being rather diverted (as happens therefore facrificing, and had the entrails often after a forreign War) unto domestical of the beast delivered into his hands, as was objects, than allayed and reduced unto a the mannershe shewed them to Aratas, and more quiet temper. In process of no long gently asked him, whether the tokens that time, the contention among them grew for violent, that Philip was intreated to com-How Philip yielded to his natural vices, being pound the differences. He was glad of this: therein foothed by Demetrius Pharius. His resolving so to end the matter, that they defire to tyrannize upon the free states his should not henceforth strive any more about Associates: With the troubles into which he their Government: for that he would asthereby fell, whilest he bore a part in the same it wholly to himself. At his coming this fecond Punick War. He poisoneth Aratus : ther, he found Aratus busic among them to make all friends, after a better manner than agreed with his own fecret purpole Where-Itherto Philip had carried himself as a fore he consulted not with this reverend double dealing was immediately found out. Neither did the younger Aratus forbear to would serve to command the further parts There arole about these times a very hot of Peloponnesus, as the Citadel of Cormth, he faw therein did fignifie, That being now | whence they should procure friends to help Soothfayer, thou maift go thy ways, and let flip only maintained the Epirots against him, this good advantage; if thou be a King, thou but procured the Ætolians to break the Oxe by both his horns. Thus he spake ; re- him. fembling Ithome and Acrocorinthus unto the Thus began that War; the occurrents two horns of Peloponnesus. Yet would Philip whereof we have related before, in the place needs hear the opinion of Aratus: who told whereto it belonged. In managing wherehim plainly, That it were well done to keep of, though Philip did the offices of a good the place, if it might be kept without breach | Captain : yet when leisure served, he made of his faith unto the Messenians: But if, by it apparent that he was a vicious King. He feizing upon Ithome, he must lose all the had not quite left his former defire, of opother Castles that he held, and especially the pressing the liberty of the Messenians; but ftrongest Castle of all that was lest unto made another journey into their Country, him by Antigonus, which was his credit; with hope to deceive them as before. They then were it far better to depart with his understood him better now than before; and fouldiers, and keep men in duty, as he had therefore were not hasty to trust him too done hitherto, by their own good wills, than far. When he saw that his cunning would by fortifying any strong places against not serve, he went to work by force; and all, to deal any longer in the Kings affairs, | naught in following times. The worlethat or be inward with him. For, as he plainly he sped, the more angry he waxed against discovered his tyrannous purposes; so like- those that seemed not to savour his injuriwise he perceived, that in resorting to his ous doings. Wherefore, by the ministery house, he had been dishonest with his sons of Taurion, his Lieutenant, he poisoned old wife. He therefore staid at home: where at | Aratus; and shortly after that, he poysoned good leasure he might repent, that in de- also the younger áratus: hoping that these Pight of Cleomenes, his own Countrey-man, thlings would never have been known, beand a temperate Prince, he had brought the cause they were done secretly, and the poy-Macedonians into Peloponnesus.

Ju into Epirus, wherein Aratus refused to the people of Achaia, decreed unto Aratus bear him company. In this journey he found more than humane honours, as Sacrifices, by experience what Aratus had lately told Hymns, and Processions, to be celebrated him, That unhonest counsels are not so pro- every year twice, with a Priest ordained fitable in deed, as in appearance. The Epi- unto him for that purpole; as was accustorots were his followers and dependants; and med unto the Heroes, or men, whom they so they purposed to continue. But he would thought to be translated into the number needs have them so to remain, whether they of the gods. Hereunto they are said to have Purposed it or not. Wherefore to make been encouraged by an Oracle of Apollo: them the more obnoxious unto his will, he which is like enough to have been true, feized upon their Town of Oricum, and laid fince the help of the Devil is never failing flege to Apollonia; having no good colour to the increase of Idolatry. of the doings: but thinking himself ftrong

The loving memory of Aratus their Pain possession of this place, he should quietly them. Thus instead of setling the Coungo out of it, or rather keep it to himself. He try, as his intended Voyage into Haly rethought perhaps, that the old man would quired he kindled a fire in it which he have foothed him a little; were it only for could never quench, until it had laid hold desire for to make amends for the angry on his own Palace. Whilest he was thus lawords newly spoken by his son. But as Ara-bouring to bind the hands that should tus food doubtful what to answer, Demetri- have fought for him in Italy, M. Valerius us Pharius gave this verdict: If thou be a the Roman came into those parts; who not must not neglect the opportunity, but hold the Peace, which they had lately made with them, to make them of his friends become calling them his enemies, invaded them with open War. But in that War he could do To this good advice, Philip yielded at little good; perhaps, because none of his the present: but not without some dislike | Consederates were desirous to help him in thenceforth growing between him and the luch an enterprise. In this attempt upon Arati; whom he thought more froward Messene, he lost Demetrius Pharius; that was than beseemed them, in contradicting his his Counsellor and Flatterer, not his Perverwill. Neither was the old man defirous at ter; as appears by his growing daily more fons themselves were more fure than mani-Philip made a Voyage out of Peloponne- fest in operation. The Sicyonians, and all

enough to do what he lifted, and not feeing tron, and fingular Benefactor, could not but

work in the Acheans a marvellous diflike of that wicked King which had made him thus away. He shall therefore hear of this hereafter, when they better dare to take counsel for themselves. At the present, the murder was not generally known or believed: neither were they in case to subsist, without his help that had committed it. The Ætolians were a most outragious people, great darers, and shameless robbers. With Philopamen, whole notable valour, and great these the Romans made a league: whereof skill in Arms, made the Nation of the Achethe Conditions were foon divulged, especially that main point, concerning the division of the purchase which they should make, times they had needed against the violence namely, That the Ætolians should have the of their neighbours. This is that Philone-Country and Towns; but the Romans the men, who being then a young man, and fpoil, and carry away the people to fell for having no command, did especial service to flaves. The Aclians, who in times of greater Antigonus at the battel of Sellafia against quiet, could not endure to make strait alli- Cleomenes. Thence forward untill now he ance with the Etolians, as knowing their had spent the most part of his time in the uncivil disposition; were much the more life of Crete: the Inhabitants whereof beaverse from them, when they perceived how ing a valiant people, and select mor never at they had called in the Barbarians (for fuch | peace between themselves ; he bettered did the Greeks account all other Nations excep their own) to make havock of the the Art of War. At his return home, he had Country. The same consideration moved alfo the Lacedamonians to stand off a while, before they would declare themselves for the Ætolians, whose friendship they had embraced in the late war. The industry therefore of Philip, and the great care which all exercise of service, that he made the he feemed to take of the Acheans his Confederates, sufficed to retain them: especially, at fuch time, as their own necessity was thereto concurrent. More particularly he obliged unto himself the Dymaans by an inestimable benefit: recovering their Town, after it had been taken by the Romans and Atolians; and redeeming their people wherefoever they might be found, that had been carried away captive, and fold abroad for flaves. Thus might he have blotted out the memory of offences past: if the malignity of his natural condition had not otherwhiles broken out, and given men to understand, that it was the Time, and not his Vertue, which caused him to make such a shew of goodness. Among other foul acts, whereof he was not ashamed, he took Polycratia the wife of the younger Aratus, and carried her into Macedon: little regarding how this might serve to confirm in the people their opinion, that he was guilty of the old mans death. But of fuch faults he shall be told, when the Romans make war upon him the fecond time: for, of that which happened in this their first Invasion, I hold it superfluous to make repetition.

ø. V.

Of Philopæmen General of the Achæans: and Machanidas, Tyrant of Lacedæmon, A battel between them, wherein Machani-

IT happens often, that the decease of one eminent man discovers the vertue of another. In the place of Aratus there frood up ans redcubtable among all the Greeks, and careless of such protection, as in former among them his knowledge, and practice in charge of the Horle: wherein he carrried himself so strictly, travelling with all the Cities of the Confederacy to have his followers well mounted, & armed at all pieces; as also he so diligently trained them up in Acheans very strong in that part of their forces. Being afterward chosen Prætor or General of the Nation, he had no less care to reform their military discipline throughout, whereby his Country might be strong enough to defend it self, and not any longer (as in former times) need to depend upon the help of others. He perswaded the Achaans to cut off their vain expence of bravery, in apparel, houshold-stuff, and curious fare, and to bestow that cost upon their Arms: wherein by how much they were the more gallant, by so much were they like to prove the better Souldiers, and sutable in behaviour, unto the pride of their furniture. They had ferved hitherto with little light Bucklers, and slender Darts, to cast afar off; that were useful inskirmishing at some distance, or for surprises, or fudden and hafty Expeditions, whereto Aratus had been most accustomed. But when they came to handy-strokes, they were good for nothing, fo long as they were wholly driven to rely upon the courage of their Mercenaries. Philopæmen altered this: caufing them to arm themselves more weightily, to use a larger kind of shield, with good fwords, and strong pikes, fit for service at hand. He taught them also to fight in close order, and altered the form of their em- his light armature a good way before him; battelling: not making the Files fo deep as fo as Machanidas was fain to do the like. To hands.

than were theirs.

timea 3 where was fought between thema that error which might restore the victory. great battel. The Tyrant had brought into The Tyrant with his Mercenaries gave chace the field upon Carts a great many of engines, unto those that fled: leaving behind him in wherewirh to beat upon the Squadrons of good order of battel his Lasedemonians 5 his enemies, and put them in diforder. To whom he thought fufficient to deal with Frevent this danger, Philopemen fent forth the Acksans, that were already dishearted had been accustomed, but extending the second these, from the one and the other Front, that he might use the service of many side came in continual supply; till at length all the Mercenaries, both of the Acheans Eight moneths were spent of that year, and of Machanidas, were drawn up to the in which he first was Pretor of the Acheans; fight: being so far advanced, each before when Machanidas the Tyrant of Lacedamon their own Phalanx, that it could no othercauled him to make trial, how his fouldiers wife be discerned which pressed forward or had profited by his discipline. This Macha- which recoyled, than by rising of the dust. nidas was the successor unto Lycurgus, a man Thus were Machanidas his engines made unmore violent than his fore-goer. He kept ferviceable, by the interpolition of his own in pay a ftrong Army of Mercenaries: and he men; in fuch manner as the Cannon is hipkept them not only to fight for Sparta, but dered from doing execution, in most of the to hold the City in obedience to himself per- battels fought in these our times. The merforce. Wherefore it behoved him not to cenaries of the Tyrant prevailed at length: force. Wherefore it behaves, that were favo-take part with the Acheans, that were favo-rers of liberty; but to firengthen himfelf (as Polybins well observet) by furmounting Polyb bind. by friendship of the #tolians: who, in making their opposites in degree of courage; where-Alliances, took no further notice of vice or in usually the hired Souldiers of Tyrants vertue, than as it had reference to their own exceed those that are waged by free States. profit. The people also of Lacedamon, For as it is true, that a free people are much through their inveterate hatred unto the more valiant than they which live oppressed Argives, Acheans, and Macedonians, were by Tyranny, fince the one, by doing their in like fort (all or most of them) inclinable best in figl t, have hope to acquire someto the Ætolian Faction. Very unwifely. For what beneficial to themselves, whereas the in feeking to take revenge upon those, that other do fight (as it were) to affure their had lately hindered them from getting the own servitude: so the Mercenaries of a Ty-Lordship of Peloponnesus; they hindered rant, being made partakers with him in the themselves thereby from recovering the Ma- fruits of his prosperity, have as good cause flery of their own City. This affection of to maintain his quarrel as their own; whereas the Spartans, together with the regard of they that serve under a free State, have no his own security, and no small hope of good other motive to do manfully, than their that would follow, fuffered not Machanidas bare stipend. Further than this, when a to be idle; but alwayes made him ready to free State hath gotten the victory, many fall upon his neighbours backs, and take of companies (if not all) of forreign Auxiliatheirs what he could, whilest they were en- ries are presently cast; and therefore such forced, by greater necessity, to turn face good fellows will not take much pains to another way. Thus had he often done, espe- bring the war to an end. But the victory of cially in the ablence of Philip: whose sudden a Tyrant, makes him stand in need of more coming into those parts, or some other op- such helpers; because that after it he doth position made against him, had usually made wrong to more, as having more subjects; and him fail of his attempts. At the present he therefore stands in sear of more, that should was stronger in men, than were the Achaans, seek to take revenge upon him. The stipenand thought his own men better Souldiers diaries of the Ackaans, being forced to give ground, were urged fo violently in their re-Whilest Philip therefore was busied else-treat by those of Machanidas, that shortly where, he entered the Country of the Man- they betook themselves to flight: and could tineans: being not without hope to do as not be fraid by any perfuafions of Philopa-Clemenes had done before himsyea and permen, but ran away quite beyond the battel haps to get the * Lordship of Peloponnesus, as of the Acheans. This disafter had been sufhaving fronger friends and weaker oppofition, than Cleomenes had found. But Fhi- of the day; had he not wifely observed the lopemen was ready to entertain him at Man-demeanour of Machanidas, and found in him by the flight of their companions. But when this his raffiness had carried him out of Philip having peace with Rome, and with all fight, Philopamen advanced towards the Lacedemonians that stood before him. There lay between them athwart the Country a long ditch, without water at that time; and therefore passable (as it seemed) without much difficulty, especially for Foot. The Lacedamonians adventured over it, as think- ed they indeed after a while (fuch was their ing themselves better fouldiers than the discipline and continual exercise) to ac-Acheans; who had in a manner already lost count themselves in matter of war inferiour the day But hereby they greatly disordered to any, that should have brought against their own Battel; and had no fooner the them no great odds of number. As forthe foremost of them recovered the further Macedonian, he made no great use of them. bank, than they were floutly charged by the But when he had once concluded peace with Achains, who drave them headlong into the the Romans and Ætolians, he studied how ditch again. Their first ranks being broken, to enlarge his Dominion Eastward; fince all the rest began to shrink: so as Philopemen the fortune of his friends the Carthaginians getting over the ditch, eafily chaced them declined in the West. He took in hand maout of the Field. Thilopamen knew better ny matters together, or very neerly togehow to use his advantage, than Machanidas ther, and some of them not honest wherehad done. He suffered not all his Army to in if the Acheans would have done him disband and follow the chace, but retained fervice, they must by helping him to oppress with him a sufficient strength, for the custo- others that never had wronged him, have dy of a bridge that was over the ditch, by taught him the way how to deal which he knew that the Tyrant must come with themselves. He greatly hated Attalus back. The Tyrant with his Mercenaries re- King of Pergamus, who had joyned with the turning from the chace, looked very heavily Romans and Etolians in war against him. when he faw what was fallen out. Yet, with a lusty troop of Horse about him, he made vet a Nobleman, otherwise than as he was towards the bridge: hoping to find the Ache- emobled by his own, and by his Fathers ans in disorder; and to set upon their backs, vertue. His fortune began in Philetarus his as they were carelesly pursuing their Vi- Uncle : who being guelded, by reason of a ctory. But when he and his Company faw milhap which he had when he was a child, Philogemen ready to make good the bridge grew afterwards thereby to be the more against them; then began every one to look, estreemed: as great men in those times rewhich way he might flift for himself. The posed much considence in Eunuchs, whose Tyrant, with no more than two in his com- affections could not be obliged unto wives pany, rode along the ditch fide; and fearch- or children. He was entertained into the faed for an easie passage over. He was easily mily of Docimus, a Captain following Antidiscovered by his purple Cassock, and the gonus the first; and after the death of Anticostly trappings of his Horse. Fhilopamen gonus, he accompanied his Master, that betherefore leaving the charge of the bridge took himself to Lysimachus King of Thrace. unto another coasted him all the way as he Lysimachus had a good opinion of him; and rode; and falling upon him at length in the put him in truft with his money and acditch it felf, as he was getting over it, flew him there with his own hand. There died in of this King, that grew a bloody Tyrant; this Battel on the Lacedamonians fide about he fled into Afia, where he feized upon the four thousand: and more than four thoufand were taken prifoners. Of the Achean lents belonging to Lysimachus. The town Mercenaries, probable it is, that the loss was not greatly cared for; fince that War he offered unto Selenem the first, that then was at an end, and for their money they was ready to give Lysimachus battel. His might hire more when they should have need.

LIIIII

o. VI.

The fifth Book of the first Part

Greece, prepares against Asia. Of the Kings of Pergamus, Cappadocia, Pontus, Paphlagonia, Bithynia, and their Lineages. Of the Galatians.

Y this victory the Achaens learned to Think well of themselves. Neither need-

This Attalus, though a King, was scarce counts. But when at length he stood in fear Town of Pergamus, and nine thousand taand money, together with his own service, offer was kindly accepted, but never performed; for that seleucus, having flain Lysimachus, died shortly after himself, before he made use of Phileterus or his money. So this Eunuch still retained Pergamus, with the Country round about it; and reigned therein twenty years as an absolute King. He fuch time, they were raised by the for- sharp exaction whereof, they had no more tune of this Eunuch. Phileterus left his respect unto Attalus, than to any that had Kingdom to the elder of these, or to the worse deserved of them. By this they comton of the elder, called Eumenes. This Eu- pelled him to fight against them: and he bemenes enlarged his Kingdom; making his ing victorious, compelled them to contain advantage of the diffention between selen- themselves within the bounds of that Proens Calinicus and Antiochus Hierax, the vince, which took name from them in time tons of the fecond Antiochus. He fought a following, and was called Galatia. Yet conbattel with Hierax, neer unto Sardis, and tinued they still to oppress the weakest of won the victory. At which time, to animate their neighbours, and to fill up the Armies his men against the Gaules that served under of those that could best hire them. his Enemy, he used a pretty device. He wrote The Kings reigning in those parts, were the word * Victory upon the hand of his the posterity of such, as had saved them-Soothfayer, in such colours as would easily selves and their Provinces, in the slothful come off: and when the hot liver of the reign of the Persians; or in the busine times beaft that was facrificed, had cleanly taken of Alexander, and his Macedonian followers. the print of the letters, He published this The Cappadocians were very ancient. For unto his Army as a Miracle, plainly fore- the first of their line had married with Atosshewing that the gods would be affistant in sa, fister unto the great King Cyrus. Their that Battel.

tation; and found themselves work in quar- have already sometimes mentioned. rels of their own making. They caused Prustas King of Bithynia to cease from his war against Bizantium. Whereunto when he had condescended; they nevertheless within a while after invaded his Kingdom. He obtained against them a great victory; and used it with great cruelty, sparing neither age nor fex. But the fwarm of them increafing, they occupied the Region about Hellepont: where, in feating themselves, they were much beholding unto Attalus. Never-had two brethren: of which the elder is thelefs, prefuming afterwards upon their faid to have been a poor Carter; and the strength, they forced their Neighbour Prinvounger perhaps not much better, before ces and Cities to pay them tribute: in the Country was taken from them by Perdiccas, After this Victory, he grew a dreadful as is shewed before. But the son of that enemy to Selencus: who never durft attempt King, whom Perdiceas crucified, espying his to recover from him, by War, the Territory time while the Macedonians were at civil that he had gotten and held. Finally, when wars among themselves; recovered his Dohe had reigned two and twenty years, he minion, and passed it over to his off-spring. died by a furfeit of over-much drink, and The Kings of Pontus had also their beginleft his Kingdom to Attalus, of whom we ning from the Perstan Empire; and are faid now entreat, that was fon unto Attalus the to have iffued from the royal house of Achayoungest brother of Phileterus. Attalus was menes. The Paphlagonians derived themselves an undertaking Prince, very bountiful, and from Pylemenes, a King that affifted Priamus no less valiant. By his own proper forces he at the war of Troy. These, applying themrestored his friend Ariarathes the Cappado- selves unto the times, were alwayes conformcian into his Kingdom, whence he had been able unto the strongest. The Ancestors of expelled. He was grievously molested by Prusias had begun to reign in Bythinia, some Acheus: who setting up himself as King few generations before that of the great against Antiochus the Great, reigned in the Alexander. They lay somewhat out of the leffer Asia. He was besieged in his own City Macedonians way: by whom therefore, haof Pergamus: but by the help of the Tetto- ving other employment, they were the less sage, a Nation of the Gauls, whom he called molested. Calantus, one of Alexanders Capover out of Thruce, he recovered all that he tains, made an expedition into their Counhad loft. When these Gauls had once got- try, where he was vanquished. They had ten footing in Asia, they never wanted em- afterwards to do with a Lieutenant of Antiployment, but were either entertained by gonus, that made them somewhat more humsome of the Princes reigning in those quar-ble. And thus they shuffled, as did the ters, or interposed themselves without invi-rest, untill the reign of Prussias, whom we

ø. VII.

The Town of Chios taken by Philip, at the instance of Prusias, King of Bithynia, and cruelly destroyed. By this and the like actions, Philip grows hateful to many of the Greeks: and is warred upon by Attalus King of Pergamus, and by the R.hodians.

Rustas as a neighbour King, had many quarrels with Attalus; whose greatness LIIIII 2

he suspected. He therefore frrengthened him- faith of this King. But most of all others felf, by taking to wife the daughter of Phi- was Attalia moved with confideration of the lip; as Attalus, on the contrary fide, entred Macadonians violent ambition, and of his into a strict Consederacy with the Etolians, own estate. He had much to lose; and was Rhedians, and other of the Greeks. But not without hope of getting much, if he when Philip had ended his Atolian war, and could make a strong party in Greece. He had was deviling with Antiochus about sharing already, as a new King, followed the exambetween them two the Kingdome of Egypt, ple of Alexanders Captains, in purchasing wherein Ptolomy Philopater, a friend unto with much liberality the love of the Albethem both, was newly dead; and had left wians; which were notable Trumpeters of his fon Fiolomy Epiphanes, a young child, his other mens vertue, having loft their own. On heir: the Ejikinian entreated this his Fa- the friendthip of the Ætolians he had cause ther-in-law to come over into Afia, there to to prefume; having bound them unto him by win the Town of the Giani, and beftow it good offices, many & great, in their late war upon him. Profess had no right unto the with Philip. The Rhodians that were mighty Town, nor just matter of quarrel against it: at Sea, and held very good intelligence with but it was fully feated for him, and there- the Egyptians, Syrians, and many other with a rich. Philip came, as one that could Princes and States, he eafily drew into a not well deny to help his Son-in-law. But streight alliance with him, by their hatred hereby he mightily offended no small part newly conceived against Philip. of Greece. Emballadours came to him whilft he lay at the fiege, from the Rhodians, and most of all, in the ready affiftance of the divers other States: intreating him to for- Hhodians, Attalus prepared to deal with the fake the enterprite. He gave dilatory, but Macedonian by open war. It had been unotherwife gentle answers: making shew as seasonable to procrastinate, and expect if he would condescend to their request, whereto the doings of the enemy tended; when he intended nothing less. At length since his desire to fasten upon Asia was manihe got the Town where, even in presence fest, and his falshood no less manifest, than of the Embassadours, of whose solicitation was such his defire. They met with him he had feemed fo regardful, he omitted no shortly not far from Chior, and fought with part of cruelty. Hereby he rendred him him a battel at Sea: wherein though Attalua felf odious to his neighbours, as a perfidi- was driven to run his own ship on ground, ous and cruel Prince. Especially his fast was hardly escaping to land:though the Admiral detefted of the Rhodians, who had made of the Rhodians took his deaths wound and vehement intercession for the poor Ciani: though Philip after the battel took harbour and were advertised by Emballadours of under a Promontory, by which they had purpose sent unto them from Philip, That fought, so that he had the gathering of the howfoever it were in his power to win the wracks upon the shore: Yet for a much as Town as soon as he listed, yet in regard of he had suffered far greater loss of ships, and his love to the Rhodians, he was contented men, than had the enemy; and fince he durft to give it over. And by this his clemency, not in few dayes after put forth to Sea, when the Embassadours said, that he would mani- Attalus and the Rhodians came to brave him fest unto the world what slanderous in his Port; the honour of the victory was tongues they were, which noised abroad adjudged to his enemies. This notwithfuch reports, as went of his falshood and standing, philip afterwards besieged and oppression. Whilest the Embassadours were won some towns in Caria: whether only in declaming at Rhodes in the Theater to this a bravery, and to despight his opposites or effect; there came some that made a true whether upon any hopeful desire of conrelation of what had hapned: shewing that quest, it is uncertain. The stratagem, by Philip had facked and destroyed the Town which he won Prinassus worthy of noting. of Cior, and, after a cruel flaughter of the He attempted it by a mine: and finding the Inhabitants, had made flaves of all that earth fo ftony, that it refifted his work; he escaped the fword. If the Rhodians took nevertheless commanded the Pioners to this in great despight, no less were the Ætolians inflamed against him: since they had the night time he raised great mounts about drawn from their Confederacy to his own to the Towns men, that by his undermining, what little trust was to be reposed in the two acres of their wall stood only upon

CHAP. IV.

Upon confidence in these his friends, but fent a Captain to take charge of the Town; the entrance of the mine, to breed an opinibeing warned before by his doings at Lyft- on in the befreged, that the work went marmachia and Chalcedon (which he had with- velloufly forward. At length he feat word entred by a Breach, they should expect no all their mony: neither had they as vet rephilip could not fray to fettle himfelf in those parts. Attalus and the Rhodians were too firong for him at Sea, and compelled him to make haste back into Macedon; whither they followed him all the way in manner of purfuit.

6. VIII.

The Romans, after their Carthaginian war. feek matter of quarrel against Philip. The Athenians upon Slight cause, proclaim war against Philip; moved thereto by Attalus; whom they flatter. Philip wins divers Towns; and makes peremptory answer to the Roman Embassadour. The furious re-Solution of the Abydeni.

Hefe Afiatique matters, which no way to make a noise in Rome; and fill the peo- things must be published abroad, if only to ples heads, if not with a defire of making predifpole men unto the war, and give it war in Macedon, at least with a conceit that the more honest colour. it were expedient fo to do. The Roman Senate was perfectly informed of the flate of therefore could not thrive by intermedling those Eastern Countries; and knew, that in the affairs of those that were more mighthere was none other Nation than the ty than himself. He was too unskilful, or Greeks, which lay between them and the otherwise too unapt, to retain his old Lordship of Asia. These Greeks were facti- friends: yet would be needs be seeking new ous, and seldome or never at peace. As for enemies. And he found them such, as he dethe Macedonian; though length of time, and served to have them: for he offered his help continual dealings in Greece ever fince the to their destruction, when they were in mireigns of Fhilip and Alexander, had left no fery, and had done him no harm. It behoved difference between him and the Naturals: him therefore, either to have strained his yet most of them abhorred his Dominion, forces to the utmost in making war upon because he was originally forsooth a Barba- them; or in delisting from that injurious rian: many of them hated him upon anci- course, to have made amends for the wrongs entquarrels: and they that had been most past, by doing friendly offices of his own beholding unto him, were nevertheless wea- accord. But he, having broken that League ry of him, by reason of his personal faults. of peace, which is of all other the most naespecially since the divisions of the Country ly provoked; was afterwards too fondly apt to take Counsel apart for it self; with- the Romans, because of the written Covenants out much regarding the generality. But of peace between him and them. There is the poor Commonalty of Rome had no great not any form of Oath, whereby such Araffection to such a chargeable enterprise. ticles of peace can be held inviolable, save + Sir Frans wooden props, to which if he gave fire, and they had given by Loan to the Republike, mercy. The Prinaffians little thought, that he ceived, neither did they receive until fifteen had fetch all his earth and rubbilh by night or fixteeu years after this, their whole fum a great way off, to raise up those heaps back again. That part of payment also which they faw; but rather that all had which was already made, being not in prebeen extracted out of the mine. Wherefore fent mony, but much of it in Land: it bethey fuffered themselves to be out-faced, hoved them to rest a while; and bestow the and gave up the Town as loft, which the more diligence in tilling their grounds, by enemy had no hope to win by force. But how much they were the less able to bestow cost. Wherefore they took no pleasure to hear, that Attalus and the Rhodians had fent Embassadours to solicite them against Philip, with report of his bold attempts in Asta: or that M. Aurelius, their Agent in Greece, had fent letters of the fame tenour to the Senate, and magnified his intelligence, by setting out the preparations of this dangerous enemy, that folicited not only the Towns upon the Continent, but all the Islands in those Seas, visiting them in person, or sending Embassadours, as one that meant thortly to hold war with the Romans upon their own ground. Philip had indeed no fuch intent : neither was he much too strong either of himself, or by his alliance in Greece, to be refifted by Attalus and the Rhodians; especially with the help of the Ætolians their good friends, and (in a manconcerned the Romans, yet ferved well ner) his own professed enemies. But such

Philip was a man of ill condition; and All this gave hope, that the affairs of Greece tural, binding all men to offer no violence would not long detain the Roman Armies: willingly, unless they think themselves justwere such, that every petty Estate was perswaded, that he might well be secure of

They were already quite exhausted, by that grievous war with Hannibal: wherein ellips, which whilest it binds one party, or v terms.

CHAP. IV.

that he shall be a loser who starts from the Citizens, with their wives and children, in Conditions; it may fo long (and fo long as folemn a pomp as they could devise, to only) be prefumed, that there shall be no meet and honour the King. They enterbreach. Till Hannibal was vanquished, the tained the Romans that were with him, in Romans never hearkened after Philip: for very loving manner: but towards Attalus necessity made them let him alone. But himself they omitted no point of observance when once they had a peace with Carthage; which their flattery could suggest. At his then was the River of styx dryed up: and first coming into the City, they called the then could they fwear as * Mercury did in people to Affembly : where they defired supplies, the Comedy, by their own felves, even by him to honour them with his presence, and their good fwords, that they had good reason let them hear him speak. But he excused to make war upon him. The voyage of so- himfelf; faying, That with an evil grace he pater into Africk, and the present war against should recount unto them those many be-Attalus, were matter of quarrel as much nefits, by which he studied to make them as needed: or if this were not enough; know what love he bore them. Wherefore the Athenians helped to furnish them with it was thought fit, that he should deliver in

of no more then their own barren Territory, claration were; first, what he had willingly took state upon them nevertheless, as in done for their fake: then, what had lately their ancient fortune. Two young Gentlemen passed between him and Philip: lastly, an exof Acarnania entring into the Temple of Ce- | hortation unto them, to declare themselves wes, in the dayes of Initiation (wherein were against the Macedonian, whilest he with delivered the mysteries of Religion, or ra- the Rhodians and the Romans, were willing ther of idolatrous superstition, vainly said to and ready to take their part: which if they be available unto felicity after this life) now refused to do, he protested, that afterdiscovered themselves by some importinent wards it would be vain to crave his help. questions, to be none of those that were ini- | There needed little intreaty: for they were tiated. Hereupon they were brought before as willing to proclaim the war, as he to the officers: and though it was apparent, defire it. As for other matters, they loaded that they came into the place by meer error, him with immoderate honours: and obtainnot thinking to have therein done amissyet, ed, That unto the ten Tribes, whereof the as it had been for some hainous crime, they body of their Citizens confisted, should were put to death. All their Country-men be added another, and called after his at home took this in ill part; and fought to name; as if he were in part one of their revenge it as a publick injury, by war upon | Founders. To the Rhodians they also dethe Athenians. Procuring therefore of Phi-creed a Crown of Gold, in reward of their lip some Macedonians to help them , they vertue; and made all the Rhodians free Cientred into Attica: who wasted it with fire tizens of Athens. and fword; and carried thence a great booty. This indignity stirred up the highminded Athenians; and made them think part; Attalus and the Rhodians taking all upon doing more, than they had ability to upon them. But while these were vainly misperform. All which at the present they could spending the time, in seeking to draw the do, was to fend Embassadors to King Attalus; Atolians to their party: that contrary to gratulating his happy success against Philip, their old manner were glad to be at quiet: and intreating him to visit their City. Atta- Philip won the Towns of Maronea and Alus was hereto the more willing, because he nus, with many other strong places about understood that the Roman Embassiadors, the Hellespont. Likewise passing over the hovering about Greece for matter of intelli- Hellespont, he laid siege unto Abydus; and gence, had a purpose to be there at the same won it, though he was fain to stay there time. So he went thither, accompanied, be- long. The Town held out, rather upon fides his own followers, with some of the an obstinate resolution, and hope of succour Rhodians. Landing in the Piraus, he found from Attalus and the Rhodians, than any the Romans there, with whom he had much great ability to defend it felf against so mighfriendly conference: they rejoycing that he ty an Enemy. But the Rhodians fent thither continued enemy to Philip; and he being only one Quadrireme Gallie: and Attalia no les glad, when he heard of their purpole no more than three hundred men, fartoo to renew the war. The Athenians came out weak an aid to make good the place. The both unto performance, making it apparent, of their City, all the Magistrates, Priests, and writing, what he would have to be pro-The Athenians, being at this time Lords pounded. He did so. The points of his De-great negligence of them that had taken fo fador ; and had the Town immediately much upon them.

lius, and P. Sempronius, were fent unto Ptolo- ry one of them, and fet their Town on fire; lamy Epiphanes King of Egypt, to acquaint binding themselves hereto by a fearful oath him with their victory against Hannibal and when Philip denied to accept them upon the Carthaginians; as also to thank him for reasonable conditions. But having in despehis favour unto them shewed in that war; rate fight, once repelling him from the and to defire the continuance thereof, if Breach, lost the greatest number of their they should need it against Fhilip. This Egyp- Youth; it was thought meet by the Govertian King was now in the third or fourth nours and Ancients of the City to change year of his reign, which (as his father this resolution; and take such peace as could Philopater had done before him) be began a be gotten. So they carried out their Gold very young boy. The courtesie for which the and Silver to Philip: about which, whilest Romans were to thank him, was that out of they were busie, the memory of their oath Egypt they had lately been supplied with wrought so effectually in the younger sort: corn, in a time of extream Dearth; when that, by exhortation of the Priests, they fell the miseries of War had made all their own to murdering their women, children, and Provinces unable to relieve them. This mcf- themselves. Hereof the King had so little fage could not but be welcome to the Egyp-And therefore it might in reason be hoped, that he, or his Councel for him, should offer to supply the Romans with corn: since this their Macedonian Expedition concerned his The Romans decree war against Philip, and Estate no less than theirs.

But as the errand was for the most part complemental; so had the Embassadors both leifure and direction from the Senate, to look unto the things of Greece by the way. Wherefore they agreed, that M. Emylius the youngest of them should step aside, and them with the like. Do you also (faid Emylius) requite these poor Abydeni with such ter-

Roman Embassadors wondred much at this | than the Roman. So he dismissed the Embasyielded to his discretion. The people had These Embassadors, C. Claudius, M. Emy- entertained a resolution, to have died evecompassion, that he said, he would grant the tian: fince it was well know, how Philip and Abydeni three dayes leifure to die: and to Antiochus had combined themselves against that end forbade his men to enter the town; him, conspiring to take away his Kingdom. or hazzard themselves in interrupting the violence of those mad fools.

v. IX.

fend one of their Confuls into Greece, as it were in defence of the Athenians their Confederates. How poor the Athenians were at this time both in quality and estate.

"His calamity of the Abydeni, was likened by the Romans unto that of the Savisit Philip, to trie if he could make him guntines: which indeed it neerly resembled: leave the fiege of Abydus; which else he though Rome was not alike interested in the was like to carry. Emplius, coming to Phi- quarrel. But to help themselves with prelip, tells him that his doings are contrary to tence for the War, they had found out the League that he had made with the Ro- another Saguntum, even the City of Athens: mans. For Attalus and the Rhodians, upon which if the Macedonian (hould win, then whom he made war, were Confederate with rested there no more to do, than that he Rome: and the Town of Abydus, which he should presently embarque himself for was now befieging, had a kind of depen- Italy, whither he would come, not as Handancy upon Attalus. Hereto Philip answered, nibal from Saguntum, in five moneths, but in That Attalus and the Rhodians had made the short space of five days sayling. Thus war upon him : and that he did only requite P. Sulpitius the Conful told the multitude, when he exhorted them to make War upon Philip; which at his first propounding they rible War, for any the like Invasion by them had denied. The example of Pyrrhus was first made upon you? The King was angry to by him alledged; to shew, what Philip, hear himself thus taken short: and there- with the power of a greater Kingdom, fore he roundly made answer to Emylius: might dare to undertake: as also the for-It is your youth, Sir, and your beauty, and (above tunate voyage of Scipio into Africk; to shew all,) your being a Roman, that makes you thus the difference of making War abroad, and presumptuous. But I would wish je to remem- admitting it into the bowels of their own ber the League that ye have made with me, and Country. By such arguments was the Comto keep it : If ye do otherwise, I will make ye monalty of Rome induced to believe, that understand, that the Kingdome, and Name of this War with the Macedonian was both Macedon is in matter of War, no less noble just and necessary. So it was decreed: and towards Macedon, having that Province allotted unto him before, and all things in declining Age of their Fortune and Vertue. a readiness, by order from the Senate 5 who followed other Motives than the people must be acquainted with. Great thanks were given to the Athenian Embassadors, for the Athenians themselves, they that had of their constancy (as was said) in not been wont, in ancient times to undertake the changing their faith at fuch times as they flood in danger of being befreged. And indeed great thanks were due to them, though not upon the fame occasion. For the people of Rome had no cause to think it a benefit unto themselves; that any Greek open-ones, not much better than long boats. Town, refuling to fue unto the Macedonian Yet thought they not themselves a whit the for peace, requested their help against him. But the Senate, intending to take in hand glory and vertue of their Ancestors, as if it the Conquest of the Eastern parts, had reafon to give thanks unt those, that ministred the occasion. Since therefore it was an untrue fuggestion, That Philip was making ready for Italy: and fince neither Attalus. the Khodians, nor any other State in those quarters, defired the Romans to give them protection: these busie-headed Athenians, who falling out with the Acarnanians, and confequently with Philip, a matter of Maygame, (as was shewed before) sent Embaffactors into all parts of the World. even to Ptolomy of Egypt, and to the Romans, as well as to Attalus and others their neighborrs; must be accepted as cause of the War, and Authors of the benefit thence redounding.

Nevertheless as it loves to fall out where the meaning differs from the pretence; the doings of P. Sulpitius the Conful were fuch, as might have argued Athens to be the least part of his care. He failed not about Peloponnesus, but took the ready way to Mace- best a while to sit still, and try what might don, and landing about the River of Apples, be done for obtaining of peace, or whether betwee Dyrrhacium and Apollonia, there to make opposition, and resist these Invaders began the War. Soon upon his coming, with all his forces: he received advertilethe Athenian Embassadours were with him ment from Chalcis of a grievous mishap there and craved his help: whereof they could befallen him, by procurement of the Athemake no benefit whilest he was far from nians. For C. Claudius with his Romans, them. They bemoaned themselves as men finding no such work at Athens as they had befieged, and intreated him to deliver expected, or was answerable to the fame them. For which cause he sent unto them that went abroad, purposed to do somewhat C.Claudius with twenty Gallies, and a com- that might quicken the war, and make his petent number of men: but the main of his own imployment better. He grew soon weaforces he retained with him, for the profe- ry of fitting as a Scar-crow, to fave the cution of a greater defign. The Athenians Athenians grounds from spoil; and therefore were not indeed belieged: only some Ro- gladly took in hand a bufiness of more vers from Chalcis, in the Isle of Enbaa, and importance. The Town of Chalcis was vefome bands of adventurers out of Corinth, ry negligently guarded by the Macedonian used to take their ships, and spoil their Souldiers therein, for that there was no Enefields, because they had declared themselves my at hand: and more negligently by the against King Philip, that was Lord of these Towns-men, who reposed themselves upon two Towns. The robberies done by these their Garrison. Hereof Claudian having immediately the fame Conful hafted away Pyrats and Free-booters, were by the more cloquent than war-like Athenians, in this called a Siege. From fuch detriment the arrival of claudius, and shortly after of three Rhodian Gallies, eafily preferved them. As conquests of Egypt, Cyprus, and Cicil; to make war upon the great Persian King, and to hold fo much of Greece in Subjection, as made them redoubtable unto all the rest; had now no more than three ships, and those worse men, but stood as highly upon the had been still their own.

o. X.

The Town of Chalcis in Euboea taken and fackt by the Romans & their Associates that lay in Garrison at Athens. Philip attempteth to take Athens by furprise; wasteth the Country about, and makes a journy into Pe-Ioponnesis. Of Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedæmon, and his wife. Philip offers to make war against Nabis for the Achaans. He returneth home through Attica, which he (boileth again: and provides against the Enemies. Some exploits of the Romans. Divers Princes joyn with them. Great labous ring to draw the Ætolians into the war.

Hilip returning home from Abydus, heard news of the Roman Conful his being about Apollonia. But ere he stirred forth togive him entertainment, or perhaps before he had well refolved, whether it were marched from thence away speedily to- them unexpected. ward Athens: thinking it not inpossible to ready for defence. Within a few hours Phi- spoiling the men, then hers in sleecing their lip was there; who feeing the many lights, wives; whom she would never suffer to be and other figns of busie preparation usual in at quiet, till they had presented her with of his coming; and therefore willed his fo delighted with her property, that he men to repose themselves till it were day. It caused an Image to be made, lively repreis like, that the paucity of his followers fenting her; and apparelled it with fuch though Claudius were not yet returned men Hereof he made use, when he meant to (who was to fetch a compass about by sea, try the vertue of his Rhetorick. For calling and had no cause of haste) yet having in the unto him some rich man, of whose money he Town some mercenary Souldiers, which they was desirous; he would bring him into the

advertisement, sailed thither by night, for kept of their own, besides the great multifear of being descried: and arriving there tude of Citizens; they adventured to issue a little before break of day, took it by Sca- forth at a gate, whereto they faw Philip lado. He used no mercy, but slew all that make approach. The King was glad of this; came in his way: and wanting mento keep reckoning all those his own, that were thus it. (unless he should have left the heartless hardy. He therefore only willed his men to Athenians to their own defence) he set it on follow his example; and presently gave fire; consuming the Kings Magazines of charge upon them. In that fight he gave fin-Corn, and all provisions for War, which gular proof of his valour; and beating down were plenteoufly filled. Neither were he many of the Enemies with his own hands, and his Affociates contented with the great drave them with great flaughter back into abundance of spoil which they carried the City. The heat of his courage transportaboard their ships, and with inlarging all ed him further than discretion would have those, whom Philip, as in a place of most allowed, even to the very gate. But he retifecurity, kept there imprisoned: but to red without harm taking; for that they flew their despight and hatred unto the which were upon the Towers over the gate. King, they overthrew and brake in pieces could not use their casting weapons against the Statues to him there erected. This him, without much indangering their own done, they hasted away towards Athens: people that were thronging before him into where the news of their exploit was like to the City. There was a temple of Hereules, a be joyfully welcomed. The King lay then place of exercise, with a Grove, and many at Demetrias, about some 20. miles thence; goodly Monuments besides, neer adjoyning whither then these tidings, or part of them, unto Athens: of which he spared none; but were brought him, though he faw that it suffered the rage of his anger to extend, was too late to remedy the matter; yet he even unto the sepulchres of the dead. The made all haste to take revenge. He thought next day came the Romans, and some Comto have taken the Athenians, with their trufty panies of Attalus his men from Egina; too friends, busie at work in ransacking the late in regard of what was already past; but Town, and loading themselves with spoil: in good time to prevent him of satisfying but they were gone before his coming. Five his anger to the full, which as yet he had thousand light-armed foot he had with him, not done. So he departed from thence to and three hundred horse: whereof leaving | Corinth, and hearing that the Acheans held at Chalcis only a few to bury the dead, he a Parliament at Argos, he came thither to

The Acheans were deviling upon war: take his enemies in the joy of their Victory, which they intended to make against Nabis as full of negligence, as they had taken Chal- the Tyrant of Lacedamon: who being startcis. Neither had he much failed of his expe- ed up in the room of Machanidas, did greater ctation, if a Foot-post that stood Scout for mischief than any that went before him. This the City upon the borders, had not descried Tyrant relied wholly upon his mercenahim afar off, and swiftly carried word of ries: and of his subjects had no regard. He his approach to Athens. It was mid-night was a cruel oppreffor, a greedy extortioner when this Post came thither: who found upon those that lived under him; and one all the Town asleep, as fearless of any dan- that in his natural condition smelt rankly ger. But the Magistrates, hearing this re- of the Hangman. In these qualities, his port, caused a trumpet out of their Citadel wife Apega was very fitly matched with to found the Alarm, and with all speed made him, since his dexterity was no greater in fuch a case, understood that they had news all their jewels and apparel. Her husband was tiv. 1.32. did help well to animate the Citizens, which coftly garments as she used to wear. But it Except. beheld them from the walls. Wherefore was indeed an Engine, ferving to torment Polybel 13.

Mmmmmm

and there use all his art of perswasion, to get Nabis, he brake up the Assembly, with every what he defired, as it were by good will. mans good liking; whereas in former times, If he could not fo fpeed, but was answered he had been thought no better than one of with excuses; then took he the refractory the Kings Paralites. denyer by the hand, and told him, that per- It grieved the King to have thus failed haps his Wife Apega (who fate by in a Chair) in his purpose with the Acheans. Neverthecould perfivade more effectually. So he led less he gathered up among them a few him to the image, that role up and opened | Voluntaries; and foreturned by Corinth back the arms as it were for imbracement. Those into Attica. There he met with Fhilocles arms were full of that piron nails, the like one of his Captains, that with two thousand whereof was also flicking in the breafts, men had been doing what harm he might though hidden with her clothes: and here-unto the Country. With this addition of with the griped the poor wretch, to the strength, he attempted the Castle of Eleaging, pleasure of the Tyrant, that laughed at his the haven of Pyreus, and even the Chy of cruel death. Such, and worfe (for it were Athens. But the Romans made such haste were long to tell all here that is spoken of after him by Sca, thrusting themselves into him) was Nabis in his government. In his every of these places; that he could no more dealings abroad he combined with the Æto- than wreak his anger upon those goodly lians, as Machanidas and Lycurgus had done Temples, with which the Land of Allies before him. By these he grew into acquain- was at that time singularly beautified so he tance with the Romans; and was compre- destroyed all the works of their notable their own fafety in the Towns.

1014

them not to trouble themselvs with the care his friendship. Thus was Philip occuof this business; for almuch as he alone would pied. ease them of this War, and take the burden upon himself. With exceeding joy and upon the River of Apfus. Thence helent thanks they accepted of this kind offer. forth Apuftius his Lieutenant, with part of But then he told them, That whileft he the Army, to waste the borders of Micedon. made War upon Lacedemon, he ought not to Apuftius took fundry Cassles and Towns; leave his own Townsunguarded. In which using such extremity of sword and fire at respect he thought they would be pleased Antipatria, the first good Town which he to fend a few men to Corinth, and fome Com- won by force, that none durst afterwards panies into the Ille of Eubæa; that so he make resistance, unless they knew themselves bis. Immediately they found out his device; Conful with his spoil, he was charged in the might securely pursue the War against Nawhich was none other, than to engage their Reer, upon the passage of a brook, by Nation in his War against the Romans. Athenagoras a Macedonian Captain: but the Wherefore their Prator Cycliades made him Romans had the better, and killing many answer, That their Laws forbade them to of these enemies, took prisoners many more, conclude any other matters in their Parliament, than those for which it was affembled.

So passing the Decree was which the last of the conclude any other matters in their Parliament, than those for which it was affembled. So passing the Decree, upon which they had The success of this Expedition, though room where this counterfeit Apega stood, agreed before, for preparing War against hended in the League which they made with Artificers, wrought in excellent Marble; Philip, at the end of their former War. Of which they had in plenty of their own: or Philopemens vertue he stood in sear: and having long ago been Masters of the Sea, therefore dufft not provoke the Achaens, as had brought from other places, where belt long as they had fuch an able Commander. choice was found. Neither did he only But when Cycliades, a far worse Captain, was pull all down: but caused his men to break their Prætor, and all, or the greatest part of the very stones, that they might be unsertheir Mercenaries were discharged; Phi-viceable to their reparation. His loss at lopemen being also gone into Crete, to fol- Chalers being thus revenged upon Athens, low his belowed occupation of War; then he went home into Macedon: and there did Nabir fall upon their Territory; and made provision, both against the Roman wafting all the fields, made them diftrust Conful that lay aboout Apollonia; and against the Dardanians, with other his bad Against this Tyrant the Acheans were neighbours, which were likely to infest him. preparing for War, when Philip came among Among his other cares, he forgot not the them , and had fet down what proportion Ætolians: to whose Parliament, shortly to of Souldiers every City of their Corporato be held at Naupattus, he fent an Émtion thould furnish our. But Philip willed bassage, requesting them to continue in > Sulpitius the Roman Consul encamped able to hold out. Returning towards the

it were not great, yet ferved to draw into then against it, who fought to break it now. the Roman friendship those that had for- It would have troubled the Romans, to merly no good inclination to the Macedoni- frame a good answer to these objections. For an. These were Pleuratus, the son of scerdi- the Macedonian had spoken the very truth. laidas the Illyrian: Aminander King of the in shewing whereunto this their Patronage. Athamanians, and Bato the fon of Longarus, which they offered with fuch importunity. Prince of the Dardanians. They offered did tend. Wherefore the Athenians were fet their affiltance unto the Conful, who thank- on by them to speak next: who had store ed them: and faid, That he would shortly of eloquence, and matter of recrimination make use of Pleuratus and Bato, when he en- enough, to make Philip odious. These aftred into Macedon: but that the friendship strend, that it was a great impudence in the of Aminander, whose Country lay between Macedonian Embassador, to call the Komans the Atolians and Theffaly, might be perhaps by the name of Barbarians; knowing in available with the Ætolians, to stir them what barbarous manner his own King had, up against Philip.

CHAP. IV.

good cause to be carried away after other not defended them. mens fancies. He prayed them to confider, defence of the Ætolians, and yet notwithstanding had been angry, that the Ætolians, by making peace with Philip, had no longer need of such their Patronage. What might which these Barbarians bore unto the Greeks. For even after the same fort had they lent Carthaginian Tyrants; but now both Syracuse and Messana, were subject unto the Rods and Axes of the Romans. To the same effect he alledged many examples, adding, That in like fort it would happen to the Ætoli-Greece, must not look hereafter to hold, as to consult about War and Peace: the Ro-

in few dayes past, made War upon the gods So the present care was wholly set upon themselves, by destroying all their Temples the Atolian Parliament at hand. Thither in Attica. Herewithal they made a pittiful came Embassadors from the Macedonian, Ro- reherfal of their own calamities: and said, mans, and Athenians. Of which, the Mace- that if Philip might have his will, Atolia, donian spake first, and said : That as there and all the rest of Greece, should feel the was nothing fallen out, which should occa- same that Attica had felt; yea, that Athens it fion the breach of peace between his Master self, together with Minerva, Jupiter, Ceres, and the # tolians; so was it to be hoped, that and other of the gods, were like to have they would not suffer themselves, without selt, if the Walls and the Roman arms had

Then spake the Romans: who excusing, how the Romans heretofore, had made flew, as well as they could, their own oppression as if their war in Greece tended only to the of all those in whose defence they had heretofore taken Arms, went roundly to the point in hand. They faid, that they had of late made War in the Atolians behalf, and that the Ætolians had without their conit be that made them to buffe, in obtruding | fent made peace: whereof fince the Ætolians their protection upon those that needed it | must excuse themselves, by alledging that not? Surely it was even the general hatred, the Romans, being busied with Carthage, wanted leifure to give them aid convenient; fo this excuse being now taken away, and their help to the Mamertines; and afterwards | the Romans wholly bent against their comdelivered Syracuse, when it was oppressed by mon Enemy, it concerned the Atolians to take part with them in their war & victory. unless they had rather perished with Philip.

It might eafily be perceived, that they which were so vehement, in offering their help ere it was defired, were themselves carans: who if they drew fuch masters into ried unto the War by more earnest motives, than a simple desire to help those friends, now, free Parliaments of their own, wherein with whom they had no great acquaintance. This may have been the cause, why mans would ease them of this care, and Dorymachus the Etolian Prætor shifted fend them such a Moderator, as went every them off a while with a dilatory answer: year from Rome to syracuse. Wherefore he though he told his Country-men, That by concluded, that it was best for them, whilst reserving themselves, till the matter were as yet they might, and whilst one of them as inclined one way or other, they might afyet could help the other, to continue in terwards take part with those that had the their League with Philip: with whom if at better fortune. His answer was, first, in any time, upon light occasion, they hapned general terms; That over-much haste was to fall out, they might as lightly be recon- an enemy to good counsel: for which ciled: and with whom they had three years | cause they must further deliberate, ere they ago made the peace which still continued; concluded. But coming nearer to the matalthough that the very same Romans were ter in hand, he passed a Decree, That the

Mmmmmm 2

the states, and therein conclude upon this bu- that the King was unwilling to hazzard all fines: any Law to the contrary notwithstand- at first upon a Cast, and therefore fent for ing: whereas otherwise it was unlawful to Ferseus with his Companies, to increase his treat of fuch affairs, excepting two of their own forces: yet being no less unwilling to great Parliaments, that were held at fet losetoo much in reputation; he made shew times.

skirmishing with them on his borders. The Æsolians invade his Dominions, and are the Roman Fleet.

of the Atolians. He thought them hereby ed fome notable detriment, if the Kings didifappointed in the very beginning, of one rections had been well followed. For when great help; and meant himself to dilappoint Athenagoras began to fall back, they them of another. His fon Perfeus, a very charged him so hotly, that they drave him boy, was fent to keep the Streights of Pelagonia against the Dardanians; having with as they were able. But the Captains of the him some of the Kings Councel, to govern both him and his Army. It was judged, as may feem, that the prefence of the Kings fon, how young foever, would both encourage his Followers, and terrifie the Enemies, by making them at least believe, that he was not weakly attended. And this may have been the reason, why the same Perseus, a few years before this, was in like manner in order, with Elephants in the front: a left upon the borders of Ætolia by his fa- kind of help which the Romans had never ther; whom earnest business called thence | used before, but had taken these of late another way. No danger of enemies be- | from the Carthaginians. Such are the alteing left on either hand; it was thought that rations wrought by Time. It was fcarce the Macedonian Fleet under Heraelides, above fourscore years ere this, that Pyrrhus would ferve to keep Attalus, with the carried Elephants out of Greece into Italy, 10 Rhodians and Romans, from doing harm by affright the Romans, who had never feen Sea, when the Kings back was turned: who any of those beasts before. But now the same the Conful.

Desfaretii, a people in the utmost borders of phants with them: whereof the Macedoni-Macedon towards Illyria, about the Mountains of Candavia; that running along from ence to let the Conful brave him at his Hemus in the North, until they joyn in the Trenches: wherein he did wifely; for the Ro-South with Pindus, inclose the Western man had greater need to fight, than he. sulwith skirmish. These were easily vanquished by the Romans, and driven back pleasure: even till their presumption, and his

Prator might at any time call an Affembly of into their Camp. Now although it was for a day aftet as if he would have fought. He had found the advantage of a place fit for ambush, wherein he bestowed as many as he thought meet of his Targettiers: and fo The meeting of Philip with the Romans, and gave charge to Athenagoras, one of his Captains, to provoke out the Romans to fight; instructing both him and his Targettiers. beaten home. Some doings of Attalus and how to behave themselves respectively, as opportunity should fall out. The Romans had no mistrust of any ambnis, having Hilip was glad to hear, that the Romani foughcupon the fame ground a day before, had feed no better in their folicitation | Wherefore perhaps they might have sustainto an hasty slight, and pursued him as hard Targettiers, not flaying to let themrun into the danger, discovered themselves before it was time; and thereby made frustrate the work to which they were appointed. The Conful hereby gathered, that the King had some defire to try the fortune of a battel: which he therefore prefented the fecond time: leading forth his Army, and fetting it took his journey Westward against sulpicius | Romans (whilst possibly some were yet alive, which had known that Expedition of Pyr-The Armies met in the Country of the rhus) come into Macedon, bringing Eleans and Greeks have none. Philip had patiparts of Macedon. Two or three dayes they picius was unwilling to lole time: neither lay in fight the one of the other, without could he without great danger, lying to near making offer of battel. The Conful was the the Enemy that was frong in horfe tend his first that issued forth of his Camp into the men to fetch in cornout of the fields. Whereopen field. But Philip was not confident in fore he removed 8 miles off: prefuming that the strength which he had then about him 3 Philip would not adventure to meet him on and therefore thought it better to fend forth even ground and fo the more boldly he fuffome of his light-armed Mercenaries, and fered his Forragers to over-run the Counfome part of horse, to entertain them try. The King was nothing forry of this but own supposed fear, should make them care- | Consul with as much dulness, for his dayes

ed with improvident rashness; and the therefore he returned back to Apollonia.

lesse. When this was come to pass, he took fervice. A little longer stay would have deall his horfe, and light-armed foot, with livered the King from these enemies withwhich his occupied a place in the mid-way, out any blow : fince when all the fields which the center and their Camp. There he ftayed in covert with part of his have retired back to the Sea. On the other forces, to keep the passages that none side, it was not thought unlikely. That if thould escape. The rest he sent abroad the the Romans following the King, had set up-Country, to fall upon the stragglers : wil- on his Camp, at such time as he fled thither, ling then to put all to the fword, and let half amazed with either being flain or tanone run home with news to the Camp. The ken, they might have won it. But that noflaughter was great : and those which esca- ble Historian, Livie; (as is commonly his ped the hands of them that were fent abroad manner.) hath judiciously observed. That to cowre the fields, lighted all or most of neither the one, nor the other, were much them upon the King and his companies in too blame in this days work. For the main their flight: so as they were cut off by the body of the Kings Army lay safe in his way. Long it was ere the Camp had news Camp; and could not be fo altonished with of this. But in the end there escaped some: the loss of two or three hundred horse, that who though they could not make any per- it should therefore have abandoned the defect relation how the matter went : yet by fence of the Trenches. And as for the King telling what had hapned to themselves, himself, he was advertised, that Pleuratus raifed a great multitude. Sulpicius here- the Illyrian, and the Dardanians, were falmoon fends forth all his horse, and bids them len upon his Country; when they found the help their fellows where they faw it need- passage thereinto open, after Perseus was full: He himself with the Legions follow- called away from custody of the Streights. ed. The companies of horse divided them. This was it which made him adventure to selves, accordingly as they met with adver- do somewhat betimes; that he might set tilements upon the way, into many parts . | the Romans going the fooner, and afternot knowing where was most of the dan- wards look unto his troublesome neighger. Such of them as lighted upon Philips bours: In confideration of this, Philip was Troops, that were canvaffing the field, took defirous to clear himself of the Romans, as their talk where they found it: But the foon as he might. And to that purpose he sent main bulk of them fell upon the King him- unto the Conful; requesting a day of truce felf. They had the disadvantage; as coming for burial of the dead. But instead of so dofewer, and unprepared, to one that was reading, he marched away by night, and left fires dy for them. So they were beaten away; as in his Camp to beguile the enemy, as if he their fellows also might have been, if the had not stirred out of the place. Sulpicius, King had well bethought himself, and given when he heard of the Kings departure, was over in time. But while, not contented not flow to follow him. He overtook the Mawith fuch an harvest, he was too greedy cedonians in a place of strength, which they about a poor gleaning; the Roman Legions | had fenced (for it was a woody ground) by appeared in fight: which emboldened their cutting down trees, and laying them athwart horse to make a re-charge. Then the dan- the way where it was most open. In making ger apparent, enforced the Macedonians to of fuch places good, the Macedonian Phalook to their own fafety. They ran which lanx was of little use; being a square batway they could: and (as men that lie in tel of pikes, not fit for every ground. The wait for others, are feldom heedfull of that Archers of Crete were judged, and were inwhich may befall themselves) to escape the deed, more serviceable in that case. But they Enemy, they declined the fairest way; so were few; and their arrows were of small as they were plunged in Marithes and Bogs, force against the Roman shields. The Macewherein many of them were loft. The Kings donians therefore helped them by flinging of horse was slain under him: and there had stones. But to no purpose. For the Romans been cast away, if a loving subject of his got within them; and forced them to quit he had not alighted, mounted him upon his the place. This victory (fuch as it was) laid own horse, and delivered him out of open unto the Consul some poor Towns perill, at the expence of his own life, thereabout; which partly were taken by that running on foot was overtaken and strong hand, partly yielded for fear But the spoil of these, and of the fields adjoyning, In the common opinion Philip was charg- was not sufficient to maintain his Army; and

The Dardanians, hearing that Philip was having been long ablent from Italy: whither come back, withdrew themselves apace out fain they would have returned, when by of the Country. The King fent Athenagoras their Colonels they were shipped for Maceto wait upon them home; whilest he him- don. How Villius dealt with them, it is uncerfelf went against the Atolians. For Damo- tain. For the History of his yeer is lost. critus the Prætor of the Ætolians, who had whereof the miss is not great, fince he did referved himself and his Nation unto the nothing memorable. Valerius Antius, as we event of things, hearing report, that Philip | finde in Livie, hath adorned this Villius with was beaten once and again: as also that a great exploit against Philip. Yet since Livie Pleuratus and the Dardanians were fallen himself, an Historian to whom few of the upon Macedon; grew no less busie on the best are matchable, could finde no such fudden, than before he had been wife. He thing recorded in any good Author: we perswaded his Nation to take their time: may reasonably believe, that Villius his year and fo, not staying to proclaim War, joyned his forces with Aminander the Athamanian; and made invasion upon Thessaly. They the Romans found more trouble than could took, and cruelly sacked a few Towns: have been expected with the Gauls. Their whereby they grew confident; as if, with- Colony of Placentia, a goodly and ftrong out any danger, they might do what they Town, which neither Hannibal, nor after listed. But Philip came upon them ere they him Asdrubal, had been able to sore: looked for him: and killing them as they was taken by thele Barbarians, and burnt lay dispersed, was like to have taken their in a manner to the ground. In like fort Cre-Camp, if Aminander more warie than the mona was attempted: but faved her felf. Ætolians, had not helped at need, and made taking warning by her neighbours calamithe Retrait through his own mountainous ty. Amilear a Carthaginian, that flayed be-Country.

affifted by Attalus and the Rhodians, had their enterprises. This when the Romans taken some small Islands in the Agean Sea. heard, they sent Embassadours to the Car-They took likewise the Town of Oreum in thaginians: giving them to understand, That the Isle of Eubwa: and some other places if they were not weary of the peace, it bethereabout. The Towns were given unto hoved them to call home, and deliver up, Attalus, after the same Compact that had this their Citizen Amilear; who made war formerly been made with the Atolians: in Italy. Hereunto it was added (perhaps the goods therein found were given unto lest the message might seem otherwise to the Romans: and the people, for flaves. have favoured a little of some fear) That of Other attempts on that fide were hindred : the fugitive flaves belonging to the Romans, either by foul weather at Sea : or by want there were some reported to walk up and of daring, and of means.

ø. XII.

bim.

in Macedon. He was troubled with a mu-them all good offices. But they were sometiny of his oldest Souldiers: whereof two what scrupulous in the matter: and said, thousand, having served long in sicil and That having been, and being still (asthey Africk, thought themselves much wronged, took it) their Enemy, He ought first of all in that they could not be suffered to look to desire peace; for that the name of King, unto their own estates at home. They were was an honour which they used not to con-(belike) of the Legions that had ferved at fer upon any, fave only upon fuch as had Canne: as may feem by their complaint, of royally deferved it at their hands. The

was idle.

In the beginning of this Macedonian war. hind Afdrubal, or Mago in those parts : was About the same time the Roman Fleet, now become Captain of the Ganles, in these down in Carthage : which if it were fo, then ought they to be restored back to their Masters: as was conditioned in the late peace. The Embassadonrs that were sent Villius the Roman Consul wastes a yeer to no on this errand, had further charge to treat effect. War of the Gaules in Italy. An with Masanissa, as also with Verminathe son Embassadour of the Romans to Carthage, of Syphax. Unto Masanifa, besides matter Masanisia, and Vermina. The Macedoni- of complement, they were to signific what an prepares for defence of his Kingdom: pleasure he might do them, by lending them and T. Quintius Flaminius is sent against some of his Numidian Horse, to serve in their war against the Macedonian. Vermina had entreated the Senate, to vouchfafe unto Hus the time ran away: and P. Villius him the name of King: and promised therea new Conful, took charge of the War after to deserve it, by his readiness in doing authority to make peace with him; was wholly committed unto these Embassadors, upon such termes as they should think fit ; The Romans begin to make war by negotiatiwithout further relation to the Senate and People: For they were then bufied with greater cares. The Carthaginians made a gentle answer, That they wholly disclaimed Amilear : banishing him, and confiscating his goods. As for the Fugitives, they had refrored as many as they could finde; and would in that point, as far as was requifite, give fatisfaction to the Senate. Herewithall they fent a great proportion of Corn to Rome; and the like unto the Army that of peace.

they laid fiege unto Cremona; where L.Furius a Roman Prætor came upon them, strengthen his Kingdom, not only by exerwas expected; and he very shortly arrived at the Army.

ø. XIII.

on. T. Quintius wins apaffage against Philip. The faly wasted by Philip, the Romans, and Etolians. The Achains forfaking the Macedonian, take part with the Romans. A treaty of peace, that was vain. Philip delivers Argos to Nabis the Tyrant, who presently enters into League with the Romans.

He Romans had not been wont in formertimes, to make War after such a was in Macedon. King Mafanissa would have trifling manner. It was their use, to give batlent unto the Romans two thousand of his tel to the enemic, as soon as they met with Numidian horse: but they were contented him. If he refused it, they belieged his with half the number; and would accept Towns: and so forced him to try the forno more. Vermina met with the Embassa- tune of a day, with his disadvantage in redours, to give them entertainment, on the putation, when he had long forborn it (as it borders of his Kingdom 5 and without any would be interpreted) upon knowledge of diffutation, agreed with them upon terms his own weakness. But in this their War with Philip, they began to learn of the fub-Thus were the Romans busied in taking the Greeks, the art of Negotiation: wherein order for their Macdonian War, that they hitherto they were not grown fo fine, as might purfue it strongly, and without in- within a little while they proved. Their terruption. As for Amilear and his Gaules, | Treasury was poor, and stood indebted, * many years after this unto private men, for * Liv. part of those moneys that had been borrow-lib. 34.) fought a battel with them, and overcame ed in the fecond Punick War. This had them. Amilear the Carthaginian died in this | made the Commonalty averse from the Mabattel: and the fruit of the victory was cedonian War; and had thereby driven the fuch, as both made amends for loffes past, | Senators, greedy of the enterprize, to make and left the work easie to those, that after- | use of their cunning. Yet being weary of wards should have the managing of war | the slow pace wherewith their business went among those Gaules. So was there good lei- forward, they determined to increase their fure to think upon the the business of Mace- Army, that they might have the less need don: where Philip was carefully providing to relie upon their Confederates. So they to give contentment unto his Subjects, by levied eight thousand Foot, and eight hunpunishing a bad Counseller whom they ha- dred Horse (the greater part of them of ted: as also to assure unto himself the Ache- the Latines) which they fent with T. Quinans, by rendring unto them some Towns tius Flaminius, the new Consul, into Macethat he held of theirs; and finally to don. Their Navie, and other means could well have served, for the setting forth and cifing and training his people, but by forti- transportation of a greater Army; but by fying the passages that led thereinto out of straining themselves to the most of their Epirus. This was in doing when Villius, hav- ability, they should (besides other difficuling unprofitably laboured to finde way into ties incident unto the fuftenance of those Macedon, taking a journey (as Sulpicius had that are too many and too far from home) done before him) wherein he could not be have bred some jealousie in their friends of supplied with victuals, determined at Greece, and thereby have lost some friends, length to trie a new course. But then came | yea, perhaps have increased the number of advertisement, that T. Quintius Flaminius their enemies, more than of their own Soulwas chosen Consul, and had Macedon aldiers. This present augmentation of the lotted him for his Province; whose coming forces was very requisite; for that Attalus, about the same time, excused himself unto them by his Embassadour; requesting that either they would undertake the defence of his Kingdom against Antiochus, who invaded it; or else that they would not take it uncourteoufly 5

Philip, and returned home, to look unto that was very easie; he was compelled to that which most concerned him. Their an- sit still, without doing any thing for the fwer was remarkable. They faid, That it space of forty dayes. was not their manner to use the aid of their friends, longer then their friends had good | lip, that the war might be ended by comopportunity, and could also be well con- position, upon some reasonable terms. He tented to affoord it; That they could not therefore so dealt with some of the Epirots, honefily take part with Attalus, their good (among whom he had many friends) that friend, though he were against Antiochus, He and the Consul had a meeting together. whom they held in the like account; but, But nothing was effected. The Conful That they would deal with Antiochus by would have him to fet all Towns of Greece Embassadors, and (as common friends unto at liberty; and make amends for the injuboth of the Kings) do their best to per ries, which he had done to many people in fwade an atonement between them. In fuch his lateWars, Philip was contented to giveliloving fashion did they now carry them- berty to those whom he had subdued of later felves, towards their good friend the King | but unto fuch, as had been long subject unto Antiochus; who reciprocally at their intrea- him and his Ancestors, He thought it ty, withdrew his Army from the kingdom against all reason, that he should relinquish of Attalus. But how little they regarded his claim and dominion over them. He these terms of friendship, after that once also said, That as far forth as it should ap-

very foon appear.

betimes into his Province, with the supply feem convenient in the judgement of some decreed unto him; which confifted for the free State, that had not been interested in most part, of old Souldiers, that had served | those quarrels. But herewithall Quintius in spain and Africk. He found Villius the was not fatisfied. There needed (he faid) old Conful, (whom at his coming he pre- no judgement or compromise; for as much as fently discharged) and King Philip of Mace- it was apparent, that Philip had alwayes don, encamped one against the other, in the been the invader; and had not made War, Streights of Epirus; by the river of Appus, or as one provoked, in his own defence. After Aous. It was manifest, that either the Ro- this altercation, when they should come to mans must fetch a compass about, and seek particulars: and when the Consul was retheir way into Macedon, through the poor quired to name those Towns, that he would Country of the Dassaretians; or else win, have to be set at liberty; the first that he by force, that passage which the King de- named were the Thessalians: These had fended. In taking the former way, they had been subjects (though conditional) unto the already two years together mif spent their Macedonian Kings, ever fince the dayes of time, and been forced to return back with- Alexander the Great, and of Philip his Faout profit, for want of victuals: whereof ther. Wherefore, as foon as Flaminius had they could neither carry with them store named the Thessalians; the King in a rage fufficient, nor find it on the way. But if they demanded what sharper condition He could once get over these Monntains, which would have laid upon him, had he been but divided the South of Epirus from Thessay, vanquished. And herewithall abruptly he then should they enter into a plentiful slang away: refusing to hear any more of Country; and, which by long dependance fuch discourse. on the Macedonian, was become (in a manner) part of his Kingdom, whereof it made or three dayes together, to have prevailed the South border. Nevertheless, the defire against the difficulties of that passage which of winning this passage, was greater than Philip kept. When he had well wearied the likelihood. For the river of Appus run- himself, and could not resolve what course ning along through that valley which alone to take: there came to him an Heards man was open between the Mountains, made it sent from Charopus a Prince of the Epirots all a deep Marifu and unpassable Bogge: a that favoured the Romans, who having long very narrow way excepted, and a path cut kept beafts in those Mountains, was out of the main rock by mans hand. Where- throughly acquainted with all by paths, and fore Quintius affailed to climb in the Moun- therefore undertook to guide the Romans, tains: but finding himself disappointed of without any danger, to a place where they courteoully, that he quitted the War with my, who neglected not the guard of them

This long time of rest gave hope unto Phithey had made an end with Philip, it will pear that he had done wrong unto any Town or people whatfoever, He could well T. Quintius hasting away from Rome, came | be pleased to make such amends, as might

After this the Conful strove in vain two this hope, through the diligence of his ene- hould have advantage of the Enemy. This fall bound : and being promised a great re- of Macedon. ward, in case he made good his word, had in his hasty retrait he could visit, to forsake | feet) mastered it all. their Towns and Country, carrying away In the mean time L. Quintius the Confuls to make him break off his purpose, and Romans.

guide, for fear of treacherous dealing, was withdraw himself home into his Kingdom

The Etolians and Athamanians, when fuch Companies as was thought fit, appoint- this fell out, were even in a readiness to ined to follow his directions. They travelled vade Theffaly; whereinto the ways lay more by night (it being then about the full of the open, out of their feveral Contries. When Moon) and refted in the day-time, for fear therefore they heard for certainty, that of being discovered. When they had recove- Philip was beaten by the Romans; they forered the hill-tops, and were above the Mace- flowed not the occasion, but made all speed. doniums, (though undiscovered by them, each of them to lay hold upon what they because at their banks) they raised a great might. T. Quintius followed them within a fmoke, whereby they gave notice of their little while: but they had gotten fo much fuccels unto the Conful. Some skirmishes, before his coming that he, in gleaning after whilst these were on their journy, T. Quinti- their harvest, could not find enough to us had held with the Macedonan; thereby maintain his Army. Thus were the poor to avert him from thought of that which Theffalians, of whose liberty the Romans a was intended. But when on the third mor- few days fince had made flew to be very dening he saw the smoke arise more and more sirous, wasted by the same Romans and their plainly, and thereby knew that his men Confederates; not knowing which way to had attained unto the place whither they turn themselves, or whom to avoid. were fent, he pressed as near as he could un- T. Quintius won Phaleria by assault: Metroto the Enemies Camp, and affailed them in polis and Piera yielded unto him. Rhage he their strength. He prevailed as little as in befieged : and having made a fair breach. former times, until the shoutings of those yet was unable to force it: so stoutly it was that ran down the hill, and charged Philip defended both by the Inhabitants, and by on the back, aftonished so the Macedonians, a Macedonian garrison therein. Philip also at that they betook themselves unto flight. The the same time, having somewhat recollected King upon first apprehension of the danger, his spirits, hovered about Tempe with his made all speed away to save himself. Yet Army, thrusting men into all places, that anon confidering, that the difficulty of the were like to be diffressed. So the Conful, paffage must needs hinder the Romans having well near spent his victuals, and seefrom pursuing him: he made a stand at the ling no hope to prevail at Rhage: brake up end of five miles, and gathered there toge- his fiege, and departed out of Thessaly. He ther his broken troops, of whom he found had appointed his ships of burden to meet wanting no more than two thousand men. | him at Anticyra, an Haven Town of Phocis, The greatest loss was of his Camp and pro- on the Gulph of Corinth: which Country bevisions: if not rather perhaps of his reputa- | ing friend to the Macedonian, he presently tion: for that now the Macedonians began invaded; not fo much for hatred unto the to stand in fear, lest being driven from a people, as because it lay conveniently seated place of fuch advantage, they should hard- | between Thessaly and other regions, wherely make good their party against the Ene- in he had business, or was shortly like to my upon equal ground. Neither was Philip have. Many Towns in Phocis he won by himself much better perswaded. Wherefore affault: many were yielded up unto him for he caused the Thessalians, as many of them as fear; and within short space he had (in ef-

with them as much as they were able, and brother, being then Admiral for the Rospoiling all the rest. But all of them could mans in this war, joyned with King Attalus not be perswaded, thus to abandon (for the and the Rhodian Fleet. They won two Cipleasure of their King) their ancient habita- ties in Eubea; and afterward laid siege unto tions, and all the substance which they had Cenebree, an Haven and Arcenal of the Cogotten. Some there were that forcibly re- rinthians on their Eastern Sea. This enterlisted him; which they might the better do, | prise did somewhat help forward the Achafor that he could not stay to use any great ans, in their defire to leave the part of Phicompulsion. He also himself took it very lip; since it might come to pass, that Cogrievously, that he was driven to make such rimb it self, ere long time were spent; and waste of a most pleasant and fruitful Coun- that Cenchree, with other places appertaintry, which had ever been well affected uning to Corinth, now very shortly should be to him: so that a little hindrance did serve, rendred unto their Nation, by favour of the

Nnnnnn

the Atherns to preferr the friendship of the their Masters cause. Rather it gave the Komans, before the patronage of Philip; Acheans to understand, That he, who could whereto they had been long accustomed. be satisfied with so little at their hands, knew For this King had so many ways offended himself unable to gratifie them in any rethem in time of peace, that they thought it ciprocal demand. Yet were there many in best course to rid their hands of him, whilst that great Councel, who remembring the being intangled in a dangerous War, he benefits of Philip and Antigonus, laboured wanted means to hinder the execution of earnestly for the preservation of the ancifuch counsel as they should hold the fafest. ent League. But in fine, the sense of late in-His tyrannous practifes to make himself juries, and expectation of like or worse their absolute Lord: his poyloning of Ara- from him in the future; prevailed against tus their old Governour: his falle dealing the memory of those old good turns, which with the Messenians, Epirots, and other peo- he (and Antigonus before him) had partly ple their Confederates, and his own de-fold unto them, and partly had used as baits, pendants: together with many particular outrages by him committed: caused subjection. Neither was it perhaps of the them long fince to hold him as a necessary least importance; That the Romans were evil, even whilst they were unable to be strong, and likely to prevail in the end. So without his affiftance. But fince by the ver- after much altercation, the Decree paffed. tue of Philopamen, they were grown some. That they should thence-forward renounce what confident in their own ftrength: fo as the Macedonian, and take part with his enewithout the Macedonians help they could as mies in this War. With Attalus and the Rhowell subfist, as having him to friend: then did dians they forthwith entred into society; they only think how coil he was; and there- with the Romans (because no League would upon rejoyce the more, in that he was become no longer necessary. It angred him to approved it they forbore to decree any soperceive how they stood affected; and there-*Pluting tore he sent murderers to take away the life those Embassadars from Rome, which they Philogem. of * Philogemen. But failing in this enterprise; and being detected, he did thereby only fet fire to the Wood, which was throughly dry done their best for the Macedonian, as by before, and prepared to burn. Philopemen wrought fo with the Acheans, that no difcourse was more familiar with them, than what great cause they had to withdraw themselves from the Macedonian.Cycliadas, a principal man among them: and lately their Prætor, was expelled by them, for shewing himself passionate in the cause of Philip; and Ariftanus chosen Præter, who laboured to | for escaping how they might, out of the joyn them in fociety with the Romans.

These news were very welcome to T. Quintins. Embaliadors were fent from the gos, the affection of the Citizens discovered Romans and their Confederates, King Atta- it felf fo plainly, in the behalf of Philip, that lus, the Rhodians and Athenians, to treat they which were his Partifans within the with the Acheans, making promife, that they should have Corinth restored unto them, if they would for fake the Macedonian. A Parliament of the Acheans was held at Sycion, to deliberate and refolve in this weighty had manfully defended against the Romans case. Therein the Romans and their adhe- and Attalus. Him the Conspirators drew to rents defired the Acheans to joyn with them Argos; whither coming on a fudden, and in making War upon Philip. Contrariwife, finding the multitude ready to joyn with the Embafiadors of Philip, whom he had him, he eafily compelled the Achean Garrialso sent for this business, admonishing the son to quit the place. and of their faith due unto him; requested good defence of Corinth, and some other Achaens of their Alliance with the King, them, that they would be contented to re- Towns, as it helped Philip a little in his remain as Neuters. This moderate request putation, so they gave him hope to obtain

But there were other motives, inducing of Philips Embaffadors did no way advance be of force, until the Senate and people had ciety at the present, until the return of determined to fend thither of purpose. The Megalopolitans, Dymeans, and Argives, having many respects they were bound, role up out of the Councel, and departed before the paffing of the Decree; which they could not relift, nor yet with honesty thereto give affent. For this their good will, and greater, which they shortly manifested, the Argives had so little thank; that all the rest of the Acheans may be the better held excused, hands of fo fell a Prince.

Soon after this, upon a folemn day at Ar-Town, made no doubt of putting the City into his hands, if they might have any fmall affistance. Philocles a Lieutenant of the Kings, lay then in Corinth , which he fome good end by Treaty, whileft as yet felf by force of Arms. He answered them (as the whole Country, leaving it free; and with touching Corinth, that he would further al to deliver up unto them, whatfoever he deliberate with Titus himself. Thus he held that had at any time been theirs. Nei- addressed himself wholly to the Roman ther were they herewithal content: but in- General; unto whom if he could give fatisfolently declaimed against him, for that faction, he cared little for all the rest. With which he had lately done in Thessaly; cor- Attalus and the Rhodians, his late war (he rupting (as they faid) the rewards of the Vi- faid) was only defensive; they having been ctors, by destroying, when he was vanquish- the offerers : or if he gave them any occaed, those Towns, which else they might have sion, it was only in helping Prusias, his songotten. To answer these malapart Ætolians, in-law; neither did he see why they should Philip commanded his Gally to be rowed rather feek amends at his hands, than he at nearer the shore. But they began to plie him theirs. For whereas they complained afresh: telling him that he must obey his that spoiling a Temple of Venus, he had betters, unless he were able to defend him- cut down the Grove, and pleasant walks with his honour he might feek it: and when he was much given to gybing) with fundry (the Winter being now come on) a new scoffs; and especially with one, which made Conful would shortly be chosen who should the Roman Consul understand what mantake the work out of Titus his hands, if it ner of companions these Etolians were. For were not concluded the fooner. Titus had he faid, That he had often dealt with them; the like respect unto himself; and therefore as likewise the best of the Greeks; desiring thought it best, fince more could not be them to abrogate a wicked law, which perdone, to pre-dispose things unto a Conclu- mitted them to take spoil from spoil: yet tion, for his own reputation. The meeting could he get no better an answer, than that was appointed to be held on the Sea-shore, they would sooner take Ætolia out of Ætolia. was appointed to meaning in the Bay then called the Malian, or Lami- Titus wondred what might be the meaning Except of the Malian of the Malia an Bay, now (as is supposed) the Gulf of Ziton; of this strange Law. So the King told him, Polybl.17. in the Agean Sea, or Archipelago. Thither That they held it a laudable custome, as came Titus with Animander the Athamani- Often as War happened between their an; an Embastador of Attalus; the Admiral friends, to hold up the quarrel, by sending Rhodes; and some Agents for the Etolians Voluntaries to serve on both sides, that and Acheans. Philip had with him some few should spoil both the one and the other. As of his own Captains, and Cycliadas, lately ba- for the liberty of Greece, he faid it was nished for his sake out of Achaia. He refu- strange, that the Atolians should be so carefed to come on shore: though fearing (as he ful thereof, since divers Tribes of their own faid none but the immortal Gods: yet mif- which he there named, were indeed no doubting some treachery in the Ætolians. Gracians: wherefore he would fain know, The demands of Titus in behalf of the Ro- whether the Romans would give him leave mans, were, That he should set all Cities of to make slaves of those Ætolians, which Greece at liberty; deliver up to the Romans | were no Greeks. Titus hereat smiled, and and their Confederates, all prisoners which was no whit offended, to hear the Ætolians he had of theirs, and Renegadoes; likewife well ratled up; touching whom he began whatfoever he held of theirs in Illyria: and to understand, how odious they were in all whatfover about Greece or Asia he had got- the Country. As for that general demand ten from Ptolomy then King of Egypt, after of fetting all Greece at liberty, Philip achis fathers death. Attalus demanded restitu- knowledged, that it might well beseem the tion to be made, entire of Ships, Towns, and | greatness of the Romans; though he would Temples by him taken and spoiled in the also consider, what might beseem his own late War between them. The Rhodians dignity. But that the Etolians, Rhodians, would have again the Country of Perea,ly- and other petty Estates, should thus presume. ing over against their Island; as also that he under countenance of the Romans, to take should withdraw his garrisons out of divers upon them, as if by their great might he Towns about the Hellespont, and other Ha- should be thereunto compelled: it was, he vens of their friends. The Acheans defired | faid, a strange and ridiculous insolence. restitution of Argos and Corinth: about the The Ackeans he charged with much ingraone of which they might, not unjustly, quar- tude; reciting against them some Decrees rel with him; the other had been long his of their own; wherein they had loaden both own by their consent. The Ætolians took | Antigonus and him, with more than huupon them angerly, as Patrons of Greece: mane honours. Nevertheless, he said, that willing him to depart out of it, even out of he would render Argos unto them: but as thereabouts: what could be do more, than a time unfit for service in the War; and fend Gardners thither with young plants; fince, without authority of the Senate, he if one King of another would stand to ask should be unable to proceed resolvedly eifuch recompence? Thus he jefted the mat- ther in War or Peace. Further, he willed ter out: but offered nevertheles, in honour them to send their several Embassadors to of the Romans, to give back the Region of Rome, which intimating unto the Senate Perea to the Khodians; as likewife to Attalus, what each of them required, should eafily the Ships and Prisoners of his, whereof he hinder Philip from obtaining any thing to had then possession. Thus ended that dayes their prejudice. Among the rest, he perswadconserence, because it was late: Philip re- ed King Aminander to make a journey to quiring a nights leifure to think upon the Rome in person : knowing well, that the Articles, which were many, and he ill provided of Counsel, wherewith to advise of so many Embassadors, would serve to about them. For your being so ill provided of make his own actions more glorious in the Counsel (faid Titus) you may even thank City. All this tended to procure that his your felf; as having murdered all your friends, own command of the Army in Greece might that were wont to advise you faithfully. The be prorogued. And to the same end had he next day Philip came not, untill it was late at dealt with some of the Tribunes of the peonight; excusing his long stay by the weighti- ple at Rome: who had already (though as yet nels of the things propounded, whereon he he knew not so much) obtained it for him. could not fuddenly tell how to refolve. But partly by their authority, partly by good reait was believed, that he thereby fought to fons which they alledged unto the Senate. abridge the Atolians of leifure to rail at The Embassadors of the Greeks, when they him. And this was the more likely, for that had audience at Rome, spake bitterly against he defired conference in private with the the King, with good liking of the Senate; Roman General. The fum of his discourse, as which was more desirous of victory, than Titus afterward related it, was, That he of fatisfaction. They magnified the honouwould give the Acheans both Argos and Co- rable purpose of the Romans, in undertakrinth; as also that he would render unto Attalus and the Rhodians what he had promi- said) could never be effected: unless especial fed the day before; likewise to the Ætoli- care were taken, that the King should be ans, that he would grant some part of their dispossessed of Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetridemands; and to the Romans, whatfoever as. In this point they were fovehement, prothey did challenge. This when Titus his affo- ducing a Map of the Country, and making ciates heard, they exclaimed against it, say- demonstration how those places held all the ing. That if the King were suffered to retain rest in servility; that the Senate agreed to anything in Greece, he would shortly get have it even so as they defired. When possession of all which he now rendred up. The noise that they made came to Philips brought in, and began to have made a long ear: who thereupon defired a third day of Oration; they were briefly cut off in the meeting; and protested, that if he could not | middest of their Preface, with this one deperswade them, he would suffer himself to mand : Whether their Master would yeild up be perswaded by them. So the third day | Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetrias. Hereto they they met early in the morning at what made answer, That concerning those places, time the King intreated them all, that they the King had given them no direction or would with fincere affection hearken unto commission what to say or do. This was good offers of peace; and immediately con- enough. The Senate would no longer hearclude it, if they could like well of those ken to Philips defire of peaces wherein they Conditions which he had already tendred; faid he did no better than trifle. Yet might or otherwise, that they would make truce his Embassadors have truly said, That neiwith him for the present, and let him ther the Atolians, Achaans, nor any of their fend Embassadors to Rome, where he would fellows, had in the late Treaty required by might happen to defraud him of the honor, ans had fome right; (though their right which he expected by ending of the Warr were no better, than that, having from the So he eafily prevailed with the rest to as from one Macedonian King in a night, they fent hereunto: forasmuch as it was Winter, had, after mature deliberation, made it

This getting of Argos, together with the

Nnnnnn 2

name of a King together with the confluence

ing to fet Greece at liberty. But this (they referr himself to the courtesse of the Se- name, that Chalcis and Demetrias should be yielded up. For which of them indeed This was even as Quintius would have it: could make any claim to either of these who flood in doubt, left a new Conful Towns? As for Corinth, whereto the Acheready condescended to give it back unto of the King, by some of T. Quintius his friends; that so he might have had honour to conclude the war, if a fuccessor had been decreed unto him. But fince he was appointed to continue General: neither his friends at Rome, nor he himfelf, after the return of the Embassadours into Greece, cared to give the matter : or played the theeves in pur-ear unto any talk of peace.

Philip feeing that his Acheans had forfaken him, and joyned with their common enemies; thought even to deal with them | Tyrant began to make popular laws : namein the like manner, by reconciling himfelf ly, fuch as might ferve to make him graciunto Nabis, whom they hated most. There ous with the rascall multitude: abrogating were not many years past, since the Laceda- all debts, and dividing the lands of the rich monians under Cleomenes, with little other among the poor. By fuch art of oppreffing help then their own strength, had been al- the great ones, it hath been an old custom most strong enough both for the Macedoni- of Tyrants, to assure themselves of the Vulans and Acheans together. But now the con- gar for a time. dition of things was altered. Nabis his force confisted, in a manner, wholly in his Merce- the news to T. Quintius and others to joyn naries: for he was a Tyrant, though stiling himself King. Yet he sorely vexed the Achaans: and therefore seemed to Philip one likely to fland him in great flead, if he meet with Nabis. They had foon agreed could be won. To this purpose it was (though King Attalus who was present with thought meet, that the Town of Argos, the Conful, made some cavil touching Arwhich could not otherwise be easily defended, should be configned over into his hands; fix hundred of his Mercenaries of crete: in hope, that fuch a benefit would ferve to as also he agreed with the Acheans, upon tie him fast unto the Macedonian. Philocles a Truce for four moneths, reserving the the Kings Lieutenant, who was appointed | finall conclusion of peace between them unto deal with Nabio, added further, That it till the War of Philip should be ended 5 was his Masters purpose to make a streight which after this continued not long. alliance with the Lacedamonian, by giving fome daughters of his own in marriage unto Nabis his fons. This could not but be well taken. Yet Nabis made some scruple in accepting the Town of Argos; unless by decree of the Citizens themselves he might be called into it. Hereabout Philocles dealt with the Argives: but found them so averse, that, in open assembly of the people, they detested the very name of the Tyrant, with command of the Army, without any other many railing words. Nabis hearing of this, limitation of time, than during the pleasure thought he had thereby a good occasion to of the Senate; made all things ready for rob and sleece them. So he willed Philocles, diligent pursuit of the War. The like did by night; and gave him possession of the War, meant afterwards wholly to rely upon strongest places therein. Thus dealt Philip himself. with the Argives : who for very love had way by bargain unto another) Philip had al- fled out of the City at the first tumult. Wherefore they were all banished, and them, And this perhaps would have been their goods conficated. The rest of the chief alledged, even against the Greeks, in excuse Citizens that stayed behind, were commanded to bring forth, out of hand, all their Gold and Silver. Also a great imposition of money was laid upon all those that were thought able to pay it. Such as made their contribution readily, were dismissed without more a do. But if any stood long upon loyning their own goods: they were put to the whip, and besides loss of their wealth, had their torments to boot. This done, the

> As foon as Nabis had gorten Argos, He fent with him against Philip. Titus was glad of it: fo as he took the pains to cross over the Streights into Peloponnesus, there to gos) and the Tyrant lent unto the Roman.

o. XIV.

The battel at Cynoscephale, wherein Philip was vanquished by T. Quintius.

Titus Quintius, as soon as he under flood that he was appointed to have without more a do, to make over the Town | Philip: who having failed in his negotiwhich he was ready to recieve. Philocles ac- ation of peace, and no less failed in his cordingly did let him with his Army into it hopes of getting Nabis to friend in that

Titus had in his Army about fix and twenforfaken the acheans, to take his part Early in the morning, the Tyrant made himfelf number. But neither of them knew the o-wit. T. S. master of all the gates. A few of the prin- there strength, or what his Enemy intended Flam. cipal men, understanding how things went, to do. Only Titus heard that Philip was in to feek him out. They had like to have met him good to fee that they of his own light unawares, neer unto the City of Phera: armature were busie in fight, almost at the where the vant-currers on both sides discovered each other; and sent word thereof had repelled so far. He had also liberty to unto their feveral Captains. But neither of choose his ground, as might serve best his them were over-hafty to commit all to ha- advantage; for a for a sthe Romans were zard upon so short warning. The day fol- quite driven from all parts of the Hill. But lowing each of them fent out three hundred of this commodity he could make no great Florie, with as many light-armed Foot, to lufe : the roughness of the place among make a better discovery. These met, and those Dogs heads, as they were called, ferfought a long while: returning finally back ving nothing aptly for his Phalanx. Neverinto their feveral Camps, with little ad- thelefs he found convenient room, wherein vantage unto either fide. The Country a- to marshall the one part of his Army: and bont Phera was thick fet with trees: and o gave order unto his Captains, to follow therwife full of gardens and mud-walls; with the rest; embattelling them as they which made it unproper for the fervice of might. Whilest he was doing this: He perthe Macedonian Phalanx. Wherefore the ceived that his Horsemen and light armature King diflodged, intending to remove back began to shrink; as being fallen upon the into Scotula in the Frontier of Macedon; Roman Legions, by force whereof they where he might be plentifully ferved with were driven to recoyle. He fets forward all necessaries. Titus conceived a right his to help them : and they no less hastily meaning: and therefore purposed also to draw unto him for succour; having the march thitherwards; were it only to waste Romans not far behind them. theCountry. There lay between them a great ledge of hills, which hindered the one from Philip commanded those of his Phalanx to knowing what course the other took. Ne- charge their pikes, and entertain them. vertheless they encamped not far afunder. Here Titus found an extream difficult piece both the first and the second night; though of work. For this Phalanx being a great neither of them understood what was be- square battel of armed pikes, like in all come of the other. The third day was very points to those which are now used in our tempestuous; and forced each of them to modern Wars: and being in like manner take up his lodging where he found it by | used, as are ours; was not to be resisted by chance. Then fent they forth discoverers the Roman Targettiers, as long as the Phaagain, in greater number than before. These lanx it self held together undissolved. The meeting together, held a long fight, where- Macedonians were embattelled in very close in at first the Macedonians had the worse. order: so that two of them stood opposite But Philip anon fent in such strong supply; to one of the Romans; as also the pikes of that if the refistance of the Atolians had the first rank had their points advanced not been desperate, the Romans their fel- two or three foot before their fore-man. lows had been driven back into their Camp. | Wherefore it is no marvel if the Romans Yet all refistance notwithstanding, the Ma- gave back: every one of them being troucedonians prevailed: fo that Titus himfelf | bled (as it were) with ten enemies at once; was fain to bring forth his Legions, that and not able to come nearer to the next of were not a little discouraged, by the defeat them, than the length of a dozen foot, or of all their Horse, to animate those which thereabout. Titus finding this, and not pose to put the fortune of a battel in trust down all which came in the way. But in that day, with so much of his Estate as might the mean while he observed, That they thereon depend. But the news came to him which were appointed by Philip to make his thick and tumultuoufly, how the enemies left wing, were not able through the much fled, and how the day was his own, if he unevenness of the ground, to put themcould use an occasion, the like whereof he should not often find. This caused him to places on the Hill-tops; or else (which was alter his purpole: infomuch as he embattel- worse) upon defire either of beholding the led his men; and climbed up those hills, pastime, or of seeming to be partakers in which, for that the knops thereon had some the work, ran foolishly along by the side resemblance unto Dogs heads, were called, of their fellows, which were occupied in by a word fignifying as much, Cynoscephala. fight.

Thessay, and thereupon addressed himself. As soon as he was on the hill-top; it did

As the Legions began to climbe the Hill; knowing how to remedy it, was greatly It was altogether besides the Kings pur-troubled: for that still the Phalanx bare

Of this their diforder he made great and | work ; and mainly helpful to making present use. He caused the right wing of of the victory compleat. He considered his battel to march up the Hill against these that Philip, in pursuing the right wing of the ill-ordered troops: his Elephants leading Romans, was run on fo far, as that himself the way, to increase the terrour. The Ma- with his fellows, in mounting the Hill to cedonians were readier to dispute what charge the left wing of the Macedonians. should be done in such a case, than well ad- was already gotten above the Kings head. vifed what to do; as having no one man ap- Wherefore he turned to the left hand, and pointed to command that part in chief. In- making down the Hill after the Kings Phadeed if they should have done their best, it lanx, fell upon it in the Rere. The hindercould not have ferved; fince the ground most ranks of the Phalanx, and all of them whereon they stood, made their weapons indeed fave the first five, were accustomed, unuseful. For let it be supposed, that Phi- when the battels came to joyning, to carry lip having fix and twenty thousand in his their pikes upright; and with the whole Army (as he is said to have been equal to weight of their bodies to thrust on their the Enemy in number) had four thousand fore-men: and so were they doing at the Horse, four thousand Targettiers, and fonr present. This was another great inconvenithousand light-armed : so shall there remain ence in the Macedonian Phalanx. That it fourteen thousand Pikes: whereof himself | served neither for offence nor defence, exhad embattelled the one half in a Phalanx; cept only in Front. For though it were fo, the other half in the left wing, are they that Alexander, when he was to fight with whom Quintius is ready now to charge. Darius in Mesopotamia, arranged his Phalanx The Phalanx having usually fixteen in File, in such order, that all the four fides of it must, when it consisted of seven thousand, were as so many Fronts looking sundry have well-near four hundred and forty in wayes, because he expected that he should rank : but four hundred would ferve, to be encompassed round : yet is it to be unmake a Front long enough; the other forty | derstood, that herein he altered the usual or seven and thirty Files might be cut off, form; as also at the same time he embatteland reckoned in the number of the Target- |led his men in loofe order, that so with ease tiers, or light-armed. Allowing therefore, they might turn their weapons which way Excepte as Polybius doth, to every man of them Popular three foot of ground: this Front must have occupied twelve hundred foot, or two hundred and forty paces; that is, very near a quarter of a mile in length. Such a space of open Champian, free from incumberance of Trees, Ditches, Hillocks, or the like impediments, that must of necessity disjoyn | fion for resistance. Therefore his men, being this close battel of the Phalanx, was not every-where to be found. Here at Cynoscephale Philip had so much room, as would himself had thought until now, that the foronly fuffice for the one half of his men; the rest were fain to stand still and look about them, being hindred from putting themselves in order, by the roughness of the troop of horse, to see how all went; when Dogs heads. But the Romans, to whom all he beheld his men casting down their weagrounds were much alike, were not hindred from coming up unto them 5 nor found any difficulty in mastering those Enemies, whose feet were in a manner bound by the discommodity of the place. The very first impression of the Elephants, caused sed in this overthrow) until he was gotten them to give back; and the coming on of the Legions, to betake themselves to flight. A Roman Tribune or Colonel, feeing the victory on that part affured, left the profecution of it unto others: and being followed by twenty Enfignes or Maniples, that is, (as they might fall out) by some two thouland men, took in hand a notable piece of need should require. Likewise it is to be confidered, That Alexanders men being thus disposed, were fit only to keep their own ground; not being able to follow upon the enemy, unless their hindmost ranks could have marched backwards. But in this prefent case of Philip, there was no such proviotherwise unable to help themselves, threw down their weapons and fled. The King tune of the battel was everywhere alike. and the day his own. But hearing the noise behind him, and turning a little afide with a pons, and the Romans at his back on the higher ground; he presently betook himfelf to flight. Neither staid he afterwards in any place (except only a fmall while about Tempe, there to collect fuch as were disperinto his own kingdom of Macedon.

There died of the Roman Army in this battel, about feven hundred:of the Macedonians about eight thousand were slain; and five thousand taken prisoners.

ø. XV.

T. Quintius falleth out with the Ætolians, and grants truce unto Philip, with conditions upon which the peace is ratified. Liberty proclaimed unto the Greeks. The Romans quarrel with Antiochus.

THe Atolians wonderfully vaunted themselves, and defired to have it noised through all Greece, that the victory at Cynoscephala was gotten (in a manner) wholly by their valour. They had gotten indeed the most of the booty by facking the swerable to his desire: but seeing what bad Macedonian Camp, whilest the Romans were fortune accompanied his affairs, in all other bufied in the chale. Titus therefore being offended both at their vain-glory, and at their ravenous condition; purposed to teach | sent in all haste Limneus and Demossheres them better manners, by regarding them as with Cycliadas the banished Achaan, in flightly, as they thought highly of themfelves. He also well perceived, That by bassadours unto Titus. These had conseufing them with any extraordinary favour, rence a long while in private, with Titus he should greatly offend the rest of his confederates in Greece; who detefted the #tolians much more vehemently, than ever they had done the Macedonians. But this displeasure brake not forth yet a while.

Lariffa, a City in Theffaly, which he presently Truce for fifteen dayes: in which time, the took. Before his coming, Philip had fent King himself might come and speak with thither one of his Courtiers to burn all his the Roman General. In the mean feafon, letters, and passages whatsoever in writing, many suspicious rumours went of Titus, as betwixt him and others : of which many if he had been corrupted with great rewere there kept. It was well done of the wards from the King, to betray the Greeks King, that among the cares of fo much ad his Confederates. Of these bruits the #10verify, he forgot not to provide for the lians were chief authors: who being wont fafety of his friends. Yet by thus doing, they to regard neither friendship nor honelty, of Lariffa might well perceive, that he gave where profit led them a wrong way, judgthem as already loft. Wherefore we find ed alike of all men elle. But against the not that they, or any of their neighbours did | day appointed for the meeting betwixt him make delay of opening their gates to Titus. and Thilip, Titus had fent letters unto his At the same time, the Town of Lences, border Associates; willing them to have their Aing upon Arcanania, was taken by the Roman gents ready by a time appointed, at the en-Fleet, and very soon after, all the Arcanani- trance of Tempe, where the treaty should ans, a warlike Nation, and in hatred of the be held. There when they were all affem-Ætolians ever true to Philip; gave up bled, they entred into confultation before themselves unto the Komans, hearing of the the Kings arrival, what should be most exvictory at Cynoscephale. The Rhodians also pedient for the common benefit of themall, were then in hand with the conquest of Pa- and for every state in particular. The poor rea, a Region of the Continent over against king Aminander belought them all, and the Island; whereof they had demanded especially the Romans, that they would restitution in the late Treaty of Peace, think upon him ; and , considering his They did herein more manly, than any weakness which he confessed, make such other of the Greeks: forafmuch as they provision, that after the Romans had turned awaited not the good leafure of the Ro- their backs, ane were gone home, Philip mans; but with an Army of their own, might not wreak his anger upon him who and some help which they borrowed of was not able to resist. Then spake Alexanbattel to Dinocrates the Kings Lievte ing Titus forasmuch as he had thus assembled nant, wherein they had the victory, and the Confederates to advise upon their own consequently recovered the whole Province. It angred Philip worse then all this, that the Dardanians gathered courage our of his affliction, to invade his Kingdom: wasting and spoiling, as if all had been abandoned to their discretion. This made him gather an Army in all hafte of 6000. Foot, and 500, horse: wherewith coming upon them, he drave them, with little or no loss of his own, and great flaughter of theirs, haltily out of the Kingdom. Which done, he returned to Theffalonica.

In this one enterprise he had success anparts at the same time, he thought it wifdom to yield unto necessity; and therefore whom he reposed much considence, Emand some of his Roman Colonels: by whom they were gently entertained, and in very friendly wife dismissed. It seems that they had Commission, to refer all unto Titus his own discretion; as Philip himself in few dayes After the battel, Titus made hafte unto after did. There was granted unto him a the Acheans and other their friends gave der, one of the Atolians: who commendthought otherwise, it should be at their Moneths. his power to molest the Greeks.

whom Titus used friendly: and suffering him States of Greece, came unto Rome, new Conyielded unto all that had been required at peace; alledging frivolous matter of their good, and had willed them to deliver their Phaneas the Etolian, infulting over him, faid minds freely: added, That in the main of It was to be hoped, that he would then at the purpose, which he had in hand, he was length give up to the Etolians a many of utterly deceived : for that by making peace Towns, (which he there named) bidding with rhilip, he could neither affure the Ro- him speak whether he would or no. His anmans of their quiet, nor the Greeks of their fwer was, that they might take them all. But liberty. There was, he faid, none other end Titus interpoling himself, faid it should be to be made of the war, which could agree otherwise. These were Thessalan Towns.and either with the purpose of the Senate and should be all free; one of them only exceppeople of Rome, or with the fair promifes ted, which not long ago had refused to made by Titus himself unto the Greeks, than commit it self to the faith of the Romans, the chaling of Philip quite cut of his king- and therefore should now be given to the dom. And to this effect he made a long dif- Atolians. Hereat Phaneas cried out, that it courfe. But Titus answered, That this Ato- was too great an injury, thus to be defraudlim was ill acquainted, either with the good ed of the Towns that had fometimes bepleasure of the Senate and people of Rome, longed unto their Common-weal. Rather or with the laudable customs which they he willed Titus to consider, that by an angenerally held: for that it was not the cient Covenant between him and the Romanner of the Romans, to feek the utter defunction of any King or Nation, at fuch time their own, and the Romans to have nothing as they first made war with them, until by fave the pillage and captives. It is true, some rebellion they found it a matter of ne- that there had been such a condition in the cessity, to take such a rigorous course. And former war : but it ceased to be of any vahereof he alledged the Carthaginians as a lidity, as foon as the Etolians made peace notable example: adding, That victory, to with Philip. And thus much Titus gave them generous minds, was only an inducement to to understand; asking them whether they moderation. As concerning the publick be- thought it reasonable, that all the Towns nefit of Greece, it was (he faid) expedient. in Greece, which had let in the Romans by that the Kingdom of Macedon should be composition should be delivered into subjegreatly weakned and brought low; not that Ction of the Ætolians. The rest of the Confeit should be utterly destroyed: forasmuch derates were very much delighted with these as it ferved as a bar to the Thracians, Gaules, angry passages between the Romans and the and a multitude of other falvage Nations, Atolians: neither had they great reason to which would foon over-flow the whole con- fear any hard measure; fince Titus was fo tinent of Greece, if this kingdom were not carneft in the behalf of those Thessalians, to interposed. Wherefore he concluded, that give them liberty, though they had stood if Philip would yield unto those demands, out against him, even till very fear made wherewith he had pressed him in the former them open their gates. Wheresore they op-Treaty; then was there no reason to de- posed not themselves; but gave their conny him peace. As for the Etolians: if they fent willingly unto a Truce for four own pleasure, to take counsel apart for The chief cause that moved Titus to grant themselves as they thought good. Then be- peace so readily to the Macedonians, besides gan Phaneas, another of the Ætolians, to fay, that laudable cuftom by him before alledgthat all was come to nothing: for that ere ed, was, the fame of Antiochus his coming long, Philip would trouble all the Greeks, no with an army from Syria, and drawing neer less than he had done in time before. But toward Europe. He had also perhaps yet a Titus interrupted him, and bade him leave grater motive; even the confideration that his bablings; faying, That himself would take his successor might happen to defraud him fuch order, as that Philip, were he never so of the honour, if the war should happen defirous, should thenceforth not have it in to be protracted. And he was in the right. For when his letters, together with Embaf-The next day King Philip came thither: sadors from the Macedonian, and sundry to repose himself that night, held a Coun-suls were chosen: who (especially the one cel the day following: wherein the King of them) flood very earnestly against the his hands; offering yet further to stand to own suspition, in hope to get the honour of the good pleasure of the Senate, if they concluding the war. The Senate began to would have more added to the Conditions. be doubtfully affected, between the Embassa-

000000

ever was demanded; and the letters of Ti- formerly had made. Letters also werethen tus, preffing them to accept this offer, on the fent by Titus unto Prussas King of Bithynia: one fide, and the importunity of the Conful giving him to understand, what agreement on the other; who faid, that all these goodly shews were fraudulent, and that the King and how the Senate held it reasonable, that would rebel, as foon as the Army was the Ciani, most miserably spoiled and opcalled out of Greece. But the matter was ta- prefled by Philip, to gratific this Bithmian ken out of the Senators hands by two of the his fon-in-law, thould be restored to liberty. Tribunes, that referred it to an Affembly of and permitted to enjoy the same benefit of the People; by whose soveraign authority the Romans, which other of their Nation it was concluded, that peace should be did. What effect these letters wrought, it granted to the King. So ten Embassadors were fent from Rome, over into Greece: in mans were thorry buffed with Antiochus. which number were they that had been in fuch wife, that they had not leifure to ex-Consuls before Titus: and it was ordained amine the conformity of Prustas to their by their advice, that Titus should go through will. with the business of Peace. These would very fain have retained those three important Cities of Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetries, until the eftate of Greece were fomewhat better fetled. But finally, Titus pre- to the rest no small part of their contentvailed fo, that Corinth was (though not im | ment. The Baotians continued to favour the mediately) rendred unto the Acheans; and Macedonian; and thereby occasioned much all the other Greek towns which Philip trouble unto themselves. There were some held, as well in Afra as in Greece, restored unliberty.

Thilip, were, That before the celebration they were no better than loft, for the good Except of the next * Ifilmian Games, He should will which they had born unto him; unless Pople Le withdraw his Garrisons out of all the Greek at this time, when he lay close by them with towns which he held, and confine them over his Army, their Prætor, which was head of to the Romans: That he should deliver up the opposite Faction, might be made away, unto them all Captives that he had of their: , | Titus refused to have a hand in the executiand all Renegado's. Likewife all his ships on, yet nevertheless did animate them in of war, releaving to himself only five of the their purpose. So they committed the fact, lefferfort, and one of extraordinary great- and hoped to have kept themselves undifneß, wherein fixteen men laboured at eve- covered. But when the murder came out, ry oar: Further, that he should pay a and somewhat was confessed by those which thousand talents, the one half in hand, the were put to torture: the hatred of the peoother in ten years following, by even porti- | ple brake out violently against the Romans: Livil 33. ons. Hereto * Livie adds, That he was for- in fuch wife, that howfoever they durit not bidden to make war out of Macedon, with- take Arms against them, yet such of them out permission of the Senate. But I find not as they found stragling from their Camp, that he observed this Article; or was at they murdered in all parts of the counany time charged with the breach of it. Four try. This was detefted within a while, and hundred talents he had already delivered many of the dead bodies found. Hereupon to Titus, together with his younger fon De- Titus requires of the Exetians, to have the metrius, to remain as holtage for his true murderers delivered into his hands; and for dealing in this matter of peace, at such time five hundred souldiers, which he had lost as he lately fent his Embassadors to Rome: by them, to have paid unto him five hundred when it was promifed, that the money, and talents. In flead of making any fuch amends, his fon, should be restored back unto him, if they paid him with excuses 5, which he the Senate were not pleafed with the agree- would not take as good farisfaction. He ment. Whither this money were reckoned fends Embaffadors to the Acheans, and Ashe. as part of the thousand talents, I cannot nians, informing them what had hapned: find: and it feemeth otherwife, forasmuch and requested them not to take it amis, as young Demetrius, who, together with though he dealt with these their friends as those four hundred talents, was given for hoftage, remained still in custody of the Ro- wasting their country; and besiegeth

dors of Philip, offering to fland to whatfo- mans, as a part of the bargain which Titue was made with Philip in behalf of the Greeks; was not greatly material; fince the Ro-

All Greece rejoyced at the good bargain which Titus had made with Philip, Only the Ætolians found themselves agrieved that they were utterly neglected: which was among them well-affected to the Romans: who, feeing how things were like to go, The Conditions of Peace granted unto made their complaint unto Titus faying that culpable of the murders lately done. But abstain from the free Cities in Asia, and not the Embaffadors of the Achains and Athenians (especially of the Achaans, who offered, soever he had occupied, belonging to the if he needed them, to help him in this war ; Kings, Ptolomy or Philip. Moreover they wilvet befought him rather to grant peace unto led him by these his Embassadors, that he the Bastians) prevailed fo far with him, that | should not pass over his Army into Europe; he was pacified with 30 talents, and the pu- adding, That some of them would visit him nithments of fuch as were known offenders. in person ere it were long, to talk with him many States of Greece distracted : some they fell to accomplishing their promises among them rejoycing that they were free unto the Greeks; to the rest they gave what from the Macedonian; others greatly doubt- they had promifed. But the Phocians and Loing, that the Roman would prove a worse crians they gave unto the Ætolians; whom neighbour. The Ætolian would have been they thought it no wisdom to offend overglad of any Commotion; and therefore much, being shortly to take a greater work published rumours abroad, That it was the in hand. The Acheans of Phthiotis they anpurpose of the Romans, to keep in their own nexed unto the Thessalians; all save the hands all those places, wherein Philip lately town of Thebes in Phthiotis, the same which had his Garrisons. Little did they, or the had been abandoned by T. Quintius to the rest of the Greeks, conceive, that this Macedonian war ferved as an introduction to the Atolians contended very earnestly about war to be made in Asia against King Antio- | Pharsalus and Leucas. But they were put off chus; where grew the fruit, that was to be with a dilatory answer, and rejected unto reaped of this and many other victories. the Senate: for howfoever fomewhat the Wherefore to stay the progress of bad ru- Councel might favour them, yet was it not mors, when the Isthmian games were held, which in time of peace were never without it were in despight of Titus. So the Acheans great solemnity and concourse; Titus in were restored corinth, Triphylia, and Herea. that great affembly of all Greece, caused proclamation to be made by found of Trumpet to this effect, That the Senate and people of Rome, and Titus Quintius Flaminius the General, having vanquished King Philip and the Macedonians, did will to be at liberty, free from Impolitions, free from Garrisons, and living at their own Laws, the Corinthians, Phocians, Locrians, Enbwans, Achaans of Phthiotis, Magnesians, Thesfalians, and Perrhabians. The fuddenness of this Proclamation aftonished men: fo as though they applauded it with a great shout, yet presently they cried out to hear it again, as if they officiously about him.

CHAP. IV.

be much more available unto the Romans liberty. Orestes, a little Province of the in their war against Antiochus, then could kingdom of Macedon, bordering on Epirus, have been the possession of a few Towns, and lying towards the Ionian Sea, yet yea, or of all those Provinces which were yielded unto the Romans long ere this, and named in the Proclamation. Upon confi- lince continued true to them: for which dence hereof, no sooner were the Isthmian cause it was also set at liberty, and made it a games at an end, than Titus, with the Romans | free estate by it self. that were of his Councel, gave audience to Hagestanax and Lysias, King Antrochus his ed, that all care should be used, not how fuch Towns of theirs, as did feem to be most unto their Lord, That he should do well to vex them with war : as also to restore what-In like fort, though not fo violently, were further concerning these points. This done, Ætolians in the last Treaty with Philip. The meet that they should have their wills, as So the Corinthians were made free indeed. (though the Romans yet a while kept the Acrocorinthus) for that all which were partakers of the Achean Common-wealth, enjoved their liberty in as absolute manner as they could defire. To Pleuratus the Illyrian were given one or two places, taken by the Romans from Fhilip: and upon Aminander were bestowed those Castles, which he had gotten from Philip during this war; to reign in them, and the grounds which they commanded, as he did among his Athamanians. The Rhodians had been their own Carvers. Attalus was dead a little before the Victodurst scarce credit their own ears. The Greeks | ry; and therefore lost his share. Yet many were Crafts-masters in the Art of giving that were with Titus in Councel, would thanks; which they rendred now to T. Quin- have given the towns of Oreum and Euretia, tius with fo great affection, as that they in the Isle of Eubwa, to his fon and succeshad well-near smothered him, by thronging for King Eumenes. But finally it was concluded, that these as well as the rest of the This good will of the Greeks, was like to Eubwans, should be suffered to enjoy their

These businesses being dispatcht, it remain-Embassadors: whom they willed to fignise to avoid the war with King Antiochus, but 0000002

how to accomplish it with most ease and the Romans therein. What ground and prosperity. Wherefore Embassadors were matter of War against this King, the Rofent, both to Antiochus himself, to pick mans now had, or shortly after found: as also matter of quarrel; and about unto others, how their Embassadors and Agents dealt to pre-dispose them unto the affisting of and sped abroad, I refer unto another place.

CHAP. V.

The Wars of the Romans with Antiochus the Great, and his Adherents.

6. I.

What Kings of the races of Seleucus and Ptolomy reigned in Alia and Egypt before Antiochus the Great.

by Ptolomy Ceraunus, at an Altar called Ar- He took in hand an enterprife against Ptologos; having (as is faid) been warned be- my Philadelphus: but finding ill success in L. 2. 140. fore by an Oracle, to beware of Argos, as the beginning, he soon gave it over. To this Man. the fatal place of his death. But I never King Antiochus Soter it was, that Berofus Paras. read that any mans life hath been preferv- the Chaldwan dedicated his Hiftory of Allised, or any mischance avoided by the pre- ria; the same which hath since been exceldictions of such Divellish Oracles. Rather lently falsissed by the Friar Annius. Helest I believe, that many fuch predictions of the | behind him one fon, called Antiochus Theo; Heathen gods, have been ante-dated by and one daughter, called Apame, that was their Priests; or by others, which devised married unto the King of cyrene. So he died them after the event.

Seleucus, was dearly beloved of his father: Olympiad following, in the fiftieth or one and who furrendred unto him his own wife fiftieth year of the Kingdom of the Greeks, Stratonica, when he understood how much when he had reigned nineteen years. the young Prince was enamoured on her. Wherefore Ptolomy Ceraumus had great cause to fear, that the death of selencus would not by flattery of the Milefians; whom he delihe unrevenged by this his Successor. But vered from Timarchus, a Tyrant that oppres-Antiochus was contented to be pacified , ei- fed them. He held long and difficult, but ther with gifts, or perhaps only with fair fruitless war with Ptolomy Philadelphus words, containing himself within Asia; and King of Egypt; which finally he compoundletting Ceraumus enjoy that quietly, which ed, by taking to wife Berenice the daughter he had purchased in Europe, with the blood of Ptolomy. of Seleucus. It is faid of this Antiochus, that although he married with the Queen Stra- renice, S. Hierom and other Interpreters have tonica in his fathers life, yet out of modesty understood that Prophecy of Daniel: The was dead. So that pethaps his incestuous King of the North to make an agreement; and love was partly, if not chiefly, the cause of that which followeth. his not profecuting that revenge, whereunto Nature should have urged him. Afterwards | Peace and Learning; and (setting apart his he had wars with Antigonus Gonatus, and incestuous marriage with his own lister Arwith Nicomedes King of Bithynia. Also Luta | finoe) a very excellent Prince: howloever, rius and Leonorius Kings or Captains of the the worthiest of all that race. It was he Gauls, were fet upon him by the same Nico-that built, and furnished with Books, that famedes. With these he fought a great battel : mous Library in Alexandria : which to Teleucus Nicanor, the first of his race, wherein, though otherwise the enemies had King of Affa and Syria, died in the end all advantage against him, yet by the terror of the hundred twenty and fourth of his Elephants, which affrighted both Olympiad. He was treacherously flain their horses and them, he won the victory. about the end of the hundred twenty and Antiochus Soter, the son and heir of this ninth Olympiad, or the beginning of the

> Antiochus, furnamed Theos, or the god, had this vain and impious title given to him,

Of these two Kings, and of this Lady Behe forbore to embrace her, till his father Kings daughter of the South shall come to the Duart.

Ptolomy Philadelphus was a great lover of adorn, and to honour the more, he fent unto | murdered Berenice, together with a fon that at liberty as many of them, as his father the had fent unto the * Temple of God in Agpt, came to rescue her with an Army; wherefore though too late, for the was flain before. 18042 Elegar, vielding unto the Kings defire, pre-

passage of this butiness between Philadel-Concern. ladelphus was King; reckoning the time ing freed from this invalion, by occasion of wherein he joyntly reigned with his fawhich goes ther. He was exceedingly beloved of his under the people; and highly magnified by Poets, and driftens; other Writers. Towards his end he grew former years : in which time he boafted, among the that he alone had found out the way how uth, Lady- to live for ever. If this had been referred | Fleet he prepared: in furnithing and manunto his honourable deeds, it might have ing whereof he was at such charges, that he flood with reason: otherwise the Gout, scarce lest himself any other hope, if that thatis with which he was often troubled, was should miscarry. Herein he embarqued himfit, and enough to teach him his own errour. He felf; and putting to Sea, did meet with fuch the inven- was the first of the Kings derived from Ainclude lexanders Successors, that entred into a very few of his friends that hardly esca-Author. League with the Romans : as also his offit were to spring was the last among those Royal Fabeliefe milies, which by them was rooted up.

time of Vives; it may be now much more justly suspected: since a new Edition of it is come forth, purged from faults, (as the Papilts term tole Books, wherein they have changed what they please) and set forth by Middenderpines at Colen, An. Dom. 1578.

Laodice, at such time as he married with Be-

Eleazar, then high Priest of the Jews, for the had born to Antiochus. Justine reports, 148,1.27. the Books of Moses and other Scriptures. that Beernice faved her felf, together with The benefits of this King unto the Jews had the young Prince her child, a while in the formerly been very great; for he had fet Sanctuary at Daphne: and that not only some Cities of Asia prepared to succour her, held in flavery throughout all Egypt; and but her brother Ptolomy Energetes King of

With fuch cruelties Sclencus Callinicus, fented him with an Hebrew copy: which | fucceeding unto his Father, that had fifteen Ptolomy caused to be translated into Greek, years been King, began his reign. His subby seventy two of the most grave and jects were highly offended at his wicked learned persons that could be found among nature; which they discovered in his sirst all the Tribes. In this number of the 72. entrance. Wherefore it was like, that his E-Interpreters, or (as they are commonly state would have been much endangered, if called) the seventy, Jesus the son of syrach, Ptolomy Energetes, who came against him. is thought by Genebrard to have been one; had not been drawn back into his own who that he lived in this Age, it feems to me | Countrey, by fome Commotions there in very sufficiently proved by fansenius, in his hand. For there were none that would bear Preface unto Ecclesiafticus. The whole armes against Ptolomy, in defence of their own King: but rather they fided with the phus and the high Priest, was written (as Agyptian; who took Landice the Kings mo-(a) Josephus affirms) by Aristans that was ther, and rewarded her with death as she employed therein. Forty years Ptolomy Phi- had well deserved. Wherefore Selencus, bethose domestical troubles which recalled Euergetes home into Ægypt; went about a dangerous piece of work, even to make War upon his own subjects, because of their bad more voluptuous, than he had been in his affection towards him; when it had been much better, by well deferving to have changed their hatred into love. A great a tempest, as devoured all fave himself, and ped. This calamity, having left him nothing else in a manner than his naked body, turned nevertheless to his great good; as anon after it feemed. For when his subjects understood in what fort the gods (as they conceived it) had punished him for his offences: they had commiferation of his Estate ; and, presuming that he would Antiochus Theos had another wife called thenceforth become a new man, offered unto him their fervice with great alacrity. This renice the daughter of this Ptolomy. After revived him, and filled him such a spirit; as his fecond marriage, he used his first wife thinking himself well enough able to deal with no better regard, then if she had been with the Agyptian, he made ready a mighty his Concubine. Laodice hated him for this: Army for that purpose. But his fortune was yet adventured not to feek revenge, untill no better at Land, that it had been at Sea. her own son seleucus Callinicus was of ability He was vanqui hed by Ptolomy in a great to be King. This was two or three years af- battel: whence he escaped hardly; no better the death of Ptolomy Philadelphus: at ter attended, than after his late shipwrack. what time the poyloned her husband Theos; Hasting therefore back to Antioch, and searand, by permission of selencus her son, ing that the enemy would soon be at his

10,2 heels : He wrote unto his brother Antiochus | Antiochus Hierax or the Hank) which fur-Hierax who lay then in Afa, praying him to name was given him, because he fought his bring fuccour with all speed; and promi- prey upon every one, without care whether fing, in recompence of his faith and dili- he were provoked or not)foared away as far gence, the Dominion of a great part of Asia. as he could, both from his brother, and from Antiochus was then but fourteen years old, his own Gaules. Having fetcht a great combut extreamly ambitious ; and therefore pass through Mesopotamia and Armenia, He glad of fuch an occasion to make himself fell at length in Cappadocia; where his fagreat. He levied a mighty Army of the ther-in-law King Artamenes took him up, Gaules; wherewith he let forward to help He was entertained very lovingly in outhis brother, or rather to get what he could ward fnew; but with a meaning to betrav for himself. Hereof Ftolomy being adver- him. This he soon perceived : and theretiled: and having no desire to put himself fore betook him to his wings again; though in danger more then he needed; took Truce he knew not well, which way to bend his with Selenens for ten years. No fooner was flight. At length he resolved to bestow him-Sciences freed from this care of the Agypti- felf upon Ptolomy; his own conscience telling an War, but his brother Antiockus came upon him, and needs would fight with him, his brother; and therefore what little good as knowing himself to have the better Ar- he was reciprocally to expect at his hands. my. So Scleneus was vanquithed again 5 Infidelity can find no fure harbour. Ptolomp and faved himself with fo few about him, well understood the perfidious and turbuthat he was verily supposed to have perish-lent nature of this Hierax. Wherefore he ed in the battel. Thus did Gods Juftice laid him up in close prison : whencethough take revenge of those murders by which the by means of an harlot, he got out; yet flymight have been thought) on the head of threves, by whom he was murthered. Near to hear of his brothers death, as if thereby Gaules, his Mercenaries, were gladder then he. For when he led them against Eumenes King of Pergamus, being in hope to get honour by making a Conquest in the beginning of his Reign: these perfidious Barbarians ftrip him of all that he had. They thought tented: but made him enter into such Comgathered a new Army: and prepared once third, called afterwards the Great. more to try his fortune against his brother. fit for himself, to make his profit of their discord. Antiockus fought with him, and Crown was purchased; and settled (as ing from his keepers, he fell into the hands of this bloody King. Antiochus was very glad about the fame time died selenens. The Parthians and Baffrians had rebelled against he had purchased his hearts desire. But the him, during his wars with his brother. He therefore made a journey against Arfaces founder of the Parthian Kingdom: wherein his evil fortune, or rather Gods vengeance, adhered to closely to him, that he was taken prisoner. Arfaces dealt friendly with him, took council against him, & devised how to and dismissed him, having every way given him royal entertainment: but in returning it very likely, that if there were none of the home, he brake his neck by a fall from his Royall house to make head against them 3 horse, and so ended his unhappy reign of it would be in their power, to do what twenty years. He had to wife Laodice the should be best pleasing to themselves, in the lister of Andromachus, one of his most trusty lower Asia. Wherefore they laid hands on Captains: which was father unto that Ache-Antiochus; and enforced him to ranfome us, who making his advantage of this affihimself with money, as if he had been their nity, became shortly after (as he stilled himlawful Priloner. Neither were they to con- [6:f] a King; though rather indeed, a great troubler of the world in those parts. By position with them, as tended but little to Laodice he had two sons; seleneus the third, his honour. In the mean while selencus had furnamed Ceraunus; and Antiochus the Selencus Ceraunus reigned only three Eumenes hearing of this, thought the feafon years in which time he made War upon Attalus the first, that was King of Pergamus. Being weak of body through fickness, and was beaten: which is no great marvail, in want of money, he could not keep his fince he had great reason to stand in no less men of War in good order : and finally he fear of the Gaules, his own fouldiers, than was flain by treason of Nicanor and Apaturiof the enemy with whom he had to deal. us a Gaule. His death was revenged by Ache-After this, Eumenes won much in Asia; us, who slew the Traitors, and took charge whilest Antroclus went against his brother. of the Army : which he ruled very wiely, In the second battel, fought between the and faithfully a while; Antiochus the brobrethren, seleneus had the upper hand; and ther of seleneus being a Child,

ø. II.

after the death of the Great Alexander.

was unto his Lord, and finally unto him- had befallen them. felf; the fuccess of things will shortly discover.

reign, Ptolomy Euergetes King of Agypt di- Lord unto war against the Egyptian; for ed, and left his heir Ptolomy Philopater, a the recovery of Cwlosyria and the Countries young Boy likewife, as hath elfewhere been adjoyning. This counsel was very unsealoremembred. This was that Euergetes, who nably given, when Molo, the Kings Lieuterelieved Aratus and the Acheans: who af- nant in Media, was broken out in rebellion, terwards took part with Cleomenes: and and fought to make himself absolute Lord lovingly entertained him, when he was cha- of that rich Country. Nevertheless Hermifed out of Greece by Antigonus Gonatus. He as, being more froward than wife, maintainannexed unto his Dominion the Kingdom ed stiffely, that it was most expedient and of Grene by taking to wife Bernice, the agreeable with the Kings honour, to fend daughter of King Magas. He was the third forth against a rebellious Captain, other of the Ptolomies; and the last good King of Captains that were faithful; whilest he in that race. The name of Euergetes, or the person made War upon one that was like doer of good, was given to him by the himself, a King. No man durst gain-say the Agyptians; not so much for the great spoils resolution of Hermias; who therefore sent which he brought home, after his victories Xenætas an Achean, with such forces as he in Syria; as for that he recovered some of thought expedient, against the Rebel; thole Images or Idols, which Cambyfes, when whilest in the mean season an Army was he conquered Agypt, had carried into Perpreparing for the Kings expedition into Carfia, He was ready to have made War upon lospria. The King having marched from the Jews, for that Onias their high Priest, Apamea to Laodicea, and so over the Desarts out of meer covetouinels of money, refu- into the Valley of Mallias, between the fed to pay unto him his yearly tribute of Mountains of Libanus and Anti-libanus; 20. talents: but he was pacified by the wif- found his way there stopped by Theodotus dom of Josephus a Jew, to whom afterwards an Atolian, that served under Ptolomy. So he let in farm the Tributes and customs that he confumed the time there a while to none belonged unto him in those parts of Syria effect: and then came news, that Xenatas, which he held. For Calogria, with Palaftina, his Captain, was destroyed with his whole and all those parts of the Country that lay Army; and Molo thereby become Lord of nearest unto Egypt, were held by the Egypti- all the Countrey, as far as unto Babylon. an; either as having fallen to the share of Kenætus, whilest he was yet on his journey,

Ptolomy the first, at such time as the great Antigonus was vanquished and slain in the The beginning of the Great Antiochus his battel at Ipsus; or as being won by this reign. of Ptolomy Euergetes, and Phi- Euergetes, in the troublesome and unhappy lopater, Kings of Egypt. War between reign of Seleneus Callinicus. The victories Antiochus and Philopater. The rebellion of this Energetes in Syria, with the contenof Molo: an expedition of Antiochus tions that lasted for many succeeding ages against him. The recontinuance of Anti- between the Ptolomies and the Seleucide; ochus his Ægyptian war: with the passages were all foretold by Daniel in the Prophecy between the two Kings: the victory of Pto- before cited, which is expounded by S. lomy, and peace concluded. Of Achæus, Hierome. Thus Ptolomy Euergetes reigned and his rebellion; his greatness, and his fix and twenty years; and died towards fall. Antiochus his expedition against the end of the hundred thirty and ninth the Parthians, Bactrians, and Indians, Olympiad. It may feem by that which we Somewhat of the Kings reigning in India, find in the Prologue unto Jesus the son of Syrach his book, that he should have reigned a much longer time. For Siracides there Ntiochus was scarcely fifteen years old, saith that he came into Egypt in the eight when he began his reign, which lasted and thirtieth year, when Euergetes was fix and thirty years. In his minority he was King. It may therefore be, That either this wholly governed by one Hermias, an ambi- King reigned long together with his father: tious man, and one which maligned all ver- or that those eight and thirty years were the tue, that he found in any of the Kings faith- years of Jesus his own age; if not perhaps ful servants. This vile quality in a Coun-reckoned (as the Jews did otherwhiles fellor of fuch great place, how harmfull it reckon) from some notable accident that

Not long after the death of Euergetes, Hermias the Counsellor, and in a manner Soon after the beginning of Antiochus his | the Protector of King Antiochus, incited his

ceived many advertisements, by such as fled where at his first coming, he won the City: over unto him from the Enemy, That the but failing to take the Castle that was exfollowers of Molo were, for the most part, ceeding strong, returned back to Selencia. against their wills drawn by their Comman- there to give order concerning this business. der to bear arms against their King. This report was not altogether falle; but Molo tiochus, whilest he lay (as is faid before) in himself stood in some doubt lest his follow- the Vale of Maps as; filled him with great ers would leave him in time of necessity. forrow, and his Camp with trouble. He took Xenetas therefore making shew, as if he had counsell what to do in this needfull case: prepared to pass the River by Boats in face and was well advised by Epigenes, the hest of his enemy; left in the night time such man of War he had about him, to let alone as he thought meet to defend his Camp: this enterprise of Cwlosgria; and bend his and with all the flour of his Army went forces thither, where more need required over Tygris, in a place ten miles lower than them. This counsel was put in excution Molo his Camp. Molo heard of this, and fent | with all convenient hafte. Yet was Epicenes forth his herie to give impediment : but difmified by the way, and foon after flain, hearing that Xenutas could not so be stop- by the practice of Hermias: who could not ped, He himself dislodged, and took his endure to hear good counsel given, conjourney towards Media; leaving all his bag. trary to his own good liking and allowance. gage behind him in his Camp. Whether he In the journey against Molo, the name and did this, as distrusting the faith of his own presence of the King was more available. fouldiers; or whether thereby to deceive than any odds which he had of the Rebell his Enemy: the great folly of Xenetas made in strength. Molo distrusted his own followhis stratagem prosperous. For Xenetas, having born himfelf proudly before, upon the countenance of Hermias, by whom he was would ferve to hold them from returning to advanced unto this charge; did now pre- the Kings obedience, if once they beheld fume that all should give way to his authori- his person. Wherefore he thought it safest ty, without putting him to much trouble of for him to affail the Kings Camp in the night using the sword. Wherefore he suffered his time. But going in hand with this, He was men to feast with the provisions which they discovered by some that sled over from him found ready in the forfaken Camp: or ra- to the King. This caused himtoreturn back ther he commanded them so to do, by mak- to his Camp: which by some errour, took ing Proclamation. That they should cherish alarm at his return : and was hardly quiup themselves against the journey, which eted, when Antiochus appeared in sight. The he intended to take the next day, in pursuit King was thus forward in giving battel to of the Rebels that fled. And to the fame | Molo, upon confidence which he had that purpose he busied himself, in transporting many would revolt unto him. Neither was the remainder of his Army, which he had he deceived in this his belief. For not a few left on the other fide of Tygris. But Molo | men or Enfigns: but all the left wing of the went no further that day, than he could enemy which was opposite unto the King, eafily return the same night. Wherefore changed side forthwith as soon as ever they understanding what good rule the Kings had fight of the Kings person; and were men kept: he made such haste back unto ready to do him service against Molo. This them, that he came upon them early in the was enough to have won the victory: but morning; whileft they were yet heavy with | Molo shortned the work, by killing himself; the Wine and other good cheer that they had as did also divers of his friends, who for fear with him, died fighting in defence of the their own fwords. Camp: the rest were slaughtered without making resistance; and many of them ere that the Queen Lacdice daughter of Mithrithey were perfectly awake. Likewise the dates King of Pontus, which was married un-Camp on the other side of Tygris, was easily to Antiochus a while before, had brought taken by Molo: the Captains flying thence, forth a fon. Fortune seemed bountiful unto to fave their own lives. In the heat of this the King : and therefore he purposed to victory, the Rebell marched unto Selencia, make what use he could of her friendly diswhich he presently took : and, mastering position while it lasted. But now in the within a little while the Province of Babylo | Eastern parts of his kingdom, He judged nia, and all the Countrey down to the red it convenient to visit his frontiers, were it and drew near to the River of Tygris; re- | Sea, or Bay of Persia, He hasted unto Sula:

The report of these things coming to Aners : and thought, that neither his late good fuccess, nor any other consideration, spent at supper. So Xenetas and a very few of torments, prevented the Hang-man with

After this Victory, came joyfull news, had been concealed.

ing that he knew all, and upbraiding him press Antiochus with daily Embassadors only to terrifie the Barbarians, that borde- with fuch infidelity, as any offender might red upon him. Hereunto his Counsellor Her- know to be unpardonable. By these means miss gave affent: not formuch respecting he emboldned the Traitor: who being althe Kings honour, as confidering what good ready detected, might better hope to mainmight thereby happen to himself. For if it tain his former actions by strong hand, than thould come to pais, that the King were to excuse them or get pardon by submission. taken out of the world by any calualty : Antiochus had at that time a vehement dethen made he no doubt of becoming Prote- fire to recover Calofria, or what elfe he Etor to the young Prince; and thereby of could, of the Dominions of Ptolomy Philolengthening his own Government. Antio- pater in those parts. He began with selenchus therefore went against Artabanes, who cia, a very strong City near to the mouth reigned among the Atropatians; having the of the River Orontes; which ere long he greatest part of his kingdom situate between won, partly by force, partly by corrupting the Calpian and Euxine Sea. This barbarous with bribes the Captains that lay therein. King was very old and fearful; and there- This was that Seleucia, whereto Antigonus fore yielded unto whatfoever conditions the Great, who founded it, gave the name of ir pleased Antiochus to lay upon him. So Antigonia: but Seleucus getting it shortly in this journey Antiochus got honour, fuch after, called it Seleucia; and Ptolomy Eueras well contented him; and then returned getes having lately won it, might if it had fo homewords. Upon the way, a Physitian of pleased him, have changed the name into his brake with him as concerning Hermias ; Ptolomais. Such is the vanity of men, that informing him truly how odious he was to hope to purchase an endless memorial unto the people; and how dangerous he would their names, by works proceeding rather be fortly unto the Kings own life. Antio- from their greatness, than from their verchus believed this, as having long suspected tue; which therefore no longer are their the same Hermias; but not during for fear of own, than the same greatness hath continuhim to utter his suspicions. It was therefore ance. Theodotus the Etolian, he that before agreed, that he should be made away on the had opposed himself to Antiochus, and defindden: which was done, he being trained | fended Cwloffria in the behalf of Ptolomy; forth by a fleight, a good way out of the was now grown forry, that he had used so Camp, and there killed without warning or much faith and diligence, in service of an undisputation. The King needed not to have thankful and luxurious Prince. Wherefore used so much art in ridding his hands of a as a Mercenary, he began to have regard to man so much detested. For howsoever he his own profit: which thinking to find greaseemed gracious whilest he was alive: yet ter, by applying himself unto him that was they that for fear had been most obsequious | (questionles) the more worthy of these two to him, whilest he was in case to do them Kings; he offered to deliver up unto Antiohurt, was as ready as the foremost, to speak chus, the Cities of Tyrus and Ptolomais. of him as he had deserved, when once they Whilst he was devising about this treason, were secure of him: yea, his wife and chil- and had already sent messengers to King dren, laying then at Apamea, were stoned to Antiochus: his practice was detected, and he death by the wives and children of the Ci- befieged in Ftolomais by one of Ptolomies tizens; whose indignation brake forth Captains, that was more faithful than himthe more outrageously, the longer that it self. But Antiochus hasting to his rescue, vanguished this Captain who met him on the About these times, Acheus (of whom we way: and afterwards got possession, not onspake before) thinking that Antiochus might | ly of Tyrus and Ptolomais, with a good Fleet happen to perish in some of these expediti- of the Egyptian Kings that was in those Haons which he took in hand was bold to fet a vens: but of fo many other Towns in that Diademupon his own head, and take upon | Country, as emboldned him to think upon him as a King. His purpose was to have in- making a journey into Egypt it self. Agathovaded syria: but the fame of Antiochus his cles and Sosibius bore all the sway in Egypt returning thitherwards, made him quit the at that time: Ptolomy himself being loath to enterprise; and study to set some handsome have his pleasures interrupted, with business colour on his former prefumption. It is ve- of so small importance, as the safety of his ry strange that Antiochus neither went Kingdom. Wherefore these two agreed against Acheus; nor yet dissembled the no- together, to make provision as hastily, tice which he had taken of these his traite- and yet as secretly as might be for the War: rous purposes: but wrote unto him, signify- and nevertheless at the same time, to

Pppppp

to some good agreement. There came in the son of Lagi, had won Celosyria, and the heat of this business, Embassadors from Provinces adjoyning, for himself: as also Rhodes, Byzantium, and Cyzicus, as likewife that he had fufficiently gratified Seleneus, by from the Atolians; according to the usual lending him forces to recover his Province courtefie of the Greeky, defiring to take up of Babylon, and the Countries about the Ri-

by Agathocles and Sofibius: who intreated the end of their disputation, as far from them to deal effectually with Antiochus, But concluding, as at the beginning. Ptolomy dewhilft this treaty lafted, great preparations manded restitution; Antiochus thought, that were made at Alexandria for the War: he had not as yet gotten all that was his wherein these two Counsellors perswaded own: Also Ptolomy would needs have Achethemselves reasonably, that the vistory w comprehended in the league between would be their own; if they could get, for them, as one of their Confederates; But Anmoney, a fufficient number of the Greeks to tiochus would not endure to hear of this. take their parts. Antiochus heard only what exclaiming against it as a shameful thing, was done at Memphis, and how defrous the that one King should offer to deal so with Governours of Fight were to be at quiet: another, as to take his rebel into protection, whereunto he gave the readier belief, not and feek to joyn him in Confederacy with only for that he knew the disposition of Pto- his own Soveraign Lord. When the Truce long, but because the Rhodians, and other was expired, and Antiochus prepared to take Embassadors, coming from Memphis, dil the field again: contrary to his expectation, coursed unto him all after one manner; as be he was informed, That Ptolomy, with a very ing all deceived by the cunuing of Agatho- puissant Army, was coming up against him cles and his fellow: Anticehus therefore ha- out of Egypt. Serting forward therefore to ving wearied himfelf, at the long fiege of a meet with the Enemy, he was encountred Town called Dura, which he could not win: on the way by these Captains of Ptolomy, and being defirous to refresh himself and his that had refisted him the year before. They Army in Sciencia, Curing the winter which held against him the passages of Libanus, then came on, granted to the Egyptian a whence nevertheless he drave them: and Truce for four moneths, with promife that proceeding onward in his journey, won fo he would be ready to hearken unto equal many places, that he greatly encreased his Conditions, when they should be offered. It reputation; and thereby drew the Arabians, was not his meaning to be fo courtcous, as with divers of the bordering people, to he would fain have feemed, but only to lull become his followers. As the two Kings his enemics affeep, whilest he took time to drew near together; many Captains of Ptorefresh himself; and to being Acheus to some lomy for sook his pay, and fled over to Antiogood order, whose treason daily grew more chas. This notwithstanding, the Egyptian open and violent. The fame negligence had the courage to meet his enemy in the which he thought the Egyptian would have field. The battle was fought at Raphia: where used, he used himself; as preliming that when it was not to be decided, whether the Feyptime of the year better served, little force tians or the Asiatiques were the better Soul-But Piolomies men would acknowledge no by whose valour he brake the Gross of his fuch bargain. They faid that Ptolony the enemies battel, and won the vidory:

ver of Euphrates. Thus whileft neither of These were all entertained in Memphis, them greatly cared for peace; they were in would be needful; for that the Towns diers, (for that the frength of both Armies would voluntarily yield unto him, fince Pto- confifted in Mercenaries, chiefly of the long provided not for their defence. Never- Greeks, Thracians, and Gauls;) but whether thelefs, he gave audience to the Embassadors, of the Kings was the more fortunate. Ptoloand had often conference with those that my, with Arsinoe his Sister and Wife, rode were fent out of Egspt: pleasing himself, well, up and down encouraging his men; the like to dispute about the justice of his quarrel; did Antiochus on the other side : each of which he purposed shortly to make good by them rehearling the brave deeds of his Anthe fword, whether it were just or no. He cestors; as not having of their own, whereby faid, that it was agreed between Selenem his to value themselves. Antiochus had the more Ancestor, and Ptolomy the son of Lagi, Elephants, as also his being of Asia, had they That all Spria, if they could win it from been fewer, would have beaten those of Antigonus, should be given in possession to Africk, Wherefore by the advantage of those selençus : and that this bargain was after- | beafts, He drave the Enemies before him, ward ratified, by general confent of the in that part of the battel wherein he fought Confederates, after the battel at Ipfus. himself. But Ptolomy had the better men whilest Antiochus was heedlesly following rable. As for the Egyptian, he was not only flothful condition.

fon to take part against the more honou- The success was agreeable to that which

mon those, whom he had compelled to re- slothful, but hindred by a rebellion of his upon the had brought into the field a own subjects, from helping his friends hove seventy thousand foot, and six thousand abroad. For the people of Egypt, of whom horse; whereof though he lost scarce ten Ptolomy, contrary to the manner of his Prothouland foot, and not four hundred horse; genitors, had armed a great number to ver the fame of his overthrow took from lerve in the late expedition; began to enterhim all those places which he had lately won. tain a good opinion of their own valour. When therefore he was returned home to thinking it not inferiour to the Macedonian. Antioch: He began to stand in fear, lest Pto- Hereupon they refused to suffer as much as long and Acheno, fetting upon him both at formerly they had done: fince they less esteeonce, should put him in danger of his whole med, than they had done, the force of the Estate. This caused him to send Embassadors Kings mercenary Greeks: which had hitherto the Egyptian, to treat of peace; which to kept them in straight subjection. Thus was readily granted; it being much against brake out a war between the King and his the nature of Ptolomy to vex himself thus subjects: wherein though the ill-guided with the tedious business of War. So Ptolomy force of the multitude was finally broken; yet having staid three moneths in Syria, re- King Ptolomy thereby wasted much of his turned home into Eggpt, clad with the re- strength, and much of his time, that might putation of a Conqueror; to the great ad- have been spent, as he thought, much better miration of his subjects and all those that in revelling: or, as others thought, in sucwere acquainted with his voluptuous and couring Achaus. As for Antiochus, He had no fooner made his peace with the Egyptian. Achaus was not comprised in the league than he turned all his care to the preparatibetween these two Kings: or if he had on of war against Achaus. To this purbeen included therein; yet would not the pose he entred into League with Attalus; Egyptian have taken the pains, of making a that so he might distract the forces of his fecond expedition for his fake. The best Rebel, and find him work on all sides. Fiwas, that he thought himself strong enough, | nally, his diligence and fortune were such, if fortune were not too much against him, to | that within a while he had pent up Achaus deal with Antiochus. Neither was he con- into the City of Sardes; where he held him fident without great reason: for besides his about two years besieged. The City was very many victories, whereby he had gotten all strong, and well victualled so as there appeathat belonged unto Antiochus on this side of red not, when the second year came, any Taurus, he had also good success against At- greater likelihood of taking it, than in the talus King of Pergamus: that was an able first years siege. In the end, one Lagoras a man of war, and commanded a ftrong Army. Neither was he, as Molo the Rebel had The Castle it self was upon a very high been, one of mean regard otherwise, and rock, and in a manner impregnable; as alcarried beyond himself by apprehending fo the Town-wall adjoyning to the Castle, in the advantage of some opportunity: but that part which was called the same, was Cousin-german to the King, as hath been in like manner situate upon steep Rocks, flewed before; and now lately the Kings and almost inaccessible; that hung over a brother-in-law, by taking to wife a younger deep bottom, whereinto the dead carkafes daughter of the same Mithridates King of of Horses, and other beasts, yea, and some-Pontus, which was also called Laodise, as was times of men, used to be thrown. Now it was her fifter the Queen, Antiochus his wife. observed by Lagoras, that the Ravens and Thee things had added Majefty unto him, and had made his followers greatly to re-place by reason of their foodwhich was there spect him, even as one to whom a Kingdom never wanting, used to flye up unto the top was belonging. Neither made it a little for of the Poocks, and to pitch upon the wals, him, That King Ptolomy of Egypt held him where they rested without any disturbance. in the nature of a friend: and that King An- Observing this often, he reasoned with himtiochus was now lately vanquished in the self, and concluded that those parts of the battel at Raphia; and had thereby lost all his wall were left unguarded, as being thought gettings in Syria. But all these hopes and unapproachable. Hereof he informed the likelihoods came to nothing: for the King King: who approved his judgement, and gave of Pontus, if he would meddle in that unto him the leading of such men, as he dequarell between fons-in-law, had no rea- fired for the accomplishing of the enterprise.

Pppppp 2

1017

Lagoras had afore conceived: and though in the faith of Bolis, and of one Cambrins with much labour, yet without refiftance, he whom Boiss had won unto the business, did fealed those rocks, and whileft a general af- somewhat trouble him. They were men fault was made, entred the Town in that part, to him unknown: and Cambylus was a folwhich was at other times unguarded, then lower of Antiochus; under whom he had the unthought upon. In the same place had the command of those Cretans, which held one Persians, under Cyrus, getten into Sardes; of the Forts that blocked up the Castle of when Cressus thought himself secure on that Sardes. Nevertheless other way to escape he fide. But the Citizens took not warning faw none, than by putting himfelf to some by the example of a loss of many ages past: | adventure. When the messenger had thereand therefore out of memory. Acheus held fore passed often to and fro, it was at length ftill the Castle: which not only seemed by concluded, That Bolis himself should come nature impregnable, but was very well fto- speak with Acheus, and conduct him forth. red with all necessaries, and manned with a There was none other than good faith meant fufficient number of fuch as were to him well by any of the rest, save only by Bolis and a trufty fellow, and one whom Achaus Captain under Ptolomy, and did not thruft comes found by examination heartily affected himself into this business; burwas invited less burwas invited less affured. Antiochus therefore was constrained Cambylus; which were Cretans, and (as all the fee to waste much time about it: having none their Countrymen, *same sew excepted, have 1 do nor other hope to prevail, than by familhing the been, and ftill are,) falle knaves. These two carefuline inclosed. Besides the usual tediousness of held a consultation together, that was, as himself incloded. Edites the unian teniounist of expectation, his buliness called him thence (a) Polybins observes it rightly Cretical: net-Estantian the concerning the facety of him whole defeated was into the higher Afia, where the Estartian ans, and Parthians with the Hyrcanians, had liverance they undertook, nor touching the two, who erected Kingdoms taken out of his Domini- discharge of their ownfaith; but only how in once ons, upon which they still increached, to get most with least adoe and danger to shameles ons, upon which they thin introduced but he thought it not fafe, to let Achans themselves Briefly they concluded, That fift Lielabert break loofe again. On the other side there were some Agents of Ptolomy the Egyptian, them ten Talents, which they had already cother and good friends unto Achaus; that made received in hand: and then, That they would king the it their whole study, how to deliver this reveal the matter to Antiochus; offering to Country befieged Prince. If they could refcue his per- deliver Acheus unto him, if they might be with all that when he should appear in the Countrys under Taurus, he would soon have an Army at command, and be ftrong enough to should be dispatched. Antiochus hearing this learn de my at command, and be mong chough to promise of Cambylus, was no less glad, than harby hold Antiochus as hardly to work as at promise of Cambylus, was no less glad, than harby any time before. Wherefore they dealt with were the friends of Acheus well pleased with infering one Bolis a Cretian, that was acquainted the comfortable promifes of Bolis. At my nate well with all the wayes in the Country, and length when all things were in readines on edines, in particularly with the by-paths and exceed- both fides, and that Bolis with Arianus callege ing difficult passages among those Rocks, was to get up into the Castle, and conveigh and difference the Castle of sardes stood. Him Acheus thence: He first went with Camby dust had they tempted with great rewards, which he lus to speak with the King, who gave him vethould receive at the hands of Fiolomy, as ry private audience; and confirmed unto to myse well as of Achaus ; to do his best for per him by word of mouth the affurance of his verien formance of their defire. He undertook the liberal promifes. And after that, putting home bufiness: and gave such likely reasons of on the countenance of an honest man, and to be ill bringing all to good effect, that they wrote of one that was faithful unto Ptolony, whom by faithful unto Ptolony, who who was the ptolony and unto Achaus, by one Ariams, a trufty messen he had long served, he accompanied Aria gua ger, whom Bolis found means to conveigh into the Castle. At his coming this support to the Castle. The faith of these Negotiators there, he was lovingly entertained; yet son, and Acheus held most assured. They also wrote questioned at large by Achaus, touching all Achaes unto him in privie Characters, or Ciphers, the weight of the business in hand. But he again wherewith none fave he and they were ac discoursed so well, and with such gravity; where quainted: whereby he knew, that it was no that there appeared no reason of distrusted and the same of fained device of his Enemies, in the name ing either his faith or judgement. He deep the coorof his friends. As for the mellenger, he was was an old Souldier, had long been a measure of the control of the unto their fide. But the Contents of the Epithan he in multiplicity of name is beyond any the Criticus in delected that were always Lyais evil beafts, and flow bellies. (a) 2 Pol. 10 ft. 8 hv also taken a safe course, in winning (as it lending him their hands, and taking such feemed) that other Countriman of his, who care of him, as eafily gave Bolis to understand kept a Fort that stood in their way; and that he was the man: and so by their unseathereby had already fundry times given fonable duty, they undid their Lord. When fafe passage and repassage unto Arianus. But they came to the place where Cambilus lav against all these comfortable hopes, the in wait, Bolis whistled, and presently clapsed importance of fo great an adventure stirred Acheus about the middle, holding him fast up fome diffidence. Acheus therefore dealt that he could not ftir. So they were all tawifely, and faid, that he would yet flay ken by the Ambufli, and carried forthwith in the Castle a little longer: but that he to Antiochus; who sate up watching in his meant to fend away with Bolis three or Pavilion, expecting the event. The fight of four of his friends; from whom, when he Achaus, brought in bound unto him, did so received better advertisement, concerning aftonish the King that he was unable to speak the likelihood of the enterprise, then a word, and anon brake out into weeping. would he iffue forth himself. Hereby he Yet was he before informed of the plot, took order, not to commit himself wholly which might have kept him from admiratiunto the faith of a man unknown. But as on:as also the next morning betimes, assem-Polybius well notes, he did not confider that bling his friends together, he condemned Ahe played the Cretian with a man of Crete: cheus to a cruel death: which argues, that he which is to say, that he had to do with one, was not moved with pity towards this unwhose knavery could not be avoided by cir- happy man. Wherefore it was the general recumpection. Bolis and Cambylus had laid gard of calamities, incident unto great their plots thus, That if Acheus came forth fortunes, that wrung from him these tears; as alone, then should be easily be taken by the also the rarity of the accident, that made ambush prepared for him: if he were accompanied with many of his friends, then should it be so, that such a course as this of his, in that of late had trodden it oft: and Bolis following behind, should have an eye upon cording to that spanish Proverb, Auntray-Acheus to prevent him, not only from efca- dor dos allevosos. The death of Achaus ping in the tumult, but from breaking his brought such altonishment upon those which own neck, or otherwise killing himself: to held the castle, that after a while they gave the end that being taken alive, he might be up the place and themselves unto the King; to Antiochus the more welcome Present. whereby he got entire possession of all to And in such order came they now forth: Arianus going before as Guide: the rest following as the way ferved, and Bolis in the Rear. Achaus made none acquainted with his purpose, till the very instant of his departure. Then fignified he the matter to his Wife

by honourable and faithful men. He had all of them very officious towards Acheus; both him and his friends to wonder: though Arianus be appointed to lead the way as one imploying two mischievous knaves against one Traitor, doth not rarely succeed well;achim belonging in the leffer Afia.

Some years passed after this, ere Antiochus was ready for his expedition against the Parthians and Hyrcanians. The Parthians were a little Nation of obscure beginnings, and commonly subject unto those that ruled Laodice; and comforting her with hope as in Media. In the great shuffling for Provinwell as he could, appointed four of his spe- ces, after the death of Alexander, the Governcial friends to bear him company. They ment over them was committed by Antipawere all disguised: and one of them alone ter, to one Philip, a man of small regard: took upon him to have knowledge of the shortly they fell to Eumenes; then to Antigo-Greek tongue; speaking & answering as need mus: and from him, to gether with the Medes, should require for all as if the rest had been to selencus; under whose posterity they Barbarians. Bolis followed them, craftily continued until the Reign of Selencus Calinidevising upon his business, and much perple- cus, being ruled by Lieutenants of the syxed. For (faith Polybius) though he were of rian Kings. The luftful infolency of one of Crete, and prone to surmise any thing to the these Lieutenants, together with the mismischief of another; yet could be not see in fortune of Callinicus, that was vanquished and the dark, nor know which of them was Ache- thought to be flain by the Gails, did ffir 16, or whether Achaus himself were there. up Arfaces, a nobleman of the Country, to The way was very uneafie, and in some seek revenge of injuries done x and aniplaces dangerous; especially to those that mate them to rebel. So he slew the Kings knew it not. Wherefore they were fain to Lieutenant; made himself King of the stay in divers places, and help one another up Parthians, and Lord of Hyrcania; fought profor down. But upon every occasion they were perously with those that disturbed him in prisoner in battel, whom he royally enter- ther of the Kings hope of accomplishing his tained and dismissed. Hereby he won repudes desires, without exceeding difficulty. Wheretation as a lawful King: and by good government of his Countrey, procured unto himfelf such love of his Subjects, that his name was continued unto his successors; like | make a subject. as that of the Ptolomies in Egypt, and that of the Casars afterwards in Rome. Much about against Enthydemus King of the Bactrians; the same time the Bactrians rebelled : one that indeed had not rebelled against him though these at length, and all belonging or his Ancestors: but having gotten the Kingunto the Sciencida beyond Euphrates, increa- dom from those that had rebelled, kept it fed the Parthians dominion. Now Antiochus himfelf. With Euthydemus he fought a batwent against them with so strong an army, that they durst not meet him in plain field 3 ctory. But the victory was not sogreatly but kept themselves in woods or places of to his honour, as was the testimony which he strength, and defended the Straights and passages of mountains. The resistances they made availed them not. For Antiochus had with him fo great a multitude, and fo well any one maninall his Army. His horse was forted, as he needed not to turn out of the flain under him; and he himself received way, from those that lay fortified against | a wound in his mouth, whereby he lost some him, in Woods and Straights between their of his teeth. As for Euthydemus, He withdrew mountains; it being easie to spare out of so himself back unto the furthermost parts of great a number, as many as fetching a com- his Kingdom, and afterwards protracted pals about, might either get above the ene- the War, seeking how to end it by compositimies heads; or come behind, and charge on. So Embafiadors passed between the them on the back. Thus did he often imploy Kings: Antiochus complaining, That a against them his light armature: wherewith | Country of his was unjustly usurped from he caused them to dislodge, and give way him: Euthydemus answering, That he had unto his Phalanx; upon which they durst not won it from the children of the Usurpers: adventure themselves in open ground. Ar- and further, That the Ballrians, a wild Nafaces, the second of the name, (for his father tion, could hardly be retained in order, save was dead before this) was then King of Par- by a King of their own; for that they borthia: who though he was confident in the dered upon the Scythians, with whom if they fidelity of his own subjects; yet feared to should join, it would be greatly to the danencounter fomighty an Invader. His hope ger of all the Provinces that lay behind was, that the bad wayes and Defarts would them. These allegations, together with his have caused Antiochus, when he was at own weariness, pacified Antiochus, and Echatane in Media, to give over the jour- made him willing to grant Peace, upon reaney, without proceeding much further. | fonable Conditions. Demetrius, the fon of This not so falling out: He caused the Enthydemus, being a goodly Gentleman, and Wels and Springs in the Wilderness, through employed by his father, as Émbassador in this which his Enemy must pass, to be dammed | Treaty of Peace, was not a little available unup and spoiled. By which means, and the to a good conclusion: for Antiochus liked refiltance before spoken of, when he could him so well, that he promised to give him in not prevail , He withdrew himself out of marriage, one of his own daughters; and the way; fuffering the Enemy to take therewithal permitted Enthydemus to retain his pleasure for a time, in wasting the Coun- the Kingdom, causing him nevertheless to trey: wherein without some victory obtain- | deliver up all Lis Elephants; as also to bind ed, he could make no long abode. Antio- himself by oath, to such Covenants as he chus hereby found, That Arfaces was no- thought requisite. thing strongly provided for the War. Wherefore he marched through the heart of made a journey over Caucaufus, and came Parthia: and then forward into Hyrcania to the borders of India, where he renewed where he wan Tambrace, the chief City with Sophagasenns, King of the Indians, the of that Province. This indignity and ma- fociety that had been between their Anceny other losses, caused Arsaces at length, stors. The Indians had remained subject unwhen he had gathered an Army that seem to the Macedonians for a little while, after ed strong enough, to adventure a battel. Alexanders death. Eumenes in his War

his beginnings; and took Selencus Callinicus | The issue thereof was such as gave to neifore Arfaces craved peace, and at length ob-

The next expedition of Antiochus, was tel by the River Artus, where he had the vigave of his own private valour, in obtaining it. He was thought that day to have demeaned him more courageously, than did against Antigonus, raised part of his forces out of their Countrey. But when Antigonus Onto the distriction of turned Westward, and The lend reign of Ptolomy Philopater in Awas overbusied in a great civill War : then did one Sandrocottus, an Indian, stir up his Country men to rebellion; making himself their Captain, and taking upon him, as protector of their liberty. This Office and Title he foon changed, though not without some contention, into the Name and Majesty of a King. Finally he got unto himfelf (having an Army of fix hundred thousand men) if not all India, yet as much of it as had been Alexanders. In this estate he had well confirmed himfelf, ere scleneus Nicanor could find leifure to call him to account. Neither did he faint, or humble himfelf at the coming of Selencus; but met him only in feeming.

So Antiochus leaving the Bactrian in quiet,

S. III.

gypt: with the tragical end of his favourites, when he was dead. Antiochus prepares to war on the young child Ptolomy Epiphanes, the son of Philopater. His irresolution in preparing for divers wars at once. His voyage towards the Hellespont. He fecks to hold amity with the Romans. who make friendly flow to him; intending nevertheless to have war with him. His doings against the Hellespont; which the Romans made the first ground of their quarrel

"His expedition being finished, Antio-Lehus had leifure to repose himself a in the field, as ready to defend his own, fo while; and fludy which way to convert the ftrongly and well appointed, that the Mace- terrour of his puillance, for the enlargedonian was contented to make both peace ment of his Empire. Within two or three and affinity with him, taking only a reward | years Ptolomy Philopater died : leaving his of fifty Elephants. This League, made by fon Ptolomy Epiphanes, a young Boy, his fucthe Founders of the Indian and Sprian king- cellour in the kingdom: unlikely by him to doms, was continued by some offices of love be well defended against a neighbour so between their children, and now renewed mighty and ambitious. This Ptolomy furpaby Antiochus: whose number of Elephants med Philopater, that is to say, a lover of his were increased thereupon, by the Indian Father, is thought to have had that surname King, to an hundred and fifty: as also he was given him in meer derision; as having made promifed, to have fome treasure fent after away both his Father and Mother. His him; which he left one to receive. Thus young years being newly past, his childparted these two great Kings. Neither had | hood when he began to reign, may seem to the Indians, from this time forwards in many discharge him of so horrible a crime, as his generations, any business worthy of remem- Fathers death: yet the beastliness of all his brance with the Western countries. The po- following life, makes him not unlike to have flerity of Sandrocottus is thought to have done any mischief, whereof he could be retained that kingdom unto the dayes of accused. Having wonthe battes at Raphiah, Augustus Casar: to whom Porus, then reign- He gave himself over to sensuality, and was ing in India, fent Embassadors with presents, wholly governed by a Strumpet called Aga. and an Epiftle written in Greek, wherein thoclea. At her infligation He murdered his among other things, he faid, That he had own wife and fifter; which had adventured command over fix hundred Kings. There is her felf with him, in that only dangerous also found, scattered in fundry Authors, the action by him undertaken and performed mention of some which held that kingdom, with honour. The Lieutenant-thips of his in divers Ages, even unto the time of con- Provinces, with all Commands in his Army, stantine the Great: being all peradventure and Offices what soever, were wholly referof the same race. But Antiochus, who in this red unto the disposition of this Agathoclea, Treaty with Sophagasenus carried himself as and her brother Agathocles, and Ocnanthea the worthier person, receiving presents, and filthy bawd that was mother unto them after marching home through Drangiana both. So these three governed the Realmat and Carmania, with such reputation, that all their pleasure, to the great grief of all the the Potentates, not only in the higher Asia, Countrey, till Philopater died; who having but on the hither fide of Taurus, humbled reigned leventeen years, left none other fon themselves unto him, and called him The than Ptolomy Epiphanes, a child of five years Great: faw an end of his own greatness old, begotten on Arsione that was his fifter within few years ensuing, by presuming to and wife. After the Kings death Agathocles stand upon points with the Romans: whose began to take upon him, as protector of Greatness was the same in deed, that his was young Epiphanes, and Governour of the Land. He assembled the Macedons (which were the Kings ordinary forces in pay, not that abode in Agypt with Ptolomy the first, him; and delivered him unto a follower of and would not be accounted Agyptians; as his own, to be examined by torture. This neither would the Kings themselves) and poor Souldier was carried into an inner bringing forth unto them his fifter Agatho- room of the Palace, and there stripped out clea, with the young King inher armes; be- of all his apparel to be tormented. But gan a foleron oration. He told them, That whileft the whips were brought forth, and the deceased father of this their King, had all things even in a readiness for that purcommitted the child into the arms of his pose, there was brought unto the minister of fifter; but unto the faith of them: on whole | Agathoeles, a fad report of Tlepolemus his bevaliant right hands, the whole state of the ing at hand. Hereupon the Examiner, and kingdom did now rely. He befought them his Torturers, one after another, went out therefore that they would be faithful, and, of the room; leaving Moeragenes the Soulas great need was, defend their King against dier alone by himself, and the doors open. the treason of one Thepolemus an ambitious He perceiving this, naked as he was, conman; who traiteroufly went about to fet the | veighed himself out of the Palace, and got Diadem upon his own head, being a meer unto the Macedonians of whom he found stranger to the Royal blood. Herewithall some in a Temple thereby at dinner. The he produced before them a witness, that Macedonians were as fierce in maintenance fhould justifie his accusation against Tlepele- of their Priviledges, as are the Turks #animus. Now though it were fo, that he deli- | zaries. Being affured therefore that one of vered all this with a fained passion of for their fellows had thus been used, they fell to row, and counterfeiting tears: yet the Ma- | the Armes in a great rage, and began to force cedons that heard him, regarded not any Palace : crying out, They they would fee word that he spake; but stood laughing, the King, and not leave him in possession of and talking one to another, what a shameless diffembler he was to take so much upon the City, with lowd clamours, made no less him, as if he knew not how greatly he was adothan the Souldiers, though to less effect. hated, And so brake up the Assembly : he So the old Bawd Oenantha fled into a Temthat had called it, being scarce aware how. Agathecies therefore, whom the old Kings Court, untill the King was taken from them, favour had made mighty, but neither wife and they, by his permiffion which he eafily nor well qualified, thought to go to work, as gave, and by appoinment of those that now had formerly been his manner; by using his had him in their hands, delivered up to the authority, to the suppression of these that | sury of the people. Agathocles himself was he distrussed. He haled out of the Temple stabbed to death, by some which therein the mother-in-law of Tlepolemus; and cast | did the office of friends; though in manner her into prison. This filled Alexandria with of enemies. His fister was dragd naked up rumours, and made the people (though ac- and down the streets; as was also his mocustomed to suffer greater things, whilest ther, with all to them belonging: the enrathey were committed in the old Kings | ged multitude committed upon them a barname) to meet in knots together, and utter | barous execution of justice biting them, one to another their minds, wherein they pulling out their eyes, and tearing them in had conceived extream hate, against these pieces. three pernicious Misgovernours of the old King. Besides their consideration of the pre- stir up King Antiochus; who had very good fent injurie done to Tlepolemus, they were leasure, though he wanted all pretence, to fomewhat also moved with fear of harm , make war upon young Ptolomy. Philip of which in way of requital, Tlepolemus was Macedon had the same desire to get what likely to do unto the City. For he was part he could of the childes eftate. But it thought a man most unapt for Government, hapned well, that Piolomy Philopater in the as afterwards he proved, yet no bad Soul- Punick War, which was now newly ended, dier, and well beloved of the Army. It was had done many good offices unto the Rotter and well beloved of the Army. also then in his power, to stop the provision of victuals which was to come into Alexandria. As these motives wrought with the people, so by the remedy which Agathocles used, were the Macedons more hastily, and entred into covenant to divide between more violently firred unto uproar. He fecretly apprehended one of their number, whose Father had been consederate with all bornin Maccdonia, but the race of those whom he suspected of conspiracy against a dangerous man. The whole multitude in ple : her Son and Daughter stayed in the

These troubles in Agypt, served well to mans. Unto them therefore the Egyptians addressed themselves, and craved help against these two Kings: who though they fecretly maligned one the other; yet had then both. So * M. Lepidus was fent from That these his Embassadors were lovingly Rome, to protect from all violence the King entertained at Rome; and dismissed, with a of Egypt; especially against Antiochus. As Decree and answer of the Senate, altogefor the Macedonian; he was very foon found ther to the honour of King Antiochus. But bufied with war, at his own doors. Also this answer of the Romans was not fincere; Scopas the Ætolian, being a Pensioner to the being rather framed according to regard of Egyptian, was sent into Greece to raise an Ar- the Kings good liking, than of their own inmy of Mercenaries. What Lepidus did in tent. They had not yet made an end with Egypt, I do not find: and therefore think it | Philip: neither would they gladly be trounot improbable, that he was fent thither bled with two great Wars at once. Whereonly one of the three Embassiadors, in the fore, not standing much upon the nice examibeginning of the War with Philip, as hath loation of what belonged unto their honour, been llewed before. As for Scopus; he short-they were content to give good words for And ere all these Victories of Scopus came to no- irresolution, how notwithstanding his attherefore by him very gently entreated.

ly after went up into Eyria vith his Army; the present. In the mean time Antiochus fights where, winning many places, among the rest with Scopas in Syria, and shortly prepares to of his Acts, he subdued the Jews, who seem win some Towns elsewhere, belonging unto to have yielded themselves a little before Ftolomy; yet withall he sends an Army unto Antiochus, at fuch time as they faw him Westward, intending to make what profit prepare for his War, and despaired of re- he can of the distractions in Greece. Likewise ceiving help from Egypt. But it was not long it is considerable, as an argument of his much thing. For the very next year following, tempts upon both of their Kingdoms, he ofwhich was (according to Eusebius) the same | fered one of his Daughters to Ptolomy, and year that Philip was beaten at Cynoscephala; another to Eumenes the Son of Attalus, new-Antiochus vanquished Scopas in battel, and ly King of Pergamus: seeking each of their recovered all that had been loft. Among the friendships, at one and the same time, when rest, the Jews, with great willingness, re- he sought to make each of them a spoil. turned under his obedience; and were Thus was he acting and deliberating at once; being carryed with an inexplicable defire of The Land of Egypt, this great King did for- repugnancies, which is a difease of great and bear to invade; and gave it out, that he over-swelling fortunes. Howsoever it was, meant to bestow a Daughter of his own in he sent an Army to Sardes by Land, under Marriage unto Ptolomy: either hoping, as two of his Sons: willing them there to stay may seem, that the Country would willingly for him; whilest he himself, with a Fleet fubmit it felf unto him, if this young child of an hundred Gallies, and two hundred should happen to miscarry; or else that grea- other Vessels, intended to pass along by the ter purchase might be made in the Western Coasts of Cilicia and Caria, taking in such parts of Asia, whilest Philip was held overplaces as held for the Egyptian. It was a nolaboured by the Romans. It appears that he
table act of the Rhodians, that, whilest the was very much distracted; hunting (as we War of Philip lay yet upon their hands, they fay) two Hares at once with one Hound. The adventured upon this great Antiochus. They quarrels between Attalus, Philip, and the | sent unto him a proud Embassage; whereby Greeks, promised to afford him great advan- they gave him to understand, That if he pastage, if he should bring his Army to the Hel- sed forward beyond a certain Promontory in lespont. On the other side, the state of Egypt Cilicia, they would meet with him, and fight being such as hath been declared, feemed with him; not for any quarrel of theirs unto easily to be swallowed up at once. One him; but because he should not joyn with while therefore he took what he could get Philip their enemy, and help him against the in Syria · where all were willing (and the Romans. It was infolently done of them, nei-Jews, among the rest, though hitherto they ther seemed it otherwise, to prescribe such lihad kept faith with the Egyptian) to yield mits unto the King: yet he tempered himhim obedience. Another while, letting Egypt self, and without any shew of indignation, alone, he was about to make invasion upon gave a gentle answer; partly himself to their Attalus his Kingdom; yet suffered himself Embassadors; partly unto their whole City, eafily to be perswaded by the Roman Em- by Embassadors which he thither sent. He balladors, and delifted from that enterprife. Shewed his defire to renew the ancient Con-Having thus far gratified the Romans; he federacies between his Ancestors and them: sends Embassadors to the Senate, to con- and willed them not to be afraid, lest his clude a perfect Amity between him and coming should tend unto any hurt, either of them. It is not lightly to be over-passed, them, or of their Confederates. As touching the Romans whom they thought that he lians objected as a crime unto Philip, in the would molest: they were (he faid) his very conference between T. Quintius, that he had good friends; whereof, he thought there oppressed Lysimachia, by thrusting thereinto needed no better proof, than the entertain- a Garrison. Hereupon Philip made answer. ment and answer by them newly given to that his Garrison did not oppress the Town. his Embaffadors.

1044

ning people, and such as could foresee what | gone. That this answer was good and subweather was like to happen. This answer of stantial, though it were not acceptable as the King, and the relation of what had paf- fuch; might appear by the miferable cafe, in fed between his Embassadors and the Senate, which Antiochus found Lysimachia at his commoved them not a whit, when they were ing thither. For the Town was utterly rainformed shortly after, that the Macedonian sed by the Barbarians, and the people car-War was ended at the battel of Cynoscepha- ried away into slavery. Wherefore the King le. They knew that Antiochus his turn took order to have it re-edified: as also to would be next; and prepared to be forward redeem those that were in bondage; and to on the stronger side. Wherefore they would recollect as many of the Citizens, as were difnot be contented to fit ftill, unless the Towns on the South Coast of Asia, belonging he was careful to allure thither, by hopeful to Ptolomy their friend and Confederate; promises, new inhabitants, and to replenish were suffered to be at quiet. Herein also the City with wonted frequency. Now to they did well; for that they had ever been the end that men should not be terrified from greatly beholding to all the race of the Pto- coming thither to dwell, by any fear of the lomies. They therefore in this time of neces- neighbour Thracians: he took a journey in fity, gave what aid they could unto all the hand against those barbarous people, with subjects of the Egyptian in those parts. In the one half of his Army; leaving the other like manner did King Eumenes, the Son of half to repair the City. These pains he took; Attalus, prognosticate as concerning the War | partly in regard of the convenient situation, that followed, between Antiochus and the and former glory of Lysimachia; partly for Romans. For when King Antiochus made a that he thought it highly redounding unto friendly offer, to bestow one of his Daugh- his own honour, to recover and establish ters upon him in marriage: He excused him- | the dominion in those parts which his forefelf, and would not have her. Attalus and father Seleucus Nicator had won from Lysima-Philetarus, his Brethren, wondred at this But | chus, and thereby made his Kingdom of greahe told them, that the Romans would furely | ter extent, than it occupied in any following make war upon Antiochus; and therein time. But for this ambition he shal dearly pay: finally prevail. Wherefore he faid, that by and as after that Victory against Lysimachus, abstaining from this affinity, it should be in | the death of King Selencus followed shortly; his power to joyn with the Romans, and fo shall a deadly wound of the Kingdom strengthen himself greatly with their friend- | founded by Seleucus ensue very speedily, after ship. Contrariwise, if he leaned to Antiochus; the reconquest of the same Country, which as he must be partaker in his overthrow; so was the last of seleucus his purchases. was he fure to be oppressed by him, as by an over-mighty neighbour, if he happened to win the Victory.

where he took fuch order as he thought convenient for reducing of Smyrna and Lamplacus to obedience; that had usurped their liberty, and obstinately strove to maintain it, in hope that the Romans would protect them. In the beginning of the Spring he failed unto the Hellespont; where, having won some Towns that Philip had gotten not long before this, he passed over into Europe fide; and in fhort space mastered the chersonesus. Thence went he to Lysimachia: which the Thracians had gotten and destroyed, when Philip withdrew his Garrison thence, 10. TOr the Romans, though they were to employ it in the Roman War. The Æto-but fave it from the Barbarians: who took The Rhodians appear to have been a cun- and fackt it, as foon as the Macedonians were

ø. IV.

Antiochus himself wintred about Ephesus; The Romans hold friendly correspondence with Antiochus, during their War with Philip: after which they quarrel with him. The doings of Hannibal at Carthage: whence he is chased by his enemies, and by the Romans: His flight unto the King Antiochus. The Ætolians murmure against the Romans in Greece. The War of the Romans and Achæans, with Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedæmon. The departure of the Romans out of Greece. T. Quintius his Triumph. Peace denied to Antiochus by the Romans.

unable to smother their desire of war

with Antiochus, whereof notice was alrea by Titus, were at Lysimachia, He hastened dy taken both by their friends and by their thither; whither also came P. Lentulus enemics: yet was it much against their will (another of the ten Counsellors) from Barto keep the rumour on foot, which they gille, to be present at the Conference, Hegestmeant shortly to make good, of this intend- anax and Lysias were also there; the same. ed war, fo long as they wanted matter of who had lately brought from Titus those pequarrel; whereof they were furnished, by remptory Conditions, which the Embasiathis enterprise of the Kings about Lysima- dors present shall expound unto their Machia. It was not long, fince King Attalus, fter. After a few dayes Antiochus returned a friend and a helper of the Romans in their from his Thracian Expedition. The meetwar with Philip, could obtain of them none ing and entertaiment between him and other help against Antiochus, than Embas- these Romans, was in appearance full of love. fadors to speak for him, because the one of But when they came to treat of the business these Kings was held no less a friend than in hand; this good mood was quite altered. the other. Neither did there afterwards L. Cornelius, in two or three words, briefly pass between them any other offices, than ve-delivered his errand from Rome: which ry friendly. Antiochus at the request of their was, That Antiochus had reason to deliver Embaffadors, withdrew his Invafion from the back unto Ftolomy those Towns of his, Kingdom of Pergamus: also very shortly af- whereof he had lately gotten possession. ter he sent Embassadors to them, to make a Hereunto he added, and that very earnestly, tinue in the same.

CHAP. V.

CHAP. V

perfect League of amity between them. This That he must also give up the Towns of late was whileft as yet they were bufied with belonging unto Philip; and by him newly Philip, and therefore had reason to answer occupied. For what could be more absurd, his good will with good acceptation: as they than fuch folly in the Romans, as to let Andid in outward shew. But when the Mace-tiochus enjoy the profit of that war, wherein donian war was at an end, and all, or most of they had laboured so much, and he done all the States in Greece, were become little nothing? Further he warned the King, that better than Clients unto the Romans: then he should not molest those Cities that were was all this good correspondence changed free: and finally he demanded of him, upon into terms of worfe, but more plain mean- what reason he was come over with so ing. For T. Quintius, with his ten Counsel- great an Army into Europe; for that other fellors sent from Rome, requited (as hath been | cause of his journey there was none pro-* flewed before) with a commination of war, bable, than a purpose to make war upon 669.4. * flowed before) with a commination of war, but this Kings gratulation of their victory; as all the Romans? To this the King made answer, so his long protested amity, and defire to con- That he wondred why the Romans should fo trouble themselves, with thinking upon These ten Counsellors were able to inform the matters of Asia: wherewith he prayed T. Quintius, and acquaint him with the them to let him alone: even as he, withpurpose of the Senate: whereof yet it seems out such curiosity, suffered them to do in that he was not ignorant before; fince, in Italy what they thought good. As for his regard of Antiochus, he was the more incli- coming over into Europe: they saw well nable unto peace with Philip. It was there- enough what business had drawn him thifore agreed, when they divided themselves ther; namely the war against the barbato make progress through divers quarters of rous Thracians: the rebuilding of Lysima-Greece for the execution of their late De- chia, and the recovery of Towns to him becree, That two of them should visit King longing, in Thrace, and Chersonesus. Now con-Antiochus; and the rest, where occasion ser-cerning his title unto that country, He derived, use diligence to make a party strong ved it from seleucus: who made conquest against him. Neither was the Senate at thereof, by his victory against Lysimachus. Rome unmindful of the business; wherein Neither was it so, that any of the places in lest T. Quintius, with his ten Affistants, should controversie between him and the other happento forget any thing to their parts be- Kings, had been still of old belonging to the longing; L. Cornelius was sent from Rome, of Macedonians or Egyptians; but had been purpose to deal with the King about those seized on by them, or by others from whom controversies, that were between him and they received them, at such time as his An-Ptolomy. What other private instructions cestors, being Lords of those Countries, were Cornelius had, we may conjecture by the ma- hindred by multiplicity of business, from naging of this his Embassage. For coming looking unto all that was their own. Finalto Selymbria: and there understanding that ly he willed them, neither to stand in sear of P. Villius and L. Terentius, having been fent him, as if he intended ought against them

Qqqqqq 2

1045

bestow this City upon one of his sons, that with honesty and good faith. But as he was should reign therein : nor yet to be gric- further proceeding on his voyage, he was ved with his proceedings in Asia; either perfectly informed that Ptolomy was alive. against the free Cities, or against the King of This made him bear another way from Egypt; fince it was his meaning to make the Egypt: and afterwards a tempest, with a free Cities beholding unto himself, and to grievous shipwrack, made him without joyn ere long with Ptolomy, not only in any further attempt on the way, glad to friendship, but in a bond of near affinity. have safely recovered his Port of schucia. Cornelius having heard this, and being per- Thence went he to Antiochia, where he winhaps unable to refute it, would needs hear tred: fecure as might appear, of the Roman further, what the Emballadors of Smyrna and war. of Lampfacus, whom he had there with him, could fay for themselves. The Embassadors During the Treaty at Lysimachia, (at leastof Lampfacus being called in, began a tale; wife not long before or after it) one of their wherein they feemed to accuse the King be- Embassadors that had been sent unto the fore the Romans, as it were before compe- Macedonian, gave him counsel, as in a point tent Judges. Antiochus therefore interrup- highly tending to his good; not to rest ted them, and bade them hold their peace, | contented with the peace which was grantforasmuch as he had not chosen the Ro- ed unto him by the Romans, but to desire mans, but would rather take the Citizens of fociety with them, whereby they should be Rhodes, to be Arbitrators between him and bound to have the same friends and enemies.

without any likelihood of effect. The Ro- left otherwise he might feem, to have awaitmans, having not laid their complaints in such ed some fit occasion of taking Arms again. fort, as they might be a convenient founda- They who dealt thus plainly, did not mean tion of the war by them intended: nor yet to be fatisfied with weak excuses. In like having purpose to depart well satisfied, and manner some of the Greeks, were solicited; thereby to corroborate the present peace, and particularly the Ætolians. That conwere doubtful how to order the matter, in stantly and faithfully they should abide in fuch wife as they might neither too rudely, the friendship of the people of Rome. It like boiltrous Galle-Greeks, pretend only the was needless to say plainly whereto this engoodness of their fwords: nor yet over-mo-treaty tended: the froward answer made destly, to retain among the Greeks an opinion by the Atolians, declares them to have well of their justice, forbear the occasion of ma- understood the purpose. They complained, king themselves great. The King on the that they were not alike honoured by the other fide was weary of these tedious guests; Romans after the victory, as they had been that would take none answer, and yet scarce | during the War. They that so complainknew what to fay. At length came news, ed were the most moderate of them. Others without any certain author, That Ftolomy cryed out that they had been wronged, and was dead. Hereof neither the King, nor the defrauded of what was promifed unto them: Romans, would take notice, though each of upbraiding withal the Romans, as mento them were desirous to hasten into Egypt: them beholding: not only for their victory Antiochus to take possession of the King- over Philip, but even for helping them to dom, and L. Cornelius, to prevent him there- | fet foot in Greece, which else they never of, and let the Country in good order. Cor- could have done. Hereto the Roman gave nelius was sent from Rome Embassador both gentle answers: telling them that there was to Antiochus and to Ptolomy : which gave no more to do, than to fend Embaffadors to him occasion to take leave, and prepare for the Senate, and utter their griefs: and then his Egyptian voyage. Both he, and his fel- should all be well. low Embassadors, had good leave to depart Such care took the Romans in Greece, for all together: and the King forthwith made their War intended against Antiochus. The ready, to be in Egypt with the first. To his fame hereof arriving at Carthage, gave matfon Seleucus he committed his Army, and ter unto the enemies of Hannibal, whereleft him to overfee the building of Lysima- with both to pick a thank of the Roman Sechia: but all his Sea-forces he took along nate, and to chase out of their City this howith him, and failed unto Ephefus. Thence nourable man, whom they fo greatly hated. he fent Embassadors to T. Quintius: whom He had of late exercised his vertue against he requested to deal with him in this mat-them in the Civil administration; and given from Lysimachia; since it was his purpose to ter of peace, after such fort as might stand

But the Romans had not so done with him. And this he advised him to do quickly, be-Thus the Treaty held some few dayes, fore the War brake out with Antiochus:

them an overthrow, or two, in the long laid out. So he found, That the ordinary Robe. The Judges at that time bore all the charges of the Common-wealth did not exfway in Carthage: holding their places during | hauft the Treasury: but that wicked Magilife; and having subject unto them, the lives, strates, and corrupt Officers, turning the goods, and fame of all the rest. Neither greatest part of the moneys to their own did they use this their power with modera- use, were thereby fain to load the people tion: but conspired in such wise together, with needless burdens. Hereof he made into the Treasurie, by wayes and means used their victory in such base manner, that who so offended any of them, should such plain demonstration, That these Robhave them all to be his enemies: which be- bers of the common Treasure were coming once known, He was fure to be foon ac- pelled to reftore, with shame, what they cused and condemned. In this their im- had gotten by knavery: and so the Carthapotent rule of the City, Hannibal was chosen ginians were freed from the necessity of Prator. By vertue of which Office, though making such poor shifts, as formerly they he was superior unto them during that year : had used, when they knew not the value of yet had it not been their manner to bear their own Estate. But as the vertue of Hannimuch regard unto fuch an annual Magi- bal was highly commended by all that were ftrate, as at the years end must be accounta- good Citizens : so they of the Roman Fable to them, if ought were laid unto his ction, which had, fince the making of the charge. Hannibal therefore fending for one peace until now, little regarded him, began of the Questors, or Officers of the Treasury, to rage extreamly: as being by him stript of to come and speak with him : the proud their ill-gotten goods and ill-employed au-Questor set lightly thereby, and would not thority, both at once, even when they come: For he was of the adverse Faction thought themselves to have been in full to Hannibal; and men of his place were to possession of the vanquished Carthage. be chosen into the Order of Judges: incon- Wherefore they fent letters to their friends templation whereof, he was filled already at Rome: wherein they complained, as if with the spirit of future Greatness. But he the Barchine Faction grew strong again, and had not to do with such a tame Prætor, as Hannibal would shortly be in armes. Questiwere they that had occupied the place be-onless, if oppressing the City by injustices forc. Hannibal fent for him by a Pursivant; and robbing the Treasury, were the only and having thus apprehended him, brought way to hold Carthage in peace with Rome: him into judgement before a publike affem- these Enemies to the Barchines might well bly of the people. There he not only cry out. That having done their best already shewed what the undutiful stubbornness of to keep all in quiet, they saw none other this Quaftor had been; but how unfuf-likelihood than of War. But having no ferable the infolency of all the Judges at the other matter to alledge, than their own inpresent was: whose unbridled power made ventions: they said, That Hannibal was like them to regard neither Laws nor Magi- unto a wild beaft, which would never be strates. To this Oration when he percei- tamed; That secret messages past between ved that all the Citizens were attentive and him, and King Antiochus: and that he was favourable; He forthwith propounded a wont to complain of idleness, as if it were Law, which passed with the general good harmful to Carthage; with what else to like liking; That the Judges (hould be chosen effect they could imagine. These accusatifrom year to year, and no one man be con- ons they directed not unto the Senate: but tinued in that Office two years together. addressing their letters crastily, every one to If this Law had been passed, before he pass- the best of his own friends at Rome, and such fed over Iberus: it would not perhaps have as were Senators; they wrought so well, been in the power of Hanno, to have that neither publike notice of their Conspibrought him unto necessity of reforming racy was taken at Carthage; northe authorianother grievance, concerning the Roman ty of the Roman Senate, wanting to the fur-Tribute. This Tribute the Carthaginians therance of their malicious purpose. Only were fain to levie by Taxation laid upon P. Scipio is faid to have admonished the Fathe whole Commonalty, as wanting money thers, that they should not thus dishonourain their publike Treasury, wherewith to bly subscribe, and become seconds to the acdefray either that, or divers other needful cusers of Hannibal: as if they would oppress, charges. Hannibal confidering this, began by fuborning or countenancing false witnefto examine the publike Revenues; and to les against him; the man, against whom in take a perfect note, both how much came war they had not of long time prevailed, nor whatfoever: and in what fort it was thence when they obtained it. But the Romans were wished for some such advantage against Han- mon opinion was, That the Romans had mibal; and were glad to have found it. Three made him away. At length came news where Embassadors they sent over to Carthage, C. he had been seen: and then the Roman Em-Servilius, Q. Terentius, and M. Claudius basiadors, having none other errand thither, Marcellus: whose very names import suffici- accused him (with an evil grace) as a trouent cause of bad affection to Hannibal. These bler of the Peace; whereby they only difhaving past the Sea, were entertained by covered the mischief by them intended those that had procured their coming; and against him, and the malice of their Senate: being by them instructed how to carry them- missing the while their purpose, and causing felves, gave out, That they were fent to end men to understand, that he fled not thus fome controversies, between the Carthagini- without great reason. ans and Masanissa. But Hannibal had kept fuch good espial upon the Romans, that he ty of Carthage, was there entertained Royknew their meaning well enough : against ally: as one, in whose great worth and howhich he was never unprepared. It were nour the Tyrians, by reason of affinity beenough to fay, That he escaped them by tween their Cities, thought themselves to flight : but in the actions of so famous a man, have interest. Thence went he to Antioch: I hold it not impertinent to rehearfe the par- and, finding the King departed, visited his ticularities. Having openly shewed himself, son in Daphne: who friendly welcomed as was his manner, in the place of Assembly, him, and sent him unto his Father at Ephe-He went forth of the Town when it began Jus, that exceedingly rejoyced at his comto wax dark, accompanied with two which ling. were ignorant of his determination; though fuch as he might well trust. He had appoin- he had gotten Hannibal: so had the Romans ted Horses to be in a readiness at a certain no great cause to be therefore sorry: otherplace: whence riding all night, He came to wife than as they had much difgraced thema Tower of his own by the Sea-fide. There | selves, by discovery of their impotent mahad he a ship furnished with all things lice, in chasing him thus out of his Countrey. needful; as having long expected the ne- | For it would not prove alike easie unto this ceflity of some such journey. So he bade great Commander to make stout Souldiers Africk farewell; lamenting the misfortune of base Asiatiques; as it had been by his of his Countrey, more than his own. training and discipline, to make very service-Passing over to the Ille of Cercina; He found able and skilful men of War of the Spaniards, there in the Haven some Merchants ships Africans, Gaules, and other Nations, that of Carthage. They faluted him respective- were hardy, though unexperienced. Or were ly: and the chief among them began to it supposed, that one mans worth, especialenquire, whither he was bound. He faid, ly being fo extraordinary, could alter the na-He went Embassadour to Tyre: and that he ture of a cowardly people: yet was it thereintended there in the Island to make a Sa- | withall confiderable, that the vanities of Ancrifice; whereto he invited all the Mer- | tiochus, the pride of his Court, the baseness chants, and Masters of the Ships. It was of his Flatterers, and a thousand other such hot weather: and therefore he would needs hold his Feast upon the shore; where, because there wanted covert, He made them now a desolate and banished man, than had bring thither all their Sails and Yards to be been the villany of Hanno and his Compliused instead of Tents. They did to; and ces, hindering him in those actions, wherein feafted with him till it was late at night: at he had the high Command, and was fecondwhich time he left them there afleep: and ed by his warlike brethren. Wherefore the putting to Sea, held on his course to Tyre. name of this Great Carthaginian, would onwas fure not to be purfued. For the Merbe gone Embassadour : neither could they, tackle. At Carthage, the miss of so great a basladors to T. Quintius, requiring that the person was diverfly construed. Some guessed | Peace might faithfully be kept it was not pro-

not all so great-minded as Scipio: they a right, that he was fled. But the more com-

Hannibal coming to Tyre, the Mother Ci-

As Antiochus had cause to be glad in that vexations, would be far more powerful in making upprofitable the vertue of Hannibal, All that night, and the day following, He ly help to ennoble the Roman Victory: or if it further served to hearten Antiochus, and chants did neither make hafte to fend any make him less careful to avoid the war; news of him to Carthage, as thinking him to then should it further serve, to justifie the Romans in their quarrel. And it seems indeed without some loss of time, such of them as that it was no little part of their care, to get made most speed homeward, get away from a fair pretence of making war. For Antio-Cercina; being bussed a while in fitting their chus, as is said before, having newly sent Embable, that he had any meaning to take entertainment. Wherefore there was none be thence gone.

CHAP. V.

Arms, unless by meer violence he were other way, than to do somewhat against thereto enforced. Only the Etolians were these their suspected enemies: especially agreatly suspected, as a turbulent people, degainst Nabis, who could worst make resistfirous of innovation, and therefore practifing ance: whilest Antiochus was far away in sywith this Great King; whom they wished ria, and not intentive to his business. These to fee among them in Greece. In this regard, reports went not only current through the and to appeale them; they had of late been City, among the Vulgar; but found fuch creand to appear answered with gentle words by one of the dit with the chief of the Senate, that in the ten Counfellers, That the Senate would following year, against which time it was exgrant them whatfoever with reason they pected that Antiochus should be ready to thould ask. But this promise was too large, take his great enterprise in hand: P.Cornelius and unadvised. For when their Embassadors Scipio the African, desired, and obtained, a came to Rome, the Senate would grant them second Confulfhip, with intention to be Genothing: but wholly referred them to T. neral in the War, against the King and his Quinting, who favoured them leaft. Hereat Hannibal. For the present, the business with they murmured, but knew not how to right Nabis was referred unto Titus, to deal with themselves, otherwise than by speaking such him as he thought good. This would be a words, as might hasten the Romans out of fair colour of his longer tarriance in Greece, Greece for very shame, who had no defire to Therefore he was glad of the employment: whereof also he knew that many of the The daily talk at Rome was of war with Greeks would not be forry: though for his Antiochus; but in Greece, when the Romans own part, he wanted all good pretence of would leave the Country. For the Etolians taking it in hand. For Nabis had entred into were wont to upbraid the rest of the Greeks stiendship with him, two or three years bewith the vain liberty which the Romans had forethis, as is already shewed, whilest he proclaimed, faying, That these their Deli- had war with Philip: and had further been verers had lain heavier fetters upon them, contented for the Romans fake to be at peace than formerly they did wear; but yet bright- with the Acheans: neither fince that time er and fairer than those of the Macedonian: had he done any thing, whereby he should likewise, that it was a gracious act of Titus, draw upon himself this War. He was to take from the legs of the Greeks their indeed a detestable Tyrant, and hated of chain, and tie it about their necks. There was the Acheans: as one, that besides his own indeed no cause of tarrying longer in Greece, wicked Conditions, had formerly done to if the Romans had no other meaning than them great milchief. Titus therefore had a what they pretended. For Philip had made | plausible Themes whereon to discourse beno delay, in accomplishment of that which | fore the Embassages of all the Confederate was laid upon him: all the Towns of Greece | Cities, which he caused to meet for that purwere at liberty, and the whole Country at pose at Corinth. He told them, That in the peace, both with the Romans, and within war with Philip, not only the Greeks, but the it self. As for Antiochus: He made it his Romans themselves, had each their motives daily suit, That the Peace between him and apart (which he there briefly rehearsed) Rome, such as it was, might be confirmed, that should stir them up, and cause them to and strengthened by a League of more as be earnest. But in this which he now profurance. Nevertheless, T. Quintius would pounded to them concerning Nabis, the Roneeds fear that Antiochus meant forthwith mans had none other interest, than only the to leize upon Greece, as foon as he and his making perfect of their honour, in fetting Army were thence departed. And in this all Greece at liberty: which noble action regard, he retained still in his own hands was in some fort mained, or incompleat, Chalcis, Demetrius, and the Acrocorinthus: whilest the noble City of Argos was left in by benefit of which Towns, he might the subjection to a Tyrant that had lately occubetter withstand the dangerous Invasion like | pied it. It therefore belonged unto them, the to be made by Antiochus. Sutable unto the Greeks, duly to consider, whether they doings of Quintius were the reports of the thought the deliverance of Argos a matter ten Embassadours, that had been sent over worthy to be undertaken : or whether otherto affift him: when they returned back into wife to avoid all further trouble, they could the City. Antiochus, they said, would que- be well contented to leave it as it was. This ftionless fall upon Greece: wherein he should concerned them, and not the Romans: who find not only the Atolians, but Nabis the in taking this work in hand, or letting it Tyrant of Lacedamon, ready to give him alone, would wholly be ruled by the Greeks themselves. The Athenian Embassador made | withdrawing thence his Garrison; or else answer hereunto very eloquently, and as compell him by force of Arms, to submir pleasing as he could devise. He gave thanks himself to the good pleasure of all Greece, to the Romans for what was past; extolled that was now at unity. These words had been their vertues at large; and magnified them reasonable, if they had proceeded from berhighly in regard of this their proposition: ter men. But it was apparent, that no regard wherein unrequested they freely made offer of the common liberty wrought so much to continue that bounty, which at the ve- with these Etolians; as did their own ravehement request of their poor Associates, they nous desire of oppressing others, and getting had already of late extended unto the unto themselves, that worse would use it. Greeks. To this he added, That great pity the whole Dominion in Greece, which Philip it was to hear, fuch notable vertue and high had loft. Neither could they well diffemble deserts ill spoken of by some: which took this; making it no small part of their grieupon them, out of their own imagination, vance, That the old League was forgotten: to foretell what harm these their Benefactors wherein it had been covenanted. That the meant to do hereafter: when as Thankful-Romans should enjoy the spoil of all, but neß rather would have required an acknow- leave the Towns and Lands in possession of ledgment of the benefits and pleasures al- the Ætolians. This, and the remembrance ready received. Every one found the mean- of a thousand mischiefs by them done in ing of this last clause, which was directly former times, made the whole assembly, espeagainst the Ætolians. Wherefore Alexander cially the Acheans, cry out upon them: enthe Atolian role up, and told the Athenians treating the Romans to take such order betheir own: putting them in mind of their fore they went, that not only Nabis might antient glory, in those times when their City be compelled to do right; but the Atolian had been the Leader of all Greece, for de- thieves be enforced to keep home, and leave fence and recovery of the liberty general: their neighbours in quiet. All this was highly from which honour they were now fo far to the pleasure of Titus: who saw, that by faln, that they became Parafites unto those discountenancing the Atolians, He was bewhom they thought most mighty 3 and by come the more gracious with all the rest. their base assentation, would lead all the rest But whether it pleased him so well that Aninto servitude. Then spake he against the tiochus his Embasiadors did presently after Acheans, Clients that had been a long time lie hard upon him, to draw the peace to unto the Mace: lonian; and Souldiers of Phi- fome good conclusion, it may be greatly lip, untill they ran away from his adverfity. doubted. He cast them off with a slight an-These, he said, had gotten Corinth, and must fiver: telling them, that the ten Embassianow have war be made for their fakes, to dors or Counsellors which had been sent the end that they might also be Lords of unto him from Rome, to be his affiltants in Argos: whereas the Atolians, that had first these matters of weight, were now returned made war with Philip, and alwayes been home; and that, without them, it was not in friends unto the Romans, were now de- his power to conclude upon any thing. frauded of some places, antiently to them belonging. Neither did he thus contain him- it was very foon ended. For Titus used felf, but objected unto the Romans, fraudu- the help of all his confederates; and made lent dealing: for a fmuch as they kept their as great preparation against Nabis, both by Garrisons in Demetrias, Chalcis, and the Land and Sea, as if he should have had to Acrocorinth; having been allwayes wont to do with Philip. Besides the Roman forces, profess, That Greece could never be at li- King Eumenes with a Navie, and the Rhodian berty, whilest those places were not free. Fleet, were invited to the service : as also Alfo now at last, what else did they seek by Philip of Macedon sent aid by Land; doing this discourse of war with Nabio, than busi- therein poorly, whether it were to get favour nelles wherewith to find themselves occupi- of the Romans; or whether to make one aed, that fo they might have some seeming mong the number, in seeking revenge upon cause of abiding longer in the Country? But Nabis, that had done him injury. But the most they flould do well if they meant as they forward in this Expedition were the Achaspake, to carry their Legions home out of ans, who fet out ten thouland Foot, and a yield to reason, and relinquish Argor, freely as well as they thought best. Thus are Now concerning the Lacedemonian war: Greece : which could not indeed be free, till thousand Horse, As for the #toliam: rather their departure. As for Nabis 5 the Ætolians to hold good fashion, and found their dispothemselves did promise, and would undersitions, than in hope to speed, their help was take. That they would either cause him to required 3 whereof they excused themselves the Acheans now become the prime friends it else do than terrifie the people; who must of the Romans in Greece; having removed thereby understand, that it was a mortal the Etolians from that degree of favour: crime to be suspected? And to the same like as they themselves hereafter (though not purpose his cruelty extended it self unto in all haste) shall be supplanted of the same some poor wretches: whom he accused of a . Lacedamonians, against whom they are now meaning to flie to the Enemy. These were marching.

wile, began a conspiracy against the Lacede- He turned the more freely, all his thoughts monians that held their Town; meaning to toward the Enemy, that came on apace. He open their gates unto the Roman. But ere welcomed them with a fally: wherein, as Titus drew near, they were all detected and commonly happens, the Souldiers of the were at quiet. But there was no stir within Tyrant forth to battail. The Roman Fleet the Wals: the execution done upon the first at the same time with King Eumenes and the movers, having terrified all the rest of the Rhodians, laid siege unto Gyttheum, the on-fhould thereon fall most heavily.

thousand, wherewith to defend himself somewhat more faithful, slue the Traitoriasagainst these Invaders. Five thousand of ter whose death, he himself alone made the them were Mercenaries : the rest, of his own better defence. Yet when T. Quintius with and base Peasants, unto whom his Tyrannie to abide the uttermost, and await what eiwas beneficial. Of the good and worthy ther Time or his Master might do for him, Citizens he stood in doubt; and since he but was contented to give up the place, yet could not hope to win their love, his mean- upon Condition, to depart in fafety to Sparing was to hold them quiet by fear. He called ta with his Garrison. Pythagoras, the son-inthem all to an affembly, and compaf- law of Nabis, and brother unto his wife, openly whipt through all the streets, and Some of the Argives, more bold than flain. Having thus affrighted the Citizens: flain: excepting a very few, that escaped out Town had the better at first; but were at of the Town. The fame of this Commotion, length repelled with loss. Titus abode not caused the Army to march apace toward many dayes before Sparta: but over-ran the Area; with hope to be there, before things Country; hoping belike to provoke the Citizens. Titus then thought it better, to ly or principal Town that Nabis had. Likeaffail Nabis in the head of his strength at La- ly they were to have taken it by force, when cedemon, than to confume time about other there appeared hope of getting it by treaplaces; especially at Argos: for the free- son. There were two Governours within dom whereof fince the War was made, pity the Town equal in authority: whereof the it were, that the calamities of the war one, either for fear, or defire of reward, had a purpose to let in the Romans. But the Nabis had in readiness an Army of fifteen other finding what was in hand, and being Countrey; but such as were of all others part of his Army came thicher to Gyttheum: the worst, as manumised slaves, malefactors this Captain of the Town had not the heart fing them round in with his Army, told them was come from Argos, whereof he had the of the danger that was toward him and them, Government, with a thousand Souldiers If they could agree within themselves; they Mercenaries, and two thousand Argives: might, he said, hope the better to withstand it being (as may seem) the Tyrants purpose, the common Enemy. But forafmuch as tur- to relieve Gyttheum: which he thought bulent heads were invited by light occa- would have held longer out. But when fions, to raise tumults, and work dangerous they heard that it was lost, then began they treasons: it seemed unto him the safest, and to think upon finishing the war, by some (withal) the mildest course, to arrest before reasonable Composition. Pythagoras therefore hand, and put in ward, all those whom he was sent his Embassador to Titus : requesting found most reason to suspect. So should he only that he would appoint a time and place keep them innocent perforce; and thereby for Nabis to meet and speak with him. preserve not only the City and his own per- This was granted. In that Parlee the Tvfon from danger, but them also from the pu- rant spake very reasonable for himself: nishment, which else they night have incur- proving, that he suffered wrong, and had red. Hereupon he cites and apprehends done none, and that by many good arguabout fourfcore of them; whom he leads ments: whereof the fum was, That what foeaway to prison, and the next night putteth ver they now did, or could object unto him, them all to death. Thus was he fure that was of elder date than the League which they they neither should offend, nor yet break had made with him. Whereupon he inferloofe. As for the death of them, if it flould red, That neither for his keeping the town happen to be noiled abroad: what could of argos, nor for any other cause by them alledged, alledged, they ought to make war upon that Winter (as there was no hope of making him, tince 4rgos, and all other their alle- short work) before the City of sparta: gations whatfoever had not hindered them, they were contented to make peace with in time of their more need of him, from en- the Tyrant, upon such Conditions as Titus tring into that League with him: which should think meet. Besides the restitution was never broken on his part, nor ought to of Argos, and all the places thereon depenbe on theirs. But Quintius was not herewith ding; Titus propounded many other Condifatisfied. He charged him with tyranny: and tions to Nabis, and some of them very griegave instance, as easily he might, of divers vous. He would not suffer the Lacedamobarbarous cruelties by him committed. In all nian to have ought to do in the Isle of crete; which points forafmuch as they knew this no, nor to make any Confederacies, nor war, Nabis to be guilty, before they made Peace either in that Island or elsewhere; not to and Confederacy with him; it was expedi- build any Town or Castle upon his own ent, that some other cause of this Invasion Lands: not to keep any other shipping should be alledged. Whereto he said further, than two small Barks; besides many other That this tyrant had occupied Messene, a troublesome injunctions; with imposition town Confederate with the Romans: That of an hundred talents in filver to be paid he had bargained to joyn with Philip; when out of hand, and fifty talents yearly, for he was their enemy, not only in League, eight years next enfuing. For observance but also in affinity: and that his Flect had of these Covenants he demanded five hostarobbed many of their ships, about the Cape | ges, such as he himself should name; and of Malea. Now touching this Piracy, fince one of them to be the Tyrants own son. If in the Articles by Titus propounded unto it had been the meaning of Titus, to with-Nabis, there was no reflicution mentioned, draw the war from Nabis, because it was other than of thips, by him taken from the not grounded upon justice: then had it been Greeks his neighbours, with whom he had enough, if not more than enough, to take long held war: it may feem to have been Argos from him; which he himself did offer, objected, only by way of Complement, though it were for fear, to deliver up But if and to enlarge the volume of those com- it were thought reasonable, to dispense a plaints, that were otherwise very frivolous, little with the Roman faith, in regard of the As for Messene, and the bargain of Alliance great benefit which thereby might redound made with Philip: they were matters fore- unto the state of their best friends in Greece, going the League, that was made between by the extirpation of this tyrannie: then the Romans and this tyrant: and therefore | should this enterprise, when once it was tafeems that Ariftanus, the Prætor of the very utmost. As for this middle course which doubting left the Romans (that were wont unto them, to enrich themselves by the spoil totalk fo much of their own justice, honor, of one that had not offended them; nor and faithful dealing) should now relent, pleafing to the Acheans, who judged it ever and forbear to molest him, who, though a after a great blemish to the noble acts of Tito confider well of his own estate: and to set- of Greece, no barren subject of malicious diftle his fortunes, whileft he might do it with- course. For fince Philip, a King, and descen-

not to have been mentioned. All this it ken in hand, have been profecuted unto the Acheans, very well perceived: who therefore the Romans held: asit was not honourable wicked man, was yet their Confederate, and two: fo did it minister unto the Atolians, and had never done them wrong: framed his to such as curiously pried into the faults of discourse to another end. He entreated Nabis those which took upon them to be Patrons out hazzard: alledging the examples of ma- | ded of many famous Kings, might not be fufny tyrants that had ruled in the neighbour- fered by these Masterly Romans, to hold cities, and therein committed great outrages; any one of those Countreys or Towns in yet were afterwards contented to furren- Greece, that had belonged unto his Ancestors: der their Estates, and lived in great security, it was thought very strange, that Lacedemon, honour, and happiness, as private men once the most famous City among all the Thus they discoursed until night. The next Greeks, was by the same Romans left in posday Nabio was contented to relinquish ar- session of a tyrant, that had usurped it but gos 5 and requested them, to deliver unto yesterday; and he therein rooted by their him in writing their other demands, that he authority, as their friend and Confederate, might take counsel with his friends. The Nabis on the other fide thought himself un iffue of all was, that, in regard of the charges, mercifully dealt withal, by the left-fame whereat the Confederates must be for main. Romans, whose amity he had preferred in tenance of an Army to lie in Leaguer all time of a doubtful war, before the love and committed the City of Argos into his hands. friendship of the Senate. Things being But falliy had he dealt with the Macedonian: therefore in appearance wholly disposed unand failly was he dealt with by those, to to quiet, Scipio the African, that was chosen whom he did betake himself. Among these | Consul at Rome, could not have his desire.of Articles propounded, there was nothing being fent Commander into Greece. The unthat pleafed him, fave only that for the ba- fincere meaning of Antiochus, and the tumulnished Lacedamonians, (of whom a great tuous disposition of the Ætolians, were held number were in the Roman Camp; having as confiderations worthy of regard: yet not among them Agestpolis the natural King of sufficient causes of making war. Neither ap-Sparta, that being a young child was driven peared there any more honest way, of conout by Lycurgus the first of the Tyrants) suring the Etolians, and of throughly perthere was made no provision, to have them swading all the Greeks (which was not to restored unto their City and Estates; but be neglected, by those that meant to assure only leave required for as many of their unto themselves the patronage of Greece) wives, as would be so contented, to live that the good of the Country was their sole abroad with them in banishment. Wherefore intent: than by withdrawing thence their he forbore to give confent unto these de- Legions, and leaving the Nation unto it self. mands; and foliained an affault or two; till occasion should be ripe, and call them hoping belike that the enemies would foon over again. Wherefore after Titus had spent be weary. But his fearful nature shortly a Winter there, without any matter of emovercame the resolution, which the sense of unto all that had been propounded, He delivered the hostages; and thereupon obtained peace, that was confirmed afterwards at Rome by the Senate and People. From this time forward, Hethought the Romans far more chief that he could.

The Argives had heard news that Lacedaledged as author of that benefit, whereon been fold into their Countrey by Hamnibal. the Citizens had laid hold without staying for him; and that he might the better entihad newly escaped.

none wherewith to let on work his Army in such a spectacle, than any wherein the Ro-Greece. Antiochus was about to fend ano- mans had before made War. All forts of affinity of the Macedonian King, that had | ther Embaffage to Rome, defiring peace and ployment, either found, or at any near dithese injuries had put into him. So yielding stance appearing, he called an Askembly of Delegates, from all parts of Greece to Corinth: where he meant to bid them farewell. There he recounted unto them all that paffed fince his coming into those parts; and willed them to value the Roman friendwicked than himfelf; and was ready upon thip, according to the difference of estate, the first advantage, to do them all the mis- wherein the Romans found and left them. Hereto he added some wholesome counsel; touching the moderate use of their liberty, mon was even at point of being taken. This and the care which they ought to have of erected them, and gave them heart to think living peaceably and without faction. Lastly upon their own good. So they adventured he gave up Acrocorinthus to the Achaens; to set upon the Garrison; which was much withdrawing thence the Roman Garrison, weakened, by the remove of the three and promising to do the like (which very thousand carried thence by Pythagoras to Soon he did) at Chalcis and Demetrias; that help the tyrant at Sparta. There needed fo it might be known, what lyers the Ætoliunto their liberty no more, than that all of ans were, who had accused the Romans, of them jointly should set their hands to the a purpose to retain those places. With joyful getting of it, which no fooner they did than acclamations did the Greeks tellifie their they obtained it. Presently after this came good liking of that which Titus had said and T. Quintius to Argos, where he was joyfully done: as also (at his request) they agreed, to welcomed. He was deservedly acknow- ransome and enlarge all Romans, that had Thus Titus crowned his actions in Greece with an happy end : and by leaving the tle himself thereto, he caused the liberty of Countrey before his departure was urged, the Argives to be proclaimed at the Nemean left therein behind him the memory of his games; as ratifying it by his authority. The vertue and benefits, untainted by jealousie City was annexed again to the Councel of and suspicion of any evil meaning. At his Achaia; whereby the Achains were not coming to the City, He had the honour of a more strengthened, than the Argives them- Triumph; which was the goodliest of all that felves were secured from danger of relapse, Rome had until that day beheld. Three days into the same extremities out of which they together the shew of his pomp continued: as being fet out with the spoils of a Coun-After this, Titus found little business or trey, more abundant in things worthy of

Brerry 2

Bras or Marble, taken from the Enemy, ning them, and take upon them to prescribe were carried in the first dayes Pageant. The unto the King, what Cities of Asia he should fecond day, was brought in all the treasure fet at liberty; from what cities they would of Gold and Silver: Some in the rude Mass give him leave to exact his wonted Tributes; unwrought; some in divers forts of Coin; either putting or not putting his Garrisons and fome in Velicls of fundry kinds, that into them, as the Senate should think fit. were the more highly prized by the work- Hereto Quintins answered, that since they manship. Among these were ten shields, all went so distinctly to work, He would also of Silver; and one of pure Gold. The do the like. Wherefore he propounded unto third day Titus himself entred the City in them two Conditions, and gave them their his Triumphant Chariot. Before him were choice whether to accept: Either that it carried an hundred and fourteen Crowns of should be lawful for the Romans to take Gold, bestewed upon him by divers Ci- part in Asia with any that would seek their ties. There were also led the beasts for Sa- friendship; Or if King Antiochus misliked crifice, the Prisoners, and the hostages: this, and would have them for bear to medamong which, Demetrius the fon of King dle in Asia, that then he should abandon rhilip, and Armenes the fon of Nahis, were whatfoever he had gotten in Europe. This principal. After him followed his Army; was plain dealing, but no reasonable nor and (which added much grace, and good liking to the flicw) the Roman Captives, by Embassadors had propounded For if the Rohis procurement redeemed from flavery in mans might be hired to abstain from Asia, by Greece.

audience of the Senate for many Embassa ges, that were come out of Greece and Afia. were pleased to reckon as their Confederates, They had all very favourable answers, ex- bind them in honour to make War with a cepting these of King Antioclus: whom the King that sought their love, and had never Senate would not hear, but referred over done them injury. But they knew very well, to T. Quintius, and the ten that had been his that Antiochus could not without great shame Countellors; because their business was said be so base, as to deliver up unto them the to be somewhat intricate. Hereat the Kings City of Lysimachia, whereon he had of late Embassadors wondered. They said unto Ti- been at so much cost; in building it up even tus and his Affociates, that they could not from the foundation, and repeopling it with differn wherein confifted any perplexity of Inhabitants, that had all been dispersed, their message. For all treaties of peace and or captive to the Barbarians. And so much friendship, were either between the Victor the Embassadors with great indignation aland the vanquished; between those, that ledged: faying, That Antiochus desired having warred together, were upon equal friendship of the Romans; but so, as it might terms of advantage; or between those that stand with his honour. Now in point of hohad lived alwayes in good agreement, with- nour the Romans took upon them as if their out any quarrel. Unto the Victor, they faid. | cause were far the superiour. For it was, they that the vanquished must yield; and patient | said, their purpose to set at liberty those ly endure the imposition of some Covenants, towns which the King would oppress and that else might feem unreasonable. Where hold in subjection: especially fince those War had been made, and no advantage got- towns were of Greekish blood and language; ten: there was it usual to demand and fell, in that regard under the patronage make restitution of things and places claim- which Rome had afforded unto all Greece beed, getten or loft; accordingly as both parts | fides. By this colour they might foon have left could agree. But between those which had Antiochus King of not many subjects on the never fallen out, there ought no Conditions hither side of Euphrates. Neither did they forof establishing friendship to be proposed: bear to say, That unless he would quit what fince it was reasonable, that each part should he held in Europe, it was their meaning not hold their own ; and neither carry it felf only to protect those which relied upon them as superiour to the other, in prescribing in Asia, but therein to make new Alliances: ought that might be troublesome. Now of namely (as might be understood) with such this last kind, was the league and friendship as were his subjects. Wherefore they urged that had been fo long in conclusion, betwirt his Embassadors to come to a point, and Antiochus and the Romans. Which being tell them plainly which of these two Condi-6. they held it strange, that the Romans tions their King would accept. For lack of a

Arms, with Statues and curious pieces of should thus infift on points no way concerpertinent answer, to that which the Kings the gift of all that Antiochus had lately won Not long after this triumph. He procured in Europe: then did not the affairs of Smyrna. Lampfacus or any other Afiatiques, whom they pleasing answer, which the Embassadors laying ambushes, and not discouraged with could not hereto make, little wanted of any overthrow, but forthwith ready to fight giving presently defiance to the King. But again. Their Countrey was mountainous, they luffered themselves to be entreated, and rough, woody, and full of straight and danwere contented once again to fend over gerous passages. Few good Towns they P. Villius, and others that had been already had: but many Castles, exceedingly well with the King at Lysimachia; by whom they fortified by nature: fo as without much lamight receive a final answer, whether these bour, they could neither be taken or besiegdemands made by Quintius and his Affoci- ed. They were also very poor; and had lirates would be accepted, yea, or no. By this the or nothing that might give contentment respite of time, and the fruitless Treaties unto a victorious Army that should spoil ensuing, Antiochus got the leisure of two their Land. In these respects, they served years; or thereabouts, to prepare for War; excellently well to train up the Roman Soulfinding in the Romans all that while, no dif-diers to hardness and military patience : position to let him live in peace.

Komans for justice in vain.

all, as hath already been shewed; by this other. their fellowship in Armes, grew to be such the field and got large possessions in Gallia cisalpina, do. The best was, that as their Countrey now called Lumbardie: it hath been long was a good place of exercise unto the Ro-Punick Wars. As also it hath since appeared, little harm: not sending any great Armies how they lost the greatest part of their hold | far from home; perhaps, because they knew in that Countrey, by means of Hannibal his not how to make War, fave on their own passage there through. Neither is it likely that | ground. the re conquest would have been more difficult or tedious unto the Romans, than was part of the Continent out of Italy that bethe first purchase : if, besides the greater came subject unto the Romans : so was it the employments which they had of their Ar- last of all their Provinces, which was wholly mies abroad, their forces appointed unto this and throughly by them subdued. It is likened war, had not been distracted by the Liguri- in figure by some Geographers unto an Oxeans: that alwayes made them to proceed hide: and the Romans found in it the prowarily, having an eye to the danger at their perty of that Oxe-hide which Calanus the backs. The Ligarians were a front Nation, Indian shewed unto the Great Alexander, as light and swift of body; well practifed in an Embleme of his large Dominions. For teaching them (befides other exercifes of War) to endure much, and live contented with a little. Their quarrel to Rome, grew partly from their love unto the Gaules, their of the long Wars which the Romans had with neighbours and companions : partly from the Gauls, Ligurians, and Spaniards. Of their delight in robbing and spoiling the M. Porcius Cato. Injuries done by Mafa- Territory of their borderers, that were fubnissa to the Carthaginians, that sue to the ject unto Rome. But their obstinate continuance in the War which they had begun, feems to have been grounded upon the Con-HE Infubrians, Bojians, and other of dition of all Salvages: Tobe friends or foes, the Cifalpine Gaules, together with the by custome, rather than by Judgement; and Ligurians; made often and (in a manner) to acknowledge no fuch vertue in Leagues, continual war upon the Romans in Italy, or formal conclusions of peace, as ought to even from such time as Hannibal and his bro- hinder them from using their advantage; or ther Mago departed thence, untill such time taking revenge of injuries when they return as they themselves were utterly subdued: to mind. This quality is found in all, or most which was not, before the Romans were al- of the West-Indians: who, if they be demost at the very height of the Empire. These | manded a reason of the Wars between them Nations, having ferved under Mago for and any of their neighbours, do use comwages, and afterwards having gotten Amil- monly this answer, It hath still been the custom car a Carthaginian, to be Leader unto them for us and them, to fight one against the Divers overthrows, though none that were willing partakers each of others fortune, great, these Ligurians gave unto the Romans : that feldome afterwards either the Gaules but many more, and greater, they received. or Ligarians did stir alone: but that their Often they fought peace, when they found Companions, hearing it, were ready to fe- themselves in distress, and brake it again as cond them. How the Romans first prevailed, often, when they thought it profitable so to fince rehearfed between the first and second mans, so out of their own Countrey they did

The Country of Spain, as it was the first

would rife from the ground. And thus was themselves against those that were strangers, it with spain. Seldom did it happen that yet usurped the Dominion over them. But those parts from which the Roman Armies the forces which Scipio had left behind him lay farthest, were not up in rebellion. The in that Countrey, being well acquainted sp. miards were a very hard Nation, and with the manner of War in those parts, supcally flirred up to arms; but had not much prefled this rebellion by many victories: knowledge in the art of war, nor any good and, together with subjection, brought peace Captains. They wanted also (which was upon the Countrey; which lasted five years. their principal hinderance) good intelli- This Victory of the Romans, though it gence among themselves: and being divided into many small Signiories, that had lit- remaining the cause of the War; which aftle other communion than of language, they ter five years brake out again. The Spanifeldom or never provided in general for the ards fought a battel with the Roman Procommon good of their Country; but made conful, whom they flew; and had a great it their chief care, each of them to look un- Victory, that filled them with greater to their own Territory. Such private respects hopes. Yet the happy success of their Wars made them often to fall afunder, when ma- in Greece, made the Romans think it enough ny had united themselves together, for cha- to send thither two Prætors, and witheach fing out of the Romans. And these were the of them some two Legions. These did somecauses of their often overthrows: as desire what: yet not so much, but that M. Porting of liberty, rather than complaint of any cato, who was Conful the year following, wrong done to them, was the cause of their and sent into that Province; found at his often taking arms.

to make evacuation of this Cholerick Spanish | pily, that all the Spaniards were not of one humour; by employing, as Mercenaries in mind: fome were faithful to Rome; and their wars abroad, those that were most some were idle beholders of the pains likely to be unquiet at home. They had also that others took. Yet when Cato had won taken Souldiers from one part of the Coun- | a great Victory upon the chiefest of them; trey, and used them in another: finding they rose against him in many parts of the means to pay them all, out of the profits which they railed upon the whole Country, and put him unto much new trouble. Whilest he was about to make trey; as being far better husbands, and of a journey against those that were as yet unmore dexterity than were the Romans, in subdued : some of the lately vanquished, that kind. But contrariwise, the Romans, using were even ready to rebell. Hetherefore difthe service of their own Legions, and of their armed them ; which they took so heavily, fure friends the Latines, had little bufines | that many of them flew themselves for very for the Spaniards; and therefore were fain grief. Hearing of this, and well understandto have much business with them. spain ing that such desperation might work danwas too far diftant, and withall too great for gerous effects: He called unto him the them to fend over Colonies thither, where- principal among them: and commending by to hold it in good order, according to the | unto them peace and quietness, which they course that they took in Haly. Wherefore never had disturbed but unto their own it remained, that they should alwayes main-great loss, He prayed them to devise what tain such Armies in the Countrey, as might course might be taken for holding them as ferve to hold it in obedience perforce; and fured unto Rome, without further trouble. fuch heedful Captains as might be still ready to oppose the Earbarians in their first in a matter of this nature. Having therefore Commotion. This they did 3 and there-talked with them once or twice, and finding by held the Countrey; though foldome in their invention barren in this kind of Sub-

Romans, even upon the same general ground, ryed the war about from place to places. that was the foundation of all the Spanish and with fingular industry finished it is short Wars following. It was thought unreaso time. Neither thought he it any diffrace to nable, that the Spaniards should one while him or to Rome, in this time of danger, to help the Carthaginians against the Romans, imitate the Carthaginians, and hire an Army and another while the Romans against the of the Celtiberians, against other of their treading upon any fide of it, the further parts | Carthaginians ; basely forgeting to help happily ended the War : yet left it still coming little less to do, than the recon-The Carthaginians had been accustomed, quering of all Spain. But it fell out hap-None of them could, or would give counsel ject; He gave express charge, That upon a Very foon after the departure of Scipio, day appointed they should throw down the there was raifed War in Spain against the walls of all their Towns. Afterwards he car-

Countrymen: excusing the indignity, such bility and greatness as this his Ancestor had as it feemed, with a jest, That if he were van- continually vexed. quished and slain, then should be need to The Spanish Wars, after Cato his departpay them nothing; whereas if he had the ture out of the Countrey, though they were Victory, He could pay them with the ene- not very dangerous, yet were they many: mies money. Finally, He brought the War and the Country feldom free from infurto fo good end, that in long time after, rection, in one part or other. The Roman though Spain were often troublesome, yet Prætors therefore, of which two every year was it in no danger of being loft. He in- were fent over Commanders into Spain creafed also the publike Revenues in that (that was divided into Governments) did Province, by causing some Mines of Iron rarely fail of such work, as might afford the and Silver to be wrought, that had before honour of Triumph. One flew thirteen lain unregarded. Herein he did benefit the thousand spaniards in a battel: another Common-wealth by a vertue much agreea- took fifty Towns: and a third enforced mable to his own peculiar disposition.

were, of the Roman Antiquities, and of Hus- long after. bandry. In matter of Husbandry he was notable, and thereby most increased his Ionian Seas, the Romans had peace; but so substance; being of mean birth, and the had not the Carthaginians. For when Hannifirst of his house. Strong of body he was, | bal was gone from them, and that the eneand exceeding temperate: so as he lived in mics of the Barchine House promised all feperfect health to very old age. But that licity which Rome could grant, unto themwhich most commended him unto the better selves and their obedient City : Masanissa fort of the Romans, was his great fincerity fell to disputing with the sword, about the of life, abstinence from bribes, and fashi- title to the best part of their Lands. He beoning himfelf to the antient laudable Cu- gan with Emporia, a fruitful Region about ftomes of the City. Herein he had merited the leffer syris: wherein, among other Cifingular commendations, if the vehemency ties, was that of Leptis, which daily paid a of his nature had not caused him to malign | Talent unto Carthage for Tribute. This Counthe vertue of that noble scipio the African, trey the Numidian challenged; and by winand some other worthy men; that were ning some part of it, seemed to better his no less honest than himself, though far less claim unto the whole. He had a great adrigid, and more gallant in behaviour. O- vantage: for that the Carthaginians might therwise, He was a very good Citizen, and not make any War, without leave obtained one of fuch temper, that he could fashion from their Masters the Romans. They had himself to all occasions; as if he were ne-none other way of redress, than by sending ny States of the Countrey to fue for peace. For this M. Cato was not only very nota- Thus every one of them, or most of them, ble in the Art of War, which might well be did fome laudable fervice; and yet fo, that then termed the occupation of the Romans; commonly there were of men, towns, and but so well furnished with all other usefull people, new that rebelled, instead of the qualities, that very little was wanting in old that were flain, taken, or reclaimed. At him which might feem requifite to the ac- the causes hereof, I have already pointed; complishment of a perfect man. He was and therefore think it enough to fay, That very skilful in the Roman Laws, a man of the business in Spain required not the imgreat Eloquence, and not unprofitable in ployment of a Roman Conful, from fuch any business either private or publike. Ma- time as Cato thence departed, untill the Nuny books he wrote: whereof the principal mantian War broke out, which was very

In all other Countries to the West of the ver out of his Element. He loved business to Rome their Complaint of his doings. And fo well, or rather hated vice so earnestly; surely they wanted not good matter to althat even unto the end of his life, He was ledge, if the Judges had been impartial. exercised in defending himself or accusing For besides that Scipio, in limiting out to others. For at the age of fourscore and fix them their bounds, had left them the posyears, he pleaded in his own defence : and session of this Countrey : Masanissa himself, four years after, he accused Sergius Galba now very lately pursuing a Rebel that fled unto the people. So began the Nobility of out of his Kingdom, defired leave of the Cato his family; which ended in his great Carthaginians, for himself to passthrough it grand-child M. Cato the Utican: one that in his way to Cyrene: thereby acknowledgbeing of like vertue and fervency, had all ing (had it otherwise been questionable) his good purpoles dasht, and was finally that the Country was theirs. This notwithwearied out of his life, by men of such no- standing, Masanisa had wherewith to justifie his proceedings, especially unto the Roman Senate. He gave the Fathers to underfrand by his Embassadours, what faithless people the Carthaginians were, and how ill affected to the State of Rome. There had lately been fent unto them from Hannibal, one that should perswade them to take part with Antiochus. This man they had examined upon some suspicion of his errand ; vet neither arresting him nor his ship, had thereby afforded him means to escape. Hence the Numidian concluded, that certainly it was their purpose to rebell; and therefore good policy to keep them down.

1058

As for the Countrey of Emporia: it had alwayes, he faid, been theirs that were able to hold it by ftrong hand : and fo belonged fometime unto the Numidian Kings: though now of late it was in pollection of the Carthaginians. But if the truth were known, the Man Armies thence departed: it grietless that the control of the Carthaginians are the control of the Carthaginians. Citizens of Carthage had not any very war- ved much the Atolians to think, that they rantable title unto any more ground, than who had promifed unto themselves the that whereon their City frood : or fearcely whole spoil of Fhilip, and the highest reputo so much. For they were no better than tation among the Greeks; were not only ftrangers in Africk, that had gotten leave disappointed of their covetous hopes, but there to build upon fo much ground, as quite for faken by their ancient dependants; they could encompass with an Oxe-hide cut and of all other the most unregarded. Yet into small thongs. Whatsoever they held was there made a great access to their Ewithout such a compass, was purchased by state; by adding much unto them, of that fraud, and wrongful encroachments. This which had been taken from the Macedonian. confidered, Mafaniffa requested of the Senare, that they would not adjudge unto such usual properties that they would not adjudge unto such usual properties apper-taining to the Angelow of his their client. taining to the Ancestors of him their assured sire. But they were not so pleased with that friend. The Romans having heard these al- which they had, fince they thought it no legations on both fides, found the matter fo more than part of their due : as they were doubtful, that they could not on the fud- vexed with the denial of that which they den tell what to determine. Wherefore, claimed, and with finding themselves to be because they would do nothing rashly: they wholly disesteemed, wherein they thought fent over three Embassadors, of whom that they had usufferable wrong. Wherefore P. Scipio the African was one and the chief, they devised, in a Parliament which they to decide the controversie: yet secretly shortly held, by what means they best might of their hatred.

ø. V I.

The fifth Book of the first Part

The Atolians labour to provoke Antiochus. Philip, and Nabis, to War upon the Romans, by whom they hold themselves wronged and difgraced. Nabis besiegeth Gyttheum, and wasteth some part of Achaa. The exact skill of Philopoemen in advantage of ground : whereby he utterly vanquiffeeth Nabis. Antiochus being denied peace of the Romans, joyns with the Atolians. The Etolians Surprize Demetrias ; and by killing Nabis, their Confederate, feize upon Sparta. But they are driven out by the Citizens: who at Philopoemen his persuasions annex themselves to the Achagiving them inftructions, to leave all as they right themselves; and give the Romans a lorfound it, without making any end one way rowful knowledge of the difference between or other. The Embaffadours followed their their enmity and friendship. To this purpose directions, and left all doubtful. So was it they foon agreed, as concurring all in one likely, that Masanissa with a strong army affection; That they would not only pershould quickly prevail against those that swade Antiochus to make war upon the Rocould no more than talk of their right, and mans, as one to whom the Romans had long exclaim against the wrong. By such Arts refused peace; but that they would deal were the Carthaginians held, not only from with the King of Macedon their ancient eneflirring in favour of King Antiochus, if they my, and with Nabis the Tyrant of Lacedehad thereto any disposition: but were pre- mon, to joyn all together in a new Consedepared by little and little, unto their final racy: whose joynt forces could not in all destruction : that came upon them, when likelihood, but far surmount those of the Rothe Komans had leifure to express the utmost mans, Acheans, Rhodians, and King Emmes, with all that were of their Faction. This was a great enterprise, which the Etolians took in hand; and well beseeming them, for they were great darers. They fent Emballadors to all these Kings, with perswasi- drew part of his Army from the siege of ons, as they thought most forcible. But Gyttheum, to stop the Achaens, if they should philip was irrefolute; and Antiochus wil- invade his Country, But upon these which ling to try first all other courses. Nabis the Were placed in guard of Laconia, Philope-Lacedamonian, who neither (as Philip) had men came unexpected; fired their Camp, hoff much, nor as (Antiochus) was in fear of and put all, fave a very few of them, to the any War; yet shewed himself of all other sword. Then marched he with all his Arthe most forward: and not staying so much my towards Lacedamon: within ten miles as to feek any good pretence, began im- whereof he was when the tyrant met him. mediately to lay fiege unto Gyttheum, that that had already taken Gyttheum. It was had been lately taken from him by the Ro- not expected that Nabis would have been mans. The Acheans, to whole care chiefly Titus at his departure had commended the af- from Gyttheum, with any part of his forces: fairs of Peloponnesus, were not flow to admo- yet was it thought that he must overtake nifh Nabis of his duty: neither would they them, and charge them in Rere. They marhave staid long from repressing his violence ched therefore almost securely, in a long by open war; had not some of them thought it troop reaching some five miles; having their wildom to ask Counsel of the Romans, and Horse, and the greatest part of their Auxiliparticularly of T. Quintius, before they en- aries at their backs, to bear off any sudden gaged themselves in a business of such impor- impression. But Nabs, who formerly undertance. Whilst thus they spent the time in stood, or at least suspected, what course they fending Embassadors, and were advised by would take, appeared in the front of them Quintius to let all alone, and to wait for the with all his Army; encamped there where coming of the Roman forces, that would they meant to have lodged. It was the cufhortly be amongst them: Nabis was bold stome of Philopemen, when he walked, or tra-wasting their own Territory.

Acheans, who had long been absent in Crete; making War there for his minds fake and recreation. Unto him the Achaans referred themselves, giving him leave to order the and marching towards such a place; he were War at his pleasure; either staying till the upon that ground encountred by a greater Romans came, or doing otherwife, as he Army, or better prepared to fight. Then should think best. He made all haste to relieve Gyttheum by Sea; fearing left the Town, and the Achean Garrison within it, should be loft, if he used any delay. But Philopamen was fo bad a Sea-man, that he knew not a ftrong Ship from a rotten. He made a Quadrireme Gally his Admiral, that had fourfcore years agoe been counted a gallant Vessel in the Navie of Antigonus Gonatas. Neither was the day following? By such continual methe rest of his Fleet so good, as might en- ditation he was grown so perfect, that he counter with that of the Lacedamonian.Only it fell out well, that he committed himfelf to a light Pinnace or Brigandine, that fought better with her wings, than with her having drawn up his Rcre, He encamped talons. For his Admiral Gally was ftem- neer unto the place where he was; withmed at the first; and being rotten with age, in half a mile of the Enemy. His bagfprang fo many leaks, and took in water fo gage with all thereto belonging, he bestowfast, that she was fain to yield without fur- ed on a Rock; encompassing them round ther refiftance. When the rest of the Fleet with his Souldiers. The ground was faw what was become of their Admiral, all rough, the wayes bad, and the day almost pamen was not herewith daunted. If he had to water at one Brook; whereto the Acha-ready for them to foon. Or if he should come to give them juster cause of complaint, by velled abroad with his friends, to mark the fituation of the Country about him; and to Philopemen was then the Prætor of the discourse what might befal an Army marching the same way. He would suppose, that having with him there fuch a number of Souldiers, ordered and forted in fuch manner, would he put the question, Whether it were fit for him to hold on his way, retire, or make a stand? What piece of ground it were meet for him to feize upon? and in what manner he might best do it? in what fort he fhould order his men? where bestow his carriages, and under what Guard?in what fort encamp himfelf? and which way march did never meet with any difficulty, whence he could not explicate himself and his followers: At this time he made a stand: and were presently discouraged, and saved them- quite spent ; so as Nabis could not at the prefelves with what speed they could. But Philo- fent greatly molest him. Both Armies were failed in Sea-fervice, which was none of ans lay the nearer. This watering therefore his Occupation, He faid, that he would was first to minister the like occasion of skirmake amends by Land. The Tyrant with- mish. Philopamen understood this; and laid an simi

1059

Mercenaries of Nabis fell, and were flaughthis King in Syria, where he had accomtered in great numbers. Prefently after plished the marriage between Ptolomy and this, he caused one of his own Auxiliaries to his daughter; together with the death of goto the Tyrant as a fugitive, and tell him, young Antiochus the Kings son, which hapthat the Acheans had a purpose to get be- ned during the Treaty, and hindered, or tween him and Lacedamon; whereby they feemed to hinder the King from giving auwould both debarr his return into the City, dience in person to the Embassadors; cauand withal encourage the people to take | fed them to return home to Rome; as un-Arms for the recovery of their freedom. certain of their answer as at their setting The Tyrant hearing this, marched hastily forth One thing that might have been, and away; and left his Camp, which hardly partly was, beneficial unto them, they otherwise would have been forced. Some brought to pass during their abode at Ephesia; companies he made to fray behind, and either by cunning, or (as Livie rather thinks) flew themselves upon the Rampart, thereby by chance. Finding Hannibal there, they to conceal his departure. But Philopemen discoursed often with him, and blamed him was not fo to be beguiled. He easily won the for having thus fled unto Antiochus, upon a Camp, and gave chase to Nabis: whose fol- causeless supition wherein he held the Rolowers being overtaken, had no courage to mans; that honoured his vertue, and intendturn about and make head. The enemies be- ed him no harm. Many have affirmed that ing thus dispersed and fied into woods where P. Scipio was one of these Embaliadors; and they lay in covert all that day: Philopamen that he, among other discourses with Hanniconceived aright, that their fear and neces- bal, demanded once, Which of all the famous Wherefore in the evening, when he had ga- of Macedon the first place: to Pyrrhus the thered together all those of his light arma- second: and the third he challenged unto ture, which had followed the chaie whilst it himself. But scipio, who thought his own was day, he led forth the rest that had well title better, than that it ought to be so forrefreshed themselves, and occupied the two gotten, asked yet further, What wouldst most ordinary passages unto Lacedamon. So thou have said then, Hannibal, if thou hadst Naber his men, when it was dark night, per- vanquished me? To whom the Carthaginian ceiving in Philopamens Camp great store of replied, Then would not I have given the first lights; thought that all had been at rest: place to Alexander, but have claimed it as and therefore adventured to make an escape due unto my self. Now whether this were home. But they were so way-laid, that hard- so, or otherwise, the often and friendly ly one quarter of them got into Sparta. Thir- conference of Hannibal with the Roman Emty dayes together after this, did Philopamen baffadors, made him suspected of Amiochus; waste the Country round about, whilst Nabis who therefore did forbear a while to use his durst not issue forth of his town; and then counsel. Yet afterwards, when Hannibal returned home, leaving the tyrant in a man- | perceived this change in the King, and plainner without forces.

Greece, and T. Quintius among them, labouring to make their party ftrong against Antiochus and Nabis, whom they knew to be solicited by the Ætolians. Very fair countenance | ver should be friend unto the Romans. Wherethey also made unto Philip; and with comfortable promises drew him to make shew, whatfoever he thought of good correspondence. fo long as he thought upon war with Rome, They promifed to reftore unto him his fon: | fo long would Hannibal do him all good ferand were contented to let himhope, that vice: whereas contrariwife, if he latendhe should receive other favours at their ed to make peace, then should it behoove hands; and regain possession of many pla- him to use the counsell of some other ces, by them taken from him. Thus did the man. Romans prepare for war against Antiochus in Greece, whilest their Embassadors that less busie all this while, in making their party were with him in Afia, denyed otherwife strong against the Romans, than were the Roto grant him Peace, than if he would yield man in mustering up their friends in Greece. unto one of the Conditions, by them fo They had fo often dealt with Antiochut, ambush in place convenient; whereinto the often propounded. The long absence of ly defiring him to tell the cause thereof, The Roman Embassadors were then in heard what it was; he easily recovered his former grace and credit. For he told how his Father had caused him to swear at the Altars, when he was a little boy, that henefore he willed the King not to regard any vain furmifes: but to know thus much, that

The Ætolians, and their friends, were

vaunting much of their own forces, and arro- might happen to obtain what they defired; gating to themselves the honour of the victo- either as their right, or else by way of fary against Philip, that finally they prevailed vour. For with such Terms had they been with him; especially when the Roman Embas- feasted once already: and were by the Sefadors had left him without hope of peace, nate rejected unto Titus: who having it in unless he would buy it at too dear a rate. his own power, gave them no satisfaction; They dealt in like fort with the Macedonian. yet would now again refer them to the Se-But in vain. He understood the Romans, and nate. This were only loss of time, and might himself, too well. Wherefore it concerned abate their credit with Antiochus. Wherethem to improve their own forces to the ut- fore without more ado they made a Decree. termost: as knowing that all the burthen That King Antiochus the Great should be inmust lie upon Antiochus and themselves, treated to come over into Grecce, as well without help from any, fave only from some to set the Country at liberty, as also to decide few that were discontented in Greece. Whilst the controversies depending between the they were about this, and had with them Romans and Etolians. Such a Decree they an Embassador of the King Antiochus, that animated them to resolution, the Athenian Embaffadors, whom Titus had requested to be at their meeting, stayed their vehemen- to vaunt themselves to the Kings Embassacy a little; by exhorting them, not to conclude rashly, without first hearing the Romans, that lay near at hand. For want of new Decree. The Prator answered, That a ready answer hereto, they were contented to approve the motion. Titus hearing this, thought the business worthy of his presence. For fince Antiochus had now declared himfelf against the Romans it would be no small piece of service, to withdraw from his friendthip, those by whose encouragement he had | But having thus begun, they meant hencemade the adventure. Wherefore he came to forth to go roundly to work. The care of their Panatolium, or great Assembly of the the war they referred unto the more pri-Nation; where he forgot nothing that might vate Councel of their Nation; that no occaferve to appeale them. He willed them to fron might flip, in waiting for the Authority consider the weight of the enterprise which of a general assembly. The Apocleti (so were to become a Champaign-field, on which to as hotly to work as any of the youngest the ruine of the Country, the Romans and heads could have done. They laid a plot, King Antiochus, that commanded no small how to get into their hands at one time the part of the World, should fight for the Ma- Towns of Chalcis, Demetrias , and Sparta: As for those grievances which entring some of them as friends, to conduct would not have made, had they not underftood the Kings mind before. Having made it, they forgot no point of bravery, whereby dors, and against the Romans. Titus desired of their Prætor, to let him see a Copy of this then he had other things to do: but that this Decree, and their further answer, they would fhortly let him know, if he came to their Camp in Italy upon the river of Tibris. Gentler words would have done better, as the Ætolians are like to understand hereaster. they took in hand; whereby Greece was like the privie Councel of Ætolia called) went ftery: the Atolians, as Masters in that kind to each of which they sent men for the purof Fence, fetting them on , and becoming pose. Demetrias they took upon the sudden; did thus exasperate them, and urge them home a principal man of the City: who for to fuch violent courses, he willed them to speaking words against T. Quintius, had been confider how flight they were, and how driven to flee thence; but was by intercefmuch better they might do, to fend Embaf- from of those that loved him, again re-called. fadors to Rome, that should either plead His Etolian companions, that were not matheir right in the Senate, or (if their right ny, feized upon a Gate; whereat they let unto the places which they claimed, were in a troop which they had left not far benot good) make request to have what they hind them : and so fell to murdering the defired: than thus to let the world in an uproar, and be afterwards the first that should speed not so well. Thither also they had a barepent it. But what he faid, or could say, it insided man to bring home: but they came so skilled not much. They had already done ill; strong, that their purpose was discovered, to make the Embassador of the King, whose and the Town prepared to defend it self help they had fought, wait fo long for an an- against them. Being therefore demanded the fwer, and fray doubting what good end they cause of this hostility, they gave a gentle anshould make with the Romans. Neither was swer, saying, That they came not thither it news unto them, to hear those comforta- as enemies, but only to deliver the Town ble words; that, by fending to Rome, they from the Romans; who more infolently SIIII 2

1061

domineered over it, than ever the Macedo- that if need should so require, they would nians had done. By which Rhetorick they presently send away to Lacedamon all the prevailed no more, than they could do by forces that they could raise: But that they plain force. For the Towns-men replyed, were very defirous at the present, to make That they neither found any abridgement as goodly a muster as they could, before the of their liberty, nor needed any Garrison to great King; which caused them to send him keep them from the Romans, from whom they thither afore with no greater company. Hereneither feared any danger, nor received in- upon he willed Nabis to take heart; bring jury. So this business was dasht. The attempt forth his men, that had been long pent up in upon sparta was more strange and desperate. the City; and train them without the walls: Nabis their good friend, was Lord of the as if shortly he should employ them in work Town, ftyling himself King, but more truly of conquest, rather than defence: Nabis was by all men called Tyrant. He had wellglad of this: and daily exercised his men in near lost all, by means of the overthrow
the field: riding up and down with this 4which Philopamen had lately given him: fince lexamenus, and no more than three or four he durst not stir abroad; and daily expected horse about him, from one point to another. the mischief, that on all sides threatned to order and behold them. During this time him. Wherefore he sent messengers, one af- of exercise, Alexamenus made it his fashion, ter another, to the Ætolians; requesting to step aside alone to his Ætolians, and say them. That as he had not been flow to stir fomewhat as he thought fit which done, in their behalf, but adventured himself up- he still returned again to Nabis. But when he on the utmost of danger, when all others faw time for the great work which he had were backward; fo they would be pleased in hand; he then went aside to his thirty to fend him what help they might, fince his horsemen, and bade them remember thetask bad fortune had caused him presently to enjoyned them at their setting forth; telling need it. It hath been often faid, That the them, that they were all in case of banished ravenous Etolians were only true to them- men, unless they would anon come up to selves, and regarded neither faith nor friend- him, and help him to finish that which they fhip, otherwife, than as it might conduce to should see him take in hand. Herewithall their own ends. And so dealt they now. For the Tyrant began to draw near them: and fince Nabis his mercenary forces, which up- | Alexamenus making towards him, charged held his Tyranny, were in a manner confu- him on the fudden, and struck him down. med: they thought it expedient for their The thirty Etolians never flood to delibe-Estate, to put him out of the way ; and, by so rate upon the matter, but all flew in; and, doing, to affure Lacedamon unto themselves. before any succour could arrive, had made To this purpose, they sent thither Alexame- an end of this wretched Nabis. Presently nue, one whom they thought a man fit for upon the fact committed, the Tyrant his such a work. To him they gave a thousand Mercenaries ran unto the dead body: where Foot, and thirty Horse, chosen for the pur- in stead of seeking revenge, they stood pose. These thirty were by Democritus the foolishly gazing as beholders. Alexamenus Prætor brought into the Counsel of the with his Ætolians hasted into the City, and Apocleti, where they were commanded to be feized on the Palace: where he fell to ranno wifer than they should be, nor to think sacking the Treasure; and troubled himthat they were fent to make war with the felf with none other care, as though all were Acheans, or to do ought elfe, fave only already done. Such of his followers as what Alexamenus should command them; were dispersed in the Town, did assorbe like; which were it never so desperate, and in see- with the greater indignation of the Citizens: ming against all reason; yet must they un- who seeing themselves free by the death of derstand, that unless they performed it, they the Tyrant, could not indure to see those should have no good welcome home. So that had slain him, begin to tyrannize Alexamenus came to the Tyrant, whom he anew. Wherefore all the Town was shortencouraged with brave words: telling him ly in arms: and for lack of another Capthat Antiochus was already in Europe, and tain, they took a little Boy of the Roy. would be anon in Greece, meaning to cover al frock, that had been brought up with all the Land and Sea with his mighty Ar- Nabis his children, whom they mounted mies; and that the Romans were like to find upon a good Horse, and made him their other manner of work, than of late with Chief. So they fell upon the Asiolians Philip: fince the Elephants of this great that were idly ftraggling about; and put King, without other help, would fuffice to them all to the fword: Alexaments with tread them down. As for the Ætolians, he said not many of his Company, were slainin keeping the Citadel: and those few that That Philip was like a Bandog in a chain, de-Sparta ruled over all Greece.

ø. VII.

to the Victors.

leave them enemies behind him: and to else by him then or after thought upon. win them by force, was more than hitherto Presently after this, He made ready for he was able. Yet was he defirous, with all Greece. Before his fetting forth, in a frivolous speed convenient, to shew himself in Greece : pomp of ceremony, he went up from the Seawhere he had been told, that his presence side to Ilium; there to do sacrifice to Minerwould effect wonders. It was faid, that in va of Troy. Thence paffing over the Egean all the country there was a very small num- Sea, He came to Demetrias. Eurylochus the ber, which bore hearty affection unto the Magnetian; the same whom the Etolians escaped thence into Arcadia, were taken by siring nothing more, than to break loose: the Magistrates; who fold them all as bond- and that the Atolians, without whom the flaves. In this doubtful Estate of things at Romans had done nothing, nor nothing Lacedamon, Philopamen came thither: who could have done, were ready to confer upon calling out the chief of the City, and speak- him the greatness, which they had unworing such words unto them, as Alexemanus thily bestowed upon insolent Barbarians. should have done after he had slain the Ty- Of all this the least part was true. Yet that rant: easily perswaded them for their own which was true made such a noise, as added good and fafety, to incorporate themselves credit unto all the rest. Whilest therefore the with the Acheans. Thus by the enterprise, no King was thinking to fend Hannibal into Aless dishonourable than difficult, of the Æto- frick, there to molest the Romans, and so lians: and the small, but effectual, travel of give him the better leisure of using his own Philopamen, the Achaans made a notable opportunities in Greece: Thoas the Etolian purchase: and Lacedamon, that had hitherto came over to him, and bade him lay all other been governed either by Kings, or by Ty- care aside; for that his countreymen had alrants that called themselves Kings, became ready taken Demetrias, a Town of main imthe member of a Common wealth, whereof portance, that should give him entertainthe name had scarce any reputation, when ment, whence he might proceed as became the greatness of his vertue and fortune. This did serve to cut off all deliberation. As for Hannibal, Thoas was bold to tell the King, first, that it was not expedient for him to di-Antiochus, perswaded by Thoas the Etolian, vide his forces at such a time, when the very comes over into Greece ill attended. Sun- reputation of his numbers, brought into dry palfages between him, the Atolians, Greece, might serve to lay open unto him all Chalcidians, and others. He wins Chalcis, and thereby the whole Isle of Euboea. The secondly, That in any such great enterprise vanity of the Kings Embaffadours and the there could not be chosen a more unfit man Atolians, with the civil answer of Titus to be employed in the Kings service, than was to their discourse, before the Acheans. That that famous Hannibal the Carthaginian. For he it concerned the Greeks to have defired peace faid, that the King should as greatly feel the between the Romans and Antiochus, as the loss of a Fleet or Army, perishing under such best assurance of their own liberty. Of ma- a notable commander if his fortune were bad, ny petty Estates that fell to the King. Of as if the same had miscarryed under one of Aminander; and an idle vanity, by which meaner quality: whereas nevertheless if Han-King Philip was loft. Hannibal gives nibal prevailed, Hannibal alone should have good counsel in vain. Some Towns won in all the honour, and not Antiochus. In this re-Theffaly. The King retires to Chalcis, gard he was of opinion, that fuch a renownwhere he marrieth a young wife, and revels ed Warriour should be alwayes near unto away the rest of Winter. Upon the coming the Kings person, to give advice : which beof the Roman Conful all for fake Antiochus, ing followed as often as it was found com-He with two thousand Atolians keeps the modious, the good success would wholly re-Sraights of Thermopylæ. He is beaten, dound unto the honour of him that had the and flees into Asia: leaving all Greece un- soveraign Command; even of the King himfelf. Antiochus gladly hearkned unto this admonition; being jealous of the vertue, that Natiochus was troubled much in Asia shined brighter than the Majesty of his own Awith Sniyrna and Lampfacus, that would fortune. And thereupon he laid aside the denot hearken to any Composition. He termination, which tended more to the adthought it neither fafe nor honourable, to vancement of his defires, than did any thing

Romans: That Nabis was already up in arms: had lately waited on home, when by that pretext

chief man, and ruler of his Nation. He there- Antiochus, in a bufiness of dangerous imporfore with his Countreymen, in great fre- tance upon the promifed affurance of a State quency, came to do their duties to the King that is meerly popular. For if the vehemen-Antiochus, and bid him welcome. The King cy of Thoas, and some other of that Faction. was glad of this: and took it as a fign of had not prevailed in this Council; the Ætogood luck, to be so entertained at the begin- lians, for gain of two or three Towns, yea. ning. But it may be suspected, that the Mag- for hope of such gain that might have denetians found not the like cause of joy. For ceived them, were like to have abandoned whereas they had expected a Fleet and Ar- this King their friend, unto the discretion of my somewhat like to that of Xerxes: they the Romans. And what remedy had there faw three hundred ships; of which, no more been, if this had so fallen out? He could than forty were ferviceable for the Wars, have bemoaned himself to Thoas, and comwith an Army of ten thouland Foot, five plained of the wrong: but he must have hundred Horie, and fix Elephants. The £10- been contented with this answer, That the lians no sooner heard of his coming than fault was in those of the opposite side; they called a Parliament, and made a Decree, whom Thoas would therefore have pronounwhereby they invited him into their Coun- | ced to be very wicked men. It happened try. He knew before that they would fo do; much better for the present, though in the and was therefore well onward on his way future it proved much worse, both for him, towards them, when they met with him that and for the Ætolians. He was chosen Genebrought the Decree. At his coming to Lamia, ral of all their forces: and thirty Commifthe Ætolians gave him as joyful entertain- fioners were appointed to be about him. as ment as they could devise. Being brought in- a Council of War for the Nation. These to their Council, he made an Oration : armed fuch as readily they could, whileft it wherein he defired them to hold him excu- was in dispute where they should begin the fed, that he came not followed with a great- War. Chalcis was thought the meetelt place er Army. This was he faid in true estimation, to be first undertaken : whither if they a fign of his good will: in that he staid not to came suddenly, they should not peradvenmake all things ready, but hafted unto their ture need to use much force. The King had aid, even whilest the season was unsit for Na- brought with him into Ætolia but a thouvigation. Yet it should not be longer, ere the fand Foot, leaving the rest behind him at Dehope of all those which had expected him, metrias. With these he hasted away directly would be fatisfied unto the full. For it was toward chalcis; being overtaken by no his meaning to fill all Greece with Armies, and great number of the Atolians, which accomall the Sea-coast with his Fleets. Neither panied him thither. At his coming the Mawould he spare for any charge, travel, or gistrates, and some of the chief Citizens, danger, to follow the business which he had liffued forth to parle with him. There the undertaken : even to drive the Romans and Asolians began, as they had lately done betheir authority out of Greece; leaving the fore, to tell, how the Romans had only in Country free indeed, and the Atolians words and false semblance, set Greece at litherein the chief. Now as the Armies that berty. But fuch liberty as might be true and were following him, should be very great; useful, they faid, would never be obtained; fo was it his meaning, that all provisions to untill by removing the necessity of obeythem belonging should be correspondent; ing their pleasure that were most mighty, because he would not be any way burden- every several estate had where to find reducis some unto his Confederates. But at the pre- of any preffure. And to this end was the fent he must needs intreat them, having thus great Antiochus come thither; a King well halfily come over unto their aid, unprovided able to counterpoife, yea to overweigh the of many necessaries, that they would help Romans: who nevertheless desired them onhim with Corn and other victuals, whereof ly, so to joyn with him in League, as that if he stood in need. So he left them to their either the Romans or he should offer them confultation : the conclusion whereof was, wrong, they might keep it in their power, to after a little dispute, (for a vain motion was feek redress at the others hands. The chalpretext they won Demetrias; was now the an absolute Prince to engage himself, as did made by some, that the differences between cidians made hereto the same answer, which, the Romans and them, should be put by to the like allegations, they had made nor Compromise to the decision of Antiochus) long before: That their freedom was not that they would yield unto the Kings defire, imaginary, but absolute; for which they and affift him with all their forces. Here were to thank the Roman; without whole we may observe, how vain a thing it is for good liking, they would enter into an new confederacy. That which they spake of theless he assayed them, upon a vain hope, fore, to make War upon the King.

to draw the Acheans to his party. Never- flaves, and good for little elfe. These divers themselves, they could likewise affirm of all that the envie which Titus was said to bear the Greeks: forasmuch as none of them paid unto Philopemens vertue, had bred a secret any tribute, was kept under by any Garri- diflike between that Nation and the Romans. fon, or lived otherwise than by their own Wherefore both he and the Etolians sent Laws, and without being tied unto conditi- Embassadors to the Council at Egium that ons which displeased them. Wherefore they spared not brave words, if the Acheans wondred, why the King should thus trouble would have been so taken. The Kings Emhimself to deliver Cities that were already bassador told of great Armies and Fleets that free. But fince he, and the Etolians, requested were coming; reckoning up the Dahans their friendship; they belought both him Medians, Elimeans, and Caducians: names and the Ætolians, to do a friendly Office, in that were not every day heard of and theredeparting from them quietly, and leaving fore as he thought, the more terrible. Then them in such good case as they were. With told he them what notable men at Sea, the this answer the King departed: for he was Sidonians, Tyrians, Aradians, and Pamphylinot, as then, ftrong enough to force them. ans were; such indeed as could not be relist-But very foon after, he brought thither a ed. Now concerning money and all warlike greater power, which terrified them, and furniture: it was he faid, well known that made them yield: before all the fuccours the Kingdoms of Alia had alwayes thereof could arrive, wich Titus had fent for their great plenty. So as they were much deceived: who confidering the late War made The chief City of Eubwa being thus gotten, against Philip, did think that this with Antioall the rest of the Island shortly yielded to chus would prove the like; the case was too Antiochus. Four or five hundred Roman Soul- far different. Yer this most powerful King. diers, that came over late to have defended that for the liberty of Greece was come from Chalcie, reposed themselves at Delium, a lit- the utmost parts of the East; requested no tle town of Bwotia, lying over against the more of the Achaans, than that they would Island; where was a Temple and Grove, con- hold themselves as neutral, and quietly look fecrated unto Apollo, that had the priviledge on, whileft he took order with the Romans. of an inviolable Sanctuary. In this place were To the same effect spake the Atolian Embassome of them walking, and beholding the sador, and further added, that in the battel things there to be feen, whilst others were bu- at Cynoscephale, neither Titus had done the fied as they found cause, without fear of any part of a General, nor the Romans of good danger; as being in fuch a place, and no war Souldiers: but that both he and his Army hitherto proclaimed. But Menippus one of had been there destroyed, had they not been Antiochus his Captains, that had wearied protected by vertue of the Etolians, which himself in many vain Treaties of peace took carried the day. Titus was present at the advantage of their carelefness, and used them Council, and heard all this: to which he made with all extremity of war. Very few of as fit answer, as could have been defired. He them escaped: fifty were taken, and the told the Acheans, That neither the Kings rest slain. Hereat Quintius was grieved ; yet Embassadour, nor the Atolian, did so greatfo, as it pleafed him well to confider, that his ly labour to perswade those unto whom they Romans had now more just cause than be- addressed their Orations; as to vaunt themfelves the one unto the other. So as a man Antiochus liked well these beginnings; and might well discern, what good corresponfent Embassadors into all quarters of Greece; dence in vanity it was, that had thus linked in hope, that his reputation should perswade the King and the Atolians together. For very many to take his part. The wifer fort even such brags as here they made before returned fuch answer, as the Chalcidians had the Acheans, who knew them to be lyars, done. Some referved themselves untill he had the Atolians also made unto King should come among them: knowing that Antiochus: proclaiming the victory over Phieither, if he came not, he must hold them ex- lip to be meerly their Act: and the whole cused for not daring to stir: or if he came, Countrey of Greece to be dependent on them. the Romans must pardon their just fear, in Interchangeably had they been feasted by yielding to the stronger. None of those that the King, with such tales as his Embassalay far off, joyned with him in true mean- dor told even now; of Dahans, and Aradiing fave the Eleans, that alwayes favoured ans, and Elimeans, and a many others: that the Etolians, and now feared the Achaans, were all but a company of Syrians, fuch Little reason there was, that he should think as were wont to be fold about for bond-of his at Chaleis (no fuch vaunter as were Towns in Thrace, lately gotten by Antiochus, these Embolladors) had sometime scaled pretended as a very great cause of sear, that him. For all that variety, whereat he won- should move them to take arms even in their dred, was none other, as his Hoft then merri- own defence. But if all Greece would have If told him; than for many pieces of one tame Swine, dreft after feveral fathions, with variety of fawces. Setting therefore afide this joyntly to affift the Romans, with their vanity of idle pomp : it were good to make whole forces both by Land and Sea, whenfojudgement of the great King, by his present ever King Antiochus should make the least doing. He had notwithstanding all this offer to fit against them: then had not only great noile, no more thanten thouland men this quarrel been at an end; but the Roman about him : for which little Army he was Patronage over the Country, had been far fain in a manner to beg victuals of the Æto- from growing, as soon after it did, into a lians ; and take up money at usury, to defray | Lordly rule. his charges. And thus he ran up and down the Country; from Demetrias to Lamia; ner the only Nation of Greece, that freely and thence back to Chale's ; and being there flut generoully declared themselves altogether out, to Demetries again. These were the fruits for the Romans, their friends and benefactors. of lies : wherewith, fince both Antiockus and All the reft gave doubtful answers of hope the Ætolians had each deluded other; meet unto both fides: or if some few, as did the it was that they should, as perhaps already Thessairas, were firm against Antiochus; yet they did, repent, whileft wifer men took helped they not one another in the quarrel, heed by their example. To a favourable Au- nor fliewed themselves his enemies, till he ditory much persuasion is needless. The A-pressed them with open force. The Bestians cheans did not love so well the Atolians, as willingly received him, as soon as he entred to defire that they should become Princes upon their borders, not so much for fear of of Greece: but rather wifned to fee them, of his power, as in hatred of Titus and the Roall other, made the verieft abjects. Where- mans, by whom they had been fomewhat fore they frood not to hearken after news, what Antiochus did, how he fped in Eubaa, him, and against the Atolians.

How the hatred between these two Natithe ftory foregoing. Now have they gotten | [cended from Alexander the Great: naming each their Patrons; the one, the Romans; the other, King Antiochus. Herein did each of them unwifely: though far the greater blame ought to be laid on the turbulent spirits of the Atolians. For when the Romans departed out of Grecce, and left the Country judged by Antiochus and the Ætolians, a man at rest: there was nothing more greatly to have been defired, than that they might ne- that in regard of his high parentage, and the ver find occasion to return with an Army famous memory of Alexander his forefather; thither again. And in this respect ought the it was their purpose, to do their best for the Greeks to have fought, not how smgrna conquest of Macedon to his behoof fince no and Lampaceus might recover their liberty man had thereto fo good title as he. But for (which had never been held a matter worth the enabling them hereunto 3 it behoved him regarding, untill now of late) but how the to draw Aminander to their party, that to powers of the East and West, divided and they might the sooner have done with the kept afunder by their Countrey, as two Seas Romans. Philip was highly pleafed herewith; by an IJhbanus, or neck of land, might be and by perfivations of himself, or of his kept from overflowing the bar that parted fifter, effected as much as they defired. But them. Neither had the Romans any better the first piece of service done by this imagipretence for their feeking to make free hary King (whether it proceeded from his those base Afiatiques, who originally were own phrenzie in hope to get love of the Greekilb; than the general applause, where- Macedonians that should be his subjects: or names of raccal people were, he faid, like to with all the nation entertained this their lothe divertity of Veniton, wherewith a friend ving offer. Yet were Lyfimachia, and the

The Acheans were at this time, in a manhardly used. Aminander the Athamanian, befides his old friendship with the Ætolians, or what other Cities were like to take his was caught with a bait, which it may be part: but readily proclaimed War against doubted, whether he did more foolishly swallow, or Antiochus cast out. He had married the daughter of an Arcadian, that was an idleons grew inveterate; sufficiently appears in headed man, and vaunted himself to be dehis two fons, in that regard, Philip and Alexander. Philip, the elder of these brethren, accompanied his fifter to the poor Court of Athamania: where having made his folly known, by talking of his Pedegree; He was fit for their turns. They made him believe, whether from some vanity in King Antiochus said He, These Etolians here present; and that employed him) wrought more harm namely, this Thous being lately Embassadour to his friends, than he and Aminander were from them into Asia, among other motives able to do good. There were two thousand which he then used to excite the King unto this men committed to his leading: with which Expedition, insisted mainly on the same point. he marched unto Cynoscephale, there to gather up the bones of the slaughtered Mace patience, with the Lordy inscience of the Rodonians; whom their King had suffered all mans: likening that King to some wild beaft, this while to lie unburied. The Macedons that was chained or lockt up within some grate, troubled not themselves to think on this and would fain break loofe. If this be so : let charitable act, as if it were to them any benefit at all: but King Philip took it in high indignation; as intended meerly unto his deangry flomack, upon those that are common fpight. Wherefore he presently sent unto the enemies to us and him. But if it prove other-Romans; and gave them to understand, that wife, and that his fear be greater than his inhe was ready with all his power to aid them dignation: then shall it behoove us to look unto wherein foever they should be pleased to him; that he may not seek to please his good reasons which he could alledge : as in a mat- this time should have heard other news, than ter of great importance. Hannibal was at this that Chalcis in Eubeea was become ours. Italy meeting: who had long been cast aside, as and Gaul should have been on fire with warsand That what he should now utter, was even ly. Neither do I fee what should hinder us even the same which he would have spoken, had now from taking the same course. Send for all

mafters the Romans, by offending us. Your fon The Atolians, Magnetians, Eubwans, Boo Seleucus is now at Lysimachia, with part of tians, and Athamanians, having now all joy- your Army: if Philip will not hearken to your ned with him: Antiochus took counsel of Embassage; let Seleucus be in readiness to them about the profecution of the War in fall upon Macedon, and find him work to defend hand. The chief question was, Whether it his own on the other side, without putting us were meet for him to invade Theffaly, that here to trouble. Thus much concerning Phillip, would not hearken to his perswasions: or and the present war in Greece, But more genewhether to let all alone until the Spring : be- rally for the managing of this great enterprise, cause it was now mid-winter. Some thought wherein you are now embarked against the Roone thing, and some another; confirming | mans, I told you my opinion at the beginning: each his own fentence, with the weightiest whereto had you then given ear, the Romans by a vellel of no use, but was now required to little to their comfort, they should have underdeliver his opinion. He freely told the King, flood, that Hannibal was again come into Itahis counsel at any time before been asked your Fleet and Army hither (but in any case fince their coming into Greece. For the Mig- let flips of birden come along with them, netians, Emotions, and other their good loaden with flore of victuals: For, as the case friends, which now so willingly took their now stands, we have here too few hands, and too parts: what were they else than so many poor many months)Wherefore let the one half be imestates, that wanting force of their own, did ployed against Italy; whilest you in person with adjoyn themselves for fear unto him, that the other half, tarrying on this side the Ionian was strongest for the present: and would as- Sea, may both take order for the affairs of terwards, when they saw it expedient, be Greece, and therewithal make countenance; as as ready to fall to the contrary fide, alledging if you were even ready to follow us into Italy: the same fear for their excuse? Wherefore sea, and be ready to fellow us indeed, if it he thought it most behooveful to win King shall be requisite. This is my advice; who Philip of Macedon unto their party: who stough perhaps I am not very skissal in all orts (besides that being once engaged, he should of mar; yet how to mar with the Romans, I not afterwards have power to recoyle and have been instructed by long experience, both to for sake them at his pleasure) was a mighty their cost and mine own. Of this Counsel which Prince; and one that had means to fultain the I give, I promise you my faithful and diligent Roman War with his proper forces. Now Service for the execution : but what counsel that Philip might be easily perswaded to join foever you please to follow, I wish it may be prowith them, the benefit likely to redound fperous. Many were pleased with the great unto himself, by their society, was a very spirit of the man, and said, he had spoken ftrong Argument: though indeed what bravely: but of all this was nothing done; need was there, of proving by infe-rence the likelihood of this hope: For, all things ready there. In the mean while they had before disputed. There when they war against the Bojians; wherein he purhad won one Town by force, many other chased the honour of a Triumph, nothing so places, doubting their own strength, were glorious as was that of his Colleague; glad to make submission. But Lariffa that though purchased with harder service, rewas chief of the Country, flood out: not quiring the more ability in matter of War. regarding any terrible threats of the King, But M. Acilius went over into Greece, with that lay before the wals with his whole Ar- ten thousand foot, two thousand horse, and my. This their faith and courage was re- fifteen Elephants. Ptolomy King of Egypt, notwarded by good fortune. For AI, Ewbius, a withstanding his late Alliance with King An-Roman Progrator, did fend help thither. tiochus; and Philip King of Macedon; had Likewise Philip of Macedon professed himself lately fent Embassadors to Rome, making enemy unto Antiochus, whereby the fame of offer to come each of them in person with all the fuccour coming to Lariffa, grew fuch, as his forces into Ætolia, there to affift the wrought more than the faccour could have Conful in this War. Ptolomy fent also gold done, had it arrived. For Antiochus percei- and filver, toward the defraying of charving many fires on the Mountain tops afar ges; as one that meant none other than good off; thought that a great Army of Romans earnest. But he was too young and dwelt and Macedonians had been coming upon too far off. So his money was returned unhim. Therefore excusing himself by the to him with thanks; and his loving offer as time of the year; He brake up his fiege, and lovingly refused. Unto Philips Embassadors, marched away to Chalcis. At Chalcis he fell answer was made, that this his friendly in love with a young Maiden, daughter un- offer was gratefully accepted: and that the to a Citizen of the Town; whom, without Senate and People of Rome would think regard of the much disprepertion that was themselves beholding to him, for the affibetween them, both in years and fortune, He france that he should give to Acilius the shortly married; and so spent the winter Consul. Mafanissa likewise, and the Carthafollowing as delightfully as he could, with- ginians, did strive, which of them should out thinking upon the War in hand. His be most forward in gratifying the Romans. great men and Captains followed his exam- Each of them promifed a great quantity of ple, & the fouldiers as readily imitated their grain; which they would fend partly to Captains:in such wife, that when he took the Rome, partly to the Army in Greece. And field, he might evidently perceive in what herein Mafaniffa far out-went the poor City loose manner of discipline his armyhad passed of Carthage; as also in that he offered to lend the winter. But M. Acilius Glabrio, the Roman the Conful five hundred horse, and twenty Conful, shall meet him very shortly, & help Elephants. On the other side, the Carthagini-

lius Scipio Nasica. The war against Antiochus ought to be discharged by many yearly penfell to him by lot; whereas otherwife, He | fions. But the Romans did neither think it was no way so honourable, as Nasca, his Col- good, to let them arm a Fleet: nor would let league: unto whem fell a charge, of far less them redeem themselves out of Tribute, by credit and importance. Nafica, besides the paying all at once. As for the Corn, it was great Nobility of his Family, had been long accepted, with condition that they should fince, in time of the Punick War, crow- be contented to receive the price of it. ned with the title of The best man in Rome: when the Senate for very fear and superfixi- that began with such noise and preparation, durst not have so pronounced him, had ons, were hardly credible: were not the they not so thought him, as being comman-difference exceeding great between the Roded by Oracle, that none other man than man and the Asiatique Souldier. Antiochus had the very best, should entertain an old stone, gotten this Spring a few towns of Acarwhich the Devil then taught them to call nania, after the same manner as he had pre-The Mother of the gods. But no prerogative of vailed in other parts of Greece; partly by Birth, Vertue or good opinion, gave fuch ad- fair words, extreason of the Rulers partly by vantage to the better man, as to make choice terror, that was like to prove their excule of his own Province: or arrogate more un- when they should again for fake him Burking to himself; than his lot should afford him. | Philip and Bebius having recovered many pla-This uppartial distribution of employments, cesset the Roman Conful being arrived against helped well to maintain peace and concord, whom none made refiftance; he was glad they went in hand with Theffaly; about which P. Scipio was therefore appointed to make him to reclaim them from this loofic's of nup-tial Revels, by fetting them to harder exercite. charges: and to bring in at one payment, all M. Acilius was chosen Consul with P. Corne- the Tribute-mony which was behind, and to withdraw himself. Aminander fled out of But there was great difference between Leohis Albamania: which the Macedonian nidas and Antiochus. The former of these, took and enjoyed; as in recompence of his with an handfull of men, defended this pafgood service to the Romans. Philip the bro- sage two or three dayes together, against a ther of Aminanders wife, was taken by the world of men coming to invade the Coun-Conful;made a mocking-stock, and sent away try. The latter, having taken upon him to prisoner to Rome. The The falians used much do great miracles, and effect what he listed more diligence in returning to their old himself in Greece: did commit himself unto friends, than they had done in yeelding to the fafety of this place, when he was chargthe King. All their Cities one after another, ed by not many more than he had in his gave up themselves: the Garrisons of Antio- own Army. There whilest he lay, He sent chus, compounding only for their own earnest messengers one after another to the lives, and departing unarmed: yet fo, that Etolians, entreating them not to forfake him athousand of them stayed behind, and took thus; but at least wise now to help, and pay of the Romans. This did wonderfully keep the tops of the mountains, left the Rohimself to Chalcis, and hearing how things down upon him. By this importunity, he got went, cryed out upon his friends: and faid, of them two thousand, that undertook to That they had betrayed him. He had taken make good the few paffages: by which only, a great deal of toyl during one half of a and not without extreme difficulty, it was

The hasty and ridiculous issue of this War,

perplex Antiochus; who having withdrawn mans, finding any by-path, should come winter, and spent the other half in such possible for the Enemy to ascend. The Roman Nuptials, as were little to his honour: after Conful in like fort prepared to force the which, in time of need, he found all the Straights, without staying to expect King promifes of the Ætolians meerly verbal: and Philip: that was hindred by fickness from himself reduced into terms of great extre- accompanying him. He had with him M. Pormity. He therefore admired Hannibal as cius Cato, and L. Valerius Flaccus, that had a wise man, yea, a very Prophet, that had both of them been Confuls. These he sent foreseen all this long before. Nevertheless, forth by night with two thousand men, to he sent word to the Atolians, that they try whether by any means they could get up should now make ready all their forces: as to the Ætolians. He himself encouraged considering their own need to be no less than his Army: not only by telling them with his. But the Etolians had cause to think, that what base conditioned enemies they had to they themselves were shamefully disappoint- deal: but what rich Kingdoms Antiochus ed by Antiochus; who having promifed to do held, that should bountifully reward them great wonders, was in all this while fe- if they were victors. This was on the day beconded by no greater numbers out of Asia, fore the battel. All that night Cato had a than so many as would fill up the same ten fore journey (for what happened unto L. Vathousand which he first brought over. Yet | lerius it is uncertain, fave only that he failed came there some of them, though fewer than in his intent) and so much the worse, for at any time before, which joyned with him. that he had no skilful guide. Seeing there-Hereat the King was angry: and could get fore his men exceedingly tyred, with climbno better fatisfaction, than that Thous and ing up fteepy Rocks, and crooked wayes: He his fellows had done their best in vain, to commanded them to repose themselves; have made all the Nation take Arms. Since whilst he, being a very able man of body, therefore neither his own men came over to took in hand the discovery, accompanied him out of Asia, nor his friends of Greece with no more than one of like metal to himwould appear in this time of danger: He self. After a great deal of trouble, he found feized upon the Straights of Thermopyle; at length a path: which he took to be, as as meaning to defend them against the Romans, until more help should come. Of Enemies. So thither he brought his men; the Straights of Thermopyla, there hath and held on the same path till toward break been spoken enough * before, upon many of day. It was a place not haunted, because in occasions: and then chiefly, when they were time of peace, there was a fair way thorow defended by Leonidas against the huge Ar- the Straights below, that required no such my of Xerxes. Wherefore it may eafily be trouble of climbing; neither had this entrance conceived, how the Romans, that landed of the Thermopyla been to often the Seat of about Apollonia, and so came onwards into War, as might cause any travellers to search The fally, were unable to pals that Ledge of out the paliages of those desolate Mountains, dividing the one half of Greece; the way that Cato followunless they could win this difficult entrance. ed, though it were the best; yet did it lead him to a bog at the end, which would fuf- at the same time. Each of them plied his fer him to pais no further. So he frayd there work hard; especially Philip, who fain would until day-light: by which he discovered have taken Lamia before the Conful should both the Camp of the Greeks underneath come to help him. But it could not be. For him; and some of the Atolians very near his Macedonians that used to work by Myne. unto him, that were keeping watch. He there- were over-much hindered by the front fore fent forth a lusty Crew of his men, ground. Yet was Lamia even ready to be whom he thought fittest for that service; taken, when the Consul, having won Heraand willed them by any means to get him clea, came thither, and told Philip, that the fome prisoners. This was effected: and he spoil of these Towns was a reward unto those thereby understood, that these Atolians that had fought at Thermopyla. Herewith were no more than fix hundred; as also that Philip must be contented; and therefore King Antiochus lay beneath in the Valley. So went his way quietly. But Acilius, that could he presently set upon the Atolians, over- so ill indure to see Philip in likelihood of threw them, flew a great part of them, and thriving by the Romans victory, got not Lachafed the reft, that by flying to their Camp, guided him unto it. The fight was already ful was ready to ease him of his charge. begun between the Armies below: and the The loss of Heraclea did so affright the Romans, that had easily repelled the Kings Etolians, that they thought no way safer men, and driven them into their Camp, found than to defire peace. Yet had they fent unto it, in a manner, a desperate piece of work to King Antiochus presently after his flight; inaffault the Camp it felf, which occupied the treating him not to forlake them utterly, but whole breadth of the Straights, was nota- either to return with all those forces which bly fortified; and not only defended by An- he had purposed to bring into Greece; or if tiochus his long Pikes, which were best at any thing with-held him from coming in that kind of fervice; but by Archers and person, at leastwise to help them with mony Slingers that were placed over them on and other aid. They prayed him to confithe Hill-fide, and powred down a showr of der, that this did not only concern him in weapons on their heads. But Cato his approach determined the matter. It was ty: fince it would be much to his hurt, if the thought, at first, that the Etolians had been Etolians being wholly subdued, the Rocoming to help the Kings men: but when mans, without any enemies at their backs, the Roman Arms and Enfigns were discover- might set upon him in Asia. He considered ed, fuch was the terrour, that none made of- | well of this, and found their words true. fer of refiftance; but all of them for fook the Therefore he delivered unto Nicander, one Camp, and fled. The flaughter was not great: of their Embaffadors, a fumm of mony, that for that the badness of the way did hinder might serve to defray the charges of the the Roman Army from making pursuit. Yet | War: promising that ere long he would send this dayes loss drave Antiockus out of Greece, them strong aid, both by Land and Seawho directly fled to Chalcie; and from thence Those, another of their Embaffadors, He rewith the first opportunity, got him back in- tained with him; who willingly stayed, friendship of Antiochus, prepared forthwith from them; then did the Etolians lay aside to entertain the Romans, and entreat for par- all hope of amending their fortune by the don: setting open their gates; and present- help of Antiochus; and made suit unto the ing themselves unto the Consul, in manner | Consulto obtain peace, upon any reasonable of suppliants. Briefly, in few dayes all was condition. The Consul would scarce vouchrecovered that Antiochus had gained: the safe to give them audience, but said, He had Æiolians only standing out, because they other business in hand; only he granted them knew not what else to do. Neither did the ten dayes of Truce, and fent L. Valerius Conful give them any respite. At his return Flaceus with them to Hypata; willing them from Chalcie, he met with King Philip, that to make him acquainted with as much as having recovered health, came to joyn with they would have delivered unto himfelf. At him against Antiochus: over whom, fince the their coming to Hypata, they began, as men victory was already gotten, He did gratulate favouring their own cause, to alledge how unto the Romans their good fucces; and offered to take part with them in the Etolian Whereto Flacens would not hearken. He War. So it was agreed, That the Conful told them plainly, That the memory offich should besiege Heraelea; and Philip Lamia; good offices past, was quite obliterated by that he might urge the King to make his All the Cities that had imbraced the word good. But when Heraclea was taken the malice which they had shewed of late. need of him in the continuance of this War: Lige excep. fense; and counted them all one, as * yeelding from Antiochus, with mony and hopeful proi Polyb.13. to discretion. Wherefore when the Conful miles: the Romans abiding still about Heraheard them speak in this manner: He asked clea, and Philip having lately risen from bethem whether their meaning were agreeable fore Lamia, yet not being far gone thenceto their words. They answered that it was: His mony Nicander conveighed into Lamia, and shewed him the decree of their Nation, by very unusual dexterity. But he himself lately made to this purpose. Then, said he, being to pass further to the Assembly of the I command you first of all, That none of Etolians*, there to make report of his Emyou presume to go into Asia, upon any busi- bassage; was very much perplexed about ness, private or publick: then, That ye dethis his journey, which lay between the Roliver up unto me Dicearchus the Atolian, man and Macedonian Camps. Yet he made Menestratus the Epirot, Aminander the Atha- the adventure: and keeping as far as he manian, and such of his Countrimen as have could from the Roman side, fell upon a Stafollowed him in revolting from us. Whilest tion of Macedonians; by whom he was tahe was yet speaking; Phameas the Embassa- ken, and led unto their King. He expected dour interrupted him; and prayed him not no good; but either to be delivered unto to miltake the cultome of the Greeks, who the Romans, or used ill enough by Philip. But had yeelded themselves unto his faith; not it seems, that the King had not hitherto conunto flavery. What? (faid the Conful) Do ye cocked well the indignity of his being fent stand to plead Custome with me, being now at away from Lamia. For he commanded his my discretion? Bring hither a chain. With servants to entreat Nicander friendly : and he that, chains were brought; and an Iron himself being then at supper, did visit him as collar, by his appointment, fitted unto every foon as he rose up: giving him to underone of their necks. This did so affright them, stand, That the Atolians did now reap the that they flood dumb, and knew not what fruits of their own madness; forasmuch as to fay. But Valerius and some others en- they could never hold themselves contentreated the Conful, not to deal thus hardly ted, but would needs be calling strangers inwith them, fince they came as Embaffadors; to Greece. They had pleafed themselves well, though fince, their condition was altered. in their acquaintance first with the Romans, Phameas also spake for himself; and said, and then with King Antiochus; but himself. That neither he, nor yet the Apocleti or or- being their neighbour, they could never well dinary Councel for the Nation, were able endure. It was now therefore, he faid, high to fulfill these injunctions; without appro- time for them to have regard unto his bation of the general Assembly. For which friendship, whereof hitherto they never be trusted in employment: especially the Nicander was alwayes after dutifully affect-Romans being like hereafter to have further ed to the Crown of Macedon: fo as in the fo long.

Wherefore he willed them to acknowledge He was defired to fet upon the Athamanians, their fault, and to entreat pardon. Better and some other petty Nations their borthey thought to do so even betimes, than to derers, whilst the Consul was busine with ftav till they were reduced unto terms of the Ætolians; taking for his reward, all that more extremity. Hereupon they agreed to he could get. And he got in that space all commit themselves unto the faith of the Ro- Athamania, Perrhabia, Aperantia and Dolopia; mans; and to that effect fent Embafladors For the Atolians hearing what had befallen to the Conful. This phrase of committing their Embassiadours, were so enraged, That unto the faith, fignified, in their use of it, although they were very ill provided for little else than the acknowledgement of a War, yet they could not endure to hear fault done, and the craving of pardon. But more talk of Peace. And it happened, that the Romans used those words in another Nicander about the same time was come back cause he entreated yet further ten dayes re- made any tryal: for surely their good afspite; and had granted unto him Truce for fection, one unto the other, would be much more available unto each of them than their This furceafance of War, during ten, and mutual catching of advantages; whereby other ten dayes together, began presently af- they had wrought themselves much displeater the taking of Heraclea; when Philip had fure. Thus much the King willed Nicander been commanded away from Lamia, that to fignific unto his Countrimen; and privateelse he might have won. Now because of the ly to hold in mind the courtesse which he indignity herein offered unto that King, then did him, in fending him fafe home. So and to the end that he might not return giving him a Convoy to guard him to Hypata, home with his Army, like one that could not he lovingly difmiffed him. For this benefit, to the Romans, and therefore was had away then did the Governour of Zacynthus offer to Rome, where he ended his life.

Ætolians refused to make their submission, in this: but plainly told them, That the Rofuch wife as he required it: he forthwith mans would be their own Carvers, and take meant to profecute the war against them, what they thought good, of the Lands bewithout any longer forbcarance. They were longing to their Enemies; as a reward of the preparing to make head against him at Nan- victory which they had obtained. It was patins: whither he therefore directly march- bootless to dispute. Wherefore the Achieme ed, to try what they could or durft. The referred themselves unto his discretion. So fiege of Naupathus was of greater length, than he told them, that their Commonwealth was the Romans had preconceived it: for it was like a Tortoife, whereof Peloponnessus was the a strong City, and well manned. But Acilius shell: and that, holding themselves within flood upon point of honour; wherein he that compass, they were out of danger; but thought that he should have been a loser by if they would needs be looking abroad, they rifing from before it without Victory. So should lie open to blows, which might he flayd there well-near all the following greatly hurt them. Having fettled things time of his Consulfhip; whilest the Macedo thus in Poloponnesus, he went over to Namian King and the Acheans, made far better passus: where Glabrio the Consul had lain use of the Roman Victory. Fhilip, as is said two months, that might have been far better before, being allowed to take in such places spent. There, whether out of compassion as had revolted unto Antiochus, and were which he had upon the Ætolians, or out of not hitherto reclaimed, won the strong City dislike of King Philips thriving so fast: he of Demetrius, and with an hafty course of Vi- perswaded the Consul to grant unto the bectory, fubdued the Athamanians and others. fieged, and to the whole Nation, folong The Acheans called to account the Eleans truce, that they might fend Emballadors to and Messenians: which had long been ad- Rome; and submitting themselves, crave pardicted to the Atolian fide 3 and followed it, don of the Senate. Most like it is, that Nauintaking part with Antiochus. The Eleans pactus was in great danger: else would not gave good words; whereby they faved the Atolians have made such earnest suit as themselves from trouble a while. The Mef-they did unto Titus, for procuring of this fafenians being more frout, before they were vour. But if Glabrio had been fure to carry invaded, had none other help when the it in any short space, it may well be thought Achean Prætor wasted their Country, than he would not have gone away without it; to offer themselves unto the Romans. Titus fince the winning of that Town, wherein was was then at Corinth: to whom they fent then the whole flower of the Nation, would word, That at his Commandment their gates have made the promifed submission much should be opened; but that unto the Ache- more humble and sincere. When they came ans it was not their meaning to yeeld. A mef- unto Rome, no entreaty could help them to fage from Titus to the Achean Prætor, did better Condition, than one of these two; fuffice to call home the Army, and finish the That either they should wholly submitthem-War: as also the peremptory Command of selves to the good pleasure of the Senate; Or the same Titus, caused the Messenians to an- else pay a thousand talents, and make neither nex themselves unto the Acheans, and become peace nor war with any; further than as the part of their Common-weal. Such was now Romans should give approbation. They had the Majesty of a Roman Embassador. Titus not so much mony: neither could they well did favour the Acheans; yet could not like hope to be gently dealt withall, if they it well, that either they or any other should should give themselves away unto discretion; take too much upon them. He thought it which, what it fignified, they now underpart of his defire. They had lately bought the as enemies, after long and vain attendance. the Isle of Zacynthus; which had once been Philips, and was afterward given by him to hopes of peace, the Conful had little to doin Aminander, who fent a Governour thither. Greece, and therefore took upon him gravely But when Aminander in this present war, was to set things in order among the tractable war of Perfeus he made himself suspected undriven out of his own Kingdom by Philip, to fell the Island to the Acheans; whom he When the Conful understood, that the found ready Chapmen. Titus liked not of enough, that they had their liberty, and were stood. Wherefore they defired to have it ftrong enough to defend it against any of set down, in what points, and how far forth their neighbours. That they should make they should yeeld unto the good pleasure of themselves great Lords, and able to dispute the Senate. But hereof they could get no with the Romans upon even terms, it was no certain answer: so that they were diminsted flore the banished Lacedamonians home into him try the chance of a battel for his Kingtheir Country; and to take the Eleans into dom. the fellowship of their Commonwealth. This the Achaens liked well enough: but they did not like it, that the Romans should be meddling in all occurrences. Wherefore they Lucius Scipio, having with him Publius the deferred the restitution of the banished Lacedamonians: intending to make it an Act of their own meer grace. As for the Eleans, they were loth to be beholding to the Romans, and thereby to disparage the Achaans: into whose Corporation they were defirous to be admitted, and faw that they should have their defire, without such compulsive mediation.

The Roman Admiral C. Livius, much about the same time, fought a battel at Sca with Polyxenidas, Admiral to the King Antiochus. King Eumenes brought help to the Romans, though it was not great: and five and twenty fail of Rhodians came after the battel, when they were following the Chase. The Kings Fleet was the better of fail, but that of the Romans the better manned. Wherefore Polyxenidas being vanquished in fight, was yet out of danger; as foon as he betook himfelf to a speedy retrait.

this, as many of the Greeks as had followed defirous (as generally all Confuls were) fide, Philip of Macedon, Arch-enemy of late it to the hazzard of a Lottery. Lucius having Son-in-law of King Antiochus: but he was upon Hannibal, and should happen to be dithe friend of fortune. He understood long rected wholly by that great Captain, what before, as did all that were indifferent be-Greece, and that there was no doubt but and high spirit as much disliked. It is wor-

Acheans. He would have had them to re- the Romans would foon be there, and make

ø. VIII.

African his elder Brother, for his Lieutenant, is fent into Greece. He grants long Truce to the Ætolians, that fo he might at leifure pass into Asia. Much troublesome bufiness by Sea, and divers fights, An invasion upon Eumenes his Kingdom; with the flege of Pergamus, raised by an handfull of the Acheans. L. Scipio the Conful comes into Afia: where Antiochus most earnestly dofireth beace, and is demed it. The battel of Magnefia: wherein Antiochus being vanquiffied, yeeldeth to the Romans good pleafure. The conditions of the peace. In what fort the Romans weed their victory. L. Cornelius Scipio, after a most sumptuous triumph over Anticchus, is furnamed The Asiatique, as his brother was stilled The

Weius Cornelius Scipio, the brother of P. scipio the African, was chosen Conful And such end had the first years war be- at Rome with C. Lelius. Lelius was very gratween King Antiochus and the Romans. After cious in the Senate : and therefore being the vain hopes of the Atolians were glad to of the more honourable employment, offerexcuse themselves by fear; thinking them- ed to refer to the arbitrement of the Senate, felves happy when by Embassadours they if L. Cornelius would be so pleased, the dishad obtained pardon. On the contrary position of their Provinces; without putting unto the Romans, did now fend to gratulate talked with his brother Fublius, approved this their victory: and in recompence of his well of the motion. Such a question had not good affection, had reflored unto him De- of long time been put unto the Fathers : who metrius his younger Son; whom some few therefore were the more desirous to make years they had kept as an hostage. Also an unblameable Decree. But the matter be-King Ptolowy of Egypt, gratulating the Roman Victory, fent word how greatly all Afa the African faid openly thus much, That if and Syria were thereby terrified. In which the Senate would appoint his brother to the regard he defired the Senate not to foreflow war against Antiochus, He himself would time; but to fend an Army, as foon as might follow his brother in that war, as his Lieutebe, into Asia: promising, that his assistance, nant. These words were heard with such wherein soever it pleased them to use it, approbation, that the Controversie was should not be wanting. This Ptolomy was the forthwith at an end. For if Antiochus relyed holders of the contention, that the Romans that had been victorious against that same were like to have the upper hand. The fame great Worthy? But indeed a worfer man did Antiochus now begin to suspect, who had might have served well enough the turn. For thought himself a while as safe at Ephesus, as Hannibal had no absolute command, nor if he had been in another world: but was scarce any trust of great importance: excepttold by Hannibal, That it was not fo far out ing now and then in consultation; where his of Greece into Affa, as out of Italy into wifdom was much approved, but his liberty thy of remembrance, as a fign of the freedom | that they should faithfully, and with true that he used in his censures, even whilest he lived in such a Court. Antiochus mustered many messages passing to and fro: though his Army in presence of this famous Captain: Publius continued to put them in good hopes thinking, as may feem, to have made him yet the Conful made ftill the fame answer. with that he had been ferved by fuch brave with which they had been chafed from Rome. men in Italy For they were gallantly decked, The Conclusion was, That they should sue both Men, Horfes, and Elephants, with fuch for a longer time of respite from war: wherecostly furniture of gold, silver, and purple, as glittered with a terrible bravery on a Sunfhine day. Whereupon the King, well pleafing himself with that goodly spectacle, asked they obtained half a years truce: after Hannibal what he thought; and whether all which, the winter was like to afford them this were not enough for the Romans. Enough (faid Hannibal) were the Romans the Hereof were they not more glad, than was most coverous men in all the world : meaning that all this cost upon the backs of cowardly Aliatiques, was no better than a spoil to animate good Souldiers. How little this answer pleased the King, it is case to guess. The little use that he made of this Carthaginian. testifies that his dislike of the man, caused intending thence to take their way by Land,

1074

flood in greatest necessity thereof. Rome as foon as they could. They carried King Philip: who might either do them with them, befides other Souldiers newly some mischief by the way, if he were dispoprest to the war, about five thousand Volun- sed to watch a notable advantage: or at the tefies, that had ferved under P. Africanus, least, would be be unfaithful; though he were There was also a Fleet of thirty Quinquereme not so couragious, yet might he take such Gallies, and twenty Triremes newly built, ap- order with the Thracians, that even for pointed unto L. Emilius Regillus, that was want of victuals, if by no greater inconvenichosen Admiral the same year for that voy- ence, they should be disgracefully forced to age. At their coming into Greece, they found return. He had promifed them the utmost the old Consul Glabrio belieging Amplyssa of his furtherance: wherein, whether he City of the Etolians. The Atolians after meant fincerely, they thought to make some that they were denyed peace, had expected tryal; by caufing a Gentleman to ride Post him once again at Naupastus. Wherefore unto him, and observe his doings as he should they not only fortified that Town, but kept take him on the fudden. The King was merall the passages thereto leading; which heed- | ry at a feast, and drinking when the Messen-Iefly, as in a time of confusion, they had ger came: whom he lovingly bade welleft unregarded the last year. Glabrio know- come ; and shewed him the next day, not ing this, deceived their expectation, and fell only what provision of victuals he had made upon Lamia: which being not long fince for the Army, but how he had made bridges much weakened by Philip, and now by him over the Rivers, and mended the bad wayes attempted on the sudden; was carried at by which they were to pals. With these the second assault. Thence went he to Am- good news Gracehus returned back in haste phyla: which he had almost gotten, when unto the Scipio's: who entring into Mace-L. scipio, his successor, came with thirteen don, found all things in a readiness, that thousand Foot, and five hundred Horse, and might help to advance their journey. The took charge of the Army. The Town of Am- King entertained them royally, and brought phy Ta was presently for faken by the Inhabi- them on their way, even to the Hellesport: tants: but they had a Castle, or higher where they stayed a good while, until their Town, that was impregnable; whereinto they Navy was in readiness to transport them inall retired. The Athenian Embaffadors had to Afia. dealt with P. Scipio, in behalf of the Ætolians: entreating him to fland their friend, and this year; though, for the most part, little help them in obtaining some tolerable, con- of importance. Polyzenidas, the Admiral of dition of peace. He gave them gentle words, Antiochus, was a banished Rhodium true to and willed them to perswade the Ætolians, the King; and desirous of sevenge upon his meaning delire it. This was gladly taken. Bur by at more leifure they might attend fome better disposition of the Senate 3 or any helpful commodity which time should afford. So another half years leifure of breathing, P. Scipio: who thought all time loft, which with-held the War from passing over into

The business of Ætolia being thus laid aside, and the old Consul Glabrio sent home into Italy, the Scipio's marched into Theffaly; him to lose the use of his fervice, when he through Macedon and Thrace unto the Hellefpont. Yet they considered, that hereby they The Scipio's made all hafte away from must commit themselves unto the loyalty of hearing that the Rhodian Fleet was at Samos, nothing: for that one while they were hinthe Romans and Eumenes having not as yet dred by storms at Sea; and another while put to Sea, thought to do somewhat upon by strong resistance made against them at those that were so early in their diligence, Land. before their fellows should arrive to help them. Yet went he craftily to work, and forfake them; and return home to the defent word, as in great fecrecy, to the Rhodian fence of his own Kingdom. For Antiochus Admiral, That if the fentence of his banish- wasted all the grounds about Elea and Perment might be repealed, He would, in re- gamus: and leaving his son Selencus to bequital thereof, betray all the Kings Fleet. fiege the royal City of Pergamus, did with ceive a watch-word from Polyxenidas that with him no better men to defend the City, he himself was taken by Polyxenidas in his than were they that lay against it. Whereown Haven. The Kings Fleet fetting forth fore he had reason to stand in fear; being too Fleet.

Much was done at Sea in the beginning of

Countrymen, that had expelled him. He, of doing good. Yet performed they little or

Eumenes with his Fleet was compelled to After many passages to and fro, this was the rest of his Army spoil the whole Counbelieved; and the Rhodian Admiral grew so try thereabout. Assaults the brother of careles, expecting still when he should re- King Eumenes, was then in Pergamus; having from Ephefus by night; and, for fear of be- much inferior in number. There came to his ing discovered, resting one day in harbour aid a thousand foot, and an hundred horse of by the way, came the second night to Samos: the Acheans: old souldiers all, and trained up where, by morning it was ready to enter under Philopamen, whose Scholar, in the art the Haven. Pausstratus the Rhodian Admi- of war, Diophanes their commander was. This ral feeing this, thought it his best way of re- Diophanes beholding from the walls of Perfistance to bestow his men on the two head- gamus, which was an high town, the demealands or points of the Haven; fo to guard nour of the enemy; began to disdain that the mouth of it: for that he faw no likeli- fuch men as they should hold them besieged. hood of defending himself by Sea. But Polyx- For Selencus his army which was encamped enidas had already landed fome Companies at the hill-foot, feeing that none durft fally in another part of the Island: which falling forth upon them, grew fo careles: as otherupon the back of Paufftratus, compelled him wife than by fpoiling all behind their backs, to alter his directions, and command his they seemed to forget that they were in an men aboord. This could not be without enemies country. Diophanes therefore spake great confusion: so as the enemies took him with Attalus: and told him that he would go out of all order, and funk or boorded all his forth to visit them. Attalus had no liking to Navy, five excepted, that by a sudden de-this adventure; for he said, that the match vice made shift to escape. Each of them hung was nothing equal. But the Achean would out a burning Crescent upon two poles, at needs have his will & cissuing forth, encamped the Beak-head; and then rowed forwards not far from the enemy. They of Pergamus directly upon the enemy: who having not thought him little better then mad. As for bethought himself what shift to make against the besiegers; they wondred at first what his fuch unexpected danger of firing, was con- meaning was but when they faw that he held tent to give way unto these desperate Gal- himselfquiet, they made a jest of his boldness; lies for fear lest they should burn, together and laughed to see with what an handful of with themselves, a part of the Kings men he looked so floutly. So they returned unto their former negligence and disorders. Not long after this, the Romans had some Which Diophanes perceiving, He commanded loss by tempest: whereof Folyxenidas could all his men to follow him, even as fast as they not take fuch advantage as he had hoped; well might and he himfelf, with the hundred because, putting to Sea for that purpose, horse, brake out on the sudden upon the stati-he was driven back again by the like foul on that was next at hand. Very few of the weather. But the Rhodians, to shew that enemies had their horses ready sadled, but they were not discouraged, set forth twenty more few, or none had the hearts to make other Gallies: the Romans also with King resistance: so as he drave them all out of their Eumenes, repaired their fleet; and all of them | Camp; & chased them as far as he might safetogether, in great bravery presented battel ly adventure, with great slaughter of them, to Polyxenidas before the Haven of Ephefus. and no loss to his own. Hereat all the Citizens When he durst not accept it: they went of Pergamus (who had covered the walls of from place to place, attempting many things, as either they were entreated by the Rhodi-fpectacle) were very joyful; and highly ans, or perswaded by some appearing hopes magnified the vertue of these Acheans. Yet.

CHAP.V

gates, to help the Acheans in doing what re- ken out of his hands by Apollonius his flight. mained to be done. The next day selencus yet made fuch a retreat, that the Rhodianz encamped half a mile further from the durft not far adventure upon him. Now of Town, than he had done before: and against these Actions which were but as Prefaces unhim went forth Diophanes the second time; to the war, the last and greatest was a viwho quictly refled a while in his old Stati- Crory of the Romans by Sea, against Polyxenion. When they had frayed many hours, das the Kings Admiral. The battel was looking who flould begin: Sileneus in fought by Myonnesses a Promontory in Asia; fair order as he came, withdrew himself to where Polyxenidas had with him fourfcore ward his lodging that was further off. Dio- and nine Gallies; and five of them greater phanes moved not whileft the enemy was in than any of the Romans. This being all the fight: but as foon as the ground between strength which he could make by Sea: we them hindred the prospect, he followed them may note the vanity of those brags, wherein all hasie, and foon overtaking them with with Antiochus vaunted the last year, That his Horse, charged them in the Rere; so as his Armada should cover all the shores of he brake them, and with all his forces pursu | Greece. The Ramans had eight and fifty ed them at the beels, to their very Trenches. Gallies; the Rhodians two and twenty; the This belonels of the delams and the bale- Roman being the ftronger built, and more nefect his own men, cauted selecture to quir frontly manned; the Rhodians more lightthe fiege, little to his honour. Such being timbred and thin planckt, having all advanthe quaity of these Assatigues, Thilogamen tage of speed, and good Sea-men. Neither had cause to tell the Romans, That he envi- forgot they to help themselves by the same ed their victory. For when Antiochus lay device, with which five of their Callies had ans, and not as he then was, a private man.

great deal of travel, brought almost nothing mans and their fellows lost only two or to pass. He had been at Pergamus: into three ships: but got hereby the absolute Mawhich Eumenes, leaving the Romans, did ftery of the Sca. put himself with a few of his Horse and The report of this misadventure, may seem light armature. Before Pergamms he left his to have taken from Antiochus all use of reafon, as before hath been thewed, and went fon. For as if no hope had been remaining to Elea: whither he heard that Anglius the to defend those places that he held in Europe, Roman Admiral was come to bring succour he presently with-drew his Garrisons from to Eumenes. There he made an Overture of Lylimachia: which might eafily have been peace : about which to confulr, Eumenes was kept even till the end of Winter following,& Lent for by Emplim, and came from Pergamms. having reduced the befregers (if the fiege But when it was confidered, that no conhad been continued oblinately untoterms clusion could be made without the Conful: of great extremity, He also gave over the this Treaty brake off. Then followed the fiege of Colophon: and laying afide all thought overthrow newly mentioned, which cauled fave only of defence, drew together Selencus to give over the fiege of Perga- all his Army; and fent for help to his mus. Afterwards four or five Towns of Icarce, Father in-law, King Ariarabes the Cappaany worth or note were taken by the King : docian. and the Syrian Fleet, being of fevenand Thus the Roman Conful, without imperations that thirty Sail , was beaten by the Khodran diment, not only came to the Hellefort, but which was of like number. But of this vi- had yielded unto him all places there, bethery the Rhodians had no great cause to re- longing to Antiochus on Europe side. The Fleet joyce: for that Hanmbal the Carthaginian, was also then in a readiness to transport him who, tegether with Apollonius a Courtier of over into Afia: where Eumener had taken Antiockin, was Admiral of the Sprians, did such care before, that he landed quietly at them in a manner as great hurt as they could his own good eale; even as if the Country would they not therefore iffue forth of their do to Apollonius; and having the victory tafeatling at Chalcis after his marriage, and his lately escaped from Samos. For with fire in fouldiers betook themselves to Riot, as it had their Prows they ran upon the enemy: who been in a time of great fecurity: a good man declining them for fear, laid open his fide: of war might have cut all their throats, even and was thereby in greater danger of being as they were tipling in their victualling hou- ftemmed. After no long fight, the Kings fes; which Fbilopemen faid that he would Navy hoysted fail: and, having a fair have done, had he been General of the Ache- wind, bore away toward Ephelis as falt as they could. Yet forty of their Gallies they Antiochus was full of bufiness; and turn-left behind them; whereof thirteen were ing his care from one thing to another with a laken, all the rest burnt or sunk. The Ro-

that came to fue for peace. This Embasla- peace. dor declared in his Masters name, That the fame things which had hindered him from his advice. For feeing that the Conful deobtaining peace of the Romans heretofore, manded of him no less, than if he had been did now perswade him, that he should easi- already subdued: little reason there was ly come to good agreement with them. For that he should fear to come to battel; wherein all disputations heretofore, Smyrna, Lamp- in he could lose, as he thought, no more, facus, and Lyfimachia, had been the places than by feeking to avoid it he must give way. about which they varied. Seeing therefore He had with him threefcore and ten thouthe King had now already given over Lyfi- land Foot, and twelve thouland Horle; bemachia, and was further purposed, not to sides two and fifty Indian Elephants; and strive with the Romans about Lampfacus and many Chariots armed with hooks or sythes, Smyrna: what reason was there, why they according to the manner of the Eastern should need to trouble him with war? If it Countrys. Yet was he nothing pleased, to was their defire, that any other Towns up- hear that the Conful drew near him apace, on the Coast of Asia, not mentioned by them as one hastening to fight. But howsoever he in any former Treaties, should be also set was affected: He made so little shew of fear, at liberty, or otherwise delivered into their that hearing P. Scipio to lie sick at Elea, He hands: the King would not refuse to gra- fent thither unto him his son without rantifie them therein. Briefly, let them take some both desirous to comfort this fome part of Asia: so as the bounds dividing noble Warrior in his sickness, and withall them from the King, might not be uncer- not defirous to retain the yong Gentleman tain, and it should be quietly put into their for a pledge of his own safety. Thus hands. If all this were not enough, the ought his bounty to be constant. Otherwise King would likewife bear half the charges, it might be suspected, That herein he dealt whereat they had been in this War. So craftily. For fince he could have none other praying the Romans to hold themselves con- ransome of Scipio, than such as an honouratented with these good offers, and not to be ble man, that had no great store of wealth, too insolent upon confidence of their for- might pay: better it was to do such a courtune, he expected their answer. These offers teste before the battel, as would afterwards which to the Embassador seemed so great, have been little worth; than to stay until were judged by the Romans to be very little. the Romans, perhaps victorious, should exact For they thought it reasonable, that the it at his hands. P. Scipio was greatly com-King should bear all the charges of the war, forted with the recovery of his son; so as fince it began through his own fault: and the joy thereof was thought, to have been that He should not only depart out of those much available unto his health. In recomfew Towns, which he held in Lolis and Io- pence of the Kings humanity, He faid only nia; but quite out of Asia the less, and keep thus much unto those that brought him this himself on the other side of Mount Taurus, acceptable Present, I am now able to make When the Embafiador therefore faw, that your King none other amends, than by advising no better bargain could be made, He dealt him not to fight until he shall hear that I with P. scipio in private: and to him he pro- am in the Camp. What he meant by this, miled a great quantity of gold, together it is hard to conjecture. Antiochus resolwith the free restitution of his son, who ved to follow his counsel: and therefore (it is uncertain by what mischance) was ta- withdrew himself from about Thyatira, beken prisoner, and most honourably entertai- youd the River of Thrygius or Hyllus, unto had been his already. The first news that he King in my name, that I would advise him to heard of the enemy was by an Embassador refuse no Condition whereby he may have

The King was not any whit moved with ned by the King. Scipio would not hearken Magnesia by Sypilus: where encamping, he to the offer of gold: nor otherwife to the fortified himself as ftrongly as he could. restitution of his son, than upon Condition, Thither followed him L. Scipio the Con-That it might be with making fuch amends ful, and fate down within four miles of for the benefit, as became a private man. As him. About a thousand of the Kings Horse, for the publick business: He only said thus most of them Gallo Greeks, came to bid much, That fince Antiochus had already for- the Romans welcome: of whom at first faken Lysimachia, and suffered the war to they slew some; and were anon, with take hold on his own Kingdom; there was some loss, driven back over the River. now none other way for him, than either Two dayes were quietly fpent, whileft neito fight, or yield to that which was required ther the King nor the Romans would pass the at his hands. Wherefore, said he, tell your water. The third day the Romans made Hununu 2 sturbance; nor were at all opposed, until ed in a manner needles. Two thousand they came within two miles and a half of Voluntaries, Macedonians and Thracians Antiochus his Camp. There as they were were left to guard the Camp. The Conful taking up their lodging, they were charged had with him fixteen African Elephants. by three thousand Horse and Foot: whom which he bestowed in his Rere: forasmuch the ordinary Corps de guarde repelled. Four as had they come to fight with those of Andayes together after this, each of them tiochus, they only would have served to difbrought forth their Armies; and set them in courage his men; as being sure to be beaorder before the Trenches, without advanten: the Indian being far the greater. cing any further. The fift day the Romans and more couragious beafts: whereof came half way forward, and prefented bat- Antiochus had likewise much advantage in tel 5 which the King would not accept. number. Thereupon the Conful took advice what was to be done. For either they mult fight up-on whatfoever difadvantage, or elfe refolve to abide by it all Winter, far from any ordered according to the feveral kinds, in Country of their friends, and therefore sub- such wise as each might be of most use. The ject unto many difficulties: unless they main strength of his Foot consisted in fixteen would frain their honour by returning far thousand, armed all Macedonian-like, and back, to Winter in a more convenient called Phalangiers. These he placed in the place; and so defer the war until the next midst, and divided into ten Battalions: eve-Spring. The Roman Souldier was through- ry one having two and thirty in File, and ly perswaded of that Enemies base temper. Issey in Front. Between every Battalion Wherefore it was the general Cry, That were two Elephants, goodly beafts, and this great Army should be assailed, even in such as being adorned with Frontals, high the Camp where it lay: as if rather there Crests, Towers on their backs, and bewere fo many beafts to be flaughtered, than fides him that governed the Elephant, four men to be fought with. Yet a day or two men in every Tower, made a gallant and passed, in discovering the fortifications of terrible shew. On the right hand of these Antiochus, and the safest way to set upon were sifteen hundred horse of the Gallohim. All this while P. Scipio came not. Greeks: then, three thousand Barbd Horse: Wherefore the King, being loth to dif and a Regiment of almost a thousand Horse, hearten his men, by feeming to stand in called the Agema, that were all Medians, the fear of the Enemy, refolved to put the choice of the Country, and accompanied matter to trial. So when the Romans took by fome others. All which Troops of Horle, the field again, and ordered their Battels: divided in their feveral kinds, do feem to He also did the like; and advanced so far, have followed one another in depth, ra-ons, two Roman and two Latine: in each further to the right hand, was the Kings of which were five thousand and four hun own Regiment; called the Argyraspides, or dred men. The Latines, as usually, were in the | Silvershields, by a name borrowed from their points; the Roman, in the mean battel. All furniture, but nothing like so valiant as of them, according to their wonted form, those of the same name, that had served unwere divided into Maniples. The Haftati der Great Alexander : then, twelve hunhad the leading: after them followed the dred Archers on Horseback, three thouland Principes, at fuch diftance as was usual ; and light-armed Foot, two thousand & five hunlast of all, the Triarii. Now beside these, there dred Archers of Mysia; with four thousand were about three thousand Auxiliaries, slingers and Archers of the Cirtuani, and partly Acheans, and partly such as belonged Elymeans. On the left hand of the Phalangito Eumenes: which were placed in an equal ers, were placed the like numbers of Gallo-Front beyond the Latines in the right wing. Greeks, and Barbd Horle: as allo two thou-Ultmost of all (savesome five hundred Creif- and Horse that were sent from Arianabes, bank of the River: yet four troops of Horfe Lydians. In Front of all these Horse were the adventure: wherein they found no di-[were placed there, though fuch help feem-

The Kings Army being compounded of that they might understand his meaning to ther than to have been stretched out in Front. Adjoyning unto these, were sixteen The Roman Army confifted of four Legi- | Elephants together in one flock. A little ans, and of the Trallians) were almost three with two thousand and seven hundred of thousand Horse : of which, Eumenes had divers Nations: and a Regiment of a thousand brought thither eight hundred, the reft be Horse more lightly armed, that were called ing Roman. The left wing was fenced by the The Kings Troop; being Syrians, Phygians, and the Chariots armed with hooks or fythes, cultody of Sardes, and the Castle there, to and the Dromedaries, whereon fate Arabians one whom he thought faithful. But the with long Rapiers, that would ferve to reach | Towns-men and Souldiers were fo difmayed from those high Camels. Beyond these were, with the greatness of the Overthrow; that as in the right wing, a rabble of many Na- one mans faith was worth nothing. All the tions, Carians, Cicilians, Pamphylians, Pist- Towns in those parts, Without expecting dians, Cyrteans, Elymeans, and many others, fummons, yeelded up themselves by Embaihaving also with them fixteen Elephants. fadours: whom they sent to the Romans. Antiochus himself commanded in the right whilest they were on the way. Neither were wing: Scleucus in the left: and three of his many daies spent, ere Antiochus his Embassaprincipal Captains commanded over the dour was in the Camp: having none other Phalangiers.

ries, and armed Chariots: of which the ster. P. Scipio was now come to his brother, one, being like to terrifie the Horfe; the who obtained leave to make the answer, other, to break the Squadrons of the Foot; because it should be gentle. They requi-Eumenes with a few light-armed Cretians, red no more than they had lately done: Archers, Darters, and Slingers, eafily made which was, that he should quite abandon frustrate the danger threatned by them both. his Dominions on this side Taurus. For For with shoutings, and noises, and some their charges in that War, they required wounds, they were driven out of the field; fifteen thousand Talents: five hundred in and running back upon their own men, did hand; two thousand and five hundred, when the same harm which they had intended to the Senate and people of Rome should have the Enemies. Wherefore the Roman Horse | confirmed the peace; and the other twelve following this advantage, charged upon the thousand, in twelve years next ensuing, by left wing: whereas they found no refi- even portions. Likewise they demanded stance; some being out of order; others be- four hundred Talents for Eumenes; and some ing without courage. It is shameful to re- store of Corn, that was due to him upon a hearfe, and so strange, that it may hardly reckoning. Now besides twenty hostages feem credible: that the Phalangiers, with which they required, very earnest they were fuch variety of Auxiliaries, made little or to have Hannibal the Carthaginian, and no refistance; but all of them fled, in a Thoas the Ætolian, with some others who manner, as foon as they were charged. Only had stirred up the King to this war, delithe King, Antiochus himself, being in the vered into their hands. But any wife man left wing of his own battel: and feeing the might so easily have perceived, thas it would Latines, that ftood opposite unto him, weak- be their purpose to make this one of their ly flanked with Horse: gave upon them principal demands; as no great art was needcouragiously, and forced them to retire, ful to beguile their malice. The Kings Em-But M. Amilius, that had the Guard of the baffadour had full commission, to refuse no-Roman Camp, iffued forth with all his power thing that should be enjoyeed. Wherefore to help his fellows: and, what by perswa- there was no more to do, than to send immefion, what by threats, made them renew diately to Rome for the ratification of the the fight. Succour also came from the right Peace. wing, where the Romans were already victorious: whereof when Antiochus discover- mean while at Rome, M.Fulvius, and Cn. Maned the approach; He not only turned his lins Volfo. The Atolians defired peace, but Horse about, but ran away upon the spur could not obtain it: because they would acwithout further tarriance. The Camp was cept neither of the two Conditions to them defended a little while: and with no great before propounded. So it was decreed, That valour; though by a great multitude that one of the Confuls should make war upon were fled into it. Antiochus is faid to have the Ætolions; the other, upon Antiochus in lost in this battel fifty thousand Foot, and Asia. Now, though shortly there came news four thousand Horse; besides those that that Antiochus was already vanquished in were taken. Of the Romans, there were not battel, and had submitted himself unto all flain above three hundred Foot, and four that could be required at his hands: yet fince and twenty Horse: of Eumenes his followers the State of Asia was not like to be so five and twenty.

leucus was gone thither before. He left the by lot, had not his Province changed.

errand, than to know what it would please The first onset was given by the Dromeda- the Romans to impose upon the King his Ma-

There were new Confuls chofen in the throughly fettled by one Victory, but that Antiochus fled to Sardes, and from thence many things might fall out worthy of the to Apamea, the same night; hearing that Se- Romans care; Cn. Manlins, to whom Asia fell

Soon after this, came the Embassadours of King Antiochus to Rome, accompanied with the Rhodians, and some others : yea, by King Eumenes in person; whose presence added a goodly lustre to the business in hand. Concerning the peace to be made with King Antiochus, there was no disputation: it was generally approved. All the trouble was about the distribution of the purchase. King Eumenes reckoned up his own deferts, and comparing himself with Masanissa hoped that the Romans would be more bountiful to him, than they had been to the Numidian, fince they had found him a King indeed, whereas Masanissa was only such in title; and since, both he and his Father had alwayes been their friends, even in the worst of the Roman fortune. Yet was there much adoe to make him tell what he would have: He still referring himself to their courtesse; and they defiring him to speak plain. At length he craved that they would bestow upon him, as ved that they would be now upon him, as much of the Country by them taken from this long Interim of Truce, that haughty little Antiochus, as they had no purpose to keep in Nation had not sought to humble it self to their own hands. Neither thought he it the Roman Majelly, it was now to be brought needful, that they frould trouble themselves unto more lowly terms than any other of the with the care of giving liberty to many of Greeks. The best was, that so great a storm the Greek Towns, that were on Afia fide. For fell not unexpected upon the Assolians, fince the most of those Towns had been partakers with the King in his War; it was no Embaffadours were utterly denyed peace at reason that they should be gainers by his Rome: and they had provided the last reoverthrow. The Rhodians did not like of medy; which was, to entreat the Rhodians this. They degred the Senate to be truly Pa- and Athenians to become interceffours for trons of the Greeian liberty; and to call to them. Neither were they so dejected with mind, that no small part of Greece it self had any terrible apprehensions, that they could beensubject unto Philip, and served him in not well devise, even upon helping themhis War: which was not alledged against cleves by repurchase of Countries lost, where them as a cause why they should not be made they spyed advantage. free, after that Philip was overcome. But the main point whereon they infifted, was this, That the Victory of the Romans against King Antiochus, was fo great, as eafily might fatiffie the defires of all their friends. The Senate them bore a natural affection to their own was glad to hear of this; and very bounti. Prince) having been long accustomed to fully gave away fo much, that every one had lerve a Mountain Lord, that converfed with cause to be well pleased.

turning home, had granted unto him the ho- his Garrisons. They sent therefore some nour of a Triumph: the pomp whereof ex- few of them to their King, and offered their ceeded in riches, not only that of Titus Quin- fervice towards his restitution. At the first tus Flaminius, but of any ten that Rome had there were only four of them; neither grew beheld until that day. Now forafmuch as they, at length, to more than two and fifty, the furname of The African had been given which undertook the work. Yet, affurance unto P. Scipio, it was thought convenient by that all the reft would follow, made Aminanfome to reward L. Scipio with the title of der willing to try his fortune. He was at The Affatique: which the fortune of his Vi- the borders with a thousand Etolians, upon ctory had no less deserved; though the verthe day appointed: at what time his two tue, requifite to the purchase thereof, was no and fifty adventurers, having divided themway correspondent.

ø. IX.

The Etolians, and the Gallo-Greeks, vanquished by the Roman Confuls Fulvius and Manlius. Manlius bardly obtains a Triumph : being charged (among other objections) with attempting to have paffed the bounds appointed as fatal to the Romans by Sibyl. Of Sibyls Prophecies; the Books of Hermes; and that Inscription, Simoni Deo Sancto. The ingratitude of Rome to the two Scipio's: and that beginning and fattion among the Roman Nobility.

Arc. Fulvius and Cn. Manlius had the fame charge divided between them. which L. Cornelius Scipio, now Stiled Aliatieus, had lately undergone. It was found more than one mans work, to look at once to Greece and to Asia. And for this reason was it apparent, that L. Scipio had granted fo long a Truce to the Ætolians. But fince, in They had foreseen the danger, when their Poor King Aminander lived in exile among them, whilst Philip of Macedon kept, for him, possession of his Land and Castles. But the Athamanians (besides that many of them after an homely manner; could not Such end had the war against King Antio- endure the proud and infolent manner of chus: after which, L. Cornelius Scipio, re- command, used by the Captains of Philip selves into four parts, occupied, by the rea-chief Towns in the Country, to his use. The der sent his excuses to Rome, praying the Sefame of this good fuccels at the first; nate not to take it in despight, that he had with divers Letters running from place to recovered his own from Philip with such help place, whereby men were exhorted to do as he could get. Neither feems it that the their best in helping forward the Action, Romans were much offended to hear of Phimade the Lieutenants of Philip unable to lip his losses: for of this fault they neither thiak upon refiftance. One of them held were sharp correctors, nor earnest reprothe Town of Theium a few dayes; giving vers. Fulums went in hand with the buthereby some leisure unto his King to pro- siness about which he came, and layed siege vide for the rescue. But when he had done his to Ambracia, a goodly Cicy, that had been best, he was forced thence, and could only the chief feat of Pyrrhus his Kingdom. With tell Philip, whom he met on the way, that all this he began, for that it was of too great was loft. Philip had brought from home fix importance to be abandoned by the Ætothousand men; of whom, when the greater lians: yet could not by them be relieved. part could not hold out, in fuch a running unless they would adventure to fight upon march, he left all fave two thousand behind equal ground. To help the Ambracians, it him, and so came to Athenaum, a little Atha- was not in the Ætolians power: for they manian Castle, that still was his, as being on were, at the same time, vexed by the Illyrians the frontier of Macedon. Thence he fent at Sea, and ready to be driven from their Zeno, who had kept Theium a while, to take new Conquest, by Perseus the Son of Philip, a place lying over Argithea, that was chief who invaded the Countries of the Amphiloof the Country. Zeno did as he was appoint- chians and Dolopians. They were unable to ed:yet neither he, nor the King had the bold- deal with fo many at once; and therefore as nels to descend upon Argithea; for that they earnestly sought peace with the Romans, as might perceive the Athamanians, all along they floutly made head against the rest. In the hill fides, ready to come down upon the mean while the Athenian and Rhodian them, when they should be busie. Wherefore Embassadors came, who belought the Connothing was thought more honourable than ful to grant them peace. It helped well that a safe retrait: especially when Aminander Ambracia made strong resistance, and would came in fight with his thousand Atolians. not be terrified by any violence of the Af-The Macedonians were called back from failants, or danger that might feem to wards Argithea, and prefently withdrawn threaten. The Conful had no defire to fpend by their King towards his own borders. But half his time about one City, and so be driven they were not suffered to depart inquiet at to leave unto his successour the honour of their pleasure. The Athamanians and Etolians finishing the War. Wherefore he gladly way-laid them, and purfued them so closely, hearkened unto the Atolians, and bade that their retrait was in manner of a plain them seek peace with faithful intent, withflight, with great loss of men and arms, out thinking it over-dear, at a reasonable few of those escaping, that were left be- price; considering with how great a part of hind, as to make a countenance of holding his Kingdom their friend Antiochus had of Athamania so easie, made an attempt in try what good his perswasions might do with their own behalf, upon the Amphilochians the Citizens. So after many demands and and Aperantians. These had belonged unto excuses, the conclusion was such as was their Nation, and were lately taken by Phi- grievous to the weaker, but not unfufferlip; from whom they diligently revolted, able. The same Embassadours of the Atheand became Ætolians again. The Dolopians mians and Rhodians, accompanied those of lay next; that had been ever belonging to the Atolians to Rome, for procuring the the Macedonian, and so did still purpose to confirmation of Peace. Their eloquence continue. These took Arms at first: but soon and credit was the more needful in this inlaid them away; feeing their neighbours terceffion, for that Philip had made a very ready to fight with them in the Etolian grievous complaint about the loss of those quarrel, and feeing their own King so hastily Countries, which they had lately taken from gone, as if he meant not to return.

for that news came of Antiochus his last over- which those good Mediatours of Rhodes and throw, and of M. Fulvius the new Conful his Athens did earneftly folicite. The Etolians dy affiltance of the multitude, four of the halting with an Army into Greece. Aminansomewhat in the Country, until Philip his made the same purchase. He also gave leave to Aminander, offering his service as a Me-The Ætolians having found the business diatour, to put himself into Ambracia, and him. Hereof the Senate could not but take Of these Victories the joy was the less; notice; though it did not hinder the peace, people of Rome, and to observe divers Olympus and Margana. Articles, which made them the less free, and were exceeding hard of ascent, though none more obnoxious to the Romans, than any should undertake the custody. Being people of Greece; they having been the first therefore well manned and victualled for that called these their Masters into the along time; as also the natural strength Country. The Isle of Cephalenia was taken being helpt by such fortification as profrom them by the Romans: who kept it for miled greatest assurance: it was thought, themselves (as not long fince they had gotten that the Consul would either forbear the at-Zacynthus from the Acheans, by stiffly preftempt of forcing them, or easily be repelled; fing their own right) that so they might and that finally, when he had stayed there have possession along the Coast of Greece, a while, winter, and much want, should whileft they feemed to forbear the Country. force him to diflodge. Yet all this availed But concerning those places, whereto Phi- not, For, whereas the Gallo-Greeks had lip, or others might lay claim, there was fet been careles of furnithing themselves with down an order fo perplexed, as would ne-ceffarily require to have the Romans Judges forved well enough for that purpole: the of their Controversies, when they should Romans, who came far otherwise appointed, arife. And hereof good use will be shortly found greater advantage in the difference of made: when want of employment elfe- Arms, than impediment in difadvantage of where, finall cause a more Lordly Inquisition ground. Archers and Slingers did easily to be held, upon the affairs of Macedon and prevail against casters of stones; especially fame time War in Afia, with the Gallo Greeks having prepared their stones before hand, and others. His Army was the same that but earthing up what lay next, the too great, had followed L. Scipio; of whose victory, his acts were the consummation. He visited fize. Finally the Barbarians, wanting dethose Countries on the hither fide of Tanrus, fensive Arms, could not hold out against the that had scarce heard of the Romans; to Arrows and weapons of the Roman light arwhom they were abandoned by Antiochus, mature: but were driven from a piece of Among thefethere were some petty Lords ground, which they had undertaken to or Tyrants, some free Cities, and some that make good, up into their Camp on the top were together at wars, without regard of of the Mountain; and being forced out of the great alteration that happened in Afia their Camp, had none other way left, than From every of these he got somewhat; and to cast themselves headlong down the steep by their quarrels found occasion to visit Rocks. Few of the men escaped alive: those Provinces, into which he should else all their wives, children, and goods, behave wanted an errand. He was even loaden came a prey unto the Romans. In the very with booty, when, having fetcht a compass like manner were the rest of that Nation about Asia, he came at length upon the overcome soon after, at the other Mounover the Country: though, of late times, it by flight, as having fairer way at their was rather the fame and terrour of their backs. fore-passed acts, than any present vertue of theirs, which held them up in reputation lius were appointed by the Senate, each Of the Romans they had lately such trial, of them to retain as Proconsul, his Province when they served under King Antiachus, as for another year. Fulvius, in his second made them to acknowledge themselves far year, did little or nothing, Manlim gave the worse men. Wherefore they thought it peace to those whom he had vanquished; as no small part of their safety, that they dwelt likewise to Ariarathes the Cappadocian, and upon the River Halfs, in an In-land Country, where those enemies were not very mitting themselves for fear of the Roman like to fearch them out. But when fuch Arms. He drew from them all, what prohopes failed; and when some Princes of sit he could; and laid upon themsuch contheir own Nation, that had been friends of ditions, as he thought expedient. He also did Eumenes, exhorted the rest to yeeld: then finish the league of peace with Antiochus; was no counsel thought so good, as to forfake their houses and Country, and, with all oath by Embassadours, whom he sent for that that they could carry or drive, to betake purpole. Finally, having fet in order the were bound to uphold the Majesty of the themselves unto the high Mountains of being such as were these Gallo-Greeks, nei-Cn. Manlins, the other Conful, had at the ther exercised in that manner of fight, nor Gallo-Greeks. These had long domineered tain: only more of them saved themselves matters of the series and the series are series are series and the series are series and the series are series are series and the series are series and the series are series are series and the series are series and the series are series and the series are series are series and the series are series and the series are series are series and the series are series are series and the series are series are series are series and the series are series are series are series are series are series are series and the series are se the Gallo-Greeks had in fo many years extor-neither indeed had Manlius, nor the ten Deted from the wealthy Provinces that lay legates affifting him; but the Senate of Rome, round about them. Neither did this Army by which those Delegates were chosen, and of Manlius return home, rich in money alone, inftructed how to proceed. When Philip or cattel, or things of needful use, which therefore saw these upstart Kings of Pergathe Roman Souldier had been wont to take mus, whom he accounted as base companions, as the only good purchase; but furnished advanced to highly, and made greater than with fumptuous houshold-fruff, and flaves himself: yea himself unregarded, contemof price, excellent Cooks, and Musicians for ned, and exposed to many wrongs: then banquets; and in a word, with the feeds found he great cause to wish, that he had not of that luxury, which finally over-grew and fo hastily declared himself against Antiochus, choaked the Roman vertue. The Country of Thrace lay between Hellefont and the Kingdom of Macedon, which been freed from his infolent Mafters. But way Manlius was to take his journy homeward. L. Scipio had found no impediment neß the Macedonian had, we shall very shortamong the Thracians: either for that he paf- ly be urged to discourse more at large. At fed through them, without any fuch booty as the prefent it was believed, that the Thracimight provoke them; or perhaps rather, ans were by him fet on, to affail the Romans because Philip of Macedon had taken order, passing through their Country. They knew that the Barbarians should not stir. But when all advantages, and they fell, unexpected, up-Manlius came along with a huge train of on the carriages that were bestowed in the baggage, the Thracians could not fo well midft of the Army; whereof part had alreacontain themselves. Neither was it thought, that Philip took it otherwise than very pleatantly, to have this Roman Atmy robbed, and family, to have this Roman Atmy robbed, and family to have the same at the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and the robbed and family to have the same at the robbed and the r moreover to restore unto him all the Greek their handle of Greece. Cities, that had been taken from him by the Romans. Such being the difference between them returned to the City, was granted the med sufficient, to breed in the Romans a due the Roman Captain or Army, that should matters of Asia, he took his way toward the respect of him. But Eumenes took a surer or rather that he had joyned with Antiochus and the Ætolians, by whom he might have what great argument of such discontentedwell beaten on the way. He had cause to be enough to leave behind: though both the angry, feeing how little himfelf was regar- getting and the faving, did coft many I ves, ded, and what great rewards were given to as well of the Barbarians, as of the Romans. Eumenes. For he underftood, and afterwards They fought until it grew night: and then gave the Romans to understand, that Eumethe Thracians withdrew themselves, not with nes could not have abidden in his own King- out as much of the booty, as was to their full dome, if the people of Rome had not made content. And of fuch trouble there was war in Afa: whereas contrariwife, Antio-more, though less dangerous, before the chus had offered unto himself three thou- Army could get out of Thrace into Macedon. fand talents, and fifty thips of war, to take Through the Kingdom they had a fair march part with him and the Ætolians, promiting into Epirus; and fo to Apollonia, which was To Manlius, and to Fulvius, when each of him and Eumenes, when the war began: he honour of Triumph. Yet not without conthought it no even dealing of the Romans, tradiction: especially to Manlins, whom some after their victory, to give away not only the of the ten Delegates, appointed to affift him, half of Asia, but Chersonesia, and Lysimachia did very bitterly tax, as an unworthy Comin Europe, to Eumenes, whereas upon him- mander. Touching the rest of their accusafelf they bestowed not any one Town. It tion; it sufficeth that he made good answer, agreed not indeed with his Nobility to go and was approved by the chief of the Senate. to Rome and begg Provinces in the Senate, One clause is worthy of more particular as Eumenes and the Rhodians had lately done. confideration. Reprehending his defire to He had entertained lovingly the two seipio's, whom he thought the most honourable they said, That with much ado he was kept men in Rome; and was grown into near from leading his arm, over Taurus, and adveracquaintance with Publius, holding corre-turing upon the calamity threatned by Sibyl's spondence with him by letters, whereby he verses, unto those that should pass the fatal made himfelf acquainted with the wars in bounds. What calamity or overthrow this Spain and Africk. This perhaps he dee- was, wherewith Sibyle prophecy threatned

These wars being ended: Fulvius and Man-

CHAP. V.

pass over Taurus, I do not conceive. Pompey have been quite omitted by Tacitus, by Suewas the first that marched with an Army be- tonius, by Dion, and by all which wrote of yond those limits: though the victories of those times? Philosophers and Poets would Lucullus had opened unto him the way, and not have suffered the matter to escape in had before hand won, in a fort, the Coun- filence, had it been true; neither can it tries on the other fide of the Mount; which be thought that Seneca, who then lived Lucullus gave to one of Antiochus his race, and flourished, would have abstained from though Pompey occupied them for the Ro- speaking any word of an argument so famans. Ent we find not, that either Lucullus or mous. Wherefore I am perswaded, that Pomper suffered any loss, in presuming to neg- this inscription, Simoni Deo Santo, was, by lect the bounds appointed by sibyl. Indeed some bad Criticisme, taken amiss in place the accomplishment of this Prophecy, fell of semoni Sango: a title four hundred years out near about one time, with the restitution older than the time of Simon Magus. For tion of Ptolomy King of Egypt, that was for the goods of one Vitruvius a Rebel, had bidden unto the Romans by the same sibyl. many ages before been consecrated semo-It may therefore seem to have had reference ni Sango, that is, To the Spirit or Demi-god unto the same things, that were denounced sangus, in whose Chappel they were beas like to happen upon the reduction of the stowed. So as either by the ill shape of Egyptian King. Whether the Oracles of the old Roman letters, or by some spoilthat Sibyl had in them any truth, and were not, time had wrought upon them; it might ea-Tolk depi- as Tully noteth, fowed at randome in the fily come to pass, that the words should be large field of Time, there to take root, and mif read, Simoni Sancto, and that some get credit by event; I will not here dispute. Christian who had heard of simon Magus, But I hold this more probable, than that the but not of Sangus, thereupon should frame restitution of Ptolomy to his Kingdom by Ga- the conjecture, which now passeth for a binius the Roman, should have any way be- true History. Such conjectures, being enter tokened the coming of our Saviour: as some tained without examination, find credit by both ancient and modern Christian Writers | Tradition, whereby also, many times, their have been well pleased to interpret Sibyl in fashion is amended, and made more Historithat prophecy. Of the sibylline predictions, cal, than was conceived by the Author. But I have sometimes thought reverently: though it cannot be safe, to let our faith (which not knowing what they were (as I think ought to frand firm upon a fure foundation) few men know) yet following the common lean over-hardly on a well painted, yet belief and good authority. But observati- rotten post. on of the shameful Idelatry, that upon all occasions was advanced in Rome by the line, it may be numbred among a few of the books of Sibyl, had well prevailed upon my richest, which ever the City beheld. Out of credulity, and made me suspect, though not that which he brought into the Treasury, 1/1.se Ca- the faith and pious meaning, yet the judge- was made the last payment of those moneys faub. Extr. ment of Eulebius: when that learned and which the Commonwealth had borrowed cia. 1. 4d excellent work of Master Casanbon upon the from private men, in the second Punick War. Annals of Cardinal Baronius, did altogether | So long wasit, that Rome had ftill some feelfree me from mine error; making it appa- ing of Hannibal: which being past, there rent, That not only those prophecies of si- was remaining neither care, nor memory, byl, wherein Christ so plainly was shewed, or any danger. This Triumph of Manline but even the books of Hermes, which have was deferred by him, even so long as he well born such reputation, were no better than could: for that he thought it not safe, to counterfeited pieces, and at first entertained make his entrance into the City, until the (who foever devised them) by the undiscreet heat of an Inquisition, then raging therein, zeal of luch, as delighted in feeing the Chri- should be allayed. The two scipio's were ftian Religion strengthened with forreign called one after another, into judgement, proofs. And in the same rank, I think, we by two Tribunes of the people; men, only ought to place that notable Hiftory, re- by this accusation, known to Posterity. P. Sciported by Eusebius from no mean Authors, pio the African, with whom they began, Of the honour which was done to Simon could not endure that fuch unworthy men English. East Magus in Rome; namely of an Altar to him should question him, of purloining from the erected, with an inscription, Simoni Deo Common Treasury, or of being hired with Sancto, that is, To Simon the holy god. For bribes by Antiochus, to make an ill bargain

Now concerning the Triumph of Cn. Manwhat can be more strange, than that a for his Country. When therefore his day thing so memorable, and so publick, should of answer came; he appeared before the Clients, with which he passed through the Tribunes. He was a man of great, but not to speak. Having audience, he told the lingular industry; frugal also, both of the people, That upon the same day of the year publick, and of his own; so as in this kind he had fought a great battel with Hannibal, he was even faulty: for though he would and finished the Punick War by a signal vi- not be corrupted with bribes, yet was he unctory. In memory whereof, he thought it merciful and unconfcionable, in feeking to no fit feason to brabble at the Law; but increase his own wealth, by such means as intended to visit the Capitol, and there give the Law did warrant. Ambition was his vice; thanks to Jupiter, and the rest of the gods, by which being poysoned with envie, trou-

Tribunes, not humbly as one accused, but Oration was made by Cato, the supposed aufollowed by a great train of his friends and thor of these contentions, and instigator of midst of the Assembly, and offered himself perfect vertue, temperate, valiant, and of whose grace, both on that day and at other bled both himself and the whole City; whilst times, he had well and happily discharged he lived. His mean birth caused him to the most weighty business of the Common- hate the Nobility, especially those that were weal. And hereto he invited with him all the in chief estimation. Neither did he spare to wear. And neterione invited with initial and color contents and incipare to Citizens: requesting them. That if ever fines the seventeenth year of his life, until he now raised by desert, if their advancement were grew old, the bonourable places by them confers like to hinder his: but lately before this, red upon him, had prevented the capacity of his age, and yet his describ had exceeded the at Thermopyle, was his Competitor for the greatness of those konourable places: then would Cenforthip, and likely to carry it, he took they pray, that the Frinces and great ones of an Oath against him, which was counted as their City might still be like to him. Thele no better than malicious perjury, That he words were heard with great approbation : had not brought into the common Treasury so as all the people, even the Officers of the some vessels of gold and silver, gotten in the court followed scipio, leaving the Tribunes Camp of Antiochus. Now the hatred which alone, with none about them, excepting their he bare unto the Scipio's grew partly, (beown flaves and a Cryer, by whom ridiculouf- fides his general fpight at the Nobility) from ly they cited him to judgement, until for his own first rising, wherein he was countevery shame, as not knowing what else to do, nanced by Fabius Maximus, who brooked they granted him, unrequested, a surther not the African, partly from some check, that day. After this, when the African perceived was given unto himself, in the African voythat the Tribunes would not let fall their age, by P. Scipio, whose Treasurer he then fuit, but enforce him to submit himself to a was. For when Cato did utter his dislike of difgraceful trial: he willingly relinquished the Confuls bad husbandry (judging Magthe City, and his unthankful Romans, that inficence to be no better) in some peremptocould fuffer him to undergo fo much indigni- ry manner; scipio plainly told him, That ty. The rest of his time he spent at Liternum: he had no need of such double diligence in quietly with a few of his inward friends, and his Treasurer. Wherefore, either not caring without any defire of feeing Rome again. How what lies he published, or for want of judgemany years he lived, or whether he lived ment thinking unworthily of the vertue that one whole year, in this voluntary banish- was far above him, Caso filled Rome with ment; it is uncertain. The report of his untrue reports against his General; whose dying in the fame year, with Hannibal and noble deeds confuted sufficiently the author Philopomen, as also of his private behaviour of fuch false tales. And thus began the haat Liternum, render it probable, that he outlived the Tribune-ship of his accusers; who upon by the scipio's, whilst it was nourished meant to have drawn himback to his answer, by their enemy, brake out upon advantage, if one of their Colleagues (as one of them had especially against L. Scipio: his brother bepower to hinder all the reft from proceed- ing dead, or out of the way. A fevere inquiing)had not caused them to desist. Howso- ry and judgment being appointed of purpose ever it was; the same Tribunes went more against Scipio, matters were so carried, that flarply to work with L. scipio the Affatique. he was foon condemned in a fumm of money, They propounded a Decree unto the People, far exceeding his ability to pay. For non-paytouching money received of Antiochus, and ment, his body should have been laid up in not brought into the common Treasury; that prison: but from this rigour of the Law he the Senate should give charge unto one of was freed by Tiberius Gracehus, the same the Prætors, to inquire, and judicially deter- Tribune who had caused the suit against the mine thereof. In favour of this Decree, an Africanto be let fall. n his c ftate, which there neither appeared any fign of his having Decree of theirs, and by their proclaiming been beholding to Antiochus, nor was found any Citizen enemy to the State, they thought fo much as what he had been condemned to to have won a great advantage over the pay; then fell his accusers, and all whose multitude. But after the death of C. Gracehus, hands had been against him, into the indig- and of Saturnius a popular man; whom by nation of the People. But for this was L. Scipio fuch authority they did put out of the way; no whit the better. His kindred, friends, it was not long ere Marius a famous Captain and Clients, made such a Collection for him, of theirs, was so condemned, who by force as would have fet him in better estate than of arms returned into the City, and murbefore, if he had accepted it. He took no dered all the principal Senators: whereupon more than such of his own goods, as were began the Civil Wars; which giving unto of necessary use, being redeemed for him by splla, who prevailed therein, means to make his nearest friends. in the Roman pleadings: which had either tain the like foveraign power, when by the not been, or not been much regardable, like Decree of the Senate he was provoked. until now, fince the Punick War. Secu- It is true, that never any Conful had finally rity of danger from abroad, and some want cause to rejoyce, of his having put in execuof sufficient employment, were especial helps tion such authority to him committed by the to the kindling of this fire; which first caught | Senate. But as the fury of the multitude, in hold upon that great Worthy, to whole passing their Laws, by hurling of stones, and vertue Rome was indebted, for changing in other violence made the City stand in need to fo great fecurity her extream danger. Of a Soveraign Lord: fo the vehemency of the Senate, in condemning as enemies those while contain themselves within heat of that would not submit themselves, when they words, and cunning practice. For when the were over-topped by voyces in the Houle, Art of leading the mekitude, in such quar-resson business, grew to perfection, they that found themselves overmatched by their prevailing against his adversaries, he took adversaries at this kind of weapon, began to luch order, that neither Senate nor people, make opposition, first, with clubs and stones, should thenceforth be able to do him wrong. afterward with fwords; and finally, proceed- | So by intestine discord, the Romans consued from frayes and murders in the streets, ming all or most of their principal Citizens, unto battel in the open field. Cornelia, daugh- loft their own freedom, and became subter of Scipio the African, a Lady of rare ver- jects unto the arbitrary government of One; tue, that in honour of her two fons was more suffering this change in three generations, afcommonly named, Mother of the Gracchi, ter this beginning of their infolent rule, faw those her two sons whilest they were but wherein they took upon them as the highest young, flaughtered in Rome, together with Lordson earth, to do even what they lifted. fome of their friends, by those whom they Yet had not Rome indeed attained hitherto opposed, and their death not revenged by unto compleat greatness, nor believed other order of Law, but rather approved by the felf as if the had, whileft a King fare crown-Senate. At these times the Senators began to ed on the Throne of Alexander, continuing take upon them Authority, more than was and upholding the reputation of a former der this form, Let the Confuls provide, that was effected, the sequel will discover.

was confilcated to the use of the City, when the Commonweal receive no detriment. By this himself absolute Lord of Rome, taught Ce-And thus began the Civil war of the Tongue $\int ar$, a man of higher spirit, to affect and obto them belonging. They conferred upon the | Empire. Wherefore this confummation of her Confuls all the whole power of the City, un-honour was thought upon betimes. How it

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

The Second Macedonian War.

6. I.

The Condition wherein those Princes and Estates remained, which were Associates of the Romans, when the War with Antiochus was finished. The Romans quarrel with Philip. They deal insolently with the Achaans. The Macedonian, being unready for War, obtains peace at Prome, by his Son Demetrius; of whom thenceforth he becomes jealous.

Greece, were governed by the same Laws and | conformity unto them in matter of war and Magistrates, as they formerly had been, be- peace, together with the diversion of their forethe arrival of the Romans in those parts: thoughts another way, giving him leave to yet, in very truth (the publick declaration use his own even as he listed, until they excepted) they were none other than abso- should otherwise dispose of him. Neither was lute Vassals to the people of Rome. For of it a little available to him, that his Kingdom those five Prerogatives belonging to a Mo- bordered upon the Nations, by them not narch, or unto Soveraign Power, in whom- throughly fubdued. For upon the same reafoever it rest; namely, To make Laws, To create | fon (as well as upon his own high deserts) Magistrates, To arbitrate Peace and War, To were they very loving unto Masanissa, and to beat Mony, and to referve (as the French call it) his House, until Carthage was ruined, and le dernier Ressort, or the last Appeals, the Ro- their Dominion settled in Africk: as likewise mans had affumed four; and the greatest of afterwards to the Kings of Mauritania, Capthem so absolutely, that is, The Appeal, or last padocia, and others: holding people in subrefort, as every petty injury offered to each jection unto themselves, by the Ministry of other by the forenamed Kings or States, was Kings; especially of such Kings, as were use-heard and determined either by the Roman ful and obsequious unto them. Embassadours, or Commissioners, in those Now the Macedonian was of a more noble places whence the Complaint came, or temper; and shewed himself not forgetful of otherwise by the Senators themselves within his own former greatness, the honour of his Rome; from whose arbitrement, or direction, race, or the high reputation of his Kingdom. if either King or Commonweals declined, He But such magnanimity was none otherwise or they were beaten, and inforced to obe-construed by the Romans, than as want of dience; or had their Estates and Regalities | due reverence to their estate, and a valuautterly diffolved. Nevertheless it is true, tion of himself against them: which, in the that they had their own Laws, and Officers | pride of their fortune, they could not enof their own ordaining: yet so, as neither dure. Wherefore notwithstanding that he the Laws were of force, when the Romans had lately given passage to their Armies interposed their will to the contrary, nei-thorow his Country, prepared the wayes for ther was their election of Magistrates so free, them, and furnished them both with victuals, as that they had not therein especial re- and other things needful, to transport them gard unto the good pleasure of these their over the Hellespont into Asia, against Antiochus:

ral Estates of Greece did bow very gently: manded to abandon the Cities of Anus and either as being thankful for their delive- Maronea, with all Pieces and places demandrance from a yoke more fenfibly grievous; ed by any of his neighbours; whereof maor, as being skilful in the Art of flattery, and ny of them he had lately conquered, by ditherein taking delight, fince therein con- rection or licence, even from the Romans fifted their chief hope of thriving; or, as be- themselves,

Fter the overthrow of Antio- | ing more fearful of displeasing the strongest, chus, although Philip of Mace- than mindful of their own honour. But Eudon, Eumenes King of Pergamus, menes living further off, and being most obthe Commonweal of the Ache- fequious unto the Romans, was not, of long ans, and all other the States of time, questioned about any of his doings: his yet upon the complaint of Eumenes and the And to such degree of servitude the seve- States of Thessaly and Thrace, he was com-

Thefe

been part of Lysimachus his Kingdom: who since Antiochus had gotten all the Country from Ibrace Northwards, and to the North-thereabout, whilest Philip was busied in his west, extended his Dominion very far. He former war : and since they, by their viwere, extended in South and the first thought to have made himself Lord of ctory, had gotten unto themselves all the Transfioania: in which Province it is said, title, which Antiochus thereto could pretend. Hagory of That innumerable Medals of gold have Wherefore he only submitted his right unto Man, Fa been found, in the age of our Grand-fathers, the good pleasure of the Senate: referring cach of them weighing two or three Crowns, it unto their disposition, Whether Ann and and stamped with his Image on the one Maronea should be set at liberty: whether fide, on the other fide with Fidory. Of all left in his hand, or whether bestowed upon these Lordinips, the possession, or rather the Eumenes; who begged them, as an appendix title (for he lived not to fettle his Estate in to Lysimachia and Chersonesia, that were al-Europe) fell to Seleucus Nicanor by right of ready his by their gift. What they would war, wherein he vanquished and slew Lyfimachus: as also, by the like right, Ptolomy Cerannus thought them his own, when he had him: who fitting as Judges between him and murdered Selenens. But the inundation of all that made complaint upon him, gave fenthe Gaules, which the Kingdom of Macedon could not fultain, did fhortly and eafily wash vertheless, he sent Embassadours to Rome, away from that Crown, together with the more part of Thrace, all those heaps of Land newly thereto annexed. Somewhat of this it might prevail) was wholly on his fide. For was afterwards regained by Antigonus the Son of Demetrius and his fuccessiers: though not much; for they were otherwise busied. The fury of the Gauls being over past, those now taken from him by their Embassadors: Countries which lately had been oppressed and would shey now deprive him of those by them, recovered their liberty; and not two Towns, lying to fitly for the guard of only held it, but learned, some of them, especially the Dardanians and wild Thrus; self out of the ruines of Antiochus, like as ans, to find their advantages, and make out of his own ruines Antiochus had gotten use of them, even upon alicedon. Against in those quarters a great deal more? By the mischiels commonly done by these, King such allegations either he was likely to pre-Thilip did provide the most convenient reme vail, or at leastwise to gain time, wherein he dies; by thutting up the wayes, whereby the might bethink himfelf what he had to do. Dardonians might enter into his Kingdom; It was not long ere he had word from Rome, and by eccupying Infimackia, with some That the Senate were no more equal to him, other Towns in Thrace, which he fortified, than had been their Embassadors. Whereas Bulwarks of his own Country, against fore, considering how infolently the Marothe Barbarians. Now, although it beho- nites had behaved themselves, in pleadved him thus to do, for the defence of his ing against him for their liberty, he took own estate: yet for a much as these Towns counsel of his own passion; and (as by nawere, in a manner, at abfolute liberty, his ture he was very cruel) gave order to onepossession of them was thought to partake mastus, that was Warden of the Sea-coasts, more of violence than of justice. And in this to handle these Maronites in such fort, as they fon did only fave it from the Thracians: who, as from as he thence withdrew his men, did feize upon the Town, and ruine it. The Thefe Towns of Anus and Maronea had | Romans were not without their cwn title; determine, he might eafily perceive, by the demeanor of their Emballadors towards tence against him in every controversie. Nethere to maintain his right unto these Towns; wherein he thought, that equity (if he had holpen their Consuls in the war against Antiockus and the Ætolians: wherein whatfoever he had gotten for himfelf, was his Kingdom, which he had gotten to himrespect he was formerly accused by the Æto might have little joy of the liberty by them lians, of wrongful ulurpation and oppref lo carnelly defired. Onomafus employed fion, in his having occupied Lyfimachia. Here | Calfander, one of the Kings men dwelling in to he made a good answer. That his Garri- Maronea, and willed him to let in the Tralike perhaps he might have faid, touching fadors who had better notice, than could Enus and Maronea; That they were places have been feared, of these proceedings; that unable to defend themselves, and Gates, by the King was by them directly charged with which the Barbarians might have entrance the crime, and called more firifly, than beinto his Kingdom. But this Plea had not availed him, in the disputation about Lystandin; and in the crestory question. machia: and in the present question, the layd it even upon the Maronites: affirming, regard would be born unto his person.

that they, in heat of their Factions, being | Whilest this business with the Macedonian fome inclinable to him, othersome to Eume- hung in suspence, and whilest he, by his nes, had fallen into fuch outrage, that they readiness to make submission, seemed likely had cut one anothers throats. And hereof he to divert from himself some other way the willed the Embassadours to enquire among Roman Arms: the same Embassadors, that the Maronites themselves: as well knowing, had been Judges between him and his that they who furvived, were either his neighbours, made their progress thorow the own friends; or so terrified and amazed by rest of Greece; and took notice of the Conthe late execution of his vengeance among them, that they durft not utter an offen- Estates in the Country. The greatest cause five word. But he found the Romans more that was heard before them, was the comfevere, and more thorowly informed in the plaint of the banished Lacedemonians against business, than to rest contented with such the Achaans. It was objected unto the Achaan answer. He was plainly told, That if he ans, That they had committed a grievous would discharge himself of the crime ob- slaughter upon many Citizens of Lacedamon: jected; he must send Onomastus and Cassan- That unto this cruelty they had added a der to Rome, there to be examined as the Se- greater, in throwing down the walls of the nate should think fit. This did not a little City: as also further, in changing the Laws, trouble him. Yet he collected his spirits, and and abrogating the famous Institutions of Lyfaid, that Caffander should be at their dispo- curgus. Hereto Lycortas the Prætor of the fition: but concerning Onomastus, who had Acheans, made answer, That these banished not been at Maronea, nor near to it, he re- Lacedemonians, who now took upon them quested them not to press him; fince it stood to accuse the Nation that had once protectnot with his honour fo lightly to give away ed them, were notoriously known to be his friends. As for Caffander, because he the men, who had themselves committed that should tell no tales; He took order to have murder, whereof shamelesly they laid the him poyfoned by the way. By this we fee, blame upon others: the Acheans having not that the Doctrine which Machiavel taught only called those unto judgment, that were unto Casar Borgia, to imploy men in mis- supposed to be chief Authors of a Rebellion chievous actions, and afterwards to destroy against both them and the Romans: and them when they have performed the milchief, was not of his own invention. All vate, though just hatred, as they were comages have given us examples of this goodly ing to make answer for themselves. Concernpolicy, the latter having been apt scho- ing their throwing down the walls of Lacelars in this lesson to the more ancient: as demon, he said it was most agreeable to Lythe reign of Henry the eighth, here in Eng- curgus his Ordinance: who, having perland, can bear good witness; and therein swaded his Citizens to defend their Town especially the Lord Cromwell, who perished and liberty by their proper vertue, did inhiby the same unjust Law that himself had de- bit unto them all kind of fortifications : as vised, for the taking away of another mans the Retraits and Nests either of Cowards, or (whereof Lacedamon had woful experience) Such actions of Thilip made an unpleasant of Tyrants and Usurpers. Further he noise at Rome, and were like to have shewed, how the same Tyrants that had built brought upon him the war which he feared, these walls, and hemmed in the Spartans, had before he was ready to entertain it. Where- also quite abolished Lycurgus his Ordinanfore he employed his younger Son Demetrius ces; and governed the City by their own as Embassadour unto the Senate: giving lawless Will. As for the Acheans; they com-him instructions, how to make answer to all municated their own Laws, which they held complaints, and withall to deliver his own for the best, or else would soon change them, grievances in such wise, that if ought were and take better, unto the Lacedamonians; amiss, yet might it appear that he had been whom they found without Laws, or any tostrongly urged to take such courses. The lerable form of policy. For conclusion, Lyfumm of his Embassage was, to pacifie the cortes plainly told App. Claudins, the chief Romans, and make all even for the present. of the Embassadours, That he and his Coun-Demetrius himself was known to be very ac-trymen held it strange, being friends and ceptable unto the Senate; as having been well faithful Allies of the Romans, to fee themapproved by them, when he was Hostage in selves thus constrained, to answer and give Rome: and therefore feemed the more like- account of their actions, as vaffals and flaves ly to prevail somewhat; were it only, in that unto the people of Rome. For if they were indeed at liberty: why might not the

as the Romans did butie themselves, to take more bought revenge at the price of selfaccount how things went at Lacedemon's ruine, brought them from the honour which For if the Romans would stand upon their they enjoyed, of being free Princes and Cigreatnes; and intimate as they begun, that ties, into most base and fearful servility. the liberty of their friends was nothing worth, longer than thould please themselves who, though he saw the Greeks very far to ratificit: then must the Acheans have re- from daring to stir against those, by whom course unto those Agreements that were both he and they were kept in awe; yet confirmed by oath, and which, without per- was he not without hope, that (few of them jury, could not be violated; as reverencing, excepted, whom the Romans by freeing from and indeed fearing the Romans, but much his subjection, had made his implacable enmore, the immortal gods. To this bold an mies) in hearty affection all the Country fwer of Lycortas, Appius found little to reply. would be his, whenfoever he should take Yet taking state upon him; he pronounced Arms, as shortly he was like to do. Young more like a Mafter than a Judge, that if the Demetrius, coming home from Rome, brought more need is after than a judge; that it the with him the delired ratification of peace; with him the delired ratification of peace; and carn thanks whileft they might; they though qualified with much indignity foon should be compelled with a mishief, to do following. He had been lovingly used at what was required at their hands, whether at Rome, and heard with great favour in the they would or no. This altercation was in Senate. There, being confounded with the the Parliament of the Ackeans, which groan multitude of objections, whereto his youth, ed to hear the Lordly words of Appies. Yet unfkilful in the Art of wrangling, could not fear prevailed above indignation: and it readily make answer: it was permitted unwas permitted unto the Romans to do as to him, to read fuch brief notes as he had they lifted. Hereupon the Embasladours received from his Father, and our of those refrored some banilled and condeauned men: the Senate were contented to gather fatifbut the Roman Senate, very focu after, did faction; more for Demetrius his own fake, make void all judgments of death or banish as they then faid, and wrote into Macedon, ment, that had been laid by the Acheans, than for any goodness in the defence. Such upon any Citizen of Lacedemon; as likewife pride of theirs, in remitting his faults at the they made it a matter of difputation, whee intreaty of his Son, together with some insother or no the City and Territory of Lace- lence of his Son, growing (as appeared) damon should be suffered to continue a member of the Achean Common-wealth: or, taken from them, and made as it had been an him a jealousse of his too forward Son. To Estate by it self. By bringing such a matter set him forward in these passions, there came imo question, the Remans well declared, daily new Embassadours from Rome, some that they held it to depend upon their own bringing one commandment, some another; will, how much or how little any of their and fome requiring him to fulfill thole things, Confederates should be suffered to enjoy: which had been imposed upon him by their though by contributing sparta to the coun-fore-goers. Neither were there wanting that cel of Achaia, they discovered no less, as to observed his countenance : and when he had them feemed, the love which they bare unfulfilled all that was required at his hands; to the Achaians, than the power which they yet laid it to his charge, that he had done had over them.

in the like case they should expect; yet could by meer favour of the Romans. This offended not the true reasons of Estate and Policy so not only Perseus, but Philip himself: who

Acheans as well require to be fatisfied about prevail with them, but their private passions, that which the Romans had done at Capua, and neighbouring hatred, which hath ever-

All this made well for Philip of Macedon: from this favour of the Romans; did increase in Philip his hatred unto Rome, and breed in things unwillingly, and would be obedient htto fisch flavery had the Greeks, and all no longer than he needs must. With these Kings and Common-weals what foever, bor- Embaffadours young Demetrius was converdering upon any part of the Mediterranean fant: rather perhaps out of simplicity, and Seas, reduced it emselves, by calling in the Romans to their succour. They wanted not any ambitious respects, yet a great deal more the good counsel and perswasions of many than was pleasing to his Father. So the ruwife and temperate men among them; they mour grew current through all Macedon, had allothe examples of the Italians, Spa- That Perfeus, the elder Son of the King, niards, Gauls, and Africans, all fubdued by should not succeed unto his Father, but that the Romans 5 and, by feeking Patronage, the Diademe should be conferred upon Demade meer Vallals; to instruct them, what metrius, if not by some other pretence, yet fuspected his younger Son, as more Roman their aid, compelled Philopamens horse-men than hisown; and accordingly misconstrued to turn back. Philopemen himself had long all his doings. But ere we proceed unto the been fick of an Ague, and was then very bitter fruits of this jealoufie, it will not be weak: yet the greatness of his courage amis to speak of some memorable accidents would not suffer him to be negligent of their that were in the mean time.

CHAP: VI.

16. II.

of late been so peremptory with the Acha- upon him, and took him; yet scarce beans; that they seemed not unlikely to lieved their fortune to be so good, although take part against them in any controversic their eyes were witnesses. The first messes that should be moved. Hereupon the ger that brought these news to Messene Messenians, who against their will were annexed unto the Achean Common-wealth, having long been of a contrary Faction thereto; grew bold to withdraw themfelves from that Society, with purpose to set him, and behold the spectacle seeming so inup again the Estate of their own, seve-credible! They caused him to be brought red from communion with any other. This into the Theatre, that there they might fawas the device of fome that were power- tisfie themselves with beholding him. The ful in their City; who finding the multitude only inclinable to their purpose, and not over-strongly affected in the business, were careful to feek occasion of reducing things to such pass, that all their Citizens might be entangled in a necessity of stand- nifest their good will for his delivery. Conbegan to make head again: and with the wrought the sooner; and easily took away help of those, who very seasonably came to his life. The deheans, when they missed him

fafety, which had so willingly adventured themselves under his conduct. He took upon him to make the Retrait: and fuffering his horse-men to pass along by him in a nar-The death of Philopoemen, Hannibal, and row lane, he often turned about against the Scipio. That the Military profession is of all Messenians; whom, the reputation and the other the most unbappy: notwithstanding knowledge of his great worth, did terrifie some examples, which may seem to prove the from approaching over near to him. But it fell out unhappily, that being cast to ground by a fall off his horse, and being with-HE Romans wanting other matter of all in very weak plight of body, he was unquarrel in the Continent of Greece, had able to get up again. So the Enemies came was so far from being believed, that he was hardly thought to be in his right wits. But when the truth was affirmed by many reports, all the City ran forth to meet greatest part of them had compassion on his mif-fortune: and in commemoration both of his virtue, and of the fingular benefits by him done unto them, especially in delivering them from Nabis the Tyrant; began to maing out, and of not returning to the Achean trariwise, Dinocrates and his Faction were League. And hereupon they began to defirous hastily to take away his life: because do some acts of hostility, whereby it was they held him a man implacable, and one probable that blood flould be drawn, that would never leave any digrace, or injuand either fide so far exasperated, that ry done to him, unrevenged. They durst little hope of agreement would be left. Up not one trust another with the keeping of on the fame of their commotion and pro- him: but committed him into a ftrong ceedings; Philopamen, then Prator of the vault under ground, that had been made for Acheans, levied fuch forces as he could in the cultody of their Treasure. So thither hafte, and went against them. Many princi- they let him down fast bound, and with an pal Gentlemen of the Acheans, especially of Engine laid an heavy stone upon the mouth the Megalopolitans, were foon in a readi- of the Vault. There he had not flayed long, ness to wait upon him. Besides these, which ere his enemies had concluded his present were all, or for the most part, horse, he had death. The Hangman of the City was let fome Auxiliaries out of Thrace and Crete, that usually were kept in pay. Thus accompliant took in his hand: and asking panied, he met with Dinocrates, Captain of no more than whether the Horse-men were the Messenians; whom he charged, and escaped, and particularly whether Lycorforced to run. But whileft his horte-men tas was fafe; when he heard an answer to were too earnest in following the chase; his mind, he said it was well: and so with a there arrived by chance a fupply of five chearful countenance drank his laft draught. hundred from Messene, which gave new cou- He was seventy years old, and weakned rage unto those that fled. So the Enemies with long fickness, whereby the poylon

ed with themselves, for that they had been sel to resort unto, he took the poison into his more mindful to preferve their own lives, hand, which he alwayes preferved for a fure than to look unto the fafety of fo excellent | Antidote against the sharpest diseases of ada Commander. Whileft they were devifing which being ready to fivallow what to do in fuch a cafe: they got adverdown he uttered these words: I will now tilement of his being taken. All Achaia (said he)deliver the Romans of that fear which was by this report vehemently afflicted: hath so many years possest them; that fear fo as Embassadours were forthwith dif which makes them impatient to attend the patched unto Messene, craving his enlarge- death of an old man. This victory of Flaminius. ment: and yet preparation made withall, to over me, which am disarmed, and betrajed inobtain it by force, in case that fair means to his hands, shall never be numbred among the would not ferve. Lycortas was chosen Ge- rest of his heroical deeds: No, it shall make it neral of the Army against Meffene: who manifest to all the Nations of the world, how coming thither, and laying fiege to the far the ancient Roman virtue is degenerate Town, enforced it in flort space to yeeld. and corrupted. For such was the nobleness of Then Dinocrates knowing what he was to their forefathers, as when Pyrrhus invaded expect, laid hands upon himself, and made them in Italy, and was ready to give them batan end of his own life. The rest of those tel at their own door, they gave him knowledge that had been partakers in the murder, were compelled to wait in bonds upon the after of Philopamen that were carryed home ed Flaminius, a man who hath heretofore been in solemn pomp to Megalopolis; where they were all of them flain at his funeral, as facrifices to his Ghost whom they had offended. 9. Martius, a Roman Embassadour, was then in Greece; whence, upon one occasion or other, the Roman Embaffadours were feldome absent. He would have intermed- revenge his fidelity, drank off the poyson, and led in this business of Messene, had not Ly- dyed. cortas made fhort work, and left him nothing to do.

About the same time was T. Quintius Flaminius fent Emballadour to Prulias King of of them, as great Captains as ever the world Bithynia: not fo much to withdraw him from profecuting the war against Eumenes, as Certainly, for Hannibal, whose Tragedy we to entreat him that he would deliver Hannibal, the most spightful enemy in all the world | Carthaginians, and one who by his authority unto the Senate and People of Rome, into his might have commanded fuch supplies, as the hands. Prussas (therein unworthy of the War which he undertook, required; it is Crown he wore) did readily condescend: probable, that he had torn up the Roman or rather (as Livie thinks) to gratifie the Romans, he determined either to kill Hannibal, or to deliver him alive to Flaminius. For at home, as his proper virtue, wanting pubupon the first conference between the King lick force to sustain it, did lastly dissolve it and Flaminius, a troop of fouldiers were di- self in his own, and in the common milery of rected to guard and environ the lodging his Country and Common-weal. where Hannibal lay. That famous Captain having found cause before this to suspect the our equals, and jealousse of our Masters, be faith of Prusias, had devised some secret fal- they Kings or Common-weals, that there lies under ground to fave himself from any is no profession more unprosperous than treasonable and sudden assault. But finding that of men of war, and great Captains, now that all parts about him were fore-clo-being no Kings. For befides the envy and sed, he had recourse to his last remedy: which | jealousse of men, the spoils, rapes, famine, he then was constrained to practife, as well flaughter of the innocent, vastation and to frustrate his enemies of their triumphing burnings, with a world of mileries laid on over him, as to fave himself from their torture and merciles hands; who, as he well with good reason did Monlue the Marshal of knew, would neither respect his famous en- France confess, That, were not the mercies terprizes, his honour, nor his age. When of God infinite, and without refirition, it in their flight, were marvellously offend- therefore he saw no way to escape, nor comof the treason intended against him by porion : whereas thefe of a latter race, have employone of their Confuls to practife with Prusias.contrary to the honour of a King, contrary to his Faith given, and contrary to the Laws of Hofpitality, to slaughter or deliver up his own Gueft. He then curfing the person of Prusias, and all his, and desiring the immortal gods to

> In this year also (as good Authors have reported) to accompany Philopamen and Hannibal, died Scipio the African; these being all had; but not more famous than unfortunate. have now finished, had he been Prince of the Empire by the roots. But he was fo strongly crost by a cowardly and envious Faction

Hence it comes, to wit, from the envy of

for any portion of them: seeing the cruelties, by them permitted and committed, were also infinite. Howsoever, this is true, That the vistonite. Howsoever, this is true, That the vistonite. ries which are obtained by many of the grea- | Cortese, who conquered Mexico; were crowntest Commanders, are commonly either ed with Nettles, not with Lawrel. The Earls ascribed to those that serve under them, to of Egmond and Horn had no heads left Fortune, or the cowardife of the Nation them to wear Garlands on. And that the against whom them serve. For the most of great Captains of all Nations have been others, whose virtues have raised them above paid with this Copper Coin; there are exthe level of their inferiours, and have fur- amples more than too many. On the mounted their envy: yet have they been re- contrary, it may be faid. That many have acwarded in the end, either with difgrace, ba quired the State of Princes, Kings, and Emnilhment, or death. Among the Romans we perours, by their great ability in matter of find many examples hereof; as Coriolanus, War. This i confess. Yet must it be had with-M. Livius, L. Amilius, and this our Scipio, all in confideration, that these high places whom we have lately buried. Among the have been given or offered unto very few, as Greeks we read of not many that escaped rewards of their military virtue; though these rewards. Yea long before these times, it was a Legacy that David bequeathed unto his victorious Captain Foab. With this ed. Neither is it unregardable, That the Tyfear Alexander feasted Permenio, Philotas, and rants, which have oppressed the liberty of others; and prepared it for Antipater and free Cities: and the Licutenants of Kings or Cassander. Hereunto Valentinian the Empe- Emperours, which have traiterously cast rour invited Ætim: who, after many other victories, overthrew Attelia of the Hunnes, their feats; were not all of them good men of in the greatest battel for the well fight- war: but have used the advantage of some ing and resolution of both Armies, that commotion, or many of them by base and coever was strucken in the world; for there wardly practices, have obtained those digfell of those that fought, beside run-awayes, nities, which undeservedly were ascribed to an hundred and fourfcore thousand. Here- their personal worth. So that the number upon it was well and boldly told unto the of those that have purchased absolute great-Emperour by Proximus, That in killing of ness by the greatness of their warlike virtue; Ætins, he had cut off his own right hand is far more in seeming than in deed. Phocas with his left: for it was not long after, that was a Souldier, and by the help of the Maximus (by whose perswasson Valentinian Souldiers he got the Empire from his Lord flew Ætius) murdered the Emperour, which Mauritius: but he was a coward 3 and, with he never durst attempt, Ælius living. And, a barbarous cruelty, seldom found in any befides the loss of that Emperour, it is true, other than cowards, he slew first the chil-That with Ætius, the glory of the Western dren of Mauritius, a Prince that never had Empire was rather diffolved, than obscu- done him wrong, before his face; and after red. The same unworthy destiny, or a far them Mauritins himself. This his bloody aspt-For this cause did Bajazet the second dif. But with Anastasius, Theodosius dealt more patch Baffa Acomat; Selim, strangle Baffa gently: for having wrested the Scepter out were in vain for those of his profession to hope | Mustapha; and most of those Princes bring many have usurped them, by the help and favour of those Armies which they commanddown their Masters, and stepped up into worfe, had Bellifarius; whose undertakings ring was but as a debt, which was paid unto and victories were fo difficult and glorious, him again by Heraclius: who took from him as after-ages suspected them for fabulous. the Imperial Crown, unjustly gotten; and For he had his eyes torn out of his head by fet it on his own head. Leontins laid hold Fullinian: and he died a blind beggar upon the Emperour Justine, cut off his Nose Narfes also, to the great prejudice of Christian Religion, was digraced by Justin. but Gods vengeance rewarded him with That rule of Cato against Scipio, hath been the same punishment, by the hands of Tiwell observed in every age fince then to wit, berins 5 to whose charge he had left his own That the Common-weal cannot be accouning men of war. Justine having recovered ted free, which standeth in awe of any one forces, lighted on Tiberius, and barbed him man. And hence have the Turke drawn after the same sa hion. Philippicus commandanother Principle, and indeed, a Turkish ing the forces of Justine, murdered both the one, That every warlike Prince should ra- Emperour and his Son. Anaftassus, the vafther destroy his greatest men of war, than sal of this new Tyrant, surprised his Mafuffer his own glory to be obscured by them. Her Philippieus, and thrust out both his eyes:

of his hands, he enforced him to become a advised, valiant, and faithful men, the proftheir own cruelty, by men alike ambi- der, by her felf chosen and imployed. tious and cruel; or how many hundreds, Ecles, 9, and a few men in it, and a great King came. L. Willowghly of Ersby, two very worthy and 14.8.15.

1084

Forts against it: And there was found a poor with them into the world their Titles and and wife man therein, and he delivered the Ci- Estates. ty by his wisdom: but none remembred this poor man. Great Monarchs are unwilling to her Men of War did sooner believe other men pay great thanks, left thereby they should than her self, a disease unto which many wise acknowledge themselves to have been indebted for great benefits : which the unwifer fort of them think to favour of fome im- feem altogether to excuse her Noble Nature, potency in themselves. But in this respect | yet can it not but in some fort accuse her of they are often times couzened and abuled; weakness. And exceeding frange it were, which proves that weakness to be in them were not the cause manifest enough, that indeed, whereof they so gladly shun the where the prosperous actions are so exceedopinion. Centrariwife, free Estates are boun- ingly prized, the Actors are so unprosperous tiful in giving thanks, yet fo, as those thanks and so generally neglected. The cause, I say, are not of long endurance. But concerning which hath wrought one and the same effect other profit which their Captains have in all times, and among all Nations, is this, that made, by enriching themselves with the spoyl those which are nearest the person of Princes of the Enemy, they are very inquisitive to (which Martial-men seldom are) can with no fearch into it 3 and to strip the well-deservers good grace commend, or at least magnific a out of their gettings: yea most injuriously profession far more noble than their own, to rob them of their own, upon a falle sup- seeing therein they should only mind position; that even they whose hands are their Masters of the wrong they did unto most clean from such offences, have purloyn- others, in giving less honour and reward to ed somewhat from the common Treasu- men of far greater deserving, and of far greary. Hereof I need not to produce examples: ter use than themselves. that of the two scipio's being so lately re-

the wars, which, for her own fafety, she was hath honoured more Martial men than all constrained to undertake, her Majesty had the Kings of England have done for this hunno less cause to use the service of Martial dred years. men both by Sea and Land, than any of her Predecessors for many years had; yet accord- Howard for his chargeable and remarkable ing to the deftiny of that profession, I do not service, as well in the year 1588. as at Calia, remember that any of hers, the Lord Admi- the Islands, and in our own Sea ; having first ral excepted, her eldeft, and most prosperous commanded as a Captain, twice Admiral of a Commander, were either enriched, or Squadron, and twice Admiral in Chief. His otherwise honoured, for any service by them Majesty hath changed the Baronies of Montperformed. And, that her Majesty had many joy & Burley into Earldoms; and created sid-

Priest. It were an endlessand a needless work perity of her affairs did well witness, whoin to tell, how Leo rewarded this Theodofins, all her dayes never received dishonour by how many others have been repaid with the cowardise or infidelity of any Comman-

For as all her old Captains by Land died or rather thousands, hoping of Captains poor men, as Malbey, Randol, Drewry, Reade. to make themselves Kings, have by Gods Wilford, Layton, Pellam, Gilbert, Constable, justice miscrably perillied in the attempt. Bourchier, Barkeley, Bingham, and others: The ordinary, and perhaps the best way of so those of a later and more dangerous imthriving by the practice of Arms, is to take ployment, whereof Norrice and Vere were what may be gotten by the spoil of Ene- the most famous, and who have done as great mies, and the liberality of those Princes honour to our Nation (for the means they and Cities, in whose service one hath well had) as ever any did; those (I say) with deferved. But scarce one of a thousand have many other brave Colonels, have left behind prospered by this course. For that obserthem (besides the reputation which they vation, made by Salomon, of unthankfulness purchased with many travels and wounds) in this kind, hath been found belonging to nor title nor estate to their posterity. As for all Countries and Ages: A little City, the L. Thomas Eurrough, and Peregrine Berty against it, and compussed it about, and builded exceeding valiant Commanders, they brought

That her Majesty in the advancement of Princes, befides her felf, have been subject ; I fay, that fuch a confidence, although it may

But his Majesty hath already paid the greatest part of that debt. For besides the re-In my late Soveraigns time, although for lieving by Pensions all the poorer fort, he

He hath given a Coronet to the L. Thomas

ner Vicount, Knolles, Russel, Carem, Danvers, 1 tion, that dwelt beyond the River of Danu-Arundel of Warder, Gerald, and Chichester, Ba- bius, to abandon their seat, and come to rons, for their governments and fervices in him with all their multitude: who, besides the Netherlands, France, Ireland, & elsewhere. other great rewards, would help them to

ø. III.

Philip, making provision for war against the Romans, deals hardly with many of his own lubjects. His negotiation with the Bastarna. His cruelty. He suspecteth his son Demetrius. Demetrius accused by his brother Perseus; and shortly after slain by his fathers appointment. Philip repenteth him of his sons death whom he findeth to have been innocent: and intending to revenge it on Perseus, he dieth.

Ontius Martius the Roman Embassador, who travelled up and down, seeking what work might be found about Greece, had received instruction from the Senate, to who should withstand them upon the way: use the utmost of his diligence in looking rather it was thought, that the Scordisci, home, that he might not feem to have disco- whose Country they were to pass, would vered nothing, he told the Fathers, That accompany them against the Romans, were Philip had done whatfoever they enjoyned it only in hope of fpoil. Now to facilitate him: yet so, as it might appear, that such the remove of these Bastarna from their his obedience would last no longer, than own habitations, into the Land of the Darmeer necessity should enforce him thereun- danians, upon the border of Macedon; a to. He added further, That all the doings long and tedious journey unto them, that and fayings of that King, did wholly tend carried with them their wives and children: fing. Now it was so indeed, that Philip much of some Thracian Princes, Lords of the repented him of his faithful obsequiousness Countries through which they were to pass. to the Romans, and forefaw their intent, which was, to get his Kingdom into their himself with the help of the wild Nations, otherwise (as to him seemed apparent) by to find affistance from any civil Nation, what means foever. He was in an ill about the whole compals of the Mediterracase: as having been already vanquished by nean Scas. But these devises were long ere them; having lost exceedingly both in they took effect: fo as the Bastarna came strength and reputation; having subjects that abhorred to hear of War with Rome; and death being the overthrow of that purpose. having neither neighbour nor friend, that, if In the mean time he neglected not the trainhe were thereto urged, would adventure to ing of his men to war, and the exercise of take his part: yet he provided as well as them in some small Expedition against those he could devile, against the necessity which wilde people that bordered upon him, and he daily feared. Such of his own people as dwelt in the maritime Towns, and gave him cause to suspect that they would do but bad fervice against the Romans, he compelled to that fell upon him, both in his Kingdom, forfake their dwellings, and removed them and in his own house. The Families and all into Emathia. The Cities and Coun-whole Townships, which he had caused much try, whence these were transplanted, he filled with a multitude of Thracians, whose faith dwellings, and betake themselves to such he thought a great deal more affured against new habitations, as he in his discretion those enemies that were terrible to the Ma- thought meeter for them, were vehemently cedonians. Further, he devised upon al- offended at the change. Yet their anger at luring the Bastarna, a strong and hardy Na- strict contained it self within words: he ha-

root out the Dardanians, and take possession of their Country. These were like to do him notable fervice against the Romans ; being not only frout fighting men, but fuch, as being planted in those quarters by him, would bear respect unto him alone, The least benefit that could be hoped by their arrival. must be the utter extirpation of the Dardanians; a people alwayes troublesome to the Kingdom of Macedon, whenfoever they found advantage. Neither was it judged any hard matter, to perswade those Bastarne, by hope of spoil, and other incitements. unto a more desperate Expedition, through Illyria, and the Countries upon the Adriatick Sea, into Italy it felf. It was not known into the Estate of Macedon. At his return and peradventure some others through unto rebellion, about which he was devi- | Philip with gifts did purchase the good will And thus he fought means to strengthen own hands; which fatety of their honour, which neither knew the Romans, nor were if they could find convenient means; or known unto them; fince he was not like not before fuch time as he was dead; his

But these his counsels and proceedings were miferably disturbed by the calamities against their wills to forsake their ancient

ration, otherwise than by neglecting their open and unwary in his actions, yet thought affection to the places wherein they had long old and crafty enough, to entertain more lived: which also he did unwillingly, being dangerous practices than his free speeches himself over-ruled by necessity, that seemed discovered. The jealous head of the King apparent. This evil therefore would foon having entertained fuch suspitions, that were have been determined, had not his cruel much increased by the cunning practice of and vindicative nature made it worfe. He his clder Son, a flight occasion made the fire could not pardon words proceeding from break out, that had long lain fmothered. A just forrow: but imputed all to traiterous Muster and ceremonious lustration of the malice; and accordingly fought revenge Army, was wont to be made at certaintimes where it was needles. In his rage he cau- with great folemnity. The manner of it at fed many to dye: among whom were fome the prefent was thus. They cleft in twain a eminent men; and few or none of them de-Birch; and threw the head and forepart, fervedly. This increased the hatred of the with the entrails, on the right hand, and the people, and turned their former exclama- hinder part on the left hand of the way tions into bitter curfes. Which grew the more which the Army was to pass. This done, the general, when the King in a barbarous and Arms of all the Kings of Macedon, from the bale fury, miftrufting all alike whom be had very first original, were born before the injured, thought himfelf unlike to be fafe, Army. Then followed the King between his until he should have massacred all the chil-two Sons: after him came his own band, dren of those Parents, whom tyrannically and they of his Guard; whom all the rest he had put to death. In the execution of of the Macedonians followed. Having perthis his unmanly pleasure, some accidents, formed other ceremonies, that Army was dimore tragical than perhaps he could have vided into two parts: which under the defired, gave men cause to think (as they Kings two Sons, charged each other in mancould not in reason think otherwise) that, ner of a true fight; using poles, and the like, not without vengeance poured on him from in fread of their pikes and accustomed wea-Heaven, he felt the like mifery in his own pons. But in this present skirmish there children. It is hard to say what the Romans appeared some extraordinary contention for intended, in the extraordinary favour which the victory: whether happening by chance, they shewed unto Demetrine, the Kings or whether the two Captains did overyounger Son. It may well be (though it may earneftly feek each to get the upper hand, be also suspected) that they had no purpole as a betokening of their good success in a to make and nourish diffention between the greater trial. Some small burt there was brethren, but only to cherifi the vertue and done, and wounds given, even with those towardiness of Demetrius; like as we find stakes, until Perseus his side at length reit in their Histories. But their notable fa- coyled. Perfens himself was forry for this, spirit, though much desective in valour. De- | go visit his brother, and see what chear he ving done them no great wrong in that alte-metrius was younger by five years, more vour towards this young Prince, and his mu- as it had been some bad presage: but his tual respect of them, bred extreme jealousie friends were glad, and thought, that herein the Fathers head. If any cultom of the of might be made good use. They were of Romans, the manner of their life, the fashion the craftier fort: who, perceiving which of their apparel, or the unfightly contriving way the Kings favour bent, and how all the and building (as then it was) of the Town courses of Demetrius led unto his own ruine, of Rome, were jested at in ordinary dif-addressed their services to the more malicicourse and table-talk; Demetrius was sure ous and crafty head. And now they said, to be presently on fire, defending and that this victory of Demetrius would afford praising them, even in such points as rather matter of complaint against him; as if the needed excule. This, and his daily conversa- heat of his ambition had carryed him tion with their Embassadours as often as beyond the rules of that solemn passime. Each they came, gave his Father cause to think, of the brethren was that day to feast his that he was no fit partaker of any counsel own companions, and each of them had spies held against them. Wherefore he commuin the others lodging, to observe what was nicated all his devices with his elder Son faid and done. One of Perfess his Intelligen-Perfeus: who fearing fo much left his brocers behaved himself so indiscreetly, that ther should step between him and the succet- he was taken and well beaten by three or fion, converted wholly unto his destruction, four of Demetrius his men, who turned him that grace which he had with his Father. out of doors. After fome flore of wine, De Perfess was then thirty years old; of a ftirring metrius told his companions, that he would

1096

kept. They agreed to his motion, except- by his own virtue, at least wife from their opiing fuch of them as had ill handled his bro- mion thereof: fo as by any impious practice. thers man: yet he would leave none of his he were more like to lose it wholly, than to train behind, but forced them all to bear increase it. In this wretched pleading there him company. They, fearing to be ill re- wanted no fuch passions, as are incident to warded for their late diligence, armed them- fathers, children, and brethren, belides those felves fecretly to prevent all danger. Yet that are common to all Plaintiffs and Dewas there fuch good espial kept, that this fendants, before ordinary Judges. The King their coming armed was forthwith made pronounced like a Father, though a jealous known to Perseus: who thereupon tumul- Father, That he would conclude nothing tuously locked up his doors, as if he stood in upon the excess or errour, whatsoever it fear to be assaulted in his house. Demetrius wondred to fee himfelf excluded, and fared very angerly with his brother. But Perfew bidding him be gone as an enemy, and whole carriage of themselves both in word one whose murdrous purpose was detected, and deed. And herein he may seem to have fent him away with an entertainment no better than defiance. The next day the mat- from this time forward he gave himself over ter was brought before the King. The elder brother accused the younger unto the Father of them both. Much there was alledged. and, in effect, the same that hath been here recited, fave that by misconstruction all was made worfe. But the main point of the accufation, and which did aggravate all the rest, sed between Demetrius and T. Quintius, or was, That Demetrius had undertaken this any other of the Roman great ones. And to murder, and would perhaps also dare to un- this purpose he sent Embassadours to Rome, dertake a greater, upon confidence of the Philocles and Apelles ; men whom he thought Romans; by whom he knew that he should no way interested in the quarrels between be defended and born out. For Perseus made the brethren, though indeed they altogether shew, as if the Romans did hate him; because | depended on the elder, whom they saw the he bore a due respect unto his Father, and more in grace. These brought home with was forry to fee him spoiled, and daily robbed them a Letter, said to be written by Titus of somewhat by them. And for this cause he faid it was, that they did animate his brother against him: as also that they fought how to win unto Demetrius the love of the Macedonians. For proof hereof he cited a Letter, fent of late from Titus Quintius to the King himself: whereof the contents were, That he had done wifely in sending Demetrius to Rome; and that he should yet further do well to fend him thither again, accompanied with a greater and more honourable train of cibly perswade the King to think his Son a That this counsel was given by Titus, of purpose to shake the allegiance of those, that trius in custody, made shew as if he had pimake them, forgetting their duties to their old King, become fervants to this young Traitor Demetrius. Hereto Demetrius made answer, by rehearing all passages of the day and night foregoing in such manner as he remembred them, and had conceived of them: ter likelihood, than he could find at home, bitterly reprehending Perseus, that converted matters of pastime, and what was done or spoken in wine, to such an accusathers death, As for the love which the Ro- on both hands, offered unto the Prince his

were, of one day and night, nor upon one hours audience of the matter, but upon better observation of their lives, manners, and dealt both justly and compassionately. But wholly to Perfew: using so little conference with his younger Son, that when he had marters of weight in hand, such especially as concerned the Romans, he liked neither to have him prefent nor near unto him. Above all he had especial care to learn out what had pas-(whose feal they had counterfeited)unto the King. The contents whereof were, A deprecation for the young Prince; with an intimation, as by way of granting it, That his youthful and ambitious defires had caufed him to enter into practices unjustifiable, against his elder brother, which yet should never take effect: for that Titus himfelf would not be author, or abettor of any impious device. This manner of excuse did for-Macedonian Lords. Hence he enforced, dangerous Traitor. To ftrengthen him in this opinion, one Didas, to whom he gave Demeshould wait upon his brother to Rome; and tied the estate of the unhappy Prince, and so wrung out of him his fecret intentions, which he shortly discovered unto Philip. It was the purpose of Demetrius to fly secretly to Rome; where he might hope not only to live in fafety, from his father and brother, but in greaof bettering such claim as he had in reversion unto the Crown of Macedon. What soever his hopes and meanings were, all came to nought tion, whereby he fought his innocent bro- through the fallhood of Didas; who, playing mans did bear him, he said that it grew, if not help for making the escape, and in the mean

Winde So Philip refolved to put his Son to thing that could give him fatisfaction, or by death, without further expence of time. It good probability induce him to think, that was thought behoveful to make him away malice had not been contriver of the whole privily, for fear left the Romans should take process. His only remaining Son Perseus privily, for real reaction and hold it as a proof could foill diffemble the pleasure which he fufficient, at leaft, of the Kings despight took in being freed from all danger of comagainst them, if not of his meaning to renew petition as there might easily be perceived against them, a not of managed managed to in him a notable change, proceeding from the war. Didas therefore was commanded to rid the unhappy Prince out of his life. This fome other cause, than the remove of those rid the unmappy rimite of this Kings unadvifed fendangers which he had lately pretended, accurfed minister of his Kings unadvifed fendangers which he had lately pretended. tence, first gave poylon to Demetrius: which The Romans were now no less to be feared wrought neither to hastily, nor to fecretly, as than at other times; when he, as having acwas defired. Hereupon he fent a couple of complished the most of his defires, left of his Ruffians, to finish the tragedy: who villain- usual trouble of mind, and carefulness of oully accomplished their work, by fmother-making provision against them. He was greatest hope of Macedon.

1008

dealt with any Prince of his own blood. The houses of Lysimachus and Cassander fell either with themselves, or even upon their heels; by intestine discord and jealousies, grounded on defire of foveraign rule, or fear of lofing if. By the like unnatural hatred, had almost been cut off the lines of much vexed: and so much the more, for Ptolomy and of Seleucus : which, though narrowly they cleaped the danger, yet were their Kingdoms thereby grievoully diftempered. Contrariwise, it was worthy of extraordinary note, how that upstart-family of the vellous greatness, in very short space, from which troubled the King, became also Kings of Pergamus had raised it self to marthe condition of meer flavery: whereof a partaker of his fecrets. This Counfellor, principal cause was, the brotherly love maintion of their piety. Neither was Philipignorant of these examples; but is said to have known whether Demetrins were guilty or no propounded the last of them to his own of the treason objected; as also that Philochildren, as a pattern for them to imitate. cles and Apelles (the Embaliadours which Certainly he had reason so to do: not more had brought from Rome that Epiftle of Flain regard of the benefit which his enemies minius, that ferved as the greatest evidence reaped by their concord, than in rememagainst Demetrius) were suspected of forgery he too late began to examine the crimes that practice of one Son, he had fo wretchedly head here of the day of had been objected; and to weigh them cast away another, far more virtuous and while revealed the whole matter to the in a more equal ballance. Then found he noouny accompanied that Prince, in whose life confisted the more diligently courted, than in former In all the race of Antigonus there had not ference between a rifing and a fetting Sun. As been found a King, that had thus cruelly for old Philip, he was left in a manner fome scarce enduring the tediousness of such expectation. This bred in the King a deep melancholy; and filled his head with suspitious imagination; the like whereof he had never been flow to apprehend. He was fectly whereof to complain. One honourable man, a Couzen of his, named Antigonus, continued fo true to Philip, that he grew thereby hateful to Perfeus: and thus becoming subject unto the same jealous impressions against Perseus would not vent it self, and brance of the tender fosterage, wherewith in the business: made diligent enquiry after King Antigonus his Tutor had faithfully the truth. In thus doing he found one cherished him in his minority. But he was Xychus, a man most likely to have understood himself of an unmerciful nature 5 and there- what false dealing was used by those Embasfore unmeet to be a good perfivader unto fadors. Him he apprehended, brought to the kindly affection. The murders by him done Court, and prefented unto the King: faying, upon many of his friends, together with the that this fellow knew all, and must there barbarous outrages, which for the fatiating fore be made to utter what he knew. Xychus of his blood-thirfty appetite, he delightful- for fear of torture, uttered as much as was ly had committed upon many innocents, both before suspected: confessing against himself, ffrangers and fubjects of his own; did now that he had been employed by the Embaliaprocure vengeance down from Heaven, dours in that wicked piece of business. No that rewarded him with a draught of his marvel if the Fathers passions were extreme, own poyfon. After the death of his Son, when he understood that by the unnatural innocent. He raged exceedingly against himfelf, and withall against the Authors of the mischief. Upon the first news of this discovery, Apelles fled away, and got into Italy; Philocles was taken : and either for a much as he could not deny it when Xychus confronted him, yielded himself guilty; or else was put to torture. Perseus was now grown stronger, than that he should need to fly the had been taken, long before, both for the Country: yet not fo frout as to adventure free paffage, and for the indempnity of himself into his fathers presence. He kept on the Country. This Compact was friendly the borders of the Kingdom towards observed, as long as no other was known Thrace, whilst his father wintred at Demetri- than that Philip did live to recompence all 28. Philip therefore, not hoping to get into that should be done, or sustained, for his ferhis power this his ungracious son, took a vice. But when it was heard, that a new resolution, to aliene the Kingdom from him, King reigned in Macedon; and not heard and confer it upon Antigonus. But his weak withal, that he took any care what became body, and excessive grief of mind, so of the enterprize: then was all dasht and condifabled him in the travel thereto belong- founded. The Thracians would no longer ing, that ere he could bring his purpose to afford so good markets unto these strangers. effect, he was constrained to yield to nature. as formerly they had done. On the other He had reigned about two and forty years: fide, the Baftarne would not be contented alwayes full oftrouble; as vexed by others, with reason, but became their own carvers. and vexing himself with continual wars; of Thuseach part having lost their rich hopes which that with the Romans was most un reposed in Philip, grew careful of thriving in happy, and few or none of the rest found the present; with little regard of right or the conclusion, which a wife Prince would wrong. Within a while they fell to blows; have defired, of bringing forth together and the Baffarne had the upper hand, so as both honour and profit. But for all the they chafed the Thracians out of the plain

edly gotten.

became more obnoxious to Rome, than in delightful spectacles, magnificently by him

ø. IV.

former times. Further quarrels to Perfeus. He feeks friendship of the Achaans, and is withflood by Callicrates. The Romans discover their intent of warring upon him.

Mmediately upon the death of Philip, came the Baftarne into Thrace; where order evil that befell him, he might thank his Countrys. But the victors made little use of own perverse condition: fince his Uncle, their good fortune. For whether by reason King Antigonus, had left unto him an estate, of some overthrow, received by them in asfo great, and so well settled, as made it easie faulting a place of strength; or whether befor him, to accomplish any moderate desires, cause of extream bad weather, which is said if he had not abhorred all good counsel, to have afflicted them as it were miraculous-Wherefore he was justly punished by feeling ly:all of them returned home, save thirty thousand, which pierced on into Dardania. the difference between the imaginary happiness of a Tyrant, which he affected, and How these thirty thousand sped in their voythe life of a King, whereof he little cared to age, I do not find. It feems that by the careperform the duty. His death, even whilft less using of some victories, they drew loss yet it was only drawing near, was fore-figni- upon themselves : and finally took that ocfied unto Perseus, by Caligenes the Physician, casion, to follow their companions back inwho also concealed it a while from those to their own Country. that were about the Court. So Perseus

As for Perfers, he thought it not expedicame thither on the sudden, and took post ent, in the novelty of his reign, to embroil fession of the Kingdom: which in fine he himself in a war so dangerous, as that with no less improvidently lost, than he had wick- the Romans was likely to prove. Wherefore he wholly gave his mind to the fetling of his Estate, which well done, he might afterwards accommodate himfelf, as the condition of his affairs should require, either for How the Bastarnæ fell upon Dardania. The be- war or peace. To prevent all danger of rehaviour of Perseus in the beginning of his reign. Some wars of the Romans: and how tigonus. To winslove of his people, he sate they suffered Masanissa cruelly to oppress the personally to hear their causes in judgement, Carthaginians. They quarrelled with Per- (though herein he was so over-diligent and feus. They allow not their Confederates to curious, that one might have perceived this make war without their leave obtained. The his vertue of justice to be no better than fai-Treason of Callicrates, whereby all Greece ned) as also he gratified them with many necessity of war with Rome: and therefore made lamentable complaint unto the Romade it his first work, to fend Embassadors man Senate. They shewed now grievously thither, to renew the league; which he ob- they were oppressed by reason of two Artained, and was by the Senate faluted King, tieles in their League: That they should not and friend ento the State. Neither was he make war out of their own Lands; nor negligent in feeking to purchase good will of with any Confederates of the Romans, Now the Greeks, and other his neighbours: but although it were so that they might lawwas rather berein to excellively bountiful, fully withfrand the violence of Mafaniffa, inthat it may feem a wonder how in few years, vading their Country, howfoever he was to his utter ruine, he became so griping and pleased to call it his: yet since he was Contenacious. His fear was indeed the mastring federate with the Romans, they durst not paffion which over-ruled him, and changed prefume to bear defensive arms against him, him into fo many shapes, as made it hard to but suffered themselves to be eaten up, for differn which of his other qualities were na- fear of incurring the Romans indignation. turally his own. For proof of this, there is Wherefore they intreated, that they might requisite no more, than the relation of his have fairer justice; or be suffered to deactions paft and following.

buffe in wars against the spaniards and Li- | That the Romans yet would be pleafed to garians; people often vanquished, and as determine, how far forth Mafanisa should often breaking forth into new rebellion. be allowed to proceed in these outrages. If They also conquered ffria; subdued the re- none of these petitions could be obtained. belling sardinians; and had some quarrels, then defired they, that the Romans would though to little effect, with the Illyrians and others. Over the Carthaginians they bore (as ever fince the victory) a heavy hand; and | peace; and vouchlafe to inflict on them such inflered Majaniffa to take from them what punishment as they themselves in honour he lifted. The Carthoginians, like obedient | thould think meet: for that better and more Valials to Rome, were affraid, though in de- to their comfort it were, to fuffer at once fence of their own, to take arms: from what should be appointed by such Judges; which they were bound by an Article of than continually to live in fear, and none peace, except it were with leave of the Ro- otherwise draw breath, than at the mercy of mans. Alafanisfa therefore had great advanthis Numidian Hangman. And herewithal tage over them, and was not ignorant how to the Embassadors threw themselves prostrate use it. He could get pessession by force, of on the ground, weeping; in hope to move whatfoever he defired, ere their complain- compaftion. ing Embassaders could be at Rome: and then were the Romans not hardly entreated to envyto that valiant house of the Eureliner; leave things as they found them.

did he tile them again and again; with pre- of expence when they had adventured their tence of title, where he had any 5 otherwife, whole effate in the purchase of a great Emwithout it. Gala the Father of Majaniffa had pire. Now are they fervants, even to theserwon fome land from the Carthaginians 3 vants of those men, whose fathers they have which afterward syphax wan from Gala, often chased, slain, taken and sold as bondand within a while, reflored to the right flaves in the firects of Carthage, and in all Ciowners, for love of his wife sophonista, and tics of Africk and Greece. Now have they of Afterubal his father-in-law. This did Ma- enough of that Roman peace, which Homo lo fanifia take from them by force: and by the often and so earnestly desired. Only they Romans (to whose judgement the case was want peace with Majanifia, once their merreferred) was permitted quietly to hold it cenary, and now their mafter or rather their The Carthaginians had now good experitormentor; out of whose cruel hands, they beence, how beneficial it was for their Estate, feech their masters to take the office of corto use all suanner of submillive obedience to recting them. In such case are they, and adore Rome. They had fearcely digested this in the Romans, whom they see flour shing in such jury, when Majanifa came upon them prosperity as might have been their own.But again, and took from them above feventy the Romans had far better entreated Farro, Towns and Castles, without any colour of who lost the battel at Canna; than Hamibal.

fet forth. Above all he had care to avoid all right. Hereof by their Embaffadors, they fend their own by strong hand; or at least, The Romans continued, as they had long, if right must wholly give place to favour. let them understand, wherein they had offended fince the time that Scipio gave them

Here may we behold the fruits of their of their irrefolution in profecuting a war fo So had he once dealt before, in taking important, as Hannibal made for them in Haly; from them the Country of Emporia: and fo and of their half-penny-worthing in matter they had freely bestowed, every man of do well to send Embassadors, more fully inthem, all his private riches upon the Com- structed in this matter. This happened when mon-wealth; and employed their labours for the Macedonian war was even ready to the publick, without craving recompence : as | begin : at which time the Romans were not also they had not thought it much, willing too much to offend, either the Carthough being in extream want, to set out an thaginians (for sear of urging them unseasons). Army into Spain, at what time the enemy lay nably to rebellion) or Mafanissa, at whose under their own walls. These were no Car- hands they expected no little help. So were thaginian vertues: and therefore the Cartha- they aided both by the Carthaginians, and junans, having fought against their betters, majanifa: by the Carthaginians, partly for mult patiently endure the miseries belong fear, partly for hope of better usage in the ing to the vanquished. Their pitiful beha- future; by Masanija, in way of thankfulnes; viour bred peradventure some commisera- though if it had happned (which was unliketion; yet their tears may feem to have ly) that they should be vanquished; he made envy to the Romans, than from any feel- round about him, and Carthage therewithal, ing of their own calamity. They thought should be his own. themselves able to fight with Masanisa: In the midst of all these cares, the Romans which estimation of their forces was able to had not been unmindful of Perseus. They vimake them, after a little while, enter into fitted him daily with Embassadors; that is, comparisons with Rome. Wherefore they with honourable spies to observe his behaviobtained not such leave as they fought, of our. These he entertained kindly at first, defending their own right by arms: but until (which fell out ere long) he perceived contrariwise, when without leave obtained, whereto their diligence tended. First they they prefumed fo far, the destruction of Car- quarrelled with him about the troubles in thage was thought an easie punishment of Dardania: neither would they take any satisthat offence. At the present, they received faction, until the Bastarna were thence gone; a gentle answer; though they had otherwise though he protested, that he had not sent for little amends. Guluffa the fon of Mafaniffa them. Afterward they pried narrowly into was then in Rome, and had not as yet cra- his doings; and were no less ill contented ved audience. He therefore was called be- with good offices, by him done, to fundry of fore the Senate; where he was demanded his neighbours, than with those wrongs, the reason of his comings and had related un- which (they said) he did unto other some. to him the complaint made by the Carthagi- Where he did harm to any; they called it nians against his father. He answered, That making war upon their friends. Where he did his Father not being throughly aware of good; they called fuch his bounty, feeking any Embassadors thither sent from Carthage, triends to take his part against them. The had therfore not given him inftructions, Dolopians, his subjects, (upon what occasion how to deal in that business. Only it was it is uncertain) rebelled, and with exquisite known, that the Carthaginians had held torments slew Euphranor, whom he had ap-Councel divers nights, in the Temple of pointed their Governour. It seems that Eu-Æsculapius: whereupon he himself was dif- phranor had played the Tyrant among them. patched away to Rome, there to intreat the For they were a people without fireigth to Senate, that these common enemies of the refist the Macedonian: and therefore unlike-Romans, and of his Father, might not be over-much trufted; especially against his Father, had been extreamly provoked; or else were whom they hated most maliciously, for his secretly animated by the Romans. Whatsoconstant faith to the people of Rome. This ever it was that bred this courage in them, answer gave little satisfaction. Wherefore Perseus did soon allay it, and reclaim them by the Senate replyed, that for Mafanissa his strong hand. But the Romans took very anfake, they had done, and would do, whatfo- gerly this prelumption of the King: even as ever was reasonable 3 but that it stood not if he had invaded some Country of their Hawith their justice, to allow of this his vio- lian Confederates, and not corrected his lence, in taking from the Carthaginians, those own rebels at home. Fain they would have Lands, which by the covenants of the League had him to draw in the same yoke with the were granted unto them freely to enjoy. Carthaginians; whereunto had he humbled With this mild rebuke they dismissed Gu- once his neck, they could themselves have liffa; bestowing on him friendly presents (as done the part of Masanista; though Eumenes, also they did on the Carthaginians) and or some other fit for that purpose, had been that wan it was used by the Carthaginians: willed him to tell his Father, that he should been mistrusted, as proceeding no less from none other account, than that all Africk

Zżżzzź 2

1102

tween them were fuch as made it unlawful finians far fooner than was expected; and both to his Father heretofore, and now to when as not only no Town rebelled from the him, to take arms without their licence first Achaans, but many entered into their Corobtained.

their adherents, even fuch as had entred into league with them upon equal terms: whom of the City,) That they had firaightly forufually they rewarded with a frown, when-bidden all manner of fuccour to be carried to foever they prefumed to right themselves Melsene. Thus thinking, by a fained graby force of Arms, without feeking first the vity, to have served their own turns, they Oracle at Rome. Hercof the Acheans had manifested their condition; both to set on good experience: whose confidence in their the weaker against the stronger and more proper strength, made them otherwhiles suspected, and also to assume unto thembold to be their own carvers; and whose hope felves a Soveraign power, in directing all of extraordinary favour at Konje caused matters of war, which diffemblingly they them the more willingly to refer their causes | would have seemed to neglest. In like manto arbitrement. For when they went about ner dealt they with all their Confederates: to have chastifed the Mefferian by war; not permitting any of them to make war; T. Quinting rebuked them, as too arrogent, in whether of enlive or defensive; though it taking fuch a work in hand, without his au- were against meer strangers; without inthority: yet by his authority he ended the terpoling the authority of the Senate and matter, wholly to their good liking. Sem- people of Rome: unless peradventure, someblably at other times were they reprehend- times they winked at fuch violence, as did ed, even with Lordly threats, when they help towards the accomplifhment of their took upon them to carry any business of importance, by their own power, without stand- Arts, howsoever many (for gainful or tiing unto the good grace of the Romans. Who merous respects) would feem to understand nevertheless upon submission, were apt them; yet were generally displeasing unenough to do them right. Thus were they to all men endued with free spirits. Only tamed by little and little, and taught to for- the Athenians, once the most turbulent Ciget their absolute liberty, as by which they ty in Greece, having neither subjects of their were not like to thrive; especially in usurping own that might rebel, nor power wherethe practice of Arms, which belonged only to with to bring any into subjection; for want the Imperial City. In learning this hard lef-of more noble argument wherein to practife fon, they were such untoward Schollers, that their eloquence that was become the whole remainder of their ancient commendations, 51.6 55; they needed, and not long after felt, very remainder of their ancient commendations, sharp correction. Yet was there no smal part were much delighted in flattering the most of blame to be imputed unto their Masters. mighty. So they kept themselves in grace For the Roman Senate, being defirous to hum- with the Romans, remaining free from all ble the scheans, refused not only to give trouble, until the war of Mithridates: being them fuch aid as they requested, and as they men unfit for action, and thereby innocent; challenged by the tenor of the League be- yet bearing a part in many great actions, as tween them; but further, with a careless in Gratulators of the Roman victories, and the Common-wealth of Achaia was like to much better it were to bow, than to fall into much diffres: were it not upheld break. by countenance of the Romans. All this wanting. And to this effect, they told him, notwithstanding; when Lycortas Prætor of That the Conditions of the League bethe Acheans had utterly subdued the Megporation; then did the Romans with an ill-To the same pass they would also sain savoured grace, tell the same Embassadors, have reduced the Greeks, and generally all to whose petition they had made such bad folency, rejected this honeft and reasonable Pardon-cravers for the vanquished. Such petition, That the Enemy might not be fup- were the Athenians become. As for those plied from Haly, with victuals or arms. Here- other Common weals and Kingdoms, that with not content, the Fathers, as wearied with over-nice diligence, strove to preserve with dealing in the affairs of Greece, pronountheir Liberties and Lands from confuced openly, That if the Argives, Lacedemoni- ming by piece-meal: they were to be ans, or Corinthians would revolt from the devoured whole, and swallowed up at Acheans; they themselves would think it a once. Especially the Macedonian, as the most unpliant, and wherein many of This was prefently after the death of Philogemen: at what time it was believed, that Neither Perseus, nor the Romans were ignorant, how the Greeks at this time frood | Country, than to let any other be of more affected. Perfeus, by reason of his neer neigh- authority than himself therein. Wherefore bourhood, and of the daily commerce be- in stead of well discharging his credence, and tween them and his subjects, could not alledging what was meetest in justification of want good information of all that might his people, he uttered a quite contrary tale; concern him, in their affairs. He well knew, and strongly encouraged the Romans, to opthat all of them now apprehended the dan- press both the Acheans, and all the rest of ger which Philopamen had long fince fore- Greece, with a far more heavy hand. He told told, of the milerable subjection, whereinto the Senate, that it was high time for them, to Greece was likely to be reduced, by the look unto the fetling of their authority, Roman Patronage. Indeed they not only among his froward Countrimen: if they perceived the approaching danger, but as meant not wholly to forego it. For now being tenderly fenfible of their liberty, felt there was taken up a custome, to stand upon themselves grieved with the present subje- points of confederacy, and laws: as if these ction, whereto already they were become were principally to be had in regard, any inobnoxious. Wherefore though none of them junction from Rome notwithstanding. had the courage, in matters of the publick Hence grew it, that the Acheans, both now, to fall out with the Romans; yet all of them and at other times, did what best pleased had the care to choose among themselves themselves, and answered the Romans with none other Magistrates, than such as affer excuses: as if it were enough to say, That cted the good of their Country, & would for by some condition of League, or by force no ambition, or other fervile respect, be flat- of some Law, they were discharged or terers of the greatness which kept all in fear. hindred from obeying the Decrees of the Thus it feemed likely, that all domestical Senate. This would not be so, if he, and conspiracies would soon be at an end ; when some other of his opinion might have their honesty, and love of the Common-weal, became the fairest way to preferment. Of this Columns, or Monuments, erected, nor no careful provision for the fafety of Greece, the folemn oath of the whole Nation, to ratifie Romans were not throughly advertifed: the observance of Confederacy or Statute, either because things were diligently concealed from their Embassadors; whom all willed the contrary. But it was even the men knew to be little better then spies; or fault of the Romans themselves, that the because little account was made of that in- multitude refused to give ear unto such pertelligence, which was brought in by fuch swasions. For howsoever in popular Estates, Traitors (of whom every City in Greece had the found of liberty used to be more too many) as were men unregarded among plaufible, than any discourse tending against their own people, and therefore more like to it : yet if they which undertook the mainspeak maliciously than truly; or perhaps tenance of an argument, seeming never so because the Embassadors themselves, being bad, were sure by their so doing, to proall Senators, and capable of the greatest Of- cure their own good; the number of them fice or charge, had no will to find out other would increase apace, and they become the matter of trouble, than was fitting to their prevalent faction. It was therefore, strange own defires of employment. But it is hard how the Fathers could fo neglect the adto conceal that which many know, from vancement of those, that sought wholly to those that are feared or flattered by many. enlarge the amplitude of the Roman maje-The Acheans being to fend Embassadors to sty. More wifely, though with seditious and Rome, that should both excuse them, as touch- rebellious purpose, did the Greeks; who maing some point wherein they refused to obey | ny times, yea and ordinarily, conferred great the Senate; and inform the Senate better in honours, upon men otherwise of little acthe same business: chose one Callicrates, count or desert, only for having uttered some among others, to go in that Embassage. By brave words against the Romans. The Fathers their making choice of fuch a man. one may hearing these and the like reasons, wherwith perceive the advantage, which mischievous he exhorted them to handle roughly those wretches, who commonly are forward in pur- that were obstinate, and by cherishing their fuing their vile defires, have against the friends, to make their party strong; resolplain fort of honest men, that least earnestly ved to follow this good counsel, in every thrust themselves into the troublesome bu- point; yea to depress all those that held finels of the weal-publick. For this Callicrates with the right, and to set up their own folwas in fuch wife transported with ambition, lowers, were it by right or by wrong. And Pol. Lie. that he chose much rather to betray his to this end, they not only dealt thenceforth is.

Herewithall he took upon him, fomewhat liberally, to make the Acheans beforehand upon Perseus from Rome. He told them how

Philip had made preparations for the same

War; how Demetrius had been made away, because of his good affection to the Romans;

and how Perfeus had, fince his being King, done many things, tending to the breach of peace. Briefly, He rehearled all those matters, which were afterwards alledged by the Romans; the invation of the Bastarna, upon the Dardanians; the Kings journey against the Dolopians; his voyage to Delphi; and finally, his peaceable behaviour, which was (he faid) a dangerous temptation of men to his party. Wherefore he advised them to expect the event of things, and not over-halfily cause of War was given.

CHAP. V 1.

CHAP. VI.

1104

had been their manner informer times ; but some acts of hostility in his passage. Yet, as wrote at the prefent unto all Cities of Greece, if he ought not to have taken fuch a journey, requiring them to see that their mandate without their licence; this also was made a (which was concerning the reflitution of valuable matter, and cast into the heap of those that were banished out of Lacedemon) his faults. He laboured greatly to recover the should be fulfilled. Particularly in behalf of love of the Acheans: which his Father had fo Callierates, they advited all men to be fuch, loft, that by a folemn decree, they forbade and fo affected, as he was, in their feveral any Macedonians to enter their territories, common-weals. With this diffratch, Caili- It was jealoufie perhaps, no less than hatred, order returned home a joyful man: having which caused them, at the first, to make such brought his Country into the way of rune. a decree. For howfoever Philip had by mabut himfelf into the way of preferment. Nevertheless he forbore to vaunt himself of his two Arati, given them cause to abhor him; cloquence used in the Senate. Only he so re-yet in the publick administration of their ported his Embassage, that all men became estate, he had, for the more part, been to fearful of the danger, wherewith he threat them fo beneficial, that not without much ned those that should presume to oppose the ado, and at length, without any general con-Romans By fuch Arts he obtained to be made fent, they refolve to forfake him. Where-Practor of the Ackeans: in which Magi- fore it was needful, even for prefervation of ftracy, as in all his courses following, he concerd among them, to use all circumspeomitted nothing, that might ferve to manifeft thon, that he might not, by his agents, negohis ready obsequiousness unto those whom tiate, and hold intelligence with any, in a he had made his Patrons.

Now, as the Romans by threatning-terms wan many flatterers, and loft as many true friends: fo Perfess on the other fide, thinking by liberal gifts, and hopeful promifes, to affureunto himielf those that ill could brook when all danger of innovation was past, his enemies; got indeed a multitude of was uncivil, if not inhumane; as nounihing partakers, though little honester than his deadly hatred, without leaving means of reenemies had. Thus were all the Cities of conciliation. And hereof the Achaans reaped Greece diffracted with factions: fome hold- no good fruit. For, although they were not, ing with the Romans, fome with the Mucedo in like fort, forbidden the Kingdom of Manian, and some sew respecting only the good | cedon: yet understanding what would be due of the Estates wherein they lived. Hereat the to them, if they should adventure thither, Lords of the Senate were highly offended; none of them durft fet foot therein, Hence and thought it an indignity not sufferable, it came to pass, that their bond-men, know-That a King, no better than their Vassal, ing a safe harbour, out of which their Mashould dare to become head of a faction sters could not fetch them, ran daily away against them. This therefore must be reckon- in great numbers : exceedingly to the loss of ed in the number of his trespasses: whereof such, as made of their slaves very profiif not any one alone, yet all of them together, table use. But Perfess took hold upon this fhall afford them just occasion to make War occasion: as fitly serving to pacific those, upon him. Perfeus having finished his business | whose enmity fain he would have changed among the Dolopians, made a journey to into love. He therefore apprehended all neighbours. The Romans perhaps could none other, than a plain device, to make them have been pleased better, if he had behaved depart from the friendship of the Romans.

more peremptorily with the Acheans, than himself after a contrary fashion, and done Country towards him to doubtfully affected: especially when by hearkening to his meffages, they might make themselves suspected by their new friends. But the continuance of this decree, beyond the time of War, and Apollo his Temple at Delphi. He took his Ar these fugitives, to send them home again: my along with him: yet went, and returned and wrote unto the Acheans, That as for in such peaceable and friendly wise, that no good will unto them, he had taken pairs place was the worfe for his journey, but the to reftore back their fervants, fo fould they good affection towards him generally increa- do very well to take order for keeping them, led thereby. With those that were in his that hereaftet they might not run away way, he dealt himself; to such as lay further again. His meaning was readily understood, off, he sent Embassadours or Letters: praying and his Letters kindly accepted by the greathem, That the memory of all wrongs whatfoever, done by his Father, might be buried tor, before the Councel. But Callierates took with his Father; fince his own meaning was the matter very angerly; and bade them be to hold friendship sincerely with all his advised what they did: for that this was

s. V.

acquainted with the War, that was coming | How Eumenes King of Pergamus was bufied with Pharnaces, the Rhodians, and others. His hatred to the Maccdonian: whom he accuseth to the Roman Senate. The Senate bonours him greatly, and contemns his enemies the Rhodians; with the causes thereof, The unufual frontness of the Macedonian Embassadours. Perseus his attempt upon Eumenes. The brotherly love between Eumenes and Attalus. Perfeus his device to poylon fome of the Roman Senators : whereupon they decree War against him, and fend him defiance. Other things concerning the justice of this War.

"Umenes King of Pergamns had been troubled about these times, by the Kings to enter into any degree of friendship with the Macedonians. Hereto good answer was Pharnaces and Mithridates, his neighbours. made by the Prators brother: That Calli- He had taken the right course, in making Pol. Lescrates was too carnest in so light a matter; first his complaint to the Romans: by whom 56 6 55 and that, being neither one of the Kings he was animated with comfortable words, Cabinet, nor of the Roman Senate, he and promife, That they, by their authorimade himself too well acquainted with all ty, would end the business to his content. that had passed, or was like to follow. But in conclusion, by the help of the Kings, For it was well known, that Perseus had Prusias and Ariarathes, he ended the War renewed his League with the Romans; that himself; and brought his Enemies to seek he was by them faluted King, and friend to and accept peace, on fuch conditions as the Estate; and that he had lovingly en- pleased him to give them. After this, being tertained their Embassiadours: This being so; at good leisure; he began to consider how why might not the Acheans, as well as the the affairs of Mucedon stood under Persens. Atolians, Theffalians, Epirots, and all the His hatred to Perfeus was very great: and Greeks, hold with him fuch correspondence, therefore he was glad to understand, that as common humanity required? Neverthe- the hatred of the Romans, to the same his less Callicrates was grown a man so terrible, Enemy was as great, and withall notorious. by his Roman acquaintance, that they durst Now, besides his ancient and hereditary not over-fliffly gainlay him. Therefore quarrel with the Macedonian; it vexed him the matter was referred unto further deli- exceedingly, That his own honours (whereberation: and answer made the whilst, That of the Greeks, prodigal in that kind, had fince the King had only fent a Letter with- heaped immoderate store on his Father and out an Embaffadour, they knew not how to him) began to wax every where stale: resolve. Better it was to say thus, than, that whilest Perseus, either by his currying fathey were afraid to do as they thought most vour, or by the envy born to the Romans, reasonable and convenient. But when Per- had gotten their best liking and wishes. For fens herewith not contented, would needs despight of this indignity, Hestirred up the urge them further, and fend Embafiadours: Lycians against the Rhodians his old friends: then were they fain, without any good pre- and in helping these rebels, was so violent, tence, to put on a countenance of anger, and that he proceeded, in a manner, in open War, deny to give audience : which was prooffuf- But fmall pleasure found he in these poor ficient (to one that could understand) of and indirect courses of revenge. the condition wherein they lived. For

The Lycians could not be laved by his Pahearkening to this advice of Callierates; tronage from severe and cruel chastisement, Polite Ligar they were soon after highly commended by given to them by the Rhodians. This render-74 a Roman Embassadour: whereby it became ed him contemptible: as likewise, his acts intended War of hostility, little different from robberies, upon the Macedonian; though hitherto no made him hateful to those which loved him before. As for his honours in the Cities of Greece; they not only continued falling into neglect; but were abrogated by a decree

him beyond the proportion of his defer-nized with great concourse of Embassages vings. All this (which he needed not to from all quarters. Neither spared he totell Livel, 4: have regarded, had he not been too vainly them, (though feeming both to utter it plainambitious) befell him; especially for his ly) That even the envy to their Estate was being over serviceable to the Romans, and the cause, why many that could not endure for his malice to that noble Kingdom, which to hear of amity with Philip, were now if it fell, the liberty of Greece was not like to grown marvelloufly well affected to his fland. Now for the redrefs hereof, he thought it vain to strive any longer with bounts, against such an Adversary, as by hopeful (as that he had procured the death of some promises alone, without any great perfer- which were friends to the Romans, and that promies alone, without any great perfect which were find to the Romans, and that mance, had over-topped him in the general he had expelled Abrypolis the Illgrian. favour. And therefore he resolved even to who invaded Macedon, out of his Kingdom, overturn the foundations of this popularity, or Lordship) Eumenes failed not to amplifie by inducing the Romans utterly to take unto the most; saying, That he thought it away from the eyes of men this Idol, the his duty to forewarn them: fince it would Macedonian Kingdom, which all so vainly be to himself a great shame, if Fersens got the worshipped. Neither would it prove a disti- start of him, and were in Haly making War cult matter, to perswade those that were already defirous: rather he was like to be thicher to tell them of the danger. highly thanked, for fetting forward their withes; and perhaps to be recompenced with fome piece of the Kingdom, as he had been should fet upon them in Italy. Nevertheles, rewarded, for the like fervice, when Antioches was vanquished.

Rome: where, though he had little to fay, ther hurt intended: great thanks were which they knew not before, yet his words given to Eumener, who had every way furwere heard with fuch attention, as if they nished them with such goodly colour, to had contained some strange nevelty; and so beautific their intendment. Now, though it pondered by the Fathers, as if the weight of were fo, that he told them little elfe than them were to turn the ballance, that before what they knew before : yet his person, and was equal. The death of Demetrius, the expedition of the Taftarne into Dardania, that greater. For if upon any relation made by of Perfeus himself against the Dologian, and their own Embassadours, or upon tales devito Delphi, the great estimation of the Ma- led by their flatterers and spyes, they had cedonian in Grecce, his intermeddling in bu- warred against Persens, ere he had committed fines of his neighbours, his riches and his great provisions, were all the material injustice and oppression would have been points of Eumenes his discourse. Only he most manifest. But when the wrongstothem descended unto particulars, having searched done, were so notorious, and the danger into all (as he professed) like unto a Spy. He threatning them so terrible, that such a Prince faid, that Perfeus had thirty thousand foot, as Eumens came out of his own Kingdom, as and five thousand horse, of his own, mony in far as from Asia, to bid them look to them. Perfers not wooing, but selences offering the he would speak; and with matter of rectimatch; That King Prussias of Bithynia, by mination. The vanity, either of him, of some decree of the Acheans, as too unmeasured, earnest fuit, had gotten to wife the Sister of milbelceming them to give, and affected by Perseus, and that these marriages were folemupon the Romans, ere Eumenes could come

It were too great folly, to believe that the Romans stood in fear of Persens, lest he for a fmuch as they loved not to make war without fair pretence, not only of wrong To this end he made a second voyage to done to them or their associates, but of fura readiness to entertain ten thousand Mer- selves; who could blame them, if they took cenaries for ten years. Arms to furnifi a took the speedicst order to obtain their own number thrice as great: The Thracians his right and security? Toward this justificafriends at hand, ready, at a call, to bring him tion of the war, and magnifying the neces Souldiers as many as he should require; and that he prepared victuals for ten years, than usual curiosity, in concealing what because he would not be driven, either to Eumenes had uttered in the Senate, when live upon spoil, or to take from his own they could not but understand that his er-Subjects. Herewithall he prayed them to rand was well known; helped not a little confider, that King Scleucus, the Son and The Macedonian and Rhodian Embashadours fuccessor of Antiochus the Great, had given were at Rome, provided of answers to the his Daughter Laodice in marriage to Perseus; words, which they knew before hand that CHAP. VI. the weariness of the Fathers, in hiding that travel in this kind proved vain, then would which all men knew, made a notable shew he be ready to defend himself by arms, and of some fearful apprehension; against which, stand to the chance of war, which often falls it behoved their wisdom to neglect no pos- out contrary to expectation. These bigg fible remedy. Wherefore careless audience words may seem to have proceeded from was given to the Rhodian Embaffadors; who the vehemency of Harpalus, that was chief accused Eumenes, as one more troublesome of the Embassadors; rather than from into Asia, than Antiochus had ever been, and struction given by the King, with whose a provoker of the Lycians to rebellion. The faint heart they agreed not. Yet was there Rhodians had with great pomp conveighed good reason, why Persons himself might, at by Sea unto Perseus, his Bride Laodice; this time, think to speed better by a shew of Holiati Romans, to alien quite from their own pro- to a work of fuch importance. Whefore he, tection any people or Nation by them van- or his Embafiador for him, was bold to quished: and that the Lycians were by them fet a good countenance on a game not very affigned unto those of Rhodes, not as meer bad, but subject (in appearance) to fortune, vassals, but as dependants and associates. which might have been his, had he known For proof hereof, they referred themselves how to use it. unto the Commentaries of the ten Emballadors; whom they had fent to dispose of things termed than courage) proceeded from the in Asa, after the victory against King Kings own heat; it appears by his daring to Antiochus. Hereat Eumenes, Masanissa, the adventure soon after, on a practice that Etolians, and all other Kings or Etiates that more justly might anger the Romans, and were beholding to Rome for increasing the give them fairer show of reason to make war number of their subjects, had cause to find upon him. It was known that Eumenes, in themselves agrieved, if they well conside- returning home, would take Delphi in his way red the matter: fince by force of this or the and there do facrifice to Apollo. Perfeus deadlike decree, those their subjects might ea- ly hating him, and thirsting after his blood, fily be made their fellows, whenfoever it resolved to way-lay him, and by making should please the Senate: though it were so, there of him a sacrifice, to rid his own hands that all men knew the present meaning of the of a most mischievous enemy. So there were Senate: which was only to plague the Rhodians for their good will to Perfens, by fetting them and the Lycians together by the ears. a broken mud-wall, on the fide of a very The Fathers could therefore see no reason to narrow path leading up from the Sea to the dislike Eumenes, upon this complaint made Temple, did thence assault the King ; whom by the Rhodian Embaffadors, which indeed they forely bruifed with great stones, and more neerly touched themselves. Rather left for dead. They might have finished they honoured the King so much the more: their work, such was the opportunity of for that others (as they would needs take it) the place which they had chofen; but fear of conspired against him, because of his love to being apprehended, made them, without Rome.

venture it well contented them to find cause he should not discover them. Eumener was of anger. For whereas at other times all conveighed away to the little Isle of Ægina, care had been taken, to pacific them with where he was cured being all the while kept gentle words and excuses: now heard they fo secretly, that the same of his death was plainer language, and were told, That King current in Ma. Hence it came, that his brother Perfeus defired much to give them fatisfacti- Attalus took upon him as King, and either on, concerning any deed or word of his, took or would have taken to wife (supposing about him, seems to have disclosed all: when that might favour of hostility; but that, if his which friendly office, as the Macedonian daring, than he was like to do by any subbountifully required, fo the Romans de-miffion. For the eyes of all Greece being fpightfully accepted. Hence it grew, that now cast upon him, as on the greatest hope when the Lycians, as already vanquished, of deliverance from the Roman fervitude; it to be of, were setting themselves in their obedience to was not expedient, that he should lessen, or the people of Rhodes, Embassiadors came from perhaps utterly cut off, the general expecta-Rome with strange news, which gave new life tion, and the good affection born to him, to the rebellion. For the Senate pronounced which thereon depended, by discovering his That it flood not with the manner of the too much weakness of spirit, unanswerable

Now that this bravery (as better it may be staying to see all sure, fiee in such haste, that But the Mucedonian Embassiage they heard they killed one of their own companions, not fo carelelly as angrily: though perad- who could not hold pace with them; because daughter of King Ariarathes, whom he then lity; sure in operation, yet not to be perceithought the Widow of Eumenes. It may well ved either in the taking or afterward. He be numbred among the rare examples of durst not refule to accept this employbrotherly love, That when the King turned ment: for fear left the vertue of this medialive home, Attalus going forth to meet him cine should be tryed upon himself. But being and do his duty, as in former times, received once at liberty, he discovered all. Rammins none other check, than, that he flould forbear was but one man, and one whom the King to marry with the Queen untill he were well had never feen before, nor was like to fee affired of the Kings death. More than this, again: and therefore, befides that the Kings Eumenes never spake of these matters; but denial ought to be as good as such a fellows bequeathed at his death, unto the same bro- affirmation, the accusation was improbable. ther, both his Wife and Kingdom As likewife Thus did Perseus, in time shortly following. Attalus forbore to attempt any thing to the answer for himself; and in like fort concerprejudice of the King his Brother: though the ning the attempt upon Eumenes: denying to Romans (with whom he continued and grew have had any hand, either in the one or in special favour, when Eumenes fell into other: yet withall protessing; That such their hatred) were in good readiness, to have objections were not to be made unto a King, transferred the Kingdom from his Brother to prove the rightfulness of making war with the Romans, to the benefit of Perfeus. he understood that his Ministers had both very suitable to these practices. Neither did accomplished his will, and had saved all from the Senate greatly stand to dispute the matdiscovery. But as he was deceived in the ter with him: these his treacheries being held main point, and heard shortly after, that Eu- inexcusable. And as for his Royal Estate, menes lived, so was he beguiled in that other wherein he supposed that they ought not to hope, of the concealment; which he vainly touch him for fuch private offences, it gave esteemed the less material. For he had him no priviledge: they judging him to have written to one Praxo, a Gentlewoman of offended in the nature of aking Herein sure-Delphi, to entertain the men whom he fent ly they wanted not good reason. For if he about this business: and she, being appre- might not lawfully make war upon Eumehended by C. Valerius, a Roman Embalador, nes their confederate, that is, if he might then attending upon the matters of Greece, not fend men to waste the Kingdom of Fergawas carried to Rome. Thus all came to light. mus, or to befiege the Towns: might he Valerius also brought with him to Rome, out | fend Ruffians to murder the King? If it were of Greece one Rammius, a Citizen of Brundu- no less breach of the league to destroy the fum; who coming newly from the Court of Senators by fire or famine, than by violence Macedon, loaden with a dangerous feeret, had prefently fought out the Embaflador, by poyfon? Wherefore they prefently deand thereof discharged himself. Brundn creed war against him; and sent Embassafium was the ordinary Port for ships passing dors to denounce it unto him, unless he between Italy and Greece. There had Ram- would yield to make such amends as they mino a fair house; wherein he gave enter- should require. He seemed at this time to tainment, being a wealthy man, to Emballa | have been fo confident in the general favour dors, and other honourable personages, both of Greece, and other comfortable appearing fro. By occasion of such his hopitality, he not fear it or at least he thought by shew of of all was, That he must needs do a turn, in Eumenes had charged him adding thereto, giving to such of the Romans as the King that he had entertained long & secret confe-

1108

it be like a matter of State) Stratonica the should hereafter name, a poylon of rare quato him. By fuch concord of Brethren was the upon him, but rather unto a subject pleading Kingdom of Pergamus raised and upheld; as for his life in judgement. But howfoever the might also that of Macedon have been, if De- Romans neglected the getting of ftronger metrius had lived and employed his grace proof (which might have been easie) than any that we find by them produced: yet It is likely that Perseus was very glad, when the base and cowardly temper of Perseus was Romans and M.cedonians, journying to and rances, that if he defired not war, yet he did was commended to Perseus, and invited into courage, to make his enemics more calm. He Macedon with friendly letters ; as one, whose caused the Embassadors to dance attendance, many courtefies to his Embafiadors, the King till being weary, they departed without auwas studious to requite. At his coming he dience. Then called he them back, and bad was much made of; and shortly, with more them do their errand. They made a tedious familiarity than he expected or defired made rehearfal of all matters, which they had long partaker of the Kings secret. The summ been collecting against him, and wherewith rence in the Isle of samothrace, with Embaf-| message, he commanded them to be gone out fadors sent to him out of Asia, about some of his Kingdom in three dayes. But either ill purpose. In regard of all which they pe- he should have been less vehement, or more remptorily required fatisfaction; as was their constant in his resolution. For if his heart manner when they intended to give defiance. could ferve him to undertake the war, he Better they might have flood upon the evi- should couragiously have managed it, and dence, brought against him by Rammius and have faln to work immediately, whilst the Praxo. For if those accusations could be ve- Enemy was unprepared; not have lost opporrified, then wanted they not good ground tunity, as now and often be did, in hope of whereon to build: of which otherwise they obtaining a worse peace than the former. were destitute; it being no fault in a King, to be ftrong, wel-beloved, and wel-befriended. Perfeus answered, for the present, in a rage; calling the Romans, greedy, proud, infolent, The Romans solicit the Greeks, to joyn with them and underminers of him by their daily Emballadors, that were no better than meer spies. Finally, he promised to give them in writing their full answer: which was to this effect; That he would no longer stand to the League made between them and his father; and renewed by himfelfindeed only for fear; but wished them to descend to more equal conditions; whereupon he for his part, would advise, as they might also do for theirs.

GHAP. VI.

In the form of the League between Philip and the Romans, as is fet down by Polybius, we find no condition, binding the Macedonian to Liv.lib.33, any inconvenience in the future; excepting those which he immediately performed. But Livy inferts a clause, whereby he was expreny forbidden to make any war abroad, without leave of the Romans. It is most likely, that all the Roman confederates were included in this peace: whereby every one of the neighbors round about Macedon, entring

fhortly into league with Rome, did fo bind

article of the peace, which never was agreed for it, when it came; and not (as they were) upon, but only was inferred by consequence. behind hand in provisions. But it was on Now if the Romans would urge this point a sudden that they met with a confluence further, and fay, that the Macedonian might of good pretences to make the war: not bear defensive arms, without their per- whereof, if no one alone had weight enough, mission; then had Perseus very just reason to yet all of them together seemed more than find himself aggrieved. For fince they had sufficient. This opportunity of making allowed his father; without controll, to make their cause honest in common opinion, was war in Thrace, (whilest they themselves not to be neglected : though otherwise were unacquainted with the Thracians) they were unprepared for the action. elsewhere abroad, though he asked not their Wherefore knowing, or having reason to belicence: why should they now interpret the lieve, that their own strengths were such as bargain after another fashion? Was it now would prevail in the end; they hastily embecome lawful for him to chaftise his own braced the fair occasion of beginning, and Rebels?or to repay an Illyrian that invaded referred other cares to the diligence of Time.

ø. VI.

in the war against Persons. How the Greeks stood affected in that war. The timerousness of Perseus. Martius a Roman Embassador deludes him with hope of peace. His forces. He takes the field, and wins part of Thesialy. The forces of Licinius the Roman Conful: and what affiftants the Romans had in this ward of Tempe in Thesialy; & what advantages the Macedonian had or might have had; but loft by his fear. Perfeus braves the Romans, fights with them knows not how to use his victory fues for peace, and is denied it by the vanauished. Perseus having the worse in a skirmish, forsakes all the Country lying about Tempe. The Baotians rebel against the Romans, and are rigorously punished. The Roman Commanders unfortunate in the war against Perseus. They vex the Greeks their friends; for whose ease the Senate makes provision, baving heard their complaints. The flattering Alabanders.

the Kings hands, that he could no more make war abroad, then if he had been restrained by

Scasson to take in hand this Macedonian plain covenant. And thus might that feem an war, that well they might have been ready Macedon? By such allegations he maintain- Neither was this their unreadines a small ed the right of his cause, in very mild fort; help, towards examining the disposition of when it was too late. At the present, by dif- the Greeks and others; who must afterwards claiming the League as unjust, he ministred dearly pay for any backwardness found in occasion unto the Embassadors, to give him their good will. There was not indeed any defiance. Having heard the worlt of their cause to fear, that all of the Greeks or other Eastern people should conspire toger lerve to terrifie him: and consequently, that ther, and take part with the Macedonian: it should at all times be in the Romans power, such was the diffention between the feveral by giving him any tolerable conditions of Estates; howsoever the generality of them peace, to take revenge at leisure upon those were inclined the same way. Nevertheless which had affifted him: little cause was Embaffadors were fent to deal with them there why any should adventure to partake all; and to crave their help against Perfeus, with him. He made indeed a great noise; or rather to demand it, in no less ample man- leading about his army; taking by force or ner, than heretofore they had yielded it composition some few Towns, and soliciting against Philip and Antiochus, in wars pretending the liberty of Greece. The Emballanot be so beguiled. For at the same time, he dors used as gentle words for fashions sake, as sought all means of pacification; and to that if they had flood in doubt that their request | end, made humble suit unto the Roman Emmight happen to be denied. But the Greeks balladors. Q. Martius, the chief of those were now grown well acquainted with Embafladours, and a man of more fineness fuch Roman courtefie: and underfrood that in cunning than was usual among the Ronot only fuch as made refufal, but even they mans, made flew of inclination to the Kings who might feem to have granted half un-defire; and gave out such comfortable willingly, were like to hear other manner words, that the King entreated, and obtain of words, when once this business was end- ned a meeting at the River Peneus. There did ed. Wherefore none of them were ferupu- Martius very gently rebuke the King, and lous in promifing the best of their help to charge him with those crimes that are before the Romans: the * Achains and Rhodians, mentioned. Whereto though Perfem made the Romans: the *Accessing and Romans; included to the Romans which were chief among them, being rather home other answer, then the same which could have made for him; yet the Emstern description of the Romans: the *Accessing and Romans; included to the Romans; inclu doubtful, even when they had done their best, lest it should be ill taken, as if they had halted in some part of their duty. It is strange that men could be fo carnest to set up the fide, whereof they gladly would have feen Senate. That this might conveniently be the ruine. The vulgar fort was every where addicted to Perfeus; of the Nobles and Rulers, if some were venemently Roman, they King lese time. For Persens had all things wanted not oppofers, that were wholly Alacedonian; yea, the wifelt and most honest, *rel. Les He * judged the victory of Perfeus, like to in recompense nothing elle, than leifure

1110

balladors, and especially Martins, took it in good part, as therewith fatisfied; and advised him to give the like satisfaction to the done, a truce was agreed upon. Thus had Martius his defire; which was, to make the then in readiness, and might have done much, ere the Roman Army could have been who regarded only the benefit of their in Greece. But by the interpolition of this Country, wished better to Perseas than to the truce, he no way increased his forces; he Romans. And of this number Polybius the fuffered a most convenient featon, of winning chief of Historians was one: who though upon the enemy, to flip away; and obtained prove hurtful unto Greece, yet wished he and vain hope. Yet washe pleased herethe Romans ill to thrive, that so the Greeks with, as it had been with some victory: pubmight recover perfect liberty: for his en- lifthing a copy of the disputation between deavours in which course, he was at length him and the Romans, whereby he gave men tyrannically handled, as shall be shewed here- to understand, how much he had the better, after. This confidered, it appears, that an and what great hope there was of peace. He extraordinary fear, and not only reverence fent Embaffadors also to the Rhodians, of of the Imperial City, made the Acheans, whose good will to him he was best perswaand other Estates of Greece, thus conforma ded; not only to let them know how much he ble to the Romans. The occasion of this their was superiour in cause; but to intreat them, fear, may be justly imputed unto the ti- that they would take upon them, as Moderamorous demeanor of Perfens himself. He tors, to compound the differences between had undertaken a war, whereof the bene- him and the Romans, if perhaps notwithfit flould redound, not only to his own standing the goodness of his cause, he should Kingdom, but unto all that were oppressed be denied peace. These were poor helps by the Romans. Yet no fooner were fome For hereby it appeared, that his late flandfew companies brought over-fea, to make a ing upon point of Honor, was no better than countenance of meaning fomewhat against meer vanity, his own safety being the uthim, than he began to speak the enemy fair, most of his ambition. This his fearfulness and fue for Peace at Rome. Since therefore might feem excusable, and the blame thereof it was known, that every small thing would to appertain unto the Greeks; who dehim in time of a necessity, that was partly ther did this poor courtese serve alone to their own: had it not been his office, who hide the craft of Martius, as if he had meant took upon him as their Champion, to give none other than good earnest: but it was a fuch a manly beginning to the war, as might likely mean, both to keep a long while from encourage all others to follow him. But Perfeus the knowledge of his business, and to his timorous quality being found, men grew stagger his resolution, when he should need daily more and more averse from him; and it most firm. were careful, not to put their shoulders to a falling wall. The Rhodians, among whom the Roman Conful was at Apollonia, in a he had many frout Partizans, defired him not manner as foon as the Macedonian Embafiato crave any thing at their hands, in which dours were with their King at Pella. Which, they might feem to do against the good liking though it were enough to have rouzed Perof the Romans. The Exotians also, who fins, and have made him lay alide all cowardhad entred of late into a frict fociety with ly hope of getting pardon, yet was he conthe Macedonian; renounced it now, and made tent to deliberate a while, Whether it were the like with the Romans: to whom further, not better to offer himself tributary to the in a fort, they yeelded themselves as vassals. Romans, and to redeem their good will with Neither was Martins contented to accept some part of his Kingdom, that to he might their fubmission under a general form; but enjoy the rest; than to put all at once to caused their several Towns to make cove- hazard. But finally, the stoutest counsel prenant apart, each for it self; to the end, that vailed; which also was the wifelt, and fo being thus diffracted into many little Common-weals, they might not (were they never fo defirous to rebel) have such force to do war had not begun until now, to do what hurt, as when they agreed, and were incor- should have been done long afore. He porated in one, under the City of Thebes.
This work, of separating the Beotians from and appeinted their Randezvouz at Ci-Thebes their head, was more than Agesslaus tinm, a Town in Macedon. All being in readicould effect, or Epaminondas would fuffer, ness, he did royal facrifice, with an hunthen when all Greece followed the Lacedamonians. So far more available to Thebes, being destitute of help from abroad, was try: and then, with all his Courtiers, and the virtue of Epaminondas, and a few brave Citizens, than was the fociety with King Per-

Martius brought this to effect, whilest the where, vaunting what he had wrought by lively speeches, laying before them the glory them to depart out of Haly: whereas they, only to furnish him with Carts, for his enwho came last on the same errand, did their gines and munition. mediage without the walls, in the Temple of Out of his own Kingdom he iffued forth Bellona (the usual place of giving audience into The flat: knowing that the Romans to open enemies, or to fuch Commanders, as were to pals thorow that Country, in their might not, by reason of some cultom enter journey towards him. Some Towns of the City) and had only the short warning Thessaly opened their gates unto him, with-few, against a number not so great as followed the Lacedamonians.

ceived his expectation, by being wanting to of eleven dayes, to be gone out of Haly. Nei-

And accordingly it fell out. For Licinius would have proved, had it been floutly and dred beafts, to I know not what Minerva. that was peculiarly honoured in his Counthefe of his guard, fet forward to Citium. His Army he found confifting of nine and thirty thousand foct, and four thousand horse, whereof about twelve thousand foot, and a thousand herse were strangers, of fundry King fate ftill, as being bound by the truce: Nations, most part Thracians; the rest of his and having done this, he turned to the City; own Macedonians. These he animated with his craft, he was commended, and (though of their Ancestors, the insolency of the Rofome reproved it as difhonest) employed mans, the goodness of his cause, the greatagain by the Senate, with committon to nels of his provisions, and the many advandeal as he should think expedient. Touching the Embaffadours which Perfess had ly in numbers. They answered him chearfully, fent 3 audience was given to them, for that with loud acclamations, and bade him be of they should not plainly see how their Master good courage. From all Cities of Macedon was deluded: but neither excule, nor in-there came likewise messengers, offering to treaty would ferve their turn: the Senate help him with mony and victuals, according being refolved before-hand, what to do. It to their feveral abilities. He gave them was enough that they were admitted into the thanks: but answered, That his own provi-City, and had thirty dayes respite allowed fions would abundantly suffice, willing them

he balked, thinking them too strong or well thither this Fleet. But whatsoever Gentius manned; and some he wan by force. Of thought in the beginning; he foolishly lost these last was Nyle; a Town thought im- both his Kingdom and himself, in the end of pregnable, and therefore, not more floutly this war; by offering, rather than giving than proudly defended by the inhabitants, his help to Perseus. who gave contumelious language to the affailants. It was taken by reason of a fally; brought over the Sea, Licinius came into which the Towns-men ra hly made, and be- Theffaly: fo tyred with a painful journey, ing driven back, received the Macedonians, through the Mountainous Country of Athathat entred pell mell with them at the gate, manis, which flood in his way from Epirus; All cruelty of war was practifed here: to that if Perfeus had been ready, attending his the greater terrour of the obstinate. So Ve- descent into the Plains, the Romans must latic and Connus (Towns of much impor-needs have taken a great overthrow. He tance, especially Connus, which stood in the refreshed himself and his wearied Army, by ftraights of Offic, leading into Tempe) yeelded the River Peneus; where he encamped, atat the first. Having well fortified this passage, tending his auxiliaries, that came in as sast the King marched onwards to Sicurium, a asthey could. It was not any flender help, Town feated on the foot of Mount offa; that could enable him to deal with Perfeus. where he reflect a while, expecting news of Therefore he refolved to abide where he

the Enemy. ly two Roman Legions: being promifed tenting himself in the mean while, to have other strength of auxiliaries, which was gotten quiet entrance into the Country. The thought sufficient. Eumenes and Attalus his Land of Thessay, in which these two Armies brother came to him in Theffaly, with four lay, was better affected to the Romans, than thousand foot, and a thousand horse. This any part of Greece besides: as having been ther also came, from every part of Greece, freed by them from a more heavy yoke of such aid as the several Estates could afford, bondage to the Macedonian, when there was or thought expedient to lend: which from little hope of expectation of luch a benefit, the most of them was very little. Of the It was generally rich, fruitful, and abounding Kings abroad; M.Janiffa fent thither his Son in all things needful to mans life. In the Atifagenes, with a thousand foot, as many midst of it, but somewhat more to the East, horse, and two and twenty Elephants. was that beautiful valley of Tempe, so exAriarathes the Cappadocian, by reason of ceedingly full of all delights, that the name his affinity with Eumenes, was friend to the was often used at large to fignific The most Romans, and had fent to Rome his young pleasant and goodly places. This valley of Son, there to be brought up: yet he did it self was not great; but adding to it those little or nothing in this war; perhaps because huge Mountain's Offa and Olympus (famous in Fumenes himself began within a while, but Poche) with their Spurs or Branches, by when it was too late, to be otherwise advi- which it was on all sides enclosed; it occufed than he had been in the beginning. Fru- pied the better part of Theffaly. And this fias was centent to be a looker on: as be- way were the Romans to enter into Maceing allied to Perfeus, and yet fearing the Ro- don; unless they would make an hungry mans. Antiochus and Itolomy (though Ptolo- journey thorow the Country of the Daffaremy was then young, and under Tutors) had tians, as in the former war with Philip, they buliness of their own; the Syrian meaning had long, in vain, attempted to do. Persian to invade the Egyptian: yet each of them therefore had no small advantage, by being promifed help to the Romans which they Master of the Straights leading unto Tempe: cared not to perform. Gentius the Illy- though far greater he might have had, if by rian was inclinable to the Macedonian, yet mif-spending of time he had not loss it. For made good countenance to the Romans, for if in defending the ragged passages of these fear. It was a pretty trick wherewith Mountains, he were able to put the Romans M. Lucretine, the Roman Admirals brother, often to the worfe; yea, to win upon them ferved him, for this his counterfeit good will. (for a while) every year more than other, This King had four and fifty thips, riding in both in ftrength and reputation: queftionthe Haven of Dyrrachium, uncertain to what less he might have done far greater things, purpose: all which Lucretius took away, af- had he seized upon the Straights of Ams, ter a very kind fort; making flew to believe, which his Father once kept, and defended all That for none other end than to ferve the the Country behind the Mountains of findus.

out making offer to defend themselves; some Romans, their good friend Gentine had sent

With none other company than what he then was, and keep his trenches, until his Licinius the Conful brought with him on- numbers were sufficiently increased: conthe Romans have either travelled by Land, ground. What was performed by him or the with all their carriages and impediments, Romans, all the while that he kept his footthrough places wherein was no relief to be ing in Theffaly, it is hard to shew particularly, found 3 or else have committed their Armies, for that the hiltory of those things is much and all things thereto needful, unto the perished. Wherefore we must be contented mercy of Seas that were very dangerous; if with the fumm. they would have fought other way into The Conful having no defire to fight, untries Macedon, than through the heart of Greece: til fuch time as all his forces were arrived; upon neither of which courfes they once kept within his Trenches, and lay ftill endevised, notwithstanding any trouble which camped by the River of Peneus, about three they found in this prefent war. It may per-miles from Lariffa. That which perswaded haps be faid, that the Greeks, and others the Conful to protract the time, did contrawhom the King must have left on his back, wise incite the King to put the matter unto a would have made him unable to defend any hasty tryal. Wherefore he invited the Roplaces too far from his own home. But they mans into the field; by wasting the Land of were all, excepting the Theffalians, better affected now to him, than they had been to his them patient of this indignity; he grew bold Father in the former war. The Atolians, to adventure even unto their Trenches: out upon whom the Athamanians depended, of which, if they issued, it was likely, that his grew into suspicion with the Komans (as we advantage in horse would make the victory finall find anon) even as foon as they met his own. At his coming they were troubled 5 with Perseus. The Bactians, how politically for that it was sudden; yet no way terrified; foever Martins had wrought with them, ad- as knowing themselves to be safely lodged. ventured themselves desperately in the Ma- They sent out a few of King Eumenes his cedonian quarrel: what would they have horse, and with them some light armed foot, done, if he at first had done his best? The to entertain skirmish. The Captain, and some Rhodians, Illyrians, yea and Eumenes himself, other of these were slain: but no matter of after a while began to waver, when they importance done; for that neither Licinius, faw things go better with Perfeus, than they nor Eumenes, found it reasonable to hazard had expected. So that if in stead of discou-battel. Thus, day after day, a while together, raging his friends, by fuing basely for peace; Perseus continued offering battel : which they he had raifed their hopes, by any brave performance in the beginning; and increased the number of his well-willers; yea, and bought down with mony (as he might have bought down with mony (as he might have hought down with mony (as he might have houg done) fome of his enemies, and, among them, that fell upon them by their enduring these Eumenes, who offered for good recompence, bravadoes. The Town of sycurium, where to forget his broken head: then might the Perseus then lay, was twelves miles from the

Surely, not without extreme difficulty, must was inevitable, if he gave a little further

Romans perhaps have been compelled to for- Romans: neither was there any convenient Take their imperious patronage over Greece; watering in that long march, which used to and to render the liberty, by them given, en- take up four hours of the morning, but he tire; which otherwise was but imaginary, was fain to bring water along with him in Such benefit of this war, fince it was hoped Carts, that his men might not be both weafor afterwards, might with greater reason ry and thirsty when they came to fight. For have been expected at first, from greater ad-remedy of these inconveniencies he found vantages. But as a fearful company running out a lodging, seven miles nearer to the enefrom their enemies, till fome River stay my: whom he visited the next day by the their flight; are there compelled by meer Sun-riling. His coming at fuch an unulual desperation to do such acts, as done, while hour, filled the Camp with tumult: inthe battel lasted, would have won the victo- fomuch as though he brought with him onry: fo fell it out with Perfens. In feeking to ly his Horfe and light armature, that were avoid the danger of that war, whereof he unfit to assail the Trenches, yet the Conshould have sought the honour; he left his ful thought it necessary; and resolved to friends that would have stood by him, and give check to his pride. Wherefore he sent gave them cause to provide for their own forth his brother C. Licinius, King Eumefafety: yet being overtaken by necessity, he nes, Attalus, and many brave Captains, with chose rather to set his back to the Mountains all his power of horse, his Velites, and all of Tempe, and defend himself with his proper the rest of his light armature to try their forces 3 than to be driven into such milery, as fortune : he himself remaining in the Camp, nour of this morning, was the Macedonian that if they would shun indignation, or in-Kings; for he obtained the victory in a man- cur favour, then must they adventure no ner entire (though the Thessalians made a less for their Lords the Romans, than glady good retrait) with little loss of his own. But they would do for their own liberty. Thus he discoveres his weakness ere night, by fared it with the Consul and his Army, hearkening, has Princes commonly do, to Perseus came the next day to correct the counfel given by one of his own temper. former dayes errour; which, how great it For whereas the Romans were in great fear was, he not until then found. The Romans left he should attault their Camp; and to were gotten into a place of fafety; whithat purpole, upon the first news of his ther they could never have attained, if the fuccefs, his Phalaux was brought unto him King had either preffed his Victory, or by the Captains, though unfent for: he ne- given better heed to them that night: his vertheless took it for found advice, which light armature alone being sufficient to have indeed was timorous and base, To work routed them whilest they were conveying warily, and moderate his victory; by which themselves to the other side of Peneus. But means it was faid, That either he should get it was vain to tell what might have been honest conditions of peace, or at leastwife done, fince there was no remedy. The many companions of his fortune. Certainly Romans were beaten, even the flower of it was like, that his good fortune would ex- their City, The Gentlemen of Rome; out alt the hope and courage of his friends. of whom were chosen their Senators, and Yet, had it been greater, and had he won the consequently the Generals themselves, Pra-Roman Camp, his friends would have been tors, Confuls, and all that bore office or the more, and the bolder. But over-great command among them; yea, they were was his folly, in hoping then for peace: beaten fo shamefully, that they stole away And in fuing for it, even when he had the vi- by night, and fuffered him to gather up the ctory; what else did he, than proclaim unto poils of them without resistance, as yeeldall which would become his partakers, That | ing themselves overcome. With such brave neither good nor bad fortune should keep words did the King set out the glory of his him from yeelding to the Romans, whenfo- action; dividing the spoils among his folever they would be pleafed to accept him? lowers. But there was much wanting At this time the joy of his victory would ad- within him, to have made his honour found. mit none of the Confiderations. He had He came nearer to the Romans, and enflain of the Roman horse two hundred, camped at Mopfelus, a place in a mid-way beand taken of them prisoners the like num- tween Tempe and Larissa: as if it were his ber. Of their foot he had flain about two meaning to press them somewhat harder. thousand: losing of his own no more than Nevertheless he was easily perswaded to use twenty horse, and forty foot. The Roman the occasion, which he seemed to have, of Camp, after this disafter, was full of heavi- obtaining peace. Therefore he sent unto the neß and fear: it being much doubted that Conful, and offered to yeeld unto the same the enemy would fet upon it. Eumenes gave | Conditions, wherein his Father had been counsel to dislodge by night, and remove bound to the Romans; if the war might so to a furer place beyond the River Peneus, take end. It were needless here again to The Conful, though ashamed to profess, by shew the folly of this his course. Towards fo doing, in what fear he flood, yet thought the accomplishment of this defired peace, it better to acknowledge the loss past, there was in the Conful no greater power passed the River in the dead of the night, and People to approve the conditions and raand encamped more fitrongly on the further fide. The #ziolians were forely blamed for by Martins, he had lately found no small difthis lofs: as if rather a trail rous meaning, commodity redounding. But Licinius dealt than any true fear, had occasioned their plainly, and returned answer, That other with his Legions in readiness. The ho- might learn, by examples of either kind flight, wherein the reft of the Greeks follow- hope of peace there was none; fave that Perfeed them. Five of them that were men of espe- us would yield both his Kingdom and person, cial mark, had been observed to be the first simply and absolutely, to discretion of the which turned their backs: an observation Senate, A manly part it was of Livinia to likely to cost them dear, at a time of better be so resolute in adversity. On the other leifure. As for the The saint, their virtue fide, ir argued a very faint heart in 1976, was honoured with reward: to as the Greeks that having received an antiver to peremptory

he still persisted, making vain offers of grea- came within themselves more absolute, than ter tribute. Finding that the peace which formerly they had been. The causes hereof he so much defired, could not be purchased were to have been sought among the with money, the King withdrew himfelf back | changes happening in their va jable factions : to Sycurium. There he lay hearkening what whereof the knowledge is r. v loft. Some the Enemy did; whose forces were well re- of them rebelled, and were throughly pupaired by the coming of Misagenes the son nished by Lucretius the Roman Admiral: of Masanissa, with the aid before mentio- who got so much by spoiling them, that he ned. This distance between the King and would have brought others to rebell in them, caused the Romans to wax the more like fort, if by extream oppression he could bold in making their harvest: about which have driven them so far. Neither was Libusiness they ranged over all the fields. Their cinius the Consul undiligent in the same careless demeanour gave him hope to do kind. What his doings were, after such fome notable exploit: which he attempted, time as he was at leifure from Perfess, I both upon their Camp, and upon those that | find no where mentioned Only this is said in were abroad. The Camp he thought to general 5 That in the war which he made, have fired on the fudden: but the alarm being taken in good season, he failed in the self. enterprize. As for the forragers; he had a After the same sashion dealt they, that good hand upon them, if he could have with- commanded in the year following; Hostilius drawn it, and given over in time. But whilst the Conful, and Hortensius the Admiral, or he strove to force a guard, he was visited Prætor of the Fleet. Hostilius shewed by the Conful; by whom either in a skirmish more of his industry, in picking quarrels of horse, or (for the report is divers) in a with the Confederates of Rome, than in progreat battel, he was overcome. This milad- fecuting the war against the Macedonian, venture, whether great or small, caused Per- For concerning the Roman war upon his fews, after a few dayes, to fall back into Ma- Kingdom, after that the Consul had sought cedon; as being naturally given to fear palage in vain over certain mountains. Perdanger, even where none was; where leured, in a manner, free from it. He was by what loss he felt, will appear here-troubled indeed on that side which looked after He left all behind him, fave only Tempe, towards Illyria, by Ap. Claudius, whom the weakly guarded : and confequently an eafie Conful fent thither with an Army of four prey to the Romans.

pe. But finding the work too hard, he thither in such careless order, that the inreturned back unto the Perrebians and habitants which had made shew of treaafter his victory, Perfeus did greater acts pened, Perfeus very soon recovered it, and than we find recorded, and got some part of many other places there shall : Cotys a The faly.

time, it is hard to give a precise account; for ted from the Roman 10, 10 sie other. Perfeus terrifie, and bring altogether to his own will, that Region. Of this h should not be afraid of a Roman Army, then disappointed by those of thousand, and who by levies made upon the After the Kings departure, Licinius went | Confederates, doubled this his Army. But straight unto Connus; hoping to have taken Claudius thinking to have taken Uscana, it, and so to have gotten entrance into Tem- a border town of Illyria, by treason; came others; from whom he won some Towns, son, with purpose only to train him into and among the rest, Larissa. There were danger; sallied forth upon him, overthrew fundry Towns thereabout, bearing the same him, and chased him so far, that hardly he name of Lariffa: fo that this which the escaped with the fourth part of his compa-Consul took, may seem not to have belong- ny. Yet this Town of Uscana, shortly afed unto the Theffalians; unless, perhaps, ter became Roman: which howsoever it hap-Thracian King, securing in on the one side Of matters happening in Greece at this of Macedon; and Ceph and Epirot, revolthat the histories of them are greatly de- likewise made a party into Attofective. One may think it strange, that the lia; where he was ecc to be admitted Bæotians, whom a Roman Embassador could into Stratus, that we rongest City in "hough he were Romans faction foot in Greece, and a Navy on their on, yet in his return hou..., he took in coast. But more strange it is, that the The- Aperantia; and shortly heard good news, bans, from whom their dependants were ta- that Ap. Claudius was again throughly beaken by the Art of Martius, were more true ten by Clevas, one of his Lieutenants. Such to Rome, than other petty Towns, which success had the Macedonian war under Hoby that same distraction of the Beotians, be- stillus. The same Consul offended much Bbbbbbb

the Greeks, by the strict inquisition which ence to any Roman Magistrate, imposing any his Embafladors made into mens affection to burden for the prefent war, unless it were wards Rome. For these Embassadors travel-such, as the Senate had likewise thought ling thorow all the Cities of Peloponne u, meet. Of this Decree the whole Country gave out speeches tending to shew, That was glad for it was, or seemed, a good remethey liked no better of those who fought dy of many inconveniences. But they that they made no octat of those their bullfanding on priviledges hereof, refused to fulfinels, than of those which were of the Ma-fill every commandment, were numbred ecdonian faction. Their meaning was, to among the Patriots; which in the end of have accused by name, in the Parliament of this war proved little better, if not work, Achaia, Lycertas that worthy Commander, than to have been Traytors. The Senate was who nobly followed the fteps of Thillope- driven to fet down this order, by reason of men; and together with him, his fon Polylins, many and vehement complaints brought who foon after was General of the Achean to Rome, concerning the wrongs done by Who from after was General of the Roman Magistrates, and especially by the Ad-Hiftery which he wrote, than by his great mirals, Lucretius and Hortenfius. Lucretius employments, which he well and honoura- was condemned in a great fumni of mony, for bly discharged. The summ of the accusati- the wrongs by him done: highly to the comon flould have been; That thele were not mendation of the Romans, in that they lohearty friends unto the Romans, but fuch as ved not to have their subjects oppressed. abstanced from raising troubles, more for Hortensius being still in office, had warning to lack of opportunity, than for any love to the amend. common quiet. But fince no colour of truth could be found, that might give countenance to fuch a talesit was thought better, for the feek redress of injuries, or to offer their ferpresent, to let it alone, and give gentle words, vices: it is note-worthy, that from Alabanda, as if all were well. In like manner dealt a Town of the lefter Afia, there was prefented they among the Etolians: They demanded unto the Senate, and well accepted, a most holtages; and found fome in the Councel base piece of flattery. These Alabanders that approved the motion: as also among brought three hundred horsemens targets, the Acarnanians, there were that intreated to and a crown of gold, to beftow upon Jupihave Roman Garrisons bestowed in their ter in the Capitol. But having a desire to Towns. But neither the one nor the other gratifie the Romans with some exquisite toof these propositions took effect. They of ken of their dutiful obedience, wherein the Roman faction, accused not only such as they would be singular: and being not able were inclinable to the Macedonian, but also to reach unto any great performance: they the good Patriots; making it no Jess than a built a Temple, unto the town Rome, and matter of treason, to be a Grecian in Greece. appointed anniversary games to be celebra-On the contrary fide, there wanted not some, ted among them, in honour of that goddesis. who roundly told these pick-thanks of their Now who can wonder at the arrogant follybase flattery, rating them openly, in such fort, of Alexander, Antigonus, Ptolomy, and the like that one of them hardly escaped being stoned, even in the presence of the Embassa-the shamefull flattery of such as bestowed dors. Thus was all full of accufations, and upon men, and not the most vertuous excuses: among which the Embassadors of men, divine honours; when he sees carried themselves, as men that could believe a Town of houses, wherein powerfull none ill: though it were well enough known men dwell, worshipped as a Goddess 5 what they thought. The best was, that and receiving (without scorn of the Gian order from the contact was brought into a receiving without to the order from the contact was brought into dreece, and publify to this effect: That it should be free for i men, to refuse obediable banda?

The fifth Book of the first Part

Among the great number of Embassages that came to Rome about this time, either to difficulty and danger enters into Tempe. The and being uncertain what way he meant to comardize of Perseus in abandoning Tempe. take, distributed his own forces, to the The Town of Dium quitted by Marrius; re- defence of all places which might give enpaired and fortified by the King. The Romans trance, or permit ascent. But the Conful attempt many places, with ill success. Their proceeded in his journey: with hope, either a bad man. Polybius fent Embassador to break through all opposition, or at leastwise, Martius from the Acheans. Polybius his to fight on as convenient ground, as they starna, by his wretched parsimony.

CHAP. VI.

At things were further out of tune in burner him, and fought with him, two or two than when the war began; which had been thought likely to reform all those three dayes together; each returning to Countreys, and bring them to what pass the Romans defired; as it did in the end. either fide. This bickering was on the Perseus had hitherto the better, and was narrow ridge of a mountain, which gave ftronger now, than when he lived in peace. fcarcely room unto three to march in front. He had enlarged his borders on the Illyrian So that very few hands came to be employfide; his friends, in all parts of Greece, took ed; all the rest were beholders. In this courage daily; and his reputation grew case it was impossible to get forwards: vet fuch, as caused those that were before a shame to return. Wherefore Martius wholly Roman, to fuspect what the islue of took the only course remaining; and inthe war might prove, and thereupon to be- deed the best: Part of his men he left with come wife for themselves. Contrariwise, Li- Popilius, to attend upon the Macedonians: cinius, and Hostilius the Confuls, had one after whilst he, with the rest, setcht a compass the other spent their time in vain, seeking about, and sought out wayes that never way into Macedon; and defaced the glorious had been trodden. Herein he found exenterprize of conquest, by many losses re-tream difficulty: which notwithstanding ceived. The Roman Admirals had so de- he overcame. Besides the troubles commeaned themselves, that many Towns even monly incident to such journeys, through of the best affected to Rome, kept them places unfit for habitation: he was comout by force. Generally, the fear was great pelled by labour of hand; to make paths on the Roman fide; and the Army much where none were, yea, where Nature might lessend, not only by casualties of war, but seem to have intended, that none should be. by the facility of the Tribunes or Colonels, So freep he found the descent of the mounor else of the Consul himself (for they tains, in this way which he took: that laid the blame one upon the other) in li- of feven miles, which they travelled the cenfing the fouldiers to depart. Quintius first day, his men were compelled, for the Martius the new Conful, who succeeded un-more part to rowl themselves down; as to Hostilius, was to amend all this: which not daring to trust their feet. Neither was nevertheless was more than he knew how to this the worst. For they met with rocks, do; though he brought with him a ftrong that stood one over another, so upright, supply of men. He began hotly to set the and cumbersome to get down: that their war on foot, which a long time had flept. Elephants were affaid of that giddy project, And he began the right way: not feeking to and casting their governours, made a terforce the ftraights that were furely guarded, rible noise, which affrighted the horses, and but taking pains to climb the mountains bred great confusion. Having therefore which were thought able to forbid all paffage over them, without help or need of any Q. Martius the Roman Conful, with extream cuftody. The King heard of his approach; affairs in hard estate. Martius a cunning and not to be discovered by the Enemy, or to honest wisdom beneficial to the Acheans, should have that lay to stop him, and at King Eumenes grows averfe from the Ro- length, if all failed, to make a fafe retreat. mans. Perseus negotiates with Antiochus, He sent before him four thousand of his most and Eumenes. His false dealing with Genti- expedite foot, to discover the ways. Two us King of Illyria; whom he draws into the days was this company troubled, in over-Roman war. He fends Embaffadors to the coming the difficulty of no more than fifteen Rhodians; who vainly take upon them to be miles: after which they had fight of the arbitrators between him and the Romans. Enemy, that lay to deny their parliage. They Perseus loseth a mighty succour of the Ba- occupied therefore a safe piece of ground; and tent back word to the Conful, where they were 5 intreating him to haften unto Fier two years of the Macedonian war, them: which he did. The Macedonians

Bbbbbbb 2

yous journey; there was nothing more defired by the fouldiers, than that they might tempted in vain, and another like unto it: be fuffered to creep back again, the fame the laft, by the City of Dium out of Mareway which they had come. But thift was don. All these were sufficiently guarded; made to let down the Elephants, by a kind and wholoever would feek any other way, of bridges, like unto falling draw-bridges: must be fain to take such pains as Marine whereof the one end was joyned to the had undergone. The entrance by Dium edge of the cliff; the other fulfained by was fairer than any of the reft; whereofontwo long pofts, faftened in the ground be- ly the King had benefit: for that his enemies low. Upon these two potts, or poles, (which could not get thither, fave through the valindeed, not being very ftrong, fince it was ley it felf, into which they must first pierce intended that they should be either cut or another way. Dinm frood upon the foot of broken) were fastened two rafters, answethe huge mountain Olympus, about a mile rable in length to the diffance, between the from the fea: of which mile, the River Hehigher and the lower fall: To as the end of heon becoming there a lake, and called Baone bridge might reach to the beginning phyras, took up the one half; the rest being of another. These were covered with fuch as might easily have been fortified. Beplanks and turfe; that they might feem fides all these, there was in the midst of Tempe, continent with the ground: fo to make a paffage which ten men might eafily keep: the beafts adventurous to go upon them. where the spurs of the mountains, reach-If there were a plain of any good extent ing far into the valley; drew near to the from the foot of a rock, to the next downfall; then might the bridg be shorter . When an Élephant was gone a pretty way, upon one of these; the posts upholding the frame the Consul repent him of his troublesome were cut afunder 5 thereby cauting him to journey: if Ferfeus could have feen his own fink down unto the next bridge; whence advantages. For the Roman Army was he was conveyed in like manner, to the not only in ill case to fight, after the vexaonly pallages there were , leading into without battel. Herewithal he began to Tempe: the first by Connus; which the Ro- take out of Dium, what he could carry gone, or wallowed, four miles of this grie- mans were unable to force: the fecond and very banks of Peneus, a goodly and deep river which ran through it. Wherefore nothing had been more case, than to make third, and onward ftill to the very bot- tion of that miferable travel : but must tom. Thus went they down fliding, some needs have either perished for want of vion their feet, others on their buttocks, chuals, or been inforced to return the fame till they came to an even valley. By this it way that he came if the King had made good appears, how throughly provided the Ro- the straight of Dium. To have returned, mans used to be in their journeys, of things and climbed up with their Elephants and needful in all occations: as also what in carriages, against those rocks, from which, estimable pains they took in this descent, with extream labour, they could hardly get about the conveyance of themselves and down, it seems a matter of impossibility: all their carriages down the mountains. The especially considering how the enemy from next day they refled; staying for Popilius above their heads, would have beaten upon and his company, who hardly, or perhaps ne- them; being now aware of the path which ver, should have overtaken them, if the Ene- they had taken, though he knew it not when my had followed, & fet upon him from aloft. they ftole away from him. It may therefore The third and fourth dayes journeys were be thought ftrange that the Ramans did not like unto the first: save that custome, and rather take their journey into Macedon, from the nearnes to their ways end without meet- the fide of Illyria, whence that Kingdom ing enemy, caused them the better to endure had often been invaded, as lying open on that Person could not be ignorant of the Ro- breaking into Tempe, whence, after that they mans coming towards him fince they fought were arrived, there was no means to with his men upon the passage, three days cleape, without forcing one of those passage. together, he lying fo nigh, that he might welnear have heard the noile. Yet was he for the cowardize of Perfeus did commend the possessed with fear; that he neither stirred counsel by them followed, as wife. For to help his own men, or to hinder the Confull, normade any provision for that which over the Mountains into Tempe, than he might fallout; but as one void of couniel, fared like one out of his wits; faying. That hearkening after the event. Four only referes these weeks after the leading into the was vanquished; and had lost all, he was vanquished. ed the Town. In the same vehemency of towards Thessuly. His Fleet came to him, in amazement, he fent a ftrait command- this time of necessity, well appointed to have ment to Theffalonica, that the Arfenal there holpen him in the war: but having left should be set on fire; and to rella, that his behind, at Magnesia, the ships of burthen, treasures there should be cast into the Sea: as which carryed the provisions. Wherefore it if the Romans were like prefently to be Ma- fell out happily, that one of his Licutenants fters of these two Cities. Niceas, who was ap- had been careful to occupy the Castles pointed to drown the treasure, performed it about Tempe, which were forfaken by the as hastily as well he could: though soon Macedonians: for by those wayes only after, his Master grew sorry for the loss; and might Corn be brought into the Army. To it was all, in a manner, recovered by Di- meet the sooner with this Corn, which was vers from under the water. But Andronicus, most desirously expected, he for look Dium, who had charge to let fire on the Kings and went to Phila; by which foolish jour-Arfenal, deferred the execution; forefeeing ney (if not worse than foolish) he lost more, that repentance might follow: and so he than a little the longer fasting had been prevented the damage. Whether Niceas, worth. It is probable that his Carts, with all, for his absolute and blind obedience, or or the most of his store, were lost among the Andronicus, for his careful providence, me- Mountains: for otherwise it had been madrited the greater commendation, or more nesto put himself on such an enterprize, so easie pardon; it rested in the King to inter- sleenderly provided, as that without ensorcepoor men, which had fercht his treasure out when it most behoved him to have profecuof the Sea by their diving, were payed their | ted the action. wages after the same fort: that so there might be no witness of the Kings base folly. Such end must they fear, who are privy to dishonourable actions of great Princes. If Perseus would have gone furely to work, and laboured to make what amends he for the hiding of his fault 3 then must be so could. He quickly reposlessed the Town of royally have behaved himself, that no man Dinm, which he hastily repaired, finding it raight believe him to be the Author of any dif-mantled by the Romans. This done, he unworthy act or counsel. But his vertue encamped strongly by the River of Entpens: was of no fuch capacity. He thought it meaning there to ftop the Enemies proceedenough to lay the blame upon others. And ing all that Summer. Less diligence, more therefore, having called Hippist away (the timely used, would have been enough, not Captain which had stopped the Conful on only to have delivered Martins into his hand, openly; faying, That they had betrayed a good end of the war upon fair conditions, unto the Enemy the gates and bars of Mace-and not to begin again in hafte. Yet this they have sped as did Niceas and Andronicus.

The Conful Martius had great cause to rejoyce, for that the King had so hastily relinquished his possession of Tempe, and all the ther by a trick of climbing upon mens heads, paffages leading thereinto: fince the Roman fomewhat after the manner of our tumblers. Army, this notwithstanding, was hardly able But it made such defence as it could, and to substift for want of victuals. He took Dium was not given up for fear. After this, Martins without refistance, and thence went for- did fet a bold face towards Dium; as if he ward into Macedon: wherein having travel- would have taken it again, and have driven led about a dayes journey, and gotten one the King further off; though his intent or Town that yeelded, he was compelled by hope was nothing like fo great; his chief away in haste; and straightwayes abandon- meer lack of food for his men, to return back pret. The reward of their fervice, was this. ment, or light of the Enemy, he flould Perseus growing ashamed of his mad cowar- be fain to quit it. Howsoever it was: men dize, that appeared in this hasty direction; thought him a coward, or at least a bad man caused them both to be flain. Also those of war; fince he thus recoyled and gave off,

By understanding the folly, or cowardize of Martins; the King recollected himself, understood his own errour, sought to hide it by fuch poor means as have been shewed, the top of the Mountain and Afclepiodatus, who had beguiled him with an idle hope from defence of the pallages, whereto they of peace, but to have given him fuch a noble were by him appointed: he rated them victory, as might cause the Romans to seek don. Of this reproach, if they would dif- recovery and fortification of Dinm, was to charge themselves, by laying it upon him, the Conful an exceeding hinderance. For to whom of right it belonged: then might little or nothing could afterward be done toward the Conquest in hand, in all the continuance of his office. Only the Town of Heraclea, standing on the River of Peneus, five miles from Dium, was taken by force, or rafent the Admiral to make attempt upon the had fent his Lieutenant to befiege it: and by Sca-Towns, Thessalonica, Cassandrea, De- the terrour of his appearing suddenly over metrias, and others. All these were assayed: their heads, caused the besiegers to dissolve but in vain. The fields about Thessalonica in all haste, setting their Camp on fire. were wasted; and some companies, that fundry times adventured forth of the Town, rather, fo far was their ability short of their were still put to the worse. As for the Town Enterprises; ever fince their Consul (wheit felf; there was danger in coming near ther daftardly, or carelelly) most unlike a it either by Land or Sea; by reason of the good Commander, had let go his hold of engines, which shot from the walls, and Macedon, by forfaking Dinn Yea, it is to be reached unto the Fleet. Wherefore the Ad- suspected, that some greater harm befell miral fetting fail from thence, ran along by them, or, at least, that they were in some grea-Enia, and Antigonea, (landing near to each of ter danger, than is expressed in the broken them; and both doing and receiving hurt)un- remaining History of this war. For Martil he came to Pallene in the territory of Caf- tins perswaded the Rhodians by Agesspolis fandrea. There King Eumenes joyned with their Embassadour, who came to him at Hehim, bringing twenty ships of War: and five racker about other business of less imporother were fent thither from King Prussas, tance, That they should do well to interpose which was bad. There was a new ditch late- probably conjecture, that this was rather a ly cast by Perseus, before the Town: which, while the Romans were filling up, question ing to bring the Rhodians in danger (as was made, What became of the earth taken anon it fell out) by their oppoling the resothence, for that it lay not upon the bank? Iution of the Senate; than that it proceeded By this occasion, it was learned, that there from any true fear in him, either of Perfens, were Arches in the Town-wall filled up with or of Antiochus, who had then an Army on that earth, and covered with one fingle row foot: yet fince he made flew of fear, it is of brick. Hence the Admiral gathered hope like withall, that fomewhat had happened, of making way into the Town, by fapping which might make his fear feem not counterthe walls. To this work he appointed fuch as feit. And fo were the Rhodians moved to he thought meeteft: giving an alarm to the think of him; not only for that the extraorother fide of the Town, thereby to shadow dinary courtesie, both of him and of the Adhis attempt. The breach was foon made. miral, towards their Embassadour, com-But whilest the Romans were shouting for ing from proud natures, did argue diffi-care, being to provide for his wintering. He (that he might not be quite without work)

1120

Such fortune attended on the Romans, or With this access of ftrength, the Admiral themselves as Mediators, and seek to finish was bold to try his fortune at Cassandrea: the War. Now, although Polybins do most entropy was bold to try his fortune at Cassandrea: malicious device of Martins, craftily feekjoy, and ordering themselves for the assault : dence, where there was no ambition to cause the Captains within the Town perceived it; but much more, for that flortly after what was done; and fallying forth unexpect- the Embassadours of regleus, and of Gentius ed, gave a fierce charge on the companies the Illyrian, did fet out their business at that were between the ditch and the wall; of Rhodes, not more with the firength of a good whom they flew about fix hundred, and fuf- Fleet, which the Macedonians had gotten, fered few to escape unwounded. This dif-than with the honour of some victory, whereafter, and the want of good fuccess on that in he had lately flain great numbers of the part of the Town which King Eumenes Roman horse. Thus much we find intimated; Pulph, Liaffailed (a supply in the mean while entring though the time, place, or other circumstan- gai. 27. the Town by Sea) caused the fiege to break | ces of the fight, be not specified. And hereto up. Torone was the next place which the Ad- may be referred, the report of those that miral thought meet to attempt: and thence were fent from Rome to view the estate of likewise he was repelled. Finding this too Martius his Army. For they found the Conwell manned; he made way towards Deme- ful wanting meat; the Admiral wanting men; trias: whereinto Euphranor, a Macedonian and, for those few that he had, wanting both Captain, was gotten before his coming, with mony and clothes: and App. Claudius the fuch forces, as were not only fufficient to have Prætor, who lay on the frontier of Wiria, fo defended the Town, if the Admiral had laid unable to invade Macedon, that contrariwife, flege to it, but to keep the Land about it he was in extreme danger; so as either he from spoil; or, at least (as they did) to make must quickly be sent for thence, or a new the enemy pay dear for all that he there got. Army he fent thither to him. Wherefore it This Euphranor had taken his journey to Demetrias, by Melibea; whither the Conful the Illgrian fide, which made all to halt; or than is before spoken of, had been driven that the Consul was so earness in this busifrom fome of the Towns which they be- fines; or rather for envy, and to hinder fieged.

ning, which one hath most aptly termed, A doubt, that more nearly concerned his own crooked or sinister kind of wisdom, he dealt as self, and those of his party. For as he was a crafts-mafter, with a restless working sure to incurr the great indignation of the diligence. This indeed neither proved his Conful, if he should neglect what was given fufficiency, nor commended his honesty: him in charge; so was it manifest on the fince thereby he effected nothing to his own other fide, that the words by Martins utterbenefit; and nevertheless out of envy, ed to him in private, would prove no good vain-glory, or fuch delight as weak and bu- warrant for him and his friends, if openly fie-headed men take, in creating inexpli- they should refuse to help Claudius, alledging cable troubles, he directly made opposition that he had no need: In this case therefore, to the good of his Country. At fuch time as he had recourse unto the Decree of the Se-Perfens, by the fuccels of his doings against nate: which exempted men from necessity Hoftilius, had gotten much reputation, and of doing what the Roman Commanders was thought likely to invade Theffuly. Archo, should require, unless, by special order from Lycortas, and other good Patriots among the Senate, the same were likewise appointthe Acheans, judged it expedient for their ed. So for lack of warrant from the Senate, Nations to help the Romans; as in a time of this demand of Appins was referred unto adversity, whom in prosperity they loved not the advice of the Consul: by whom it to flatter. Wherefore Archo proposed a was sure to be made frustrate. Hereby the decree, which passed: That the Acheans were savers, of more than an hunshould fend their whole power into Thessay, dred and twenty Talents: though Polybius and participate with the Romans in all dan- himself ran into danger of Appins his difgers. So the Army was levied: and Polybins, pleasure; and for such honest dealing in his This with others, fent Embassadours unto Mar- Countries behalf, was afterwards rewarded tius, to certifie him thereof, and know his by the Romans with many a long years impleasure. Polybius found the Consul busie in prisonment. finding passage thorow Tempe into Macedon. He went along with the Army; and awaited Martins, that King Eumenes grew cold in his the Confuls leifure, till they came to He- affection to the Romans; or whether this raclea; where, finding the time convenient, King began when it was too late, to fland in he prefented the Decree, and offered the fear left the fire, which he himself had helped fervice of his Nation, wherein foever it should to kindle, would shortly take hold on his be commanded. Martins took this very own lodging; or whether the regard of mony kindly; but faid, That he needed now no were able to overfway all other paffions; it manner of help. Forthwith Polybius dispatchis hard to determine: fince they that had ed home his companions, to fignific thus better means to know the truth, have not be put to such needless charges. Away went that Eumenes gave a willing car to Perfeus his Polybius; musing, and unable to resolve, desire of accord, for meer desire of gain, at least, that the Romans, with greater loss, whether it were for love to the Acheans. Ap. Claudius from doing any thing, fince Now, although it were so, that Martius, in himself could do nothing. But when Polybins very few of his actions, behaved himself was to deliver his opinion in the Councel like a man of war: yet in exercise of Cun- touching this matter; then found he a new

Whether it were by the like policy of much: tarrying himself behind in the precisely affirmed any certainty. One report Camp. After a while, word was brought to is, That Eumenes did not fo much as give any Martius, that Ap. Claudius defired, or ra- help to Martius: but coming to have joynther imperiously required, of the Acheans, ed with him, in such friendly manner as he five thouland men, to be fent him into Epirus, did with the former Confuls, was not enter-It was manifest, that Appius had need of these tained according to his liking; and theremen3 and that if he were strong in field, upon returned home in such anger, that he he might do notable service, by distracting refused to leave behind him certain horse of the forces of Perseus. But the Labyrinthian the Gallo-Greeks, being requested to have head of Martins, could not allow of fuch done it. If this were true, and that his broplain reason. He called unto him Polybius, ther Attalus tarrying behind with the Conto whom he declared, That Appins had no ful, did the Romans good service : then is the need of fuch aid, and therefore willed him to reason apparent, of the hatred, born afterreturn home, and in any wife take order that ward by the Senate to Eumenes, and the love the men might not be fent, nor the Achaeans to Attalus. But it is more generally received; him on, in the course, whereinto indignation might happen to succeed: so that needs he first led him. Howsoever it befell; Perseus would have part of his wages in prest. Thus caused Eumenes to be sounded, and found the two Kings did no more, than lose time: him so tractable, that he was bold to solicite and Eumenes grew suspected of the Romans him by an Embassage. The tenour of his ad- as a Traitor. vertisements, both to Eumenes and Antiochus, was: That there could be no perfect love King Gentius the Illyrian. He had attempted between a King and a free City: that the Ro- this Illyrian before; who dealt plainly, and mans had quarrel alike to all Kings, though faid, That without mony he could not flir. they dealt with no more than one at a time, Hereunto Perseus loved not to hearken; and used the help of one against another; thinking, that his Treasures would serve at that Philip was oppressed by them, with the the last cast, to deliver him from all his sears. help of Attalus; Antiochus, with the help But when the Romans had gotten within of Philip and Eumenes; and now Perseus Tempe, then did his fear urge him to prodiassailed with help of Eumenes and Prusias. gality; so as he agreed to pay three hun-Herewith he willed Eumenes to confider, dred Talents which Gentius demanded for a that when Macedon was taken out of their recompence. So the bargain was foon way, they would be doing with him in Asia, made, and pledges on both sides delivered which lay next at hand; yea, that already for performance. This was openly done by they began to think better of Prusias, than of Perseus, to the end that all his Army might him. In like fort he admonished Antiochus, have comfort, by such access of strength to not to look for any good conclusion of his their party. Presently upon the bargain war with the Egyptian, fo long as the Romans made, Embassadours were sent to Rhodes, could make him give over, by denouncing from both Perfeus and Gentius: who defired their will and pleasure. Finally, he request- the Rhedians, to take upon them, as Arbitraed both of them, either to compel the Ro- tors, between Perseus and the Romans, and to mans to furcease from their war upon Mace- bring the war to an end. The Rhodians thinkdon; or else to hold them as common ene- ing that Martius the Conful was no less demies unto all Kings. Antiochus lay far out sirous of peace than the Macedonian, arroof the Romans way : and therefore was little gantly promifed, that they, by their authotroubled with fuch remonstrances. Eumenes rity, would make peace; wishing the Kings was more nearly toucht; and as he felt part to shew themselves conformable. But the of this to be true, so had he reason to stand Roman Senate, hearing proud words to the in doubt of the rest. Yet when he should same effect, from the Rhodian Embassadours; give answer, he began to offer a bargain of gave an answer as dildainful, angry, and in: and that for some greater quantity of mony (how much I finde not) he would also he would have hastened this young and rash bring the Romans to condefcend unto peace: Illyrian to enter with all speed into the War: mony no nearer to him, being there, than Gentius had laid hands upon two Jaman if it remeained in Pella. Besides, his labour Embassadours, and cast them into prison

1122

And it might well be, that covetousness drew | deserved somewhat, howsoever the business

After the same manner dealt Perseus with peace for mony. He thought the Romans to menacing, as they could devife: so as this be no less weary, than Persens was affraid. vain glory of the Rhodians was thoroughly Wherefore he promifed for his own part, chastised; and more thoroughly should have That if he might have fifteen hundred Ta- been, if their submission had not been as lents for withdrawing his hand from this humble, as their folly was proud. Such use of war, then would he remain a Neuter there- Gentius his friendship, made Perseus, withand for affurance of his true meaning herein, but then must the mony be hastened away. he offered to give hostages. Perseus liked Pantauchus the Macedonian Embassadour, well to receive the hoftages, but not to lay who remained with Gentius, exhorted him out the mony; especially before-hand, as was daily to begin the War by Land and Sea, required. He would fain have peace with whilest the Romans were unprovided. But Rome, and not with Eumenes only. For pro- | finding what it was that made all to flay; curing of this, he promifed to be at any rea- he fent word to Fersens. Hereupon ten Tafonable cost; but he would lay down the lents were sent to Pantauchus: who delivermony in the Temple at Samothrace: whence ed it to the young King, as Earnest of that it should be delivered unto Eumenes, after which followed. More followed indeed; that the peace was fully concluded and rati- and fealed up with the feal of the allyrians, fied. The isle of Samothrace was Persens his but carryed by Macedonians, and not 100 own: and therefore Eumens thought the fast. Before this mony came into Illyria,

Which Perfeus no fooner heard, than he re- shifting excuses, the Bastarna returned precalled his Treasure bearers, and fent them fently towards Danubius, wasting the neighwith their load to Pella; for that now the bour-parts of Thrace; yet suffering this craf-Illyrian was of necessity to make war with ty messenger to escape unburt: which was the Romans, whether he were hired thereto more than he could have well expected.

Lv.lib.44 Aema!.

CHAP. VI.

There came about the same time through surer, and one that would preserve his mony Illyria, to the aid of Perseus, under one Cloudi- for the Romans, without diminishing the cus, a petty King, ten thousand horse, and summ. But of this painful Office he was very ten thousand foot of the Gauls, which were foon discharged by L. Emplius Paulus the (as Plutarch hath it) the Baffarne. These had new Consul: who in fifteen dayes after his before-hand made their bargain, and were fetting forth from Italy, brought the Kingto receive present pay at the first. At their dom of Macedon to that end, for which entry into the Kingdom, Terseus sent one to God had appointed over it a King so foolish them; defiring their Captains to come vifit | and fo cowardly. him, whom he promifed to gratifie with goodly rewards; hoping that the multitude would take good words for payment. But the first question that their General asked, of L. Emilius Paulus the Conful. His Jourwas, Whether the King had fent mony to give their Souldiers their pay in hand, according to his bargain? Hereto the meffenger had not what to answer. Why then (faid Clondicus) tell thy Master, that the Gauls will not stir one foot further until they have gold, as was agreed, and hostages. Perseus hereupon took counsel: if to utter his own opinion before men so wise that they would not contradict him were to take counsel. He made an invective against the incivility and avarice of the Bastarne: who came with

Thus dealt Perseus, like a careful Trea-

ø. VIII.

ney. He forceth Perseus to discamp. He will not hazard battel with any disadvantage. Of an Eclipse of the Moon. Emylius his superstition. The battel of Pydna. Perseus his slight. He forsakes his Kingdom: which hastily yeelds to Æmylius. Perfeus at Samothrace. He yeelds himfelf to the Roman Admiral, and is sent prisoner to Æmylius.

BY the War of Macedon, the Romans Bhitherto had gotten much dishonour. fuch numbers, as could not but be dangerous Which, though it were not accompanied to him and to his Kingdome. Five thousand with any danger, yet the indignity so horse of them he said would be as many as he moved them, that either * they decreed plue, in should need to use; and not so many, that he that Province to L. Amylius Paulus, with vit. demy! should need to fear them. It had been well out putting it, as was otherwise their mandone, if any of his Counfellors would have ner, to the chance of lot, between him and told him, That there wanted not employ- his fellow-Conful; or at least were gladder ment for the whole Army of them, fince that the lot had cast it upon him, than without any danger to the Kingdom, they that fo worthy a man was advanced to might be let out by the way of Perræbia, into the dignity of a fecond Confulship. He Theffaly: where, wasting the Country, and refused to propound unto the Senate any filling themselves with spoil, they should thing that concerned his Province; unmake the Romans glad to for sake Tempe, even til by Embassadours, thither sent to view for hunger and all manner of want; therein the estate of the War, it was perfectly doing the King notable fervice, whether understood, in what condition both the they won any victory or not. This, and a Roman Forces, and the Macedonian, at the great deal more, might have been alledged, prefent remained. This being throughly if any man had dared to give advice freely. known to be fuch, as hath been already In conclusion, Antigonus, the same messenger told, the Senate appointed a strong supply; that had been with them before, was fent not only to the Conful, but unto the Naagain, to let them know the Kings mind. He vy, and likewise to the Army that laybedid his errand : upon which followed a great tween Illyria and Epirus; from which App. murmure of those many thousands that had Claudius was removed, and L. Anicius sent been drawn so far to no purpose. But Clon- thither in his place. Æmylius, before his dieus alked him now again, Whether he had departure from Rome, making an Orabrought the mony along with him to pay those five thousand, whom the King would with much gravity and authority. He reentertain. Hereto when it was perceived that | quested those that thought themselves wise Antigonus could make no better answer, than enough to manage this War, either to Ccccccc fift him with their advice; or elfe to govern pus, leading into Perrebia; hard of afcent, their tongues at home, and not take upon but flenderly guarded, and therefore prothem to give sirections by hearfay, and cen- mising a fair journey. Martius either had not fure by idle reports: for he told them plain-been informed hereof, or durft not attempt ly, that he would frame his doings to occasi- it; or perhaps could not get his Souldiers to ons, not to the expectation of the multitude. The like speech of his father L. Emylius, who died valiantly in the Battel of Canne, been their march over Offa into Tempe. But might well be living in some of their memories; which was enough to make them rage, and ability to command. He had reconform themselves the more gladly unto formed, even at his first coming, many diforthe instructions given by a wise and resolute ders in the Roman Camp: teaching the soul-Conful.

fpatched, Emplius was honourably atten-bling themselves, as had been their manner, ded, at his fetting for th on his journey, with to examine the doings and purposes of their an especial hope of men, that he should finish General. And now he appointed about five the war : though that he should simil it to thousand men to this enterprise; whereof he foon and happily, was more than could have committed the charge unto Scipio Empliabeen hoped or imagined. He came to Brun-nus and Q. Fabius Maximus, his own fons by dufum: whence, when the wind came fair, nature; but adopted, the one of them, by a for he fet fail at break of day, and arrived of scipio the African; the other, by one of the fafely at the Isle of Coreyra before night, Fabii. Scipio took with him fome light-ar-Thence passed he to Delphi: where having med Thracians and Cretians; but his main done facrifice to Apollo, after the fifth day strength was of Legionaries. For the Kings he fet forwards to the Camp, and was there guard, upon the mountain, confifted in a in five dayes more. So are there but five of manner, wholly of Archers and Slingers, who the fifteen dayes remaining, in which he fir though, at some distance they might do no-nished the war.

ving spared no labour of men and of women away their aim, they were like to make a to fortifie the banks of Euipeus, where it was bad nights work, being to deal with those foordable in dry weather: fo as there was that were armed to fight at hand. To conceal little hope or none, to force him; and the business about which they went, scipio confequently, as little possibility to enter and Fabius took a wrong way towards the that way into Macedon. One great inconvenience troubling the Romans, and much difabling them to make attempt upon Dium, was lack of fresh water. For there were ten miles the country. All the way they were passing between Dium and Tempe; all the way lying the mountains (which was about three days) between the Sea shore and the foot of Olympus, without any Brook or Spring breaking forth on that side. But Amylius found prefent remedy for this, by digging Wells on the shore; where he found sweet Springs: as commonly there is no shore that wants them, though they rife not above the ground. Want of this knowledge was enough to hinder Martius from taking up his lodging any raclea, on the River of Peneus; where he had not for those that were weightily armed to Wherefore it was necessary to fearch ano- also beat upon the Romans and gave them to ther way: which by enquiry was foon found understand, that their labour was in vain accompany him into Macedon, and there af- out. There was a narrow pallage over Olymmake the adventure; they fearing left it would prove fuch a piece of work as had diers among other good lesions, to be obedi-All his business within the City being dient and ready in execution; without troutable fervice against those that should climb Perseus lay strongly encamped at Dium: ha- up unto them; yet when the darkness took journy:it being noised, that they were to run along the coast of Macedon by sea, and waste the Conful made shew of a meaning to set upon Perseus where he lay, rather to divert the Kings attention from that which was his main Enterprise, than upon any hope to do good, in feeking to get over Empeus. The channel of Enipeus, which received in Winter time a great fall of waters from the mountains, was exceeding deep and broad; and the ground of it was such, as though at the present it lay well-near all dry, yet it served watering at pleasure, but could perform no fight upon. Wherefore Emplin employed fervice of any worth. Yet when the Roman none fave his Velites; of whom the Kings light Camp had fuch means to lye close to the Macedonian, as it presently did, the passage though the Romans were better appointed for onward being defended as hath been flowed, seemed no less difficult than before. which Perseus had raised on his own bank, did recontinued his affault, such as it could be, more, than to give battel immediately: the fecond day. This might have ferved to doubting left otherwife the King should teach the Macedonians, that some greater change his mind, and get further off. And work was in hand: fince otherwise a good to this effect scipio brake with the Consul; Captain, as Amylius was known to be, would praying him not to lofe occasion by delay. not have troubled himself with making such But Amylius told him, that he spake like a brayado's, that were somewhat costly. But young man; and therefore willed him to Perseur lookt only unto that which was before have patience. The Romans were tyred with his eyes: until his men, that came run-their journy; had no Camp wherein to rest ning fearfully down the Mountain, brought themselves, nor any thing there, save only word into the camp, that the Romans were the bare ground whereon they trod. For following at their backs. Then was all full these, and the like respects, the Consul made of tumult; and the King himself no less a stand; and shewing himself unto the Ma-(if not more) amazed than any of the rest. cedonian, who did the like, in order of bat-Order was forthwith given to dislodge: or tel, gave charge to have the Camp measured rather without order, in all tumultuous out and entrenched behind the Army; wherehaste, the Camp was broken up, and a speedy into, at good leisure, he fell back, without retreat made to Pydna. Whether it were any manner of trouble. After a nights rest, it fo, that they which had the custody of the was hoped both by the Romans and the Mapassage were taken sleeping, or whether they cedonians, that the matter should be detercited by Plutarch out of Polybius, and an Epi- shewed, which he communicated to those ftle of Scipio, may each of them have been about him the next day. true. Thus was an open way cleared into Macedon: which had been effected by Mar- of september, by the Roman account) C. Sultius in the year foregoing; but was closed pitius Gallus, a Colonel, or Tribune of a up again through his not profecuting fo rich Legion, who had the former year been Præ-

opportunity.

course to take, after this unhappy begin- the Moon, which was to be the same night: ning. Some gave advice to man his Towns, willing the fouldiers not to be troubled and so to linger out the War: having been therewith, for that it was natural, and might taught by the last years example, how resolute the people were in making defence. But the manner of the Romans, in such Eclipses far worle council prevailed: as generally to beat Pans of Braß, and Basons, as we it doth in turbulent and fearful delibera- do in following a swarm of Bees; thinking be first of all besieged; and hetherein (as their superstition into admiration of his cowardly natures alwayes are jealous) not deep skill, when they faw it verified. Conover-carefully relieved. This was even trarile, the Macedonians howled and made a that fame that Æmilius, or any invader, great noife, as long as the Eclipfe lafted: that fame that Æmilius, or any invader, great noife, as long as the Eclipfe lafted: falhion, should have defired. So a place was chosen rather perhaps because it was their falhion, near unto Pydna, that served well for the than for that they were terrified therewith, Phalanx, and had likewife on the fides of it as with a prodegie betokening their loss: fome pieces of higher ground, fit for the fince their defire to fight was no whit lette-Archers and light armature, There he abode ned by it. I will not here stand to dispute, the coming of the enemy; who stayed not Whether such Eclipses do signifie, or cause long behind him. As foon as the Romans any alteration in civil affairs, & matters that had fight of the Kings Army 5 which with have small dependance on natural complexigreater fear than diffretion, had hafted away on: for the argument is too large. More wor-

Yet Emplies perfifted as he had begun: and notably well fortified: they defired nothing were beaten by plain force, Scipio and Fabi- mined; each part thinking their own Genew had very good fuccess in their journy. It ral too blame, for that they had not fought may well be, that they flept until the Romans the fame day. As for the King, he excused came somewhat near to them; and then ta- himself by the backwardness of the enemy, king alarm, when their arrows and flings who advanced no further; but kept upon could do little fervice, were beaten at handy- ground ferving ill for the Phalanx: as on the strokes: so as the different relations that are other side, the Consul had the reasons before

tor, foretold unto the Conful, and (with his Perseus was in an extream doubt what good liking) unto the Army, an Ecclipse of

That evening (which followed the third tions. The King resolved to put all at once that thereby they did the Moon great to hazzard of battel: fearing belike to put ease, and helped her in her labour. But himself into any one Town, left that should this prognostication of sulpitius converted from them, forfaking the Camp that was fo thy of observation it is, how superstition cap-

tivates the wisdome of the wisest, where two or three of the Roman fouldiers followthe help of true religion is wanting. Emy- ed into the River, wading after him up to lins, though he were fufficiently instructed the knees. The Kings men lay on the further concerning this defect of the Moon, that it bank; whence a couple of Thracians ran inwas no supernatural thing, nor above the to theWater, to draw this horse over to their reach of humane understanding, so as he consider the fell to blows, as in a private floud need to trouble himself with any dequarrel; and one of the Thracians was slain, vout regard thereof; yet could he not refrain His Countrimen feeing this, hafted to refrom doing his duty to this Moon, & congra-venge their fellows death, and followed tulating with facrifice her delivery, as foon as those that had flain him over the river. fhe shone out bright again: for which he is Hereupon company came in, to help on each commended even by Plutarch, a fage Philoso- part, until the number grew such, as made in pher, as a godly and religious man. If Sulpitiwe perhaps did not affift him in this foolish careful of the event. In fine, each of the Gedevotion, yet it is like, that he, being a Senator, and one of the Councel for war, was par- cordingly as the manner of his country, and taker the next morning in a facrifice done to the arms wherewith they ferved, did require, Hercules; which was no less foolish. For a The ground was a flat level, save that on the great part of the day was vainly confumed, lides a few hillocks were raifed here and ere Hercules could be pleased with any sa- there; whereof each part might take what crifice, and vouchfafe to shew tokens of good advantage it could. The Macedonians were luck in the entrails of the beafts. At length, the greater number, the Romans the better in the belly of the one and twentieth facri- fouldiers, and better appointed. Both the fice, was found a promife of victory to King and the Conful encouraged their men Amyling: but with condition, That he with lively words: which the present condifhould not give the onset. Hercules was a tion could bountifully affoord. But the King, Greek, and partial, as nearer in alliance to having finished his Oration, and senton his the Macedonian than to the Roman. Where- men, withdrew himself into Pydna: there to fore it had been better to call upon the new do facrifice, as he pretended, unto Hercules. goddes, lately canonized at Alabanda; or It is the less marvel, that he durst adventure uponRomulus, founder of their City, on whom battel, fince he had bethought himfelf of the Romans had bestowed his Deity; or (if | such a stratageme, whereby to save his own a God of elder date were more authentical) person. As for Hercules, he liked not the saupon Mars the Father of Romulus, to whom crifice of a Coward: whose unseasonable debelonged the guidance of military affairs; votion could be no better then hypocrifies and who therefore would have limited his For he that will pray for a good Harvest, favour, with no injunctions contrary to the ought also Plough, Sow, and Weed his throughly perfuaded, that the King meant to and he in looking to his own lafety, cauabide it: for that otherwise he would not have fed it to be lost altogether, by beginning stayed at Pydna, when as, a little before, his the flight. leisure served to retire whither he listed, the Romans being further off. In regard of corded are, That the Roman Elephants, could this, and perhaps of the tokens appearing in do no manner of good: That the Macedonithe Sacrifices, the Conful thought that he an Phalanx did fo fourly press onwards, might wait upon advantage, without making and beat off all which came before it, as any great hafte. Neither was it to be negle | Emplius was thereat much aftonished, that cted, that the morning Sun was full in the the Peligni rulhing desperately on the Pha-Romans faces: which would be much to their lanx, were over-born; many of them flain, hinderance all the forenoon. Since therefore and the fquadrons following them fo discou-Perfew kept his ground, that was commodi raged herewith, as they retired apacetoous for the Fhalanx, and Æmilius sent forth part of his men to bring in Wood and Fodder, there was no likelihood of fighting that day. But about ten of the clock in the morning, a small occasion brought to pass that, which whereto neither of the Generals had over earnest desire.

past a fray, and caused both the Armies to be nerals placed his men in order of battel, ac-Ground. When therefore the King returned Now concerning the Battel; Emilius was to the battel, he found it no better than loft:

The acts of this day, such as we find rewards an hill. These were the things that fell out averse to the Romans; and which the Conful beholding, is faid to have rent his Coat-armor for grief. If the King with all his power of horse, had in like manner done his devoyre, the victory might have been his own. That which turned the fortune of the A Horse brake loose at watering, which battel, was the same which doubtless the Condifficulty or almost the impossibility of as they had been wont. But of his great holding the Phalanx long in order. For men that had escaped from the battel, there whilest some of the Romans small battalions was none appearing in the Court. In this prefled hard upon one part of it, and others melancholy time, there were two of his recoyled from it; it was necessary (if the Treasurers that had the boldness to come to Macedonians would follow upon those which him, and tell him roundly of his faults. But were put to the worse) that some files ha- in reward of their unseasonable admonitiving open way before them, should advance ons, he stabbed them both to death. After themselves beyond the rest that were held this, none whom he sent for would come at a ftand. This coming fo to pass, admo- at him. This boded no good. Wherefore nished the Consul, what was to be done. The standing in fear, lest they that refused to come long Pikes of the Macedonians were of little at his call, would shortly dare some greater use, when they were charged in flank by mischief, he stole out of Pella by night. Of the Roman Targettiers; according to the his friends he had with him only Evander direction given by Amylius, when he saw (who had been employed to kill Eumenes at the front of the enemies great battel become Delphi and two other. There followed him unequal, and the ranks in fome places open, by reason of the unequal resistance which of his money than of him. To these he they found. Thus was the use of the Pha-lanz proved unavailable against many small about fifty talents, though shortly he couse-Squadrons, as it had been formerly in the ned them of some part thereof; making shew battel of Cynoscephala: yea this form as if he would have redeemed it, but neof embattailing was found unferviceable ver paying the money. The third day afagainst the other, by reason, that being not ter the battel he came to Amphipolis, where every where alike diffressed, it would break he exhorted the Townsmen to sidelity, with of it felf; though here were little fuch in- tears: and his own speech being hindeconvenience of ground, as had been at Cyno- red by tears, he appointed Evander to speak ran amain towards Pella. All his horse first fame of the overthrow, they had emescaped, in a manner untouched, and a great pried their Town of two thousand Thranumber followed him; the little harm cians that lay there in Garrison: fending which they had taken, witnessing the little them forthunder colour of a gainful emgood fervice which they had done. As for the poor foot, they were left to the mercy of the Enemy: who slew above twenty bad Evander to be gone. The King hearing thousand of them, though having little cause this, had no mind to tarry: but embarking to be furious, as having loft in that battel, himself and the treasure which he had there, only some four core, or fixscore men at the in certain vessels that he found in the river most. Some of the foot, escaping from the Strymon; passed over the Isle of Samothrace: execution, overtook the King and his where he hoped to live fafe, by priviledge company in a Wood, where they fell to of the religious Sanctuary therein. railing at the horsemen, calling them cowards, traitors, and fuch other names, till the less doubtful, how all the Kingdom fell at length they fell to blows. The King was into the power of Emplius, within so few in doubt lest they had ill meaning to himself: dayes after his victory, Pydna, which was and therefore turned out of the common nearest at hand, was the last that yielded. way, being followed by fuch as thought it About fix thousand of the fouldiers, that good. The rest of the company dispersed were of sundry Nations, sled out of the battel themselves: every one as his own occasions into that Town; and prepared for defence: guided him. Of those that kept along with the confused rabble of so many strangers their King, the number began within a while hindering all deliberation and confent. to lessen. For he fell to devising upon whom Hippius, who had kept the passage over Osa he might lay the blame of that dayes misfortune, which was most due to himself: there- been sent Embassador to Gentius the Illyrian; by causing those that knew his nature, to were the first that came in : yielding firink away from him, how they could. At themselves, and the Town of Berga, whither his coming to Pella, he found his Pages they had retired out of the battel. With ful expected, even from the beginning: the and houshold-servants, ready to attend him. what himself would have uttered. But Perseus, when he saw his battel begin to the Amphipolitans made it their chief care rout, turned his bridle presently, and to look well to themselves. Upon the

These miserable shifts of the King make it the shoar: who had stayed so long about this, that he might fear to be intercepted ere he could recover the Temple. He ran way, left he should be taken, he hid him-nica, from Pella, and from all the Towns of breaks off without effect. Presently there Macedon, within two dayes: the loss of the arrives at Samothrace Gn. Octavius the Rohead bereaving the whole body of all sense man Admiral with his Fleet: who assays and strength. Neither did they of Pydna, as well by terrible threats, as by fair lanftand out any longer, when they knew that guage, to draw the King out of his lurking the King had forfaken his Country: but hole; wherein, for fear of imprisonment, opened their gates upon fuch terms, that he had now already imprisoned himself. the fack of it was granted to the Roman Ar- When all would not ferve, a question my. Emylius fent abroad into the Country, was moved to the Samothracians; How fuch as he thought meetest, to take charge they durst pollute their Temple, by receiof other Cities: he himself marching to- ving into it one that had violated the like wards Pella. He found in Pella no more than holy priviledge of Sanctuary, by attempting three hundred Talents: the same, whereof the murder of King Eumenes at Delphi? This Perseus had lately defrauded the Illyrian. went to the quick. The Samothracians, be-But within a very little while he shall have ing now in the power of the Romans, take taken Sanctuary in the Temple at 8amo- the Temple, is accused of an impious fact. thrace: his own Letters to the Conful con-committed at Delphi, whereof unless he can firming the roport. He fent these Letters clear himself in judgment, he must not by persons of such mean condition, that his be suffered to prophane that holy place. case was pitied, for that he wanted the ser- by his abiding in it. The reverence born vice of better men. The scope of this wri- to his Majesty, now past, makes them forting was, to defire favour : which, though he bear to fay, that Perfew himself is charged begged in terms ill befeeming a King, yet with the same crime. But what will this fince the inteription of his Epiftle was, King avail, when the Minister of the fact being Perseus to the Consul Paulus; the Consul, who brought into judgment, shall (as is to be had taken from him his Kingdom, and feared) appeach the Author? Perseurtherewould not allow him to retain the Title, fore willeth Evander to have confideration refused to make any answer thereunto. So of the little favour that can be expected at there came other Letters, as humble as the Romans hand; who are like to be precould be expected: whereby he craved and fidents and overfeers of this judgment: fo as obtained, that some might be sent to confer it were better to dye valiantly, since none with him about matters of his present other hope remains, than hope to make good estate. Nevertheless, in this Conference, anill cause; where, though he had a good he was marvelloully earnest, that he might plea, yet it could not help him. Of this be allowed ftill to retain the name of motion Evander feems to like well: and King. And to this end it was, perhaps, either kills himself, or hoping to escape that he had so carefully preserved his thence, by deferring the time as it were to Treasure, unto the very last: flattering get poyson wherewith to end his life, is kilhimself with such vain hopes as these; That led by the Kings commandment. The death the Romans would neither violate a San- of this man, who had fluck to Persons in all ctuary, nor yet neglect those great riches times of need, makes all the Kings friends in his possession, but compound with him that remained hitherto, to forsake him: fo as the like mellage came others from Theffalo- far against his mind, that the Conference this matter to heart; and fend word to the It was foon understood, that Perfers had King, that Evander, who lives with him in for mony, letting him have his defire to none are left with him, fave his wife and chillive at ease, and to be called King. Yea, dren, with his Pages. It is much to be fuit feems that he had indeed, even from specked, that they which leave him upon this the beginning, a defire to live in this II)e occasion, will tell perillous tales, and lay, That of Samothrace: both for that in one of his the King hath loft the priviledge of this holy confultations about the War, he was de Sanctuary, by murdering Evander therein. horted by his friends, from feeking to exchange his Kingdom of Macedon, for for flall dare to gain ay them? Since therefore * fuch a paltry Illand; and for that he offer- there is nothing but a point of formality, and ed to lay up the mony which Eumenes de- even that also liable to dispute, which premanded, in the holy Temple that was there. ferves him from captivity; he purposeth to But he finds it otherwise. They urge him make an escape, and flye, with his Treasures, to give place unto necessity, and, without unto Cotys his good friend, into Thrace, Orbinal Units Cotys his good friend, into Thrace, Orbinal Unit more adoe, to yeeld to the diferetion and andes, a Cretian, lay at Samothrace with one mercy of the people of Rome. This is fo ship; who easily was perswaded to wast the King thence, With all fecrecy the King's mo- answered all with a fearful filence. He was ny, as much as could be so conveyed, was comforted with hope of life, or (as the carryed aboard by night; and the King Conful termed it) almost assurance; for the said with himself; with his wife and * children (if that such was the mercy of the people at rather it were not true, that he had with Rome. After these good words, being in-Liv. 1.44. him only * Philip his elder Son, who was vited to the Conful's Table, and respectively only by adoption his Son, being his * brother entreated, he was committed prisoner to by nature) with much adoe got out at a Q. Ælius.

window by a Rope, and over a mud-wall. Such end had this Macedonian War, after At his coming to the Sea-side, he found no four years continuance: and such end there-Oroandes there: the Cretian had played a withall had the Kingdom of Macedon; the Cretian trick, and was gone with the mony glory whereof, that had fometime filled all to his own home. So it began to wax clear parts of the world then known, was now day, whilest Perseus was searching all along translated unto Rome.

therefore amain towards his lodging: and Gentius King of the Illyrians taken by the Romans.

thinking it not fafe to enter it the common Relf in an obscure corner. His Pages missing him, ran up and down making inquiry; till off avius made Proclamation, That all succeeded unto App. Claudius, had the like the Kings Pages, and Macedonians whatfo- fuccess against King Gentius the Illyrian. ever, abiding with their Master in Samo- Gentius had an Army of fifteen thousand; thrace, should have their lives and liberty, with which he was at Liffus, ready to afwith all to them belonging, which they had lift King Perfeus as soon as the mony should either in that Isle, or at home in Macedon, come, whereof he had received only conditionally, That they should presently ten Talents. But Anicius arrested him on yeeld themselves to the Romans. Hereupon the way, fought with him, overcame him, they all came in. Likewise Ion, a Thessa- and drave him into * Scodra. This Town Called lonian, to whom the King had given the was very defensible by nature, besides the now Scacultody of his children, delivered them up help of fortification; and ftrongly manned tank to Octavius. Lastly, Perfeus himself, with with all the force of Illyria; which, affifted his Son Fhilip, accusing the gods of Samo- with the Kings presence, made it seem unthrace, that had no better protected him, possible to be won, in any not a very long rendred himself, and made the Roman time. Yet Anicius was consident in his Victory compleat. If he had not trusted in late Victory; and therefore prefented his those gods of Samothrace, but employed his Army before the walls, making countewhole care in the defence of Macedon, with nance to give an affault. The Illyrians, out other hope of living, than of reigning that might eafily have defended themselves therein; he might well have brought this within the Town, would needs iffue forth War to an happier end. Now, by dividing and fight. They were, it feems, rather his cogitations, and purfuing at once, those passionate, than couragious: for they were contrary hopes of faving his Kingdom by beaten; and thereupon forthwith began Arms, and himself by flight, he is become a amazedly to treat about yeelding. The fpectacle of milery, and one among the King fent Embaffadours; by whom, at first, number of those Princes, that have been he defired truce for three dayes, that he wretched by their own default. He was might deliberate concerning his effate. It presently fent away to Emplius; before ill became him, who had laid violent hands whom he fell to the ground fo basely, that on the Roman Embassadours, to have rehe feemed thereby to diffionour the Victory course to such mediation. But he thought over himself, as gotten upon one of ab- his own fault pardonable, in as much as hiject quality, and therefore the less to be thertothere was no greater harm done by esteemed. Emplius used to him the lan- him, than the casting of those Embassadours guage of a gentle Victor: blaming him, into prison, where they were all alive. Hathough mildly, for having, with so hostile ving obtained three dayes respite, he passed a mind, made war upon the Romans. Here- up a River, within half a mile of the Roman to good answer might have been returned Camp, into the Lake of Scorda, as it were by one of better spirit. As for Perseus, he to consult the more privately; though in-true, that his brother Caravantius was com- averse from the Romans in the late War of ing to his reseue. Finding that no such Macedon, were either taken and condemning to his reseurch help was toward, it is wonder, that he was ed, or fent prisoners to Rome; excepting fo foolish as to return into Scorda. He sent some that slew themselves for fear, whole messengers craving access unto the Prætor; goods also were conficated. Yet this probefore whom, having lamented his folly past cured little grace; and less would have (which, excepting the diffnoncity, was not done, if old M. Cato, a man by nature vehefo great as his folly prefent) he fell down ment, had not uttered a milde fentence, and humbly, and yeelded himself to discretion. advertised the Senate, That in decreeing All the Towns of his Kingdom, together War against Rhodes, they should much difwith his wife, children, brother, friends, honour themselves, and make it thought, that been imprisoned, brought word from Anicius Wars of Philip and Antiochus, helped well how all had passed.

CHAP. VI.

1130

ø. X.

Greece and Macedon after their Victory over Perfeus.

JOW began the Romans to swell with equal friends. the pride of their fortune; and to look tyrannically upon those that had been Romans make themselves terrible in all parts unmannerly toward them before, whilest of Greece. Emplius himself made progress the War with Perseus seemed full of dan-thorow the Country; visiting all the ger. The Rhodian Emballadours were still famous places therein, as for his pleasure: at Rome, when the tydings of these Victo- yet not forgetting to make them understand ries were brought thither. Wherefore it what power he had over them. More than was thought good to call them into the Senate, and bid them do their errand again. Itries were flain at one time by those of the This they performed with a bad grace; Roman faction, and with help of the Rofaying, That they were sent from Rhodes to man Souldiers. Others fled, or were bamake an overture of peace; for a fmuch as it nished, and their goods conficated. Of was thought, that this war was no lefs grie- which things, when complaint was made to vous to the Romans themselves, than to the the Consul, the redress was such, as requited Macedonians and many others: but that not the pains of supplication. His friends, now they were very glad, and in behalf of that is to fay, those which betrayed unto the Romans did congratulate with the Se- the Romans the liberty of their Country, he nate and people of Rome, that it was ended | feafted like a King, with excellive chear; much more happily than had been expe- yet to, that he had all things very cheap in cted. Hereto the Senate made answer his Camp: an easie matter, since no man That the Rhodians had fent this Embat- durft be backward in fending provifions, nor fage to Rome, not for love of Rome, but in | fet on them the due price. Embaffadours favour of the Macedonian; whose partizans likewise were sent from Rome; some, to they were, and should so be taken. By give order for settling the estate of Macethese threats, and the desire of some (co. don, towards which they had more particuvetous of the charge) to have War pro- lar inftruction from the Senate, than was claimed against Rhodes; the Embassadours usual in such cases; and some, to visit the afwere so affrighted, that in mourning Ap- fairs of Greece. The Kingdom of Macedon parel, as humble Suppliants, they went was let at liberty by Emplius, and the Emabout the City, befeeching all men, espe-baffadours, his affiftants, who had order cially the great Ones, to pardon their in therefore from the Senate. But this liberty discretion, and not to profecute them with was such as the Romans used to bestow. The vengeance, for fome foolish words. This best part of it was, That the Tribute which danger of War from Rome being known had been payed unto the Kings, was leffened deed, to hearken whether the report were at Rhodes, all that had been any whit were presently given up. So this War * rather the wealth of that City, which they com.in were presently given up.

ended in thirty dayes: the people of Rome were greedy to ranfack, than any just cause, out, and ended in thirty dayes: not knowing that it was begun, until Per- had moved them thereto. This confidera Canasa penna, one of the Embassadours that had tion, together with their good deserts in the Galille, the Rhodians: among whom, none of any mark remained alive, fave those that had been of the Roman faction. All which notwithstanding, many years passed, ere by im-How the Romans behaved themselves in portunate suit, they could be admitted into the fociety of the Romans: a favour which till now they had not effeemed; but thought themselves better without it, as

With the like, or greater feverity, did the

divided into four parts, and they forbid- to Callicrates was very urgent: fearing, den commerce one with the other. All and procuring them to fear in behalf of the Nobility were fent captive into Italy, him and his friends, that if some sharp orwith their wives and children, as many as der were not now taken, he and his fellows were above fifteen years old. The ancient should be made to pay for their michie-Laws of the Country were abrogated; vous devices, ere long time passed. So the and new given by Emilius. Such mif- Embaffadours came among the Acheans: chief the Senate thought it better to do, where one of them, in open affembly of at the first alteration of things in this Pro- the Nation, spake, as Callicrates had bevince, and in the time of Conquest, than fore instructed him. He said, That some of otherwise to leave any inconvenience that the chief among them, had with mony and Should be worse in the future: But con- other means be friended Perseus. This becerning the Greeks, that were not subjects ing so, he defired that all such men might to Rome, the things done to them could be condemned; whom, after sentence gideserve no better name than meer tyran- ven, he would name unto them. After senny: yea, and shameless perjury; were it tence given (cryed out the whole assemnot so, that the familiar custom, among bly) what justice were this? Name them Princes and great Estates, of violating first, and let them answer; which if they Leagues, doth make the Oaths of confocteation feem of no validity. The Embaffadours that were fent to vifit the baffadours that were fent to vifit the lall their Prætors, as many as had led their Greeks, called before them all fuch men Armics, were guilty of this crime. If this of note, from every quarter, as had any were true, said Xenon, a temperate man, and way discovered an unserviceable disposi- consident in his innocence, then should I tion towards the Romans. These they likewise have been friend to Perseus: fent to Rome; where they were made fure whereof, if any man can accuse me, I shall enough. Some of these had sent Letters throughly answer him, either here presentto Perseur, which fell at length into the Ro- ly, or before the Senate at Rome. Upon mans hands: and in that respect, though these words of Xenon the Embassadour laid they were no subjects; yet wanted there hold, and faid, That even so it were the not colour, for using them as traitors, or best way, for him and the rest to purge at least as enemies. But since only two themselves before the Senate at Rome. ly on the Macedonian fide; and fince it is not until he had cited above a thousand; confessed, that the good Patriots were no willing them to appear and answer before less afflicted in this inquisition, than they the Senate. This might even be termed the manner of proceeding was inexcufable ty- the honestest and worthiest men were carfor fear of Rome, the season served fitly to Sould return into Achaia. Neither could any by half. As for the rest, the Country was rank the Acheans with the rest. And heremen were beheaded, for having bin open- Then began he to name others, and left that had fold themselves to the King: this captivity of Greece; wherein so many of ranny. With the Acheans these Embassa- ried from home, for none other cause, than dours were to deal more formally: not so their love unto their Country; to be pumuch because that Common-wealth was nished according to the will of those, who ftrong; (though this were to be regarded could not endure, that virtue, and regard by them, having no Commission to make of the publick liberty, should dwell togeor denounce War) and like to prove unther in any of the Greeks. At their coming tractable, if manifest wrong were offered; to Rome, they were all cast into prison, as as for that there appeared no manner of men already condemned by the Acheans. fign, by Letters, or otherwife, whereby Many Embaflages were fent from Achaia any one of the Acheans could be suspici- (where it is to be wondred, that any such oully charged to have held correspondence with the Macedonian. It was also remaining: fince honesty had been thus fo, that neither Callicrates, nor any of his punished as a vice, in so many of the woradherents, had been employed by the Na- thieft among them) to inform the Senate, tion, in doing or offering their fervice to that these men were neither condemned the Romans, but only such as were the best by the Acheans, nor yet held to be offen-Patriots. Yet would not therefore the Emders. But in ftead of better answer, it was bassadours neglect to use the benefit of pronounced; That the senate thought it the time: wherein, fince all men trembled not expedient for the Country, that these men

CHAP. VI.

fed to importune the Senate for their liberty, prevail at all; until after seventeen years, efficacy of an Embassiage sent from them to fewer than thirty of them were inlarged, Antiochus; whereof, before we speak, we of whom that wife and virtuous man Polybins the great Hiftorian, was one. All the goers, of himself, and of his affairs about rest were either dead in prison, or, having which these Embassadours came. made offer to escape, whether upon the way before they came to Rome, or whether out of Jayle, after that they were committed thereto, suffered death as malesactors. The War of Antiochus upon Egypt brought

This was a gentle correction, in regard of what was done upon the Epirots. For the Senate being defirous to preserve the Macedonian Treasure whole; yet withall, to gratifie the Souldiers, gave order, that was memorable in the short time followthe whole Country of Epirus should be ing of his reign and life. He died the six and put to fack. This was a barbarous and hor-thirtieth year after he had worn a Crown, rible cruelty 3 as also it was performed by and in the seventeenth or eighteenth of Emplius with mischievous subtilty. Ha- Ptolomy Epiphanes; while he attempted to use the liberty bestowed upon them by three Sons, Selencus, Philopator, Antiochus the people of Rome; he sent unto the Epi- Epiphanes, Demetrius Soter; and one rots for ten of the principal men out of Daughter, Cleopatra, whom he had given every City. These he commanded to deli- in marriage to Ptolomy Epiphanes King of ver up all the Gold and Silver which they Egypt. Selencus, the fourth of that name. had; and fent along with them, into every and the eldest of Antiochus his Sons; reignof their Towns, what companies of men he ed in Syria twelve years, according to Euevery one the Town whereinto he was received, took from him the means of fent. Thus in one day were threefcore and managing any great affair. Of him, about ten Cities, all confederate with the Ro- three hundred years before his birth, Daand besides other acts of hostility in a time | ejus vilissimus & indignus decore regio. of peace, a hundred and fifty thousand of And in his place (speaking of Antiochus, the that Nation made flaves. It may be grant- Father of this man) shall flart up a vile pered, that some of the Epirots deserved pu- Son, unworthy the honour of a King. Under nishment, as having favoured Perseus. But this seleucus, those things were done which fince they among this people, that were are spoken of Onias the high Priest, in these ready sent into Haly, there to receive their peace, because of the godliness of Onias the due; and fince this Nation, in general, was Prieft, it came to pass, that even the King did ever otherwise his virtues were.

their Victory, with the Greek and Macedo the Books of the Macedbees take beginfolicitation of the Acheans, who never cea- nians. How terrible they were to other Kingdoms abroad, it will appear by the must say somewhat of Antiochus his fore-

ø. XI.

to end by the Roman Embaffadours.

Ntiochus the Great, after his peace with the Romans, did nothing that ving taken leave of the Greeks, and of the rob the Temple of Bel, or (according to Strabl.16, Macedonians, with bidding them well to Justine) of Jupiter. He left behind him Just 1.351 thought convenient, as it were to fetch febius, Appian, and Sulpitius: though jo-Eufth in thought convenient, as it were the mony. But he gave fecret instructions fephus give him but seven years. A Prince, de hell. to the Captains, that upon a certain day who, as he was flothful by nature, to the Sp. Ass. by him appointed, they should fall to sack, great loss which his Father Antiochus had 22.6.5. mans, spoiled by the Roman Souldiers; niel gave this judgment, Et stabit in loco pasten thought guilty of this offence; yea, or but words, and other to the lame effect : What . Mac. 3: coldly affected to the Romans, had been alnot only at the present in good obedience, honour the place, and garnished the Temple but had even in this War done good fer with great gifts. And all that is written in vice to the Romans: I hold this act fo the third Chapter of the second of Maccawicked, that I should not believe it, had bees, of Simon of Benjamin, who by Appolany one Writer delivered the contrary. lonins betrayed the Treasures of the But the truth being manifest by confent of Temple: and of Heliodorus fent by the all, it is the less marvellous that God was King to seize them; of his miraculous pleased to make Amylius childles, even striking by God, and his recovery at the in the glory of his triumph, how great for prayers of Onias; of the Kings death, and of his successour Antiochus Epiphanes. It is In such manner dealt the Romans, after therefore from the reign of this King, that vered by one and the same hand. For the unjust purpose; especially Antiochus, who first Book, although it touch upon Alexan- gave with his Daughter in marriage, unto der the Great, yet it hath nothing else of this Ptolomy, the Provinces of Cologria. his ftory; nor of the acts of his fucceffors, Phuenice, and Judua, which he had won by till the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, the his victory over Scopas, that was General brother and successor of this selenens, from of the Egyptian Forces in those parts. Newhom downward to the death of simon vertheless, Ptolomy adhered to the Ro-Maccabeus (who died in the hundred mans: whereby he lived in the greater threefcore and seventeenth year of the security. He left behind him two Sons, this Greeks in Syria) that first Book treateth. Ptolomy Philometer, and Ptolomy Physicon; The Author of the second Book, although with a Daughter Cleopatra. Cleopatra was he take the flory somewhat further off, by wife to the elder of her brethren, and afhundred and one and fiftieth year of the was cast off, and her Daughter taken in Grecian reign, and with the death of Ni- her stead. Such were the marriages of canor, flain by Judas: remembring in the these Egyptian Kings. fourth Chapter the practice of Jason the brother of Onias; who, after the death of the Lover of his Mother) by a bitter nick-

1Mac.12. Seleucus, prevailed with Antiochus Epipha- name, because he slew her, fell into harred nes, his successor, for the Priesthood. It is with his Subjects, and was like to be cha-

Onias, that Arius King of the Spartam lent ving a ftrong party, got possession of Alex-Embassadours to the Jews, as to their bro-andria; and Philometer held himself in thers and kinsmen. Which intelligence be- Memphis, craving succour of King Antiobreth in the Preamble of that Epiftle, protection of the young Prince, fought by which he himself directed to the people of all means possible to posses himself of that Sparta by Numenius and Antipater his Em-Kingdom. He fent Apollonius the Son of bassadours, whom he employed at the Mnestheus Embassadour into Egspt, and Priest, whereto Josephus adds, that the meter, to deliver the King his Nephew, name of the Lacedemonian Embassadour with the principal places of that Kingdom, was Demoteles, and that the Letters had a into his hands; pretending an extraordi-Eagle holding a Dragon in her claws.

he usurped from his brothers Son.

Sifter cleopatra, being then very young, had been about seven years King of Egypt.

Ptolomy Epiphanes, the Father of this had agreed to divide his Kingdom beween lonius being strucken by the Angel of God, them, whileft he was a child. But they and recovering again at the prayer of found fuch other bufiness ere long with the Onias: yet sufficed not this example to ning. Which Books feem not to be deli- | Romans, as made them give over their way of a Proæme, yet he endeth with the ter his death to the younger, by whom the Ptolomy Philometor, fo called (that is, alfo held by Jansenius, and other grave fed out of his Kingdom, his younger brother, that it was in the time of this ther being fet up against him. Physican hatween them and the Greeks, Jonathan the brother and fuccefior of Judas, remembers and fuccefior of Judas, remembers who under colour to take upon him the fame time to the Senate of Rome; repeating also the former Letters word by word, which Arius had fent to Onias the high before the first the fovernous of the young King Philo. fquare Volume, and were fealed with an nary care and defire of his Nephews fafety and well doing. And the better to answer Now to this seleucus, the fourth of that all arguments to the contrary, he prepared name, succeeded Antiochus Epiphanes, in a forcible Army to attend him. Thus came the hundred and seven and thirtieth year he alongst the coast of Syria to Joppe, and of the Greek in Syria. He was the second from thence on the sudden he turned him-Son of the Great Antiochus: and he ob- felf towards Jerufalem; where, by Jajon 2 Mac 4. tained his Kingdom by procuring the the Priest, (a Chaplain fit for such a Padeath of the King his brother; which also tron) he was with all pomp and solemnity received into the City. For though late-Ptolomy Philometor, his Nephew by his ly, in the time of Selencus, the brother and 2 Mac 3; predecessor of Epiphanes, that impious Traitor Simon of the Tribe of Benjamin, Ruler of the Temple, when he would have King Philometor, had reigned in Egipt four delivered the treatures thereof to Apolloand twenty year, in great quiet, but doing nins Governour of Celospria and Phelittle or nothing that was memorable. Phi nicia, was disappointed of his wicked purlip of Macedon, and the Great Antiochus, pose by miracle from Heaven; the said Apol-

crices. Presently upon the death of seleu- | conclusion, after that Antiochus had smit-3 Mac.4. the Priesthood for himself, offered unto people, and entred proudly into the Sandhathe King three hundred and threefcore ry, and took away the golden Altar, and the talents of filver, with other rents and Candlestick for the light, and all the instrufumms of mony. So he got his defire, ments thereof, and the table of the Shewthough he not long enjoyed it.

being over-reached by another in the Crowns, and the golden Apparel. He took alfame kind, calls to mind a by word taken fo the Silver, and the Gold, and the precious up among the Acheans, when as that mifchievous Callicrates, who had been too he had taken away all, he departed into his hard for all worthy and virtuous men, own Land, after he had murdered many men. was beaten at his own weapon, by one of his own condition. It was thus:

One fire than other burns more forcibly, One Wolf than other Wolves, does bite more fore, One Hawk than other Hawks more swift does fly: So one most mischievous of men before, Callicrates, false knave as knave might be, Met with Menalcidas more falle than he.

And even thus fell it out with Tason: who within three years after was betrayed, and over-bidden by Menelans the bro- the Greeks, pressed him, by several Embasther of simon, that for three hundred ta- fages, to some good conclusion. But his lents more obtained the Priesthood for answer was, that if the Alexandrians could himself: Jason thereupon being forced to be contented to receive their King his fly from Ferusalem, and to hide himself | Nephew Philometer, the elder brother of among the Ammonites.

Phanicia, to augment the numbers of his he saw that it was all hard piece of work men of war, and to prepare a Fleet for his to take Alexandria by force: he thought expedition into Egypt; with which, and it better to let the two brothers confume 1 Mac 1. with a mighty Army of Land-forces, He themselves with intestine war, than by the went about to reign over Egypt, that he terrour of his arms, threatning destruction might have the dominion of two Realms, and unto both of them, to put into them any entred Egypt with a mighty company; with defire of coming to agreement. He there-Chariots and Elephants, with Horsemen, and fore withdrew his Forces for the present; with a great Navy, and moved war against leaving the Ptolomies in very weak estate, V. 18, 19, Ptolemaus King of Egypt; but Ptolemaus | the younger almost ruinated by his inva-20, &c. was afraid of him, and fled, and many were fron; the elder hated and forfaken by his wounded to death. He wan many strong Gi- people. ties, and took away the spoils of the Land of Egypt. Thus was fulfilled the Prophecy were, their hatred was thought to be so Daniel: He shall enter into the quiet and strong, that Antiochus might leave them to plentiful Provinces, and he shall do that the prosecution thereof; and follow, at thers Father. Never indeed had any of the lem, or elsewhere. So after the fack of Fefiam, and the Hill Cassius, after which he as it were, by way of dowry to a Concuof all the Cities of Egypt, Alexandria Governour of Syria in his absence, he left terrifie others from the like ungodly pra- excepted, which he could not force. In cus, this Jason, the brother of Onias, seek- ten Egypt, he turned again, and went up to Mall. ing to supplant his brother, and to obtain wards ifrael and Jerusalem with a mighty 6.1. bread, and the pouring Veffels, and the Bolls. This naughty dealing of Jason, and his and the golden Basons, and the Vail, and the Jewels, and the secret Treasures : and when

It was about the beginning of the Ma-Lib. 6. cedonian war, that Antiochus took in hand this Egyptian bufiness. At what time he first laid claim to Calofyria, justifying his title by * the same allegations which his Father * Cap: 5 had made; and fiffly averring, that this feet. a. Province had not been configned over to the Egyptian, or given in dowry with Cleopatra. Easie it was to approve his right unto that which he had already gotten, when he was in a fair way to get all Egypt. The 81, 81, Achaans Rhodians Athenians, and other of &c. the Ptolomies, then should the war be pre-From Jerusalem, Antiochus marched into | sently at an end ; otherwise not. Yet when

But how weak soever these Egyptians which his Fathers have not done, nor his Fa- good leifure, his other business at Fernsa-Kings of Syria fo great a victory over the rusalem, he rested him a while at Antioch, Egyptians, nor took from them so great and then made a journey into Cilicia, to riches. For he gave a notable overthrow suppress the Rebellion of the Thracians and to the Captains of Ptolomy, between Pelu- others in those parts, who had been given, entred and fackt the greatest and richest bine of the Kings, called Antiochis. For one Andronichus, a man of great authority | fently after this, at the fuit of one Ptolomy, about him. In the mean while , Menelaus a Traitor to Ptolomy Philometor , he conthe brother of Simon, the same who had demned innocent men to death, who justthrust Tason out of the Priesthood, and ly complained against Menelaus, and his promised the King three hundred talents brother Lysimachus, for a second robbing for an In-come; committing the charge of of the Temple, and carrying thence the the Priesthood to his brother Lysimachus, Vessels of gold remaining. Hereby it is stole certain Vessels of gold out of the manifest, that he was guided by his Temple: whereof he presented a part to own outragious will, and not by any re-Andronicus the Kings Lieutenant, and gard of justice: since he revenged the fold the rest at Tyre, and other Cities ad- death of Onias, he slew those that were in vance the payment of the three hundred told their canse, yea, before the Scythians, talents promifed; the same being now by they should have been heard as innocent. By Softratus eagerly demanded. Hercof when reason of such his unsteadiness, this King Onias the Priest (formerly dispossessed by was commonly termed Epimanes, that is, Jason) had certain knowledge, being mo- Mad, instead of Epiphanes, which signissived with zeal, and detesting the facrifedge eth Noble, or Illustrious. of Menelaus, he reproved him for it; and fearing his revenge, he withdrew himfelf for a fecond voyage into Egypt, and then into a Sanctuary at Daphne.

CHAP. VI.

about ten miles: wherein were the Tem- of Spear-men, and as troops of Horsemen set ples of Apollo and Diana, with a Grove, in array, encountring and coursing one fweet Springs, banquetting places, and the against another. Of these prodigious like; which were wholly, in a manner, figns, or rather forewarnings of God, all abused to lust, and other such voluptuous. Histories have delivered us, some more, ness. Whether it were well done of Onies fome less. Before the destruction of Jeto commit himself to the protection of rusalem by Vespatian, a Star in the form of Apollo and Diana, or to claim priviledge a sword appeared in the Heavens directly from the holiness of a ground consecrated over the city, after which there followed own opinion, that the inconvenience is far | Pliny tells us, that the Armies were feen less, to hold this Book as Apocryphal, than fighting in the air from the morning till to judge this fearful shift which Onias the evening. (though a vertuous man) made for his life, e ther commendable or allowable, as the fountain poured out blood in flead of wabook feems to do. As for this refuge, it ter, in or near the City of Genoa; foon afcould not fave the life of the poor old ter which the City was taken by the Saraman: for Menelaus taking Andronicus apart, cens, with great flaughter. Of these and Mercus Vi. Muc, 2. 4 prayed him to flay Onias. So when he the like prodigious figns, Vipera hath colle- pera de prayed him to flay Onias. So when he the like productions ugus, repera hath confe pela de came to Onias, he counselled him crastily, cad many, and very remarkable. But this repera de giving him his right hand with an oath, one seemeth to me most memorable, be-prises and personaded bim to come out of the cause the most notorious. All men know, & sandinary ; so he slew bim incontinently that in the Emperour Nero, the off-spring without any regard of righteousness. Here- of the Casars, as well natural as adopted, after his return out of Cilicia, He took | warning. away Andronicus his garment of purple, When Livia was first married to Au-38 and rent his clothes, and commanded gustus, an Eagle let fall into her arms a him to be led throughout the City; and in white Hen, holding a Laurel branch in her the same place where he had committed the mouth. Livie caused this Hen to be carewickedness against Onias, he was slain as stully nourished, and the Laurel branch to a murderer. In taking revenge of this be planted: of the Hen came a fair ininnocent mans death, I should have crease of white Poultry; and from the litthought that this wicked King had once the branch there fprang up in time a joyning. This he did, as it feemeth to ad- the same cause with Onias ; Who, had they verse 47.

After this, Antiochus made preparation Mac,5.1. were there feen throughout all the City of Je-Daphne was a place of delight adjoyning rusalem, forty dayes long, horsemen running as as suburb to Antioch. In compass it had in the air with robes of gold, and as bands to any of the Heathen gods, I will not a flaughter like unto this of Epiphanes, Plin. lib.2. ftand to discourse. Only I say for mine though far greater. In the Cymbrian wars, cap. 57-

In the time of Pope John the eleventh, a. of when complaint was made to Antiochus took end; whereof this notable fign gave

When Livia was first married to Au- suet. Gaiba in his lifetime done Justice. But pre- Grove of Lawrel; so that afterwards, in all triumphs, the Conquerors did use to and a meaning to subject his younger brocarry in their hands a branch of Bayes ta-ther unto him, which he gave in answer ken out of this Grove; and after the tri- to all Embassadours; yet he now prepaumphs ended, to fet it again in the fame red to make a sharp war upon them both. ground: which branches were observed, And to this end he presently surnished and when they happened to wither, to fore-thew the death of those persons who car-shew the death of those persons who carried them in triumph. And in the last to enter Egypt the Spring following. When year of Nero, all the broods of the white he was on his way as far as Rhinocorura, Hens died, and the whole Grove of Bayes he met with Emballadors fent from Ptolowithered at once. Moreover, the heads my. Their errand was partly to yield of all the Cesars Statues, and the Scepter thanks to Antiochus for the establishing placed in Augustus his hand, were stricken of Philometor in his Kingdom, partly to might turn to good.

Ddddddd

CHAP. VI.

1146

into Egypt, was occasioned by discord of the ther call back his Fleet, nor withdraw his two brethrentherein reigning; so was this Army, upon any other condition; than fecond Expedition cauled by their good that Ptolomy should surrender into his agreement. For the elder Ptolomy being hands, together with the City of Pelufum, left in Memphis, not strong enough to the whole Territory thereto belonging: force his brother who had detended Alex- and that he should also abandon and leave andria against all the power of their Un- unto him the Isle of Cyprus, with all the cle; thought it the best way to seek en- right that he had unto either of them, for trance into that royal City, rather by per- ever. For answer unto these demands, he fwasion, than by arms. Physicon had not set down a day certain, and a short one, yet forgotten the terror of the former Which being come and paft, without any flege: the Alexandrines, though they lo- accord made, the syrian Fleet entred Nved not Philometor, yet loved they worse line, and recovered as well those places to live in fearcity of victuals (which was which appertained to Ptolomy in Arabia, already great among them, and like to as in Egypt it felf; for Memphis, and all grow extream) fince nothing was brought about it, received Antiochus, being unable in from the Country; and the friends of to refift him. The King having now no ftop the younger brother faw no likelihood in his way to Alexandria, passed on this of good iffue to be hoped for without re- therwards by eafie journeys. conciliation. These good helps, and Of all these troubles past, as well as of above all these, the loving disposition of the present danger wherein Egypt stood, Cleopatra, who then was in Alexandria, the Romans had notice long ago. But they encouraged Philometor, in his purpose found, or were contented to find, little rea-But that which made him carneftly de on for them to intermeddle therein. For firous to accomplish it, was the fear where- it was a Civil war : and wherein Antiochus in he frood of his Uncle. For though feemed to take part with the juster cause. Antiochus was gone out of Egypt with his Yet they gave fignification, that it would Army, yet had he left behind him a ftrong be much displeasing unto them, to have Garrison in Pelusium: retaining that City, the Kingdom of Egypt taken from the which was the Key of Egipt to his own rightful owners. More they could not, or use. This confideration wrought also would not do 5 being troubled with rewith Phyleon, and with those that were Jeus; and therefore loath to provoke Anabout him; fo as by the vehement media- tiochus too far. Nevertheless, the Egyption of Cleopatra their fifter the two bre- tian Kings being reconciled, and fland thren made an end of all quarrels.

brought to Aniochus, he was greatly enra- war against them both: it was to be exged: for notwithstanding that he had pretended no other thing than the establishing of the Greeks, as being thereto obliment of the King Philometer his Nephew, ged by notable benefits, should arm inde-

down with lightning. That the Jews did befreech him, That he would rather be not think fuch ftrange figns to be unworpleased to fignifie what he required to thy of regard; it appears by their calling have done in Egypt, which should be perupon God, and praying, that these tokens formed, than to enter it as an enemy with fo puissant an Army. But Antiochus retur-Now, as the first voyage of Antiochus ned this short answer, That he would nei-

ing joyntly in need of help against their When the news of this accord was Uncle, who prepared and made open fultained with food from Egypt, in the ly broken by the violence of Callicrates. War of Hannibal; when Italy, lying For when it was thought that the Decree wafte, had neither corn nor mony where- should have passed; he brought into the with to buy sufficient store. By help of Theater where the Assembly was held, the Egyptians had Aratus laid the founda- a Messenger with Letters from Martius: tion of that greatness, whereto the Acha- whereby the Achaans were defired to ans attained. And by the like help had conform themselves to the Roman Senate; Rhodes been defended against Demetrius and to labour, as the Senate had done, Poliorcetes. Neither were these friendly by sending Embassadours to set Egypt in turns, which that bountiful house of the peace. This was an advice against all Ptolomyes had done for fundry people reason. For the Senate had indeed sent abroad; ill followed, or feconded, by Embaffadours to make peace; but as in a other as bad in requital: but with continuance of fuitable beneficence, from fuch milde words, that nothing was eftime to time encreased. Wherefore the sected. Wherefore it was not likely two brothers fent abroad confidently for that the Acheans should do any good in aid; especially to the Rhodians and Ache- the same kind. Yet Polybius and his friends ans, who seemed most able to give it durst not gain say the Roman Counsel; effectually. To the Romans, Physicon and which had the force of an Injunction. So Cleopatra had fent, a year fince: but the Kings were left in much distress disaptheir Embassadours lay still in Rome. pointed of their expectation. But within Of the Acheans they defired in particu- a while was Perseus overcome; and then lar, that Lycortas the brave Warriour might the Emballadours, fent from the Romight be fent unto them, as General of all | man Senate, perform as much as any Army the Auxiliaries, and his Son Polybius, Ge- could have done. neral of the Horfe. Hereunto the Acheans readily condescended: and would imme- Senate, unto those Embassadours of diately have made performance, if Calli- Physicon and Cleopatra: which having staverates had not interposed his mischievous ed more than a whole year in the City. Art. He, whether feeking occasion to brought nothing of their business to effect vaunt his obsequiousness to the Romans, until now. The Embassadours delivered or much rather envying those Noble Cap- their message in the name of those that tains whose service the Kings desired; had sent them: though it concerned withstood the common voice: which was, | (which perhaps they knew not) Philome-That their Nation should, not with such | tor, no less than his Brother and Sister. fmall numbers as were requested, but with In this ambassage of Ptolomy, now reall their power, be aiding unto the Pto- questing help from Rome, appeared a nolomies. For it was not now (he faid) table change of his fortune, from fuch as convenient time to entangle themselves it had been before three or four years last in any such business, as might make them past. For in the beginning of these his the less able to yeeld unto the Romans troubles, which began with the Macedotence, he, with those of his faction, ob- laid) which had the government of him, ftinately perfilted; terrifying others with thought his affairs in fuch good effate, big words, as it were in behalf of the that not only he determined to fet upon Romans. But Polybius affirmed, that Mar- Antiochus for Calofyria, but would have tius the late Conful had fignified unto interpoled himself between the Romans him, that the Romans were past all need and Perseus, as a competent Arbitrator; of help: adding further, that a thousand though it fell out well, that his Embassafoot, and two hundred horse, might well | dour was by a friend perswaded to forget be spared to the aid of their Benefactors, that point of his errand. From these high the Egyptian Kings, without disabling their | thoughts he fell on the sudden, by the re-Nation to perform any service to the Romans; forasmuch as the Achaans could under protection of the same Antiochus. thousand Souldiers. All this notwithstanding, the resolution was deferred have seemed to stand in no need of such fence of their Kingdom. Rome had been from one meeting to another; and final-

Audience had been lately given by the

what help foever should be required in nian War; either he, or Eulaus, or Lenaus Polyto leg. the Macedonian War. And in this fen- (upon whom the blame was afterwards 72. bellion of his brother and subjects, to live without trouble, raile thirty or forty And now at fuch time as by attonement with his brother and subjects, he might Ddddddd 2 protection, protection, he hath remaining none other and people of Rome, whom they found help whereby to fave both his Kingdom obitinate, or using delay. So these Roand life, than what can be obtained by mans, together with the Alexandrine their interceftion which were employed Embafladours, took their leave, and against him. This miserable condition went onward their way within three of him, his brother and fifter shewed it dayes after, felf, even in the habit of those Embassadours. They were poorly clad; the hair on their way toward Fgypt, Antiochus had of their heads and beards overgrown, as transported his Army over Lufine, some was their manner in time of affliction; and forty miles from Alexandria. So near was they carried in their hands branches of he to the end of his Journey, when the Olive. Thus they entred into the Se- Roman Emballadours met him. After nate, and there fell, groveling and pro- greetings and falutations at their fuff enfirste, upon the floor, Their garments counter, Antiochus offered his right hand were not io mean and mournful, nor their to Popilius: but Popilius filled it with a looks and countenances to fad and deject- Roll of Paper; willing him to read those ed, but that their speech was than either Mandates of the Senate before he did any of the other far more lamentable. For, thingelfe. Antiochus did fo 5 and having having told in what danger their King and a little while confidered of the buffines, Country flood; they made a pitiful and he told Popilius, That he would advite grievous complaint unto the Senate, be- with his friends, and then give the Emfeeching them to have compassion of their basiladours their answer. But Popinius, ac-Estate, and of their Princes, who had al-cording to his ordinary blunt manner of wayes remained friendly and faithful to speech, which he had by nature, madea the Romans. They faid that the people Circle about the King with a Rod which of Rome had fo much heretofore favoured he held in his hand, willing him to make this Antiockus in particular, and were of him fuch an answer as he might report to fuch account and authority, with all other the Senate, before he moved out of that Kings and Nations; as, if they pleafed Circle. The King aftonished at this fo but to fend their Emballadours, and let rude and violent a Commandment, after Antieckus know that the Senate was of- he had frayed and pawfed a while, I will fended with his undertaking upon the be content (quoth he) to do whatfoever King their Confederate; then would be the Senate shall ordain. Then Popilius prefently raile his fiege from before Alex- gave unto the King his hand, as to a andria, and withdraw his Army out of Friend and Allie of the Romans. Egypt into Syria. But that if the Senate protracted any time, or used any delay; without any good issue of his costly Experience. repair to Rome, with shameful dishonour to stilling every particular circumstance, both the Senate and people thereof, in that, in of returning, and of doing mischief to fethe extream dangers of all their fortunes, rulalem after his return; like as if these Lenus, C. Decimius, and A. Hoftilius, as and fettled the Kingdom of Egypt, leaving gave over Arms, they would take that tiochus Fleet, which had already given an King no more for a friend to the Senate overthrow to the Ecoppian ships.

Whileft Popilius and his fellows were then should Ptolomy and Cleopatra be short-pedition; even in such manner as * Da-Das.H. ly driven out of their Realms, and make niel had prophefied long before: yea,ful. 2935084. they had not vouchfafed to relieve them. things had rather been historified than The Lords of the Senate moved with foreto'd by the Prophet. As for the Rocompassion, sent incontinently C. Popilius man Embassadors, they stayed a while, Embassadours to determine and end the it unto the elder brother, and appointed War between those Kings. In commission the younger to reign over Cyrene. This they had first to find King Ptolomy, and done, they departed towards Copprus; which then Antiochus, and to let them both unthey left, as it had been, in the power of derstand, that, unless they surceased, and the Egyptian, having first sent away An-

o. XII.

of the History of the World.

CHAP. VI.

How the Romans were dreadful to all Kings. Their demeanour towards Eumenes, Prufias, Mafanifla, and Cotys. The end of Perseus and his children. The instability of Kingly Estates. The Triumphs of Paulus, Anicius, and Octavius. With the Conclusion of the Work.

Y this peremptory demeanour of Popi-Lins, in doing his Meliage, and by and Maronea: thereby making uneffectuthe ready obedience of King Antiochus al their promife; which otherwife they to the will of the Senate; we may per- could not, without shame, revoke. And ceive how terrible the Romans were as for the Gallo-Greeks, which were about grown, through their conquest of Ma- to invade the Kingdom of Pergamus; they cedon. The same Popilius had been well sent Embassadors to them, with such incontented, a year before this, to lay structions, as rather encouraged than aside the roughness of his natural conditi-on, and to give good language to the Ache-pleasure of the Senare being so manisest; ans and Ætolians, when he went Embassa- Eumenes thought it worthy of his labour dor to those people of Greece, that were to make another voyage to Rome. He of far less power than King Antiochus, might well blame the folly of his second Likewife, antiochus had with good words, and no more than good words, difmissed third: since, by his malice to Perseus, he other Embassadors which came from Rome, had laid open unto these ambitious Poin fuch fort, as they complained not, much | tentates the way to his own doors. No less used any menacing terms, though he sooner was he come into Italy, than the performed nothing of their request. But Senate was ready to send him going. It now the case was altered. So found other was not thought expedient to use him as Kings as well as Antiochus.

lus, to gratulate the victory over Perseus, avoided the note of fingular inconstancy: and to crave help or countenance of the and to entertain him as a friend, was molefted him. Very welcome was Attalm, ingratitude, as they deemed it, and lovingly entertained by most of the would permit. Wherefore they made a Senators: who bad him be confident, and Decree, That no King should be suffered request of the Senate his Brothers King- to come to Rome; and by vertue thereof dom for himfelf; for it should furely be fent him home, without expence of much given him. These hopeful promises tickled | farther complement. Attalus with fuch ambition, that he either | Prusias King of Bithynia had been at approved, or feemed to approve the moti- Rome somewhat before; where he was wel-Rome of purpose to keep his brother up-right. So, when he came into the Senate, killed the threshold, calling the Fathers his had been fent, recounting his own fer- a Cap, after the manner of flaves newly Liv. 1.45. * where withal, he forgat not to make of chifed bondman of the people of Rome. He his brother as good mention as he could: was indeed naturally a flave, and one that and finally, requested, That the Towns of by such abject flattery kept himself safe,

Enus and Maronea might be bestowed though doing otherwise greater mischief Paylo Leg, upon himself. * By his omitting to sue for than any wherewith Ferseus had been his brothers Kingdom, the Senate con- charged. His errand was, befides matter of ceived opinion, that he meant to crave | complement, to commend unto the Senate another day of audience for that busi- the care of his fon Nicomedes, whom he nels alone. Wherefore to make him under- | brought with him to Rome, there to receive stand how gracious he was, they not only | education. Further petition he made, to granted all his defire; but in the prefents which they gave unto him(as was their cuftome to Emballadors that came with an acceptable meffage) they used fingular magnificence. Nevertheless Attalus took no Polyb, ibid, notice of their meaning, but went his way, contented with what they had already granted. This did so highly displease the Senate, that whilft he was yet in Italy, they gave order for the liberty of Anus an enemy that came to visit them in love: Eumenes sent to Rome his brother Atta- neither could they, in so doing, have Senate against the Gallo Greeks, which more then their hatred to him, for his

on. But his honest nature was soon re- comed after a better sashion. He had learclaimed by the faithful counsel of Stratius | ned to behave himself as humbly as the a Physitian; whom Eumenes had sent to proud Romans could expect or defire. For, he delivered the errand about which he gods and faviours; as also he used to wear vices done to the Romans in the late war, manumified, profeffing himfelf an enfran-

Ddddddd a

whereto, because the grant would have might not be put to such disgrace: but been unjust, he received a cold answer. he still received one scornful answer, That But concerning the Wardship of his Son, it lay in his own power to prevent it; dren of Kings, that were to their Patro- the courtesie of his insolent enemies for a

1140

nage commended. held his credit with the Romans, good. hope, was no better than this: After that His quarrels were endless with the Carhe, and his fellow-King, had been led in thaginians: which made the friendship of chains thorow the streets, before the the Romans to him the more affured. In Chariots of their triumphing Victors, all Controversies they gave judgment on they were committed to prison, wherein his fide: and whereas he had invaded they remained without hope of releafe. the Country of Emporia, holding the It was the manner, that when the Tri-Lands, but unable to win the Towns 5 umpher turned his Chariet up towards the Romans (though at first they could the Capital, there to do sacrifice, he should find no pretext, whereby to countenance command the captives to be had away him in this oppression) compelled finally to prison, and there put to death: so as the Carthaginians both to let go all their the honour of the Vanquisher, and misery hold, and to pay five hundred Talents to of those that were overcome, might be the Numidian, for having hindred him both together at the utmost. This last senof his due so long. Now indeed had Rome tence of death was remitted unto Perseus: good leifure to devise upon the ruine of yet so, that he had little joy of his life; Carthage: after which, the race of Masa- but either familhed himself, or (for it is nissa himself was shortly by them rooted diversly reported) was kept watching perup. But hereof the old King never dream- force by those that had him in custody; ed. He fent to Rome one of his Sons, to and fo dyed for want of fleep. Of his Sons, congratulate the Victory over Persens; two dyed; it is uncertain how. The and offered to come thither himfelf, there | youngest called Alexander (only in name to facrifice for joy unto Jupiter in the Ca- like unto the Great, though destined somepital. His good will was lovingly accepted; times perhaps by his Father, unto the for-excuse himself touching the aid by him ty ended the Royal house of Macedon: given to Perfeus, for that the Macedonian and it ended on the fudden; though some had him bound by hoftages; and to in- eightfcore years after the death of that treat, That his Son, which was taken with Monarch, unto whose ambition this whole the children of Perseus, might be set at li- | Earth seemed too narrow. berty, for convenient ransome. His ex- If Perseus had known it before, that his cuse was not taken; fince he had volun- own Son should one day be compelled to luntarily obliged himself to Perseus, by earn his living by handy-work, in a painful giving hostages without necessity: Yet Occupation; it is like, that he would not was his Son given back to him ransome- as in a wantonness of Soveraignty have free; with admonition, to carry himself commanded those poor men to be slain, better toward the Romans in time fol- which had recovered his treasures out of lowing. His Kingdom lay between Ma. the Sea, by their skill in the feat of divingsedon, and some barbarous Nations; in He would rather have been very gentle, which respect, it was good to hold him and would have considered, that the greaftay at home.

Gentius, they were led thorow Rome, high Power, governing all alike with abwith their children and friends, in the folute command. But fuch is our unhappi Triumphs of Amylins and Anicius, Perseus ness; in stead of that blessed counsel, Do have some Towns added to his Kingdom: had often made suit to Emplius, that he it was undertaken by the Senate: which, whereby was meant, that he might kill vaunting of the pleasure lately done to himself. And surely, had he not hoped Egypt, in freeing it from Antiochus, willed for greater mercy than he found, he him thereby to confider, what effectual would rather have fought his death in protection the Romans gave unto the chil- Macedon, than to have been beholding to wretched life. The iffue of the Roman But above all other Kings, Mafanisa clemency, whereof Emylius had given him his Son rewarded; and he entreated to tunes of the Great) became a Joyner, or Turner, or, at his best preferment, a Scribe Cotys the Thracian fent Embassadours to under the Roman Officers. In such pover-

test oppressors, and the most und-rtrodden As for those unhappy Kings, Perscus and wretches, are all subject unto the One asse would be done unto, a fentence teach- understand, how happy that Country is my felf. One hath faid truly.

-ขอ -- Et qui nolunt occidere quenquam Polle volunt .---

CHAP. VI.

Would have it in their power to kill.

ability to do evil without controll : which of the Buoty. So great was the quantity is a dangerous temptation unto the per- of Gold and Silver carryed by Paulus into formance. God, who best can judge what the Roman Treasury, that from thenceis expedient, hath granted such power to forth, until the Civil Wars which followvery few; among whom also, very few ed upon the death of Julius Cafar, the For who fees not that a Prince, by racking any Tribute. Yet was this noble Triumph his Soveraign Authority to the utmost likely to have been hindred by the Soulextent, enableth (besides the danger to diers; who grudged at their General, for Edward the second; was, by reason of a lick. posterity: so do they necessarily make us Majesty that thy deserts have purchased.

ing all moderation, and pointing out the which hath obtained a King able to conway to felicity; we entertain that arro-ceive and teach, That * God is the forest . The true gant thought, I will be like to the most and sharpest Schoolmaster that can be devi-free Mo-High: that is, I will do what shall please fed, for fuch Kings, as think this world or narchies. dained for them, without controlement to turn it upfide-down at their pleafure,

Now concerning the Triumph of L. Æmylius Paulus, it was in all points like unto that of T. Quintins Flaminius : fiet, 4. Even they that have no murdrous will, though far more glorious, in regard of the Kings own person, that was led along therein, as part of his own spoils; and in All, or the most, have a vain defire of regard likewise both of the Conquest, and there are that use it not to their own hurt. Estate had no need to burthen it self with his own person) some one of his own Sons not having dealt more bountifully with or Nephews to root up all his progeny? them. But the Princes of the Senate Shall not many excellent Princes, notwith-over-juled the people and Souldiers hereflanding their brotherhood, or other near- in, and brought them to reason by severe ness in blood, be driven to flatter the exhortations. Thus Paulus enjoyed as Wife, the Minion, or perhaps the Har- much honour of his Victory as men could lot that governs one, the most unwor- give. Nevertheless, it pleased God to thy of his whole house, yet reigning over take away from him his two remaining all? The untimely death of many Princes Sons, that were not given in Adoption : of which could not humble themselves to which, the one dyed five dayes before the fuch flattery; and the common practice of Triumph, the other three dayes after the Turkiff Emperours to murder all their it. This lofs he bore wifely: and told brethren, without expecting till they of- the people, That he hoped to fee the fend; are too good proofs hereof. Here- Common-wealth flourish in a continuunto may be added, that the heir of the ance of prosperity; since the joy of fame Roger Mortimer, who murdered his Victory was required with his own most traiterously, and barbarously King private calamity, in stead of the pub-

marriage, proclaimed, in time not long | About the fame time, Octavius the Adafter following, Heir apparent to the miral, who had brought Persew out of Sa-Crown of England: which, had he ob- mothrace: and Anicius the Prætor, who tained, then had all the power of Edward had conquered Illyria, and taken King fallen into the race of his mortal enemy, Gentius prisoner; made their several to exercise the same upon the Line of Triumphs. The glory of which magnithat unhappy King. Such examples of the ficent spectacles, together with the coninstability whereto all mortal affairs are fluence of Embassages from all parts; and Subject; as they teach moderation, and Kings, either visiting the Imperial City, admonish the transitory gods of King- or offering to visit her, and do their dudoms, not to authorize by wicked prece- ties in person; were enow to say unto dents, the evil that may fall on their own Rome, Sume Superbiam, Take upon thee the CHAP. VI.

TOY this which we have already fet wings far over his Nest, but the spa-Idown, is feen the beginning and end niard; who fince the time that Ferdinand of the three first Monarchies of the world; expelled the Moors out of Granado, have whereof the Founders and Erectors made many attempts to make themselves thought, that they could never have end- Mafters of all Europe. And it is true, that cd. That of Rome which made the by the treasures of both Indies, and by fourth, was also at this time almost at the many Kingdoms which they posless in the highest. We have left it flourishing in Europe, they are at this day the most the middle of the field; having rooted up, powerful. But as the Turk is now counor cut down, all that kept it from the eyes | terpoifed by the Perfian, fo in flead of fo and admiration of the world. But after many Millions as have been front by the feme continuance, it shall begin to lose English, French, and Netherlands in a dethe beauty it had; the storms of ambition fensive War, and in diversions against shall beat her great boughs and branches one against another; her leaves shall fall the charge of two hundred thousand off, her limbs wither, and a rabble of barbarous Nations enter the field, and cut | three at the most, they may not only be her down.

1142

Nations, have been the subject of those ancient Histories, which have been preferved, and yet remain among us 5 and withall of so many tragical Poets, as in the perfens of peweiful rinces, and other mighty men have complained against Infidelity, Time, Deftiny, and most of all against the Variable fuccess of worldly things, and Instability of Fortune. To these undertakings, these great Lords of the world have been stirred up, rather by the defire | fuccession and continuance of this boundof Fame, which ploweth up the Air, and foweth in the Wind; than by the affection to that which hath been already faid; of bearing rule, which draweth after it fo much vexation, and fo many cares. And | have alwayes laid before them the actions, that this is true, the good advice of Cinear but not the ends of those great Ones to Fyrrhus proves. And certainly, as Fame bath often been dangerous to the transported with the glory of the one, living, so it is to the dead of no use at all; but they never mind the misery of the because se parate from knowledge. Which, other, till they find the experience in were it otherwise, and the extreme ill bar- themselves. They neglect the advice of gain of buying this lafting discourse, un-God, while they enjoy life, or hope of it; derfroed by them which are diffolved; but the follow they counfel of death, upon they themselves would then rather have his first approach. It is he that puts into wished, to have stoln out of the world man all the wisdom of the world, without without noile, than to be put in mind, that | speaking a word; which God, with all they have purchased the report of their the words of his Law, promises, or threats, actions in the world, by rapine, oppref- doth infuse. Death, which hateth and fion, and cruelty: by giving in fooil the destroyeth man, is believed; God, which innecent and labouring foul to the idle hath made him, and loves him, is alwayes and infolent, and by having emptied the deferred. I have confidered (faith sale-Cities of the world of their ancient Inha- mon) all the works that are under the Sun, bitants , and filled them again with fo and behold, all is vanity and vexation of fimany and fo variable forts of forrows.

had neither greatnes nor continuance) joyn his Son Philip to reftore Navarre; and there hath been no State fearful in the King Francis the first of France, to com-

East, but that of the Turk : nor in the West any Prince that hath spread his them, it is easie to demonstrate, that with pound continued but for two years, or perfinaded to live in peace, but all their Now these great Kings, and conquering swelling and overflowing streams may be brought back into their natural channels and old banks. These two Nations, I say, are at this day the most eminent, and to be regarded; the one feeking to root out the Christian Religion altogether, the other the Tuth and fincere Profession thereof; the one to joyn all Europe to Asia, the other the rest of all Europe to

For the rest, if we seek a reason of the less ambition in mortal men, we may add That the Kings and Princes of the world which preceded them. They are alwayes rit: but who believes it till Death tells it Since the fall of the Roman Empire us? It was Death, which opening the con-(emitting that of the Germanes, which Icience of Charls the fifth, made him enMurderers of the Protestants in Merindol tered, thou only hast cast out of the world and Cabrieres, which till then he neglected. and despised : thou hast drawn together It is therefore death alone that can fud-all the far stretched greatness, all the denly make man to know himself. He pride, cruelty, and ambition of man, and tells the proud and infolent, That they covered it all over with these two narrow are but abjects, and humbles them at the words, Hic jacet. instant; makes them cry, complain, and repent; yea, even to hate their forepassed it hath, calls it self, The first part of the Gehappines. He takes the account of the rich, neral History of the World, implying a second and proves him a beggar; a naked beggar, and third Volume; which I also intended, which hath interest in nothing, but in the and have hewn out; besides many other gravel that fills his mouth. He holds a discouragements, perswading my silence; Glass before the eyes of the most beautiful, it hath pleased God to take that gloand makes them see therein their deformi- rious Prince out of the world, to whom ty and rottennels; and they acknowledge they were directed, whose unspeakable whom none could advise, thou hast per- luctum Cithara mea. & Organum meum in swaded; what none have dared, thou hast vocem flentium.

mand that justice should be done upon the done; and whom all the world hath flat-

Lastly, whereas this Book, by the title and never enough lamented loss hath O eloquent, just, and mighty Death! taught me to say with 70b, Versa est in

FIN IS.

TO THE READER.

Annalls, yearly fet down all occurrences not more illustration, nor indeed so much to those coharent. This here following, may ferve as that are acquainted with works of this kind. To an Index to the prefent part of this work, avoid prolixity, I have forborn to insert those pointing unto the several matters, that having years, which I find not signed with some regarfallen out at one time, are far dif-joyned in dable accident, as with the birth or death of the relation. Certainly it is not perfect, neither Some Patriarch; the beginning of Some Kings do I think that any can be. For how sever reign ; some change of Government ; some frattions, and the last year, or years, of one all between the 4. of Jehosaphat, wherein Caforms of the year, which were in use among 12. lines of idle ciphers, numbring forth, 2. 3. Such Jundry Nations, causing the * Summer months, 4. 5. and so still onwards, till I had come to in process of some ages, to fall into the win- the first of Aventinus, and the 17. of Joho.

For example, The walls of Jerusalem were fi- to insert; as likewise otherwhiles, the day, the nished in the 319. year from the building of moneth, upon which Nabonassar's year began

HE use of Chronological Tables | Rome, and in the 314. from Nabonasser. In is needful to all Histories, that like manner it is to be understood, That Jehoreach to any length of time ; and saphat began his reign in the 3774. of the Iumost of all, to those that are most lian Æra, in the 3092. of the World, and in general: since they cannot, like the 99. year of the Temple. This needs not the years of the first Patriarchs may seem to battel fought, or the like. So of the 12, years have been well-neer compleat, yet in the reigns wherein Sylvius Capetus reigned over the of the Kings of Juda and Ifrael, we find many Latines, I note only the first; that is, omitting King reckneed also as the foremost of another, petus began, unto the 17. wherein Sylvius The same is most likely to have fallen out in Aventinus succeeded, and wherein schoram many other, though not so precisely recorded. first reigned with Jehosaphac his father. For I Hereto may be added the divers and imperfect thought it vain to have filled up a Page with ter; and so breeding extream confusion in the Saphat. In setting down the Kings, there is reckning of their times. Neither is it a noted over the head of every one, what place small part of trouble, to choose out of so ma- he held in order of succession: as whether he ny, and so utterly disagreeing computations, were the first, second, fifth, seventh, or so forth, as have already gotten authority, what may in rank of those that reigned in his countrey, probably be held for truth. All this, and without notable interruption: Before the name; a great deal more, is to be alledged, in excuse is the first year of his reign; at the end or of fuch errours, as a more intentive and perfect foot of the name (as the space gives leave) Calculator Shall happen to find herein. It may is the whole number of years in which he ferve to free the Book, and likewise the Rea- reigned; in the spaces following underneath, der (if but of mean judgement), from any are those years of his, which were concurrent notorious Anachronicism; which ought to with the beginning of some other King, or with suffice. The book indeed will need it, even in the year of any remarkable accident. Where two that regard; not only from some errours of numbers, or more, are found before one Kines the Press, in the numbring of years, but for name; there it is to be understood, that the some hastie mif-reckonings of mine own, which same year belonged not only to the King then I desire to have hereby reformed, in hope that beginning, but unto some one or more of his the Printing of this Tableshall not want care foregoers: as the first year of Jehoram King of ful diligence. The Reader, if he be not of Israel, was the same with the second of his brofended with the rest, shall find reason to be ther Ahaziah, and the 22. of his father Ahab. pleased with this, as tending wholly to his Sowhere two or three names are found in one space, as in the 3077. year of the World, Zimri, The titles over the Columns, have reference | Tibni, and Omri; it is meant, that every one to that which follows under them, as will rea- of them reigned in some part of the same year, dily be conceived. Where two titles, or more, which is reckoned the second of Ela, and the are over the head, as [North of Omri. Particularly, under the reigns numbers underneath proportionably answer, the of the Egyptian Kings, are set down the years higher to the higher, the lower to the lower. of those Dynasties, which it was thought meet which, how it varied from other years, may be crowned, held a Farliament, brake it up, threm found in the place last above cited.

from Iphitus, who began the Olympiads from year 1558. but the greater part in the year fol-Rome built, from Nabonassar, and the like; lowing, whether we begin with the first of Januas much as was thought convenient hath been ary, or with the 25. of March. The like may faid, where due place was, in the book it felf: be otherwhiles found in this Table, but so, as the fo as it remaineth only to note, that under the difference is never of a whole year. title of Olympiads, is fet down, first the number of the Olympiad, and beneath it, the year greater number, over the years of the World of that Olympiad: as that Cyrus began his was delivered by that honourable, and excellentreign in Persia, in the 55. Olympiad, and the ly learned Joseph Scaliger: being accommo-

Olympiads, of Rome, of Nabonassar, and the multiplication of 19. 28. and 15. that is, other, had not beginning in one moneth, but of the Cycle of the Moon, the Cycle of the sun. fome of them in March, some in April, some and the years of an Indiction. Being divided about Midsommer, and some at other times: the by any of these, it leaves the number of the prebetter to express their several beginnings, some Sent year, or if no fraction remain, it shows the painful Chronologers have divided them pro- last year of that Cycle to be current. For examportionably in their several Columns, opposing ple, in the 4498 of this Period, when was part of the one year to part of the other: not fought the great battel of Canna, the trime or (as I have here done) cutting all overthwart golden number was 14. the Cycle of the Sun, with one straight line, as if all had begun and 18. and consequently the Dominical letter F. as ended at one time. But this labour have Ispared may be found by dividing the same number of as more troublesome than useful, since the more the Julian Period 4498. by 19. for the Prime, part would not have apprehended the meaning, by 28. for the Cycle of the Sun. This Julian and fince the learned might well be without it. I eriod, after the present accompt, alwayes exanaparce necessarians of the Maria and Sanda San elder than that of Rome, and 29. than that of a better Character of a year, than any other Nabonassar, yet the reign of some King may Era (as, From the beginning of the World, have begun at such a time of the year as did From the Flood, From Troy taken, or the not sute with this difference. But hereof I take like) which are of more uncertain position. More little regard. The more curious will easily find I shall not need to write, as touching the use or my meaning: the vulgar will not find the dif-ficulty. One familiar example will explain all. much requifite to such as are conversant in Queen Elizabeth began her reign the 17.0f No- works of this kind: it sufficeth if hereby all be vember in the year of our Lord 1558. She was made plain enough to the vulgar.

down Images, and reformed many things in re-Concerning the Ara, or account of years, ligion, all in ber first year, yet not all in that

The Julian Period which I have placed as the dated to the Julian years, now in use among us. Now, for that the years of the world, of the It consisteth of 7980. years, which result from

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

Years of the Julian Period, World, Patriarchs, toc.

												-
	Julian. The World and Adam
	683 1.Ada 930											Ī	1	İ.
	813	1. Seth 912										ĺ		-
	918 236	106	1. Enos 905	Ì			1				1 1		İ
	1008 326	196	91	1.Cai- nan. 910	children	unto th	the Ba mpleat: hose tha	triarck which i it follow	mberei inferre ed; ma	n they be dout of king alm	gat chi the adi	ldren, di lition of ompleat	ed,or perf the years sum, Ge	l formed a before the	ny thing, ney begat
	1978 396	266	161	ſ	balalel 895							1	, , , ,
	1143 461	331	226	136	66	1.7area - 962							1
	623	493	388	298	228	163	1. E- noch. 265
	688	558	453	363	293	328	66	thuseld 969
	875 875	745	640	550	480	415	253	188	t . La- mech. 777
Adam died a- but the end of the year.	930	800	695	605	$35	470	30 8	243	$6
Himch trans-	1669	857	752	662	592	527	365	300	113
Seth died about the end of this Jear.	1724 1042	912	807	717	647	582		355	168
	1739		822	732	662	597		370	183	ah. 950
-									1	Secee

ļ.	The World	Enos.	Cainan	Maha Ialeel.	1. Fare.	ed. the	use- I	La- mech.	Noah.	Sem	.	_	_	1
1	1(-23 T	905	815	745	680	0 4	53	266	84		_	_ -		1
	1917		910.	842	775	5 5	48	361	179	,	_				_
	1972	·		895	83	0 0	603	416	234	-		1	-	1
	2104 1422				I		735	584	366	5	-		1
Floud threatned, Gen. 6.3.	1537		T	T			850	663	48	31					L
	2241						872	685	50		Sem.
Lamech djed.	2333 1051		T				964	777	, 5	95	93				L
Methufelah died this year a little be- the Floud. Noahentreth into the Ark 1 & 8. & 9. The Floud.	2338 k 1656			Ī_			969		60	00	80				Ĺ
7 § 8. & 9. The Floud. The Floud & afeth Noah issued of the Ark.	d 2339 1657	T					_		6	101	99				-
	Floud	d Noa	ah. Sem	1. 2 1. phas				I	1	1					-
:	2341	1.	3 101				Ĺ		1		1				-
	2376 1694	63	8 130	6 3	36 1	Sa- lah. 433	-				_		11	54	-
	1724	6	68 16	6 6		31	1. H ber 40	r. 64	1					164	-
	175	8 7	102 21	00 1	00	65	35	1. F	g.	,	Kings of A∬y ria.				1
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	1781	0 7:	32 2	30 1	130	95	65	; 3	31	Ren, 1	rod.			1	1
	250 182	23	64 2	.62	162	127	9;	7 6	63	33	33	rug.	of E- gypt.		1
Vide lib. 2. c.2. § 2.	2 53 184	30	592 2	90	190	155	12	25	91	63	61	29	1 Cham 161	I. Na-
	189	32	694	292	192	157	7 1	27	93	63	63	3 I	3	bor. 148	i
	18	61	823	321	221	186	5 1	56	122	92	92	69	32	30	-
The second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon	25	222	846	344	244	20	9	179	145	115	1. Be-	83	3 58	53	3

W F	land,	Voah. S		Arpha xad.	Salah.	Heber.	Peleg.	Reu,	A∬j- ria.	Sarug	Egypt.	Nahi	Teral	(3-c)	cu (
	936	880	278	373	243	213	179	149	35	117	89	87	53	leus,	3 .
	649 967 316	911	409	309	274	244	210	180	1. Ni-		120	118	89	3	2
2	670 988	932	430	330	295	265	231	201	2.2	169	11	139	110	rops	E#-
The last year of highis life.	1996	940	438	338	303	273	239	209	30	177	149	147	7 118		g
be death of Na-	339 2679 997	941	439	339	-304	274		210	31	178	150	1.45	3 11	9	10
ab die a this year.	340 2688 2006	950	448	348	313	283		219	40	187	159		13	8	19
The 16 Dynaftie Egypt, Fid. 12.	2009		451	351	316	286		222	43	199	1. Miz- raim or O Tris		13	ı		1. A- bram
	3 5 2 2701 201 9		461	361	326	296	İ	23	1. Sen		1	1	14	Į I	32	11
helast year of Ren.	362 2708 2 0 26		463	368	333	303		239	8	207	18	İ	1.4	.8	39	18
	369 2715 2033		475	375	340	31	0		1	5 21	4 25		1	55 lo	Telkin r Sel- bin, 20	2 9
The laft of Sarug.			491	391	356	326	Ţ.		3 1	230	9 41		ı	71	17	41
	392 Julian, World, Flood:	Sem.	Arp	haxad.	Salak	Hebe	r. A	∬yria.	. I	gypt.	7	erah.	Si	cyon.	Ab	ram.
	2739 2053	495		395	360	330	,	35		45	17		Apis,	25	4	5
	2743 2061 40	503		403	36	8 33	8 2. 1	5 Vinias,	28	5 3	ı	83	9			53
	2700	520	4	20	38	5 35	i	18		70	2		5 Thelx Thelasion			70
denote receives the pro if. Yearh dies in Haran.	2083	525	4	25	3.9	0 36	io	23		75	205		6			75
La.c1 & r. 2,3	Julian. World. Promise	Sem	Arp	baxad	Sale	ib. Hee	ber.	Abram		A∬ÿria	$ E_{\xi} $	ypt.	Sicyo	n.
Aram enters into Canasa ad defends into Egypt. The first of the 430 Jon of servitude.	208			426	3	91 3	61	76		24		76	7
Abram returns int Canaan.	2089	2		427	3	92 3	62	77		25	1 2	7	8
Abram his villory on finderlander, and oth Digs, L. 1. 68.9 & 6	12093	535		435	40	0 37	70	85		33	8	5	16	i
Ismael born.	2777	1	·	437	40	2 3	72.	87		35		87	18			-
	277								ľ		i-	1			Ī

Ecccee 2

	Julian World promise	Sem.	Salah.		Abra-	ia.	Egypt. S	icyon
	2781 2099 16	541	406	376		6 . Ari- us, 30	91	22
pleat, 101. current.	25	5 S I	416	386	101	11	101	32	! Isaac 180	_
The last year of Salah.	2808 2126 43	568	433	403	118	28	118	49	18
	2811 2129 46	571		456		7 1. Ara- lius,40	121	52	21	_
	2812 2130 47	572		407	122	2	122	1.Æ. gir' 54	22	_
Sarai the wife of Abraham died this year.	2827 214 5 62	587		422	137	17	137	16	37
I/aac took Rebecca to wife, when he was 40. years old compleat.	66	591		426	141	21	141	20	41
The last year of Sem.	3840 2158 75	600		435	150	30	120	29	50
	Julian World promije.	Heber	Abra- bam.	- Isaac	, 7 acob.	Assy.	Egypt.		Ar- gives.
	28+6 2164 8	441	156	56		36	156	1,Thuri- machus 45	1
-	2169	446	161	61	1.7 acol	8 1 Bale- 1 us. 30	161	6	t. Ina- chus,50
Abraham died this year.	2.83 100	460	175	75	15	15	175	20	15
Heber died this year.	2869 2187 104	464		79	19	19	179	24	19	_
The 17. Dynastie, called of the Shepheards, begin ning this year, lasted 103 years.				91	3 I	9 1. Arma- mi bres, 38	191	36	3 I
	1209 1209			10	1 41	11	201 11	1 1Leucip- pus. 53	41	-
	2901 221 9 13	6		111	1 51	21	211	-11	seus, 60	1
The Floud of Ogjges, a thou fand and twenty year before the Olympiads.	2237 15	Ì		125	9 6	9 Prifcus 35	229	29	19	1
See lib. 1. c. 7. §. 2.	2942 3260 17			15	2 92	24	25 ² 62	52	42	Jef
	2944			15	54 94	1 26	254 64 3. 6 +	Moffa- pius,47	7	1
See L.2. c.2. §.6.	2952 2270 18			16	10:		t. Typhon, O	af 9	52	1
	2954 2272 18	+		16	104	1.Bale 1.8,52		11	54	1

	Julian. World.! tromije		Isas.	7 асьь.	Affyria.		Sicyon.	Argives.
Joseph sold into Egypt.	2959 2277 194		169	109		1.0745, 79,	16	59	18
	2961 2279 196		171	111	8	3 8 :	18	3 1. Ațis. 35	20
The last year of Isaac.	29 7 0 2288 205		180	120	17	12 90	27	10	29
Ifracl into Egypt.	2980 2298 215			130	27	22 160	15	20	39
The eighteenth Dynastie in Egypt, which Taste. 3 years.	2984 2302 219			134	ĝ i	26 I	41	24	43
	299 1 2309 226			141	58	33	10 I.Pera tus,40		50
	2996 2314 231			146	43	38	6	I. Argus.	55
Jacob dies in Egypt.	2997 231 5 232			147	44	39	7	2
	Julian. World. promise		A∬yria,	Eg	ypt.	Sicyon	. Ar	gives,
	3006 2324 241	65	12 1. Altades. 32		48 23	16		11
	3037 2355 272	96	32		9	1 I I Plem næus, 4		.2
	3038 2356 273	97	13 1 Mamitus,3		80 55	2	4	3
The last year of Toseph.	305 I 2369 286	110	14		93 68	15		56
	3066 2384 301		29.		108	30	1.Pi	rasus, or sus, $4
	3068 23 8 6 303		14 1, Mancalen 3		10 35	32		3
	3074 2392 309		7	T.So Grea	foffris she t. 33			9
	3085 2403 320		18		12	1.Orth polis.6	3	20
	3098 3416 333		15 1. Spherus, e Iphereus, 2		2 5 11 5	14		33
	3107 2425 342		10	1. Si fecon	7 e/offris the d, 14	23	1	12
	3116	1. Mo fes,120			10	32		ş ı
The state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s				.)		e 3		· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	-

u	ulian. Vorld.	Moses		A [yria	Egypt.	Sicyon.	Argives.
[3	3118 2436 353	3		16 Mamilas,or Iamelius, 30	12 135	34	§3
	3120 2438 355	15	Ī	3	14	36	1. Phorbas,35
	3121 2439 356	6	T	4	8 1 Orus, 2.07 Bufi- ris, 38.138.		2	Athe- nians.
	3148 2406 38	33	ı.	.Sparetus,40	28 165	13 1 Mara- thins,30	29
	3151 2469 386	36	T	4	31	4	32	1 . Ce- crops, 50
Moles vilits his brethren the Ilraelites, kils an yptian,and flies into Midian.	3155 2473 39	40	1	8	35 172	8	7 1.Tripas, 46	5
	3 I 59 2477 3 S	9 7 44		12	1. Thermutis, 0 Acencheres, Qu	1 2	5	9
	3171	I	T	24	1.Rathoris, or A shoris 9 188.	_	17	21
	3178 2469	8	,	31	8 195	14 1 Mara thus, 2	a- 24	28
	249	0	5	3 3	1 I Chencres, 1	3	26	30
	250	8	7	18 1. Ascatades. 40		11	34	38
Mofes his wandring into Egypt.	319	95	0	8	16 212	18	41	45
	uli Wor		(o/es	Asyria.	1	Sicyo	on. Argos.	Athens
The Passeover. If racl delivered out of Egypt. Ph. aoh drowned. The Law given. The first of the 480	0. 251	96 14 81	I	9	1. Acherres, 213.			46
ash drownsta. I we Law geothers to the Temple. The Flond of Deucation, and conflagration Phacton about this time.	of 319	98 8	3	11	3 215	15 1 Eco ress	:bi- 44	48
	320		36	14	6 218	4	8 1.Crotopus,	I Cra-
	3 20	04	89	17	1. Cherres, 221	, 15 7	7 4	4
	32	211	96	24	8 228	14	4 11	rion.12
	3 2	219	104	32	1. Armen Danaus, 5	us. or 2:	19	2
	3	2540	10	35	4 239	2	25 g. Sthenela	us.11

	Julian World. I Exod.	Mofes.	Assyria.	Egy to	Псуон.	Argos,	Athens	_
	3223 2541 28	108	36	5 240	26		Eillho mius, 50
	3224 2542 29	109	37	15 Ramefics 68	27	3	2 2	roy.
	3228 2 5 46	113	19 1. Amyntas, 4	5 245	31	7	6
	3229	114	.2	6 246	32	8		i . Dard. us, 6
	3233 2551 38	118	6	10 250	36	.Danaus, 50	11	5
The last year of Moses.	3235 2553 40	120	8	12 25%	38	3	13	7
	Fulian World Exod.		A∬yria.	Egypt.	Sicyon.	Argos	Athens	Troy
he Ifraelites enter the Landof Promise.	3236 2554 41	1 1 7 of ua 18	9	13 253	39	4	14	8
	3253 2571 58	18	26	30 270	16 1.Co- rax 30	21	31	25
	3254 2572 59	2 1 Otho- niel,40	27	31	2	3 2	32	26
	3273 2591 78	20	1.Belochus the fecond. 25		21	41	t Pan- dion 40
	3283 2601 88	30	11	60 300	1.Epo- peus35	11 1. Lynceus, 4	ı i i	55
	3292 2610 97	39	20	16 1. Menophis 40 309	10	10	20	64
	3293 2611 98	40	21	310	11	II	21	L Eric
	3294 2612	3 1 Ehua 8 c	22	3 311	12	12	22	ź
	3 2 9 8 2 6 1 6 1 0 3	5	1. Belopares 30	7	16	16	26	6
	3313 2631 118	20	16	22	31	31	I Eritt
	3318 2636 123	25	21	2 7 335	18 1Lame don,40	36	6	26
	3324 2642 129	31	27	33 34 I	7	12 1. Abbas, 2.	112	32
	3328 2646 13		1. Lamprides.		11	Š	16	36

The 19.Dynastie : of the Larthes, 194. years, See lib. 2. c. 26. $. 4.	2650	39		holis, 5	15	9	20	40
	3339 2657 144	46	12	8 8	23	16	27	1.7
Tantalus in Phrygia.	3347. 2665	54	20	16 16	30	13 1.Præ- tus, 17	35	9
	3358 2676 163	ত 5	21	27 27	19 1.Sicyon, 45	12	46	10
	3360 2678 165	67	23 1.Sefares, 20	29 2 9	3	14	48	22
	3363 2681 168	70	4	32 32	6		7 1 - Cecrops, the feemal 40	2.5
Pelops in Pisa, who gave name to Peloponnesus.	13564	71	. 5	33	71	14 (Acri- fius, 3		2
1011 and Xuthus the fons of Helien. See lib. 2. c. 17. §. 6.	3374	1 Gebore	1)	43 43	17	.11	12	3
	3380 2698	7	1. Lampare	d9 0 49	23	17	18	1
	3387	14	15	18 1.Ramfes,66 56	30	24	25	4
After the death of Aerifius, the Kingdom of the Agi as divided into many finall parts, and overgrown by that Is tena whereaf for e Kings deficiated from Perfent, oth		21	15	8	37	31	32	1

	Julian. World. Exod,	Ifrael	A∬yria.	Egypt,		Myco-	Athen.	Tig;
	3399 2717 204	26	20	68	42		3.7	1. Ilus, 55
	3402 2720 207	29	23	16 71	45	L. Eary. Theus.	÷o	4
	340; 2721 208	30	2.1		10 1. Poly bus,40		3 Pandic be 225	$
	3410 2728 215	37	2 5 1. Pannias, 45	24 7 9	8	9	8	12
	3414 2732 219	5 1 Gide- on. 40	5	28 83	12	13	13	1.5
tion chafed out of his Kingdom, which is recovered by Beens, in few years after the omiffion of this inter- and rechange the years in the forty eight of Ægeus, umbring them spart by themfetves , heeds anjmerable	2745 232	14	28	41 96	25	26	25	29
ce in the times of the Athenians following, as Muelthe ops, and the refs.	3432 2750 237	19	23	46 101	30	31	ρ ι Æ30- 11, 40	34
ipus in Thebes.	3443 2761 248	30	34	57 112	21 1. [na- chus, 41	42	12	45
	3447 276 5 2 5 2	34	33	61 116	5	us and Thyestes	. 16	49
	3453 27 7 1 258	40	44	19 1. Amenophis, 122 40	1 1	7	22	55
	3454 2772 259	1.Abi- melech	45	2 123	12	8	23	5 1. Laomedon. 36
	3455 2773 260	2	26 1.Sofarmus,19	3	13	9	24	2
		7 1.Tbo ¹ las, 23	3	S 126	15	11	2 6	4
	3474 2762 379	18	27 1.Mitrens,27	22 143	32	28	43	21
	3480 2792 285	8 1.7sir	7	28 149	38	34	10 1. The feus, 30	27
	348 5 2803 290	6	12	33	1.Phe- ftus, 8	39	6	32
	3490 2808 295	11	17	38 159	6	44	11	1 . Priamus.
	3493 2811 298	14	20	20 L. Annementi	23 1. Adra flus, 4	47	14	4
	3497 2815 302	18	24	5	2.4 1. Poly phides 31	51	18	8
	3501 281 9 306	22	28 1. Tentanes,	9 170	5	55	2 Ž	12

	Iſra	εl	Assyria.	Egy	pt.	Sic			Athens	Troj.
2820	1.7e	ph-	2	17	1	1	6	56	23	13
3508 2826	1. I	6-	8			1	2	62	29	19
2828	3		10				14	64	1. \time lbv2 44
3512 2830		5	1.5	2			16	1 Ag4- memnon 18	3	23
3515	I I	Elon	15	2	3 84	1	9	4	6	26
3519 2837			19	2. Thu	cris,	7,	23	8	10	30
3525	1.	Ab-	25		7		29	14	16	36
an 3526 b. 2844	5	2	26	1. D	o ynastie	,	30	15	17	37
3528	5	4	28		3	jr	. Pelaj		19	39
of 352	9	5	29		4		2	18	20	40. Troy ta- ken.
Fulia	in F	roy	Ifrael.	⊿∬yri	a. Egy	pt. s	icyon.	Myce-	Athens	The Kingdom of the Latinus
3539	8	ī	6	30	5		3	t.Ægy- flus, 6	21
353	3	4	13 1. Samblon, 20			8	6	4	24	1. Æneas, 3
35	34	5	2	2		9	7	5
353	6	7	4	4	- j -	1	9			1, Afcanius,
35	48 66	19	16	16	5	23	Zeuc	ip. 13		13
35	53 71	2	14 7 E/i 4	1		28	6	18	20	18
35	67 85	38	15	1	35	42.	2	0 32
135		44	2 I	1.5	0 Tby-	48	26	5 3	8 7	38
1									1.1	1. Syl. Post
	igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igorida igor	interval	ipordal

	World. Exod.		Ijrael.		A∬y. ria	Egy/t.		Myse- na.		The kingdom o the Latines.
The Sicyonian Kings ended in Zeucippus.	3579 2 897 384	50	27	7	7	54	32	44	[4 Aphi as 1	6
	3580 1898 385	51	28		8	55			15 1. Frm@- tes, 8.	7
	3588 2906 393	59	36		16	63		5 3	16 Melm ibus,37.	15
	3593 2911 398	64	1 Samue ter him S	l, or af	21	68		58	6	20
	3603 2921 408	74	11	, ,	3 I. 1 Derci lus,40	78		68	16	1.Sylvius A
	3606 2924 411	77	14		4	81		I Tifame- nus, 2	19	4
fiedeficent of the Heraclida, into Peloponnefus,gave end to the Kaedom of Mycene,and beginning to the Kingdom of Spar- gleinth;and Meffene, the Kingt whereof I forbear to infer publi Table.	3609 2927 414	80	17		7	84			22	7
	3625 2943 430	96	33		23	100			17 1. Co drus 2
	Fulian World Exod.	Ų.	From Troy taken.	Ifra	iel.	Assy-	Egypt,	Athens	Latins	-
	3633 2951 43	3	104	1. Da	vid. 40	3 1	108	9	31
	3634 2951 439		105	2		32	109	10	1. Syl. Latinus
	3643 29 61 44	8	114	1	1	32 Eupales 38.	118	19	19
The Medontide succeed unto the Athenian Kings, fittishe death of Codrus. Seelib.2. c-17. $.10.	2904	1	117		4	4	121	1 . Me don, 20	13
	3006 2984 471		137	3	4	2.1	141	1. Aga Ifus, 30	33
Vaphres reigneth in Egypt, See L.2.0, 26. §. 5.	3673 2991 47	Temple 1	144	1.Sale	mon,40	31	148	8	40
Salomon began to build the Temple 408 . years com- plat after the deliverance out of Egypt.	48	3	147		1 - 6-	34	151	LI	43	13,50
	2999	6	152		9	33 1. Leost- benes, 45	156	16	48
	30 0 2	9	155	1	2	4	159	19	1.Syl. Alba.
	3010	17	163	: : : 	0	12	1.Sefac 26 167	27	9
	3702	27	173	3	0	22	177	3. Archip	19

	fulian. World.	emple	From \ Troy taken.	Ifrat	ı.	A∬yria	Egypt.	Athens	Latines
	3704	29	175	32		24	13	3	21
The sonick migration after the taking of Troy,180 ears. See L. 2. c. 17. seet. 6.	379 9 3027	34	180	37		29	18	8	26
	fulian. World. Temple	Troy.	9,	ıda.	Ifrael.		Allyria.	Egypt.	Athens	Latin
	3713 3031 38	148	1. Reb		ı. Jeroboa	22	33	22 10	12	30
	3718 3036 43	189		6	6	_ _	38	mis, 50	17	35
	3721 3039 46	192	5)	9		41	4 18	Tecfip	38
	3723 3041 48	194	1	1	11		43	6 20	3	7 1871.A 1871.21
	3726 3044 51	197	1	4	14	I.	Pyrithiade	s. 9 1 0 23	6	4
	3730 3048	201	I.Ab	2 ijam, 3	18		5	13 27	10	8
	3733 3051 58	204	I. 2	3 15a. 41			8	16 30	13	11
	3734 3052 59	205	2		22 1. Nada	b. 2.	9	17	14	12
	3735 3053 6	206		3	2 3 1. Baasha	1, 24	10	18 32	15	13
	3749 3067 74	220]	7	15		24	32 46		1. S) Cap.1
	3756 3074 81	227	1	24	22	I	. Opbratens 2	39	36	8
	3758 3076 8	229		26	1. Els,	2.	3	41 55	38	10
Of those Ifraelitish Kings, See lib. 2. c. 19.8.5.	13750	230		27	\\ \{ \frac{Zimri.}{6. Tib}{7. omr}	ni.	4	42 56	39	11
	3762 3080 8	233		30	4		-7		1 Phor-
	3768 3086	239		36	10	·	13	ops, 50	6 7	20
	3 770 3 088 9	241		38	1 2 8 1 - Ahai	6, 22.	15	3 67	9	22
	3774 3092 9	245	1. 7	4 eho∫aphat 2			19	7 71	13	26

\{z	vorld	Troy.	7 nds.	Ifrael.	Affyria	Egy t.	Ith. ns L	atine
	776 3094	247	3	7	1. Ophra lanes.	9 73	15	28
	3777 3095 10:	248	4	8	2	10	16	9 53l. 4. eths
See 1, 2, c 20, 8, i. & .	3790	261	1 Feboram.	vi 9 : Abazia, z	15	23 87	29 11	59!. 'y berk «., 8
	116	262		1. Jeborars.	16	24 88	30	2	_
	3793 3111 118	264	20	3	18	26 90	6 M: a d:s 30	4
	3793		1 Jehoram a gain 8.	5	20	28 92	3	6	_
Jehosaphat dies, and Jehosam reigns alone.	3798 3116 123 38 0 2	269	25	8	23	31	6	Agrip.
	3120	273	6 1. Abazia. 1.	12	27	35 99	10	5
,	3803 31 1 128 3809	274	1. Athalia.	1.7chn 28	28	160	11	6
	3125 13.1 3819	280	7 8 1.70as, 40.	7	34	42 106	17	12
Carthage built. L. 2. c.22, §. 6.	3 1 3 7	290	11	17	44	52 116	27	22
	3143 14	8	15	21	48	65 120	1. Diog	20
	3814 3142 14 3826	299	16	32	49 370cra	121	2	27
	3 144	397	18	24	1, Anac daraxes	yn 3	4	29	l l.
The end of the 21. Dynastie. The Dynasties fo	3831	6 302	2 2 3	1. Johoahaz		g 128	9	3.4
lowing I omis.	3151	8 304	25	3	8	130	11	36
	3157	31	31	9	14	16	17	Syl. Alladi- us, Sg
Joas reigned with his Father. L.2, C.22, §.	1 17	70	5 37	1. 900s.	20	32	23	7
Joas reigns alone.	316 316	72		1.7025, 16	23	2+	25	9
	3160		40 9	2 Fffff	2.3	25	26	10

Fffffff

and the second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second s							1	1
	Julian World Temple	Troy.	Juda.	I/rael.	Affyria	Egypt.	ŀ	Latins
	3851 3169 176	322	4	5	26	28	8 Phere	-
	3858. 3166 183	329	11	12	33	35	8	1 S ₅ l Avenii. nus, 37
	3863 3180 187	333	7.5	16 14 1 Jeroboam,41	37	39	12	5	1
	862 3186 193	339	21		1 . S arda napalus . 20	45	18	11
	3870 3188 195	341	23	9	3		9 1. Ari. phron20	12
	3874 3192	345	27	13		1. Mi- cerinus 6		16
	Julian World Temp.	Troy.	Juda.	Ifrael.	Affyria	Egypt.	Athens	Latins	M
L.2. c.22. §.11.	3877 3195 202	348	1. Interregnum	16	10	4	8	19
	3880 3198 205	351	4	19	13	2. Boc- chorus. 44	11	22
L. 2. C.22. §.12.	3887	358	11	26	20. Sar danapa lus flain	8	18	29
L.2. c. 33. §.1. & 4.	3888 3206 213		10 1.Uzzia, 0 Azaria, 52	27		9	19	30	l. ,
	3890 3208	361	3	29		21	10 1The fpo 1115, 17	32	[:
L.2. c.23. %. 4.	3 ⁸ 92 3210 217	363	5	31	1. Eelofus or Phul. 48	10	3	34
-	389 5 3213 220	366	8	34	4	16	6	14 1 Syl. Procas	3
L.2. c.23. §. I.	3903 3 2 1 2 2 9	374	16	I. Interregnum 23. years.	12	24	14	9	-
	3916	387	29	14	25	37	27	22	1. S
	3917 3235 242	3 88	30	15	26	38	1 t 1. Agam nestar.	23
	3918 3236	389	31	16	27	39	2	1571.A 1871.A mulius. 44	1
	2924 3242 3249	395	37	22	33	and after him A myfis. t	8	7	-
Zacharia began at the very end of the year. L.2, c.23, §. 1.	3925 3143 250	396	38	Zachariah six	34	2	9	8

The state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s	Julian	i	1	1	1				·	i
	World	Trey.			Inda.	I/raeI	-4fjrio	Egypt	Athens	Latins	Media
	3926					i L 15 1
!	3244 251	397			39	Shillers Carmers 17 Africens	35	3	10	9	11
This year nearly concurs with the first of Mena	3937 3245 252	398			.40	1	35	4	11	10	I 2
	3930 3248 255	401		Section 1	-13	4	39	1 Saba- cut the Existed ton, 50	14	13	15
	3937 3255 263	4.08		Olym piuds,		18 1 Peka bia, 2	46		12 Utefilo ls , 23	20	22
The beginning of the Olympiads. L.z. c.z3. S. S.	3938 3256 263	409	1	1	51	2	47	9	2	21	23
	3939 3257 264	410	2	2		19 1:Pela Ronelio	48	10	ŝ	2.3	24
L, 2, 6, 23, §, 6.	3940 3258 265	411	3	3	1. fo- tham, t &	2	1,Tiglarb 1,Tiglarb Thal4f far, 2	11	4	23	25
	Julian World Temple	Iphit.	Olym.	Juda.	Ifrael.	AJ)ris	Egypt.	Athens	Latins	Media
	3946 3264 27	9	3	7	8	7	17	10	29	3 1 Medi lus, 40
	3 955 3273 280	18	5	16 1. Ab.13- 1 6	17	16	26	19	38	10
	3959 3277 284	22	6	5	1, Inter regnum 7. years		30	23	42	14
	3960 3278 285	23	6	6	2	21	31	I 3 I . Alc menon 2	+3	15
	I ulian World	Rome.	Iphit.	Olym.	Juda.	Ifrael.	Affyria	Egy;t.	Athen.	Ronans	Medi.
Rome built, L. 2. C. 14. S. 5. Catops the fift, epoterning in Athens for ten years; after when lucereded fix, chofen each after other for the like time worthe office lecane Annual.	3962 3280 . 287	I	25	7	8	4	23	33		I Romu- les, 37	17
The Chair Chairm	3184 291	5	29	8	12	140. 1 Hofts 9		37	Ś	5	21
The Æra of Nabonaffar. L.2.c.25. S. 1.	3967 3285 292	6 I	30	8;	13	2	1. Salma- naffar, er Nabenaf- far. 10	58	6	6	22
Ezektah began in the very end of this year. L.2. 6.25, S. 1.	3 968 3 286 293	7.	31	8	13 Eqek int	3	2	39	7	7	2 3
This year concurs with the first of Ezekiah. Ibid.	1 204	8	3 2	8	15	4-	3	140	8	8	24
The beginning of the first Messenian War. Where f see L. 2. c. 27. §. 4. It lasted 20 years.	3971 3280 29	10	3.1	9	3	6	9	42	10	10	16
Samaria is befieged by Salmanaffar.	3972- 3290 297	11	3 5	9	4	7	6	43		11	27

#ff∫fff 2

	3292	13	37	10	6	9	. 8 .	+5	1	13	29
The Capiton you the time	299	8	1	10			10	May 1		-	-
	3976	15	39	l Ì	8	1	1. Sena cherib. 7	47	- 1	15	31
	301	10		3 I 1		Kings of		1.50-	!		-
	3980 3298	19	43		1 12 /	the Chal-	5	chon.	i	19	35
L. 2, C. 301 3, 7.	305		اللله	3		1 KAM 1		33		-	L
Schaenerios mil mil mil mil mil mil	3981	21	45	i	14	1	7	3	i	21	37
2.2.0.2).	307		است	1		i. Mero-	1		;J		Ľ
	3983	22	46	13	6	dach or	Afar ha d n.	4	, 1	22	38
l	308	17	-	2		cempadus	10	1			L
	3986	25	49	13	18	4	4	7	i I	25	t Car
	311	20	"	1	اللا		. 	 	!!		ceas.
Merodach gets the whole Empire. This year or in	13993	3 2	56	14	25	I. Mero.		14	1	32	8
he end of the year foregoing. An eclipse of the Moon	318	27		4		dach, 40	-			1,-1	1
	Fulian	Rome.	Iphit.	Olym.	Inda.	Caldea	l LEgypt	. Rome.	Media	I vdia	Ī
	World. Temple.			0.,	1	Ĺ	-a.			1	1
Two eclipses of the Moon, in the second year of	399+	3 3	1	15	26	2	15	33		, 1	-
Mardocempadus.	3312	28	57	1	20	1	1,	3,	9	. 1	1
	3997	36		15	130		18	36	1.	I Ca	-
	3319	1	60	4_	29	5	10	30		1. Gy-
	3998	37	 	16	14						i
	3316		61	1	I Ma-		19	37	13	2
	13999	38	+	16	T			Inter	5	ī	T
	3317		62	.2	2	7		regnum one year	I. Deio-
	324	39	+	16	+-		1	I. Numa	. 1	i –	t
	3318	1	63	1	3	8	21	Pompi-	1 2	4	1
	325		1	19		1-	1 Inter	lins, 43	'	i T	†
- 6 4	4013 3331	52	76		16	21	reg.	14	15	17	İ
L.2. c.27. S. 2.	338	8 47	ļ	4_	 		nнm,	The same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the sa		-	1
	3333	54	78	20	18	23	Prin-	- 16	17	19	1
	340	0 49	1/-	2		_ ļ	ges, I	[5]		-	+
The beginning of the second Messenian War; whic	64020	68	02	23	32	37	1. Pfam miticus	30	3 1	33
lasted about 18. years. L.2. C.37. S.4.	3347 354	4 .	92	4				441		1	+
	4033	72	1	24	36	I. Ben		34	35	37
L.2. c,28. S. 3.	3351		96	4_		Mero- dach, 2			1	1 2	-
	4035	74		25	1	T,	7	36	37	I. Ar-
	3353 360	69	9,8	2	3.8	3	1	1		dys, 45
	4043	82	+	27	1	丁	1,,	1. Tuliu		9
	3361		106	5 2	46	11	15		32	1_	- -
	4052			29		1		i	6	18
	3370) (115		55	20	24	10	ories, 2		4
!		1 02							and the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of th	1	1
Registron and Self-registers of district annual default of the self-register and the self-register and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-registers and the self-re	37			29		-	-		,	1 10
		3 92	116	29	15 1. A	4- 21	25	11	2	19	-

1 Annual Print Representation of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common State of the Common St	la
	Julian World.		Iphic.	Olymp.	Inda.	Chal-	Egypt.	Rome.	Media	Lydia.
The expedition of the Scythians.	4054	93	1	30	1	-	i
L.2. c. 28, §.3. & 4.	3372	23	1117	1 30	2	3 • Nabu-	26	12	3	20
	379	88	1	1	_	tuffer,35			,	10
	4055	94		30	16	1					_
	3373		118	}	1. Fofi-	2	27	13	.4	21
A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR	380	89	1	2	as, 31
L.2. c. 28. S. r.	3391	112	136	34	19	20] [1. Ne-
	398	107	1,50	4	1.9	10	co, 17	31	22	39
	4075	114	i	35	1		-	1 +
	3393		138	1	21	12	3	Ancus	24	41
	400			2				34		· ·
	4076	115		35					7
	3394 401	110	139	3	22	23	4	2	1 Cyax4-	42
or year or nearly 100 throughout the super-manufacture or manufacture and other states of the super-states	4084	123	-	37		!			125, 40
	3402	1. 7.25	147) 2/	30	31	12	10	9	t Sady.
	409	118	."	3	,	1	ĺ		"	oites, 12
	4085	124	1	37	37	1
12, c.28. §.1, & 2.	3402		148		Teliabiz	32	13	11	10	2)
Nab chodonolog had reigned one year with his Father,	410			4	3 months
in 13 to be regarded in -> promoted objervations concer-	340+	125	1	1 38	1 Feho	1	1.	12		1 . 1
bis time. L.2. C.25. § 1. & C.28. § 6.	411	120	149	1	jakim,	33	14	12	11	3
D. J. C. 17, 9 1. O. C. 20, 9 8.	4089	128		38	, ,	4.	1	'		·
	3407	120	152	36	4	4. 1. Nebu chodonofor	17	15	14	6
	414	123	- ,-	4	7	the great.	1/	-,	-7
Name of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second section of the second sec	4090	129	·	39	·	44	1
	3468	/	153	37	5	2	1. P Jam-	16	15	7
	415	124		1	1		mis, 12	١
•	4096	135	1 .	40	I Fechoni		1			4.	ļ
	3414	130	159	1, 2	3 months.	8	7	22	21	1 Haly. aues 57
Zedekiah his journey to Babylon.	4099	138		3 41	Zedekiah	\	ļ			attes 57
L.2. c.28. §.6.	3417	1,50	162	1 41	It years,	111	. 10	1,L,Tar.	2.4	4
	424	133	1	2	4		1	quin. Pri-	2.4	1 7
The state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s	4102	141		42	1	i	1. Aprie		†	(-
	3420		165		7	14	or Ho-	4	27	7
January and the Nobel C	427			1		 	phra,	1			L
ferusalem taken by Nabuchodonosor, with whos for the more part, and partly with whose 19. this	64106	145	169	43		18	_	1 .
r concurs.	431	140	109.	1 1	11	18	5	8	31	II	1
	Julian		i	† -	-	i	-	·	 		-
	Ϊ.	! !	Iph.t.	Olymp.	Capti-		Egypt.	Rome.	Media	Lydia.	1
	World	Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial Commercial	!	Ľ.	vity.	dea.
Form Coloma de General	4107	146	1	43					. 1
Jerusalem destroyed.	3425	141	170		1	19	6	9	32	12
	4111	141		44		!	Phar. Ho-		!
L3. c.1. S. 8. & 9.	14111	1,0	174	44	5	23	Phar. Ho- pera flain, and the lengtom of Exppt go- varied 40. rears by Vi- teroyti.	13	36	16
	3429	145	/~r	2	,	- 5	Expt ga-		20	10
A STATE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF THE STATE OF T	4116	155		45		-	tears by Vi-	1	8	· · · ·
•	ļ į	1	179		10	28	6	18	Aftya	21
Nahnahada (C. 1)	3 1 3 4	150		_3				Ja	ges, 35
Nabuchodonofor lives wild: and his Kingdom governed by others for him, during seven years.	4125	164	- 00	47		37	`\		. 1
	3443	159	188	4	19	t. Evil merodac	15	27	10	30
	3127	166		48
	,12/		190	40	21 1	i Nigli-	17	200	12	,
	3445	161	,	2	. (Sitterit,	1/	29	12	32
The second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·					46 t				F

The second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon								i
	Inlian.		Tikie.	Olympi.	Inda.	Chil-	Egypt.	Rome.	Media	Lydia.
·	Temple	Nabon	11000	,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	1	dea.		i		ليثا	1
A CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY O	1131	1170		49	h	Lubaro	- 1	- 1		1.
Nebuchadnezzar recovers his sense and kingdom.		1 1	194	- 1	25	ardach 9 m m	21	33	16	36	1
the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of th	13449	165		49							1-
L.3. c. t. § .6. The 27.4 Jeconia his captivity compleat, and he	-1133	172	156	47		Svilme-	23	35	18	38	Í
The 27.0f Jecoma his captivity compleat, and me enlarged.	3451	167	1	4	!"	rodach.		6		11	1
t Mills I Time	4137			50	1	- i	~ 1	A Service	23	42	1
		176	200	1 . !	31	5	27	ns fallur 4	. 23	142
	3455	190	r	45					L. Zavara	1	Ī
Forty years after the conquest of Egypt past, Amalis began his reign: this being inclusively the 41. or there-	-1		214	1	54		Ama-	15	n Conversi, on Danies of Laters	56	1
fore the next year feems concurrent with amalis bis t	13469	185	ı, J	2			185 34		16	1 _ 1
Year,	4153	1 1	1	54		2:	2	17	3	1. Gre-	ļ
	3471	192	216	4	47	, * 1	. 1	. 1		fus, 14
The second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon		Rome.		1	i	1	(1		1 1	1
	ľ	1 1	Iphit.	Olymp.	Perfia	Chal-	Egypt.	Rome.	Media	Lydia.	Terres
		Nabon		ا ا		den.	į	į	ļ !	ļ!
	1154	193		55	1. cyrus	22	1 3 1	18	4	2	48
	3472	488	217	1	in Perfia		1 _1		1_1	()	1
	3159	193	i	56	1	1. Bil.	1
The feven Suges of Greece.		1	222	1	6	thafar.	8.	23	9	7	53
	3477	193	1	2		17	ļ		1
Pifistratus makes himself Tyrant in Athens.	4104	103	227	57	11	6	13	28	14	12	58
Popleratus manes nimper + jount in zironi.	3482	198	1 /	3	1	í		1	11	J
Approximately the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the same of the	4166	205	1-	58		1	-			Cravies	1,
	ĺ.		229	}	13	8	15	30	16	taken by	, 60
	3484		 	1 60	 	- Dal			-	Cyrus	-
	4175	214	238	60		17 Bal- thafar		39	25	į ·	69
The end of the Chaldean Empire.	3493	309	250	2		flain.		3> 1	1	-	_
The second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon	4176		t	(0		1. Da-		1	1		Ī., 141/	1 1	239			riusthe	23	40	26	1	70
	3 494	210	1	3		Mede 2	4!	\	Years	1	1
The beginning of Cyprus his Empire.	4177	216		60	- Cv-	2	26		from	1	Zoro
- cortinue de aime	2495	211	240	4	rus. 7	1	1 20	14.	1. Cyrus		babel
His Edict of liberty to the Jews.	4181		1	61	1	 	1	L. Tar-	1	Onely Z	iemias a
	ĺ	1	244	ľ	5	i	30	quinins Superbus,	5	remembr	ired as g
	3409		1	4_		1	ļ	1	1:	Jews,	anio t
	14.84	223	1	62	1.Cam	. 1	33.	1 4	8	32 of A	utaxei7
i , e e e e e e e e e e e e e e e e e e	3502	218	247	3	by fes.7		3),	1	1	there w	rese ma
The z. first years of Planmisicus, and part of the third may			1	03	1		1. Pfam		1	before N	elf witze
the added to the we ve of his father , if it be true that Camily je	7 1470 -	1 ~-,	249	1 -	3		m: ti-	6	10	feth, Ch	5.0.15
van Egypt presently on the death of smass, L.3.c. 4 S.z.	_)3 5 04			1	 		cus, 3			that the	ie florie ieirnam
1 0 100	4188	227	Ι.,	63	_	1	3	8	12	and nam	mes art
The conquest of Egypt by Cambysis.	3506	5 222	251	3	5		۰	_		certo:n
		n Rome.		the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract o			1	1		1
	17 825	I Itome.	I phitu	ulOlymj	p. Perfia	ı. Egypi	Rome.	Greece	Jewes.	. From Cyrus.	.
	tvo la		22	1 .	1	1	 		-	10,11	+
Cambysis reigned seven years and sive months, so a.	14191	230		64	The Ma		11	1.	1	15
11 auno fils reigned feben fem s kins fere in the to	0.01	. 1	254		gi one				1	1	_!_
his last year was filled up by the Magi, and (as ma	7		4								1
bis last year was filled up by the Magi, and (as ma leem) a good part of the next, L.3. C.4. S.4.	13509			64	year.		1	1	1	1 .4	1
his last year was filled up by the Magi, and (as ma	3509 4192			64	t.Dayin Hifia- Spiss 3	1	12			16	-

The state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s	Julian.	Rome.			1	1			7: We.
	World	Nabon	Iphit.	Olymp.	Perfia	$E_{arepsilon}$ graph	Rome.	Greece.	CTrus
	4197	236		1 65	T	i .		Hippins the forces
	1		260		6	1	17	Pififfraius Tyron	2 i
	3515	231	1	4_	1			n Athens.
	4204	243	267	67	Rabitan. Sebita del rebita del rebita i, ca- ten aj Da-				28
	3522	238	207	3	tenty Da	1	43	ľ	20
The Tarquines expelled Rome.	4205	245	1	68	1	1
L.4. c. 1. S . 1.			268	ĺ	14	i	25		29
	13523	239		4_	ļ
The Carthaginians first League with Rome. L.5.c.1. S. 2.	4206	245	269	68	1 15	ļ	Br#t#.	Consuls.
L.5.C.1, 3, 2.	3524	240	209	1	',		Publ.		30
	4211	250		69	20 Darine	1	1	1
L.2. c.5. §.4°	1	1 1	274	1	his expe- dation a-	i	1		35
	3529	245		2	gainst the Scythians	j	l
	4212	251		69	1	1		The Athenians
		0.6	275		2.1			and Jonians	3
and the second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second s	3530	246		3_	ļ		Sn Caffi	The battait of	-
	4222	201	285	72	31		" Poftb.	Marathon.	40
	3540	356	20,	1	3,		Confuls.	9
The control of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the	4226	265		73	i	Ægypt rebel	1		-
			289	17	35	leth against		}	1.5
	3544	269	ļ	I		Darius.	ļ		!
	4228	267	1 227	73	4		1		S
	3546	260	291	3	1. Xer-				د ا
blam agraria in Rome propounded, for division		268		73	1	Egypt recove-	Proc. 1	Vir-	Ì of Lunds: which bred great commotion.	l' -		292	1 /3	2	red by Xer-	giniu.	s. Conf.	5
	3547	263	,	4		xes.	Sp.Ca	ffius)	ļ_
An Eclipse of the Sun. L.3. c.6. § 2.	4233	272		74	6. The	great muster of]	1	1
As Ecupled the Sam. E.s. C.o 2.	3551	267	296		Sard	es bis Army at			1.52
Address of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the second of the s	4234	273	·	75	1	1	İ	The battails as	1
L.3, c.6, §, 3, & 6.	1	1	297	/3	7		i	Thermotyle, Ar-	58
	13552	268		ı		1		mii.	1 :
	4235	274	0		8 Xerxes			The battail of Places and My	17
L.s. c.6. §.9, 10,& 11.	3553	269	298	2	cal love		Ì	cale.	1 35
The state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s	4237	267		75	'ı	'		To e Sibertant rebuil.	4
L2, c.7, §.1 & 2.	1	i	300	''	10			The Albement rebuilt the walls, and ley to fundation of their Do minjon,	6
	3555	271		4_				The great villa	1
	4244	283		77		ļ		ries of Simon , as	6
	3562	278	307	3	17			Etirymedon and elfe	1."
	4248	287			21The	death of Xerxes			İ
L.2. c. 7. § 3.	1	1	311		by the	reason of Arta-	į į)	7:
	3566	282			banus.			L
	4249	288	312	78	i. Artexir- zes Longi- mente. 46	, 1		Themistocles be- ing b-missed sties	7
	3567	283	312	4	manus. 46			to Artaxerxes.	(
1	4251	290		94		Inarus fet up as			1
	1 1	_	314		-3	King by the Egy; .	-,	()	75
	3569	285		2	ا				rio. Éss
lenie w e	4255	1294	318	86	7. The	Inarus van-			elinanie. Perufale
3.c7. §. §. & 7.	3573	280	310	2	of Hefter	quished by the Persians.			19. Est sainmen ferufale Daviet 190 West 190, yes
	1264	303		82	1771	, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,	The Dicem-	Hippocrates the erest	beginnet
	1		327		16	1	to comp. a.d.	Hippareses the ereat Plyphians and Demonst- im the Philipphir flower rift.	ľО
	3582	298	and analysis	3	·	J	Carr.

and the second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second s					1	I	1		P1.67		Fulian,	Rome.				1	1		1 9
The Account from the folution of the Capsivity. I be fame with that from Cyrus.			Iphis.	olymp	Perfis.	gypt Ro	me.		n(y		and World.	and	Iphit.	О/утр.	Persta.	Egypt.	Reme.	Greece.	Jews From Cy Daniel,
1	World.			82	1	The	duem-	Simons voyage to Cyprus, in			4318	357		96		i .		Agealans mar
	4165	304	328	1	17	ljie Gree Incr	s front styrec-	to Cyprus, in		£.3.c. 11.8.4.			381		10	6		reth in Asia.	ĺ
	3583	299		4		Iplat			11		3636	352	1	1					6+
	1268	J		83	20	lytes i	1	cars, between A.	92	[.q. c. 11. §• 7.	4320	359	383	96	12	. 8		The villory of Conon at Cni	144
Nehemias comes to Jerusalom.		307	331	,	20	- 1	1		14	j.,	3638	354	1	3		1		duson as €m duson o	6.4
	3586	1 1		84	1	1/1 M /	mil cam t confin and of call. myf Li-	1:	96		4321	360	1.	96				Xen for n and
	4-72	311	335		24	ings Car	cad of				3639	355	384	١.	13	9		Plato flourish)
,	3590	305	,,,	3		- 1:		The carquel of	18			364		4	!	1	1		67
	273	312		84		1110			97.		432 5	304	388	97	17	1. Prammisions etc fon at Larus, and after bin	The hosour but villory of Canil I s over the Fuli Ju.		149
• .	.		336	4	25		1	hensons under Pe-	19		3643	359	'	4	-/	pill: i reignal in all about	l's over the Fali	1	71
	3591	307		86	1	i_		The Athenians &	102	L4. c. 7. S. I.	4326	365		98			· Reme taken	The Frace of
No. of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state o	4278	3 17	341		30	1		the Corcyreous a- gainst the Corinthi		L.3. C.11. §. 9.	1.64	360	389		18		and burnt by	Antaleians.	1
	3596	312	1 1	1				481,	24_		3644			98		1 	the Gauls.		72
	4280		I	86	1 . 1	1			104		4327	367	390	90	. 19	1 Nectanebus.	1	1	151
The walls of ferujatem temporal.		1	343	i .	32	1			26		3645	361	"	2		18			73
Nehemias returns to King Artaxerxes.	3598	314	!	3				The first year	107		4332	371		99			M. Manlins	The I aredement	1 150
	4283	322	345	87	25	ì		of the Pelapon-			3650	366	395	_	24	6	Capitolinus put to death	of Thebes by trea
L.3. c.8. §.1.	3601	317	777	2	1				29		4336		,	100				jon,	78
the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s	4289			88	X: xes z. montis			The victory of the Athenians	113	L3, c,11, $.11,	14330	2/3	399	100	28	10	i	The Thelens recover bein Citalet, and make from your apparts Late-demonious.	160
L.3. c. 9. 5. 1.			352		1 0	1			3 5		2654	370	317	3					82
	3607	3:3		-4	Sogdianus 8, months.				114		4340	379		IOI		1	Tribuses of the people continued 5. years to of-		164
	4290	329	200	89	1. Darius)		i i					403	3	32	14	Tributes of the people continued 5. years in office, people of people of the continue of the Conful fload be flitt a Ptipeten.		1
L. 3, c. 9. §, I.	3 08	3,4	353	1	Nothus. 15.				36		3658	374	-	102	1		bestill a Ptobeten.	The famous	9.6
-	4292			89	1			d vain and trou blefom peace be-	116	L. 3. C. 12. S. 1.	4543	1 302	406	102	35	. 17		a ne Jamou battaile of Len-
L. 3.c. 8. §.5. & 6.	14-75	,,,	355		3			tmeen Athens and	38		3661	377	1	2.	}	1		stra.	89
L. 3.c. 8. 8.). a 0.	3610	1 6	1	3	Faunt rebelleth again,			The Athenian for	125	T	4345	384		102		1. Tasbul 8. Eufibiu	L. Sextins a Tlebei	The bafty	169
	4301	340		92	K agt that reign junty.	1. Amyr.		ees in S cil utterly		L3.c. 12. S. 4.			408		3 7	igion only 2. years to Ta- lesur. Brime, 6, but the flury of him proper more.	an, and L. AEmilias, Confuls.		ì
L.3. c. 9. § 1. O c.8. § 8.	3619	1	364	4	tonguest.	ieus, 6		defiro)ed.	48		4351	379	1	104	43 Many Provin-	of him proper must.	Conjuis.	Theban Estate
	4302			92	13 Darius enter			The government of	128	Ĭ	4231	,,,,	414	104	ces rebel agains	i -	\	The great hassist of Mantinea.Epa-	175
	14,02	341	365	1	mith the Spartans	1 2		which was suppressed the year following,	50		3669	385	1	2	Artaxerxes, and are foon reclaimed,	4 ,	1	minondas dies.	17.9 cnat
Cap. 8. 9.	3620	336	1	1	with the 3 partans			The Athenians	125		4352	391		104	10	8. Tachus berrayea		Peace in Green. The A- turnism weaten then jelves by conserting their	176 ato
The Carthaginians invade Sicil with an Arm	4304	343	1	93	15	4		begin to recever		L3, c. 12. §.8.	3670	386	415	3	1. Ochus.	by Agestlans,	1	trasjura to van ujer.	98 Pri
300000. L 5.c.1. §. 4. † 3.	1		36	7 3	13	ا_``ا		Grength.	50		4354		·	105	23	11. Nettaneplis 13	1	DITTO NO.
,00000)	3622			1-93				Alcibiates after many offeries returns from hamflement to Athens, is most General, and batt- fled again.	1,0		1	1	417	10,	3	3	!!!	1. Philip King of Macedon 24 years	1 1/
	4306	345	1 369	1	17	6		mase General , at 4 auto-	52		3672			1	,			and part of the 15	100
L.3.c.8. §.10.	3624	1310		1		1 2		The battail at	131	T	4359	398	1	106				5. The Phocian	183
	14307	340	5	93	18	I Ne-	1	Arginusa.	٠, ا	L.4. C. I. S. 4.	3677	393	422	2	8	8		war begins.	ios
	1.	1	379	2	10	phres 6			53		4364	403	i		13 Ochus re-	13. Nectane	1		12.8
	18625		1	93				Dienyfins the el.	1,7		1	ſ	427	1 7	conquers E-	bus flies int	0	11
	4308	3 34'	7 37		19	2	ļ	in Syracuje.	34		3682	398		3	gypt.	Æthiopia.			110
	3620	6 34		1 3		+	-	The battail at	133	L4. c. 1. §.6.	4368	407	1	108		1		15. The end of the Phocian	192
	430		8	93	1. Artaxerx	2 3	1	Argos , Pota-	55		3686	402	431	3	17			war.	114
L., 3 c. 8, 5.12.		ì	37		1 2 4	1	J	mos, orc.	135		4369	408	i	108				16. Timolton	193
. m. 2 3	362			-1-4			of Ven	ge i,	"	L. 5.c.1. S.4. +.4.		ļ	432		18			his voyage into
	431	1 35	0	9	3	5	of Veil lasted years.	10.	57		3687	403	!!	4				Sicil.	115
	1411		, ,,,,			1	12	Socrates put i	137		4370	409	t l	109		Nabonassar.		7. Philip wafteth	194
	1	1	37	4 2		1	1	Socrasts part			143/0	403	1				i	Illyria and drams
	362	9 3+	5	94	lerta comoditi	an 3		death The 30 17	1 1		2688		453	ľ	19	Novemb the		he Theffelians in	LIA.
	1	9 3+	5	94 6	The expediti	an 3	2	death The 30 ty rants put down it Athens.	1 1	After this the years from	3688	404	453		19	Novemb the		he Theffulians to Nowbim.	116
., 3.c. 10. §. I.	362	9 3 ₊ 3 \ 35	5 2 37	94	The expediti	on 3	2	death The 30 ty	1 1	After this the years from Orus and Daniel are to on, by one,	3688	414	453	ī		Novemb the		he Theffilians to Montim. 22	116 199 Jadá High 121 Pric

Ggggggg

ï	fulian and world.	Rome. ana Nabon	I phites	Olymp.	Perfia.	Egypt	Rome.	Grace,	From Da	-		Julian and svorld	Rome.		Olymp.	Macedon.	Eg	ype K	yria and the ingdom of the		e, Ro	теня,	few: Dani
3	4376 5694	415	439	110	2			2 3 The bettail of Cherones Philip chofin Captain Go neral of the Greeks	1	1 99 121	The Era of the Kingdom of the Greeks.		4-13	467	117	7	ı	Ī	Selenens,30	L. 4. c. 5	. §.7.		14
i	4378 3696	417	441	111	1.Darius 6 years and fomembas more,	Nabon. Novemb. 15		2 5 Phille flain by Paufanjan 1. Maxander the great to year, and 5. minution		4 201 113	Alexanders Cap- tons assume the name of Kings.	4406	445	469	118	9	Prolomy of by Deme Cyprus.		3	Athens fe. Demetrius of Antigo	the for		16
	4379 3697	418	442	2	2			Thebes razed by Alexander		202 124	L. 4. c. 6. 9. 4.	3731	452	476	119	16	2	2 111	The battail a lus wherein An- gonus was flain			The second section of	158
	4380 36 9 8	419	443	111	3			Alexanderpaf feth into Afia.		6 203 125		3732		477	120	17	24	dl	Seleucus make liance with De urius				the and
L. 4. c.7. [§] . 1.	4381 3699	420	444	4	4 The battail of Iss.			4		7 204 126		4417 3735	456 451	180	120	t, Antipaser and Alex ader the jon of Caffander.		7	14				159
L.4. c. 2. 8. 5.6. % 7. & L. 5. c. 2. §. 8.	4382 3700	421	445	112	5		The Gauls enter into league with the Romans	Alexander win Tyre and Ægypi	8 205 127	Juddas mo- clog disa- order, is re- tarened by birm.	L.4.c.6. S.7.	3739	460 455	484	121	2 Demetrius, 6	3	1	18				160
1	Julian. World.	Rome. Nabon	Iphit.	piads.					16	9	the second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second second secon	Inlian.			Olym-	Macedon.	Egypt.	Syria	. Gre	ect.	Rome.	Jews. Daniel
An Eclipse of the Moon.	43 83 3701	422	446	2	6 The battail of Arbela.				Bakylon, Sufa, and Perfepalis mon by A- lexander.	206		4427		490	123	1. Pyrrbus.7. Moneths.	37	24).			1 Elea zar high Pricflis	4
L. 4, C.2, S. 13.	1384	418	4+7	112	7 Darius flain by Bessus.			 	7	207 129 7:101.		3746	467	491	123	t. Lyfimachus.	38	25				173
					Macedon.	Egypt.		Greece,	Roman			4429 3747	458	492	123	2	39 9 1 Prolomy Philadel- phus, 38	26				3
	4385	424	448	4	esh conditions: he puts to death Parmenic and Philotas.				ļ	130	The translation of the Bible by the Sep- tengint		471	495	124	5	4	29		9	The Turentines reserve the Eaftern pa fital), and call in P has againg the Roma	177
	4380 3704	1	449	113	9. Alexander paffeth into India: kils Clytus and Califthenes.					131	See L. 4. c. 6. 9 9 & c.7. 8 2.	4433	47 ²	496	124	6.Lyfimidbus flain. Selvicus 7 Moni	>	32 Selencus the end of the Olymp, Polyl Justin 30	12-4. b, and	I	Pyrrhus his v lory against t
Alexander died 17 days before the fummer Soistice. From Nabonal- far huberto are colletted 424 years: and hence to the reign of Augustus.		429	453	I 14	13. Alexander dies at Baby- lon.	Nabon. Novemb. 1	2			135 1. On	L.4. c. 7. §.3.& 7	3752		497	124. I	1. Ttol. Cerahnus. Anipater. Meleoger. Softhenes.	Nabon Nou.1	L. Antiochus ter.		uls do great acedon and der Brennus us.		179
294. The fum is,781. years,which a grees with this accomps. Ptolem.	[439I	430	454	114	1. Aridaus, 6 and 4.moneths.	1. Ptolemie Lagi. 39.	L.3.c.3.§.1,2 & 3.	The Lamian War.		as, 23 136		3754	570	499	12 5	I 1. Antigonus Gonatas. 26	8	3 33			yrrhus goes into Sicil,	181
		433	457	1115	4	c. Perdic- Nat, eas flain Nov. in Egypt. 1.	L.4. c. 3. § 8 & 9.	Victories of Eumenes.	_	139 5	L,5, c.2. §.6.	1438 3756	477 572	201	126	3 .	to, Na banasfars year be- gins,08.1	5 35	About il the Achi their foci	ety g	grrhus calle ut of Sicill a ainst the Ro	183
	4395		458	2	5. Antigonus Sent against Eumenes.	5				140	Nacional de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina de la constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina della constantina del	3757	478	5 02	126	4	It	. 6 26		t k	yrrhus over rown by 1h omans,	184
Aridæus flain by Olympias Antigonus beaten by Eume-	4397	436	460	115	7	7	1.	Thebes re-edi-		142	L.4. c. 7. §. 5.	3759	480	504	126	6	13	8 38	Pyrrh at Arg	us flain cr	The Tarentine ave and of th orthaginians.	186	_
Eumenes betrayed to Antigonus Olympias flain by Cassander. Antigonus grows dreadful.	4398	441	461	116	1. Cassander. 19	8		fied by Cassan der.		143	The Translation by the Sensagint finished this 17 Philad lphus.		484	508	127	10	17	12 42	1			190	Con- fuls.
Some place the beginning of Seleu- cus in this 12. from Alexander, h which accompt be reigned 3 1. years	4402	441	465	117	5	Nabona∬ar. Novemb 9.	Demetrius beate at Gaza, by Ptol my, and Seleucu	e-i	-	147		4446		509	128	7.1	18. Na- honaffar Octob.	90 90				l Manaf- feshigh Prieft 27
Feace between Alexander Captains: with division of Provinces.	5 440 g		466	11	1 6	13		1	1	148	The more ancient Roman Con fish have been often so uncer tinahat Livy hath donited	4450 37 6 8	489	5 13	129	15	honaffar Otto 18.	47	l., 5.c.	. § 3. of	he beginning the first Pu- ck war.	5	Ap. Cla. dins. M. Ful.
		,						:	:		1								Ggggg	gg 2

										Tewes.
l	Julian!	Rowe.		almos p	24.00	East	Syria and the Kingdom of the	Greece.	Romans.	jenes.	Confuls.
	and World.	37./20	l pintes y	Otymp.	don.	ESJP	Greek:	G		Danie.	Congnis.
The second second second second second				129	am.		2			8	L. Valerius.
-	4453	492	516	129	18	25	1 Antiochus Thous, 16		1
	3771	287	3.0	4	1.0	- 1	15			198	T.Octavilius.
	1454	493		130			2			9	C. Duilius.
L.5. c 1. S. 6.	+414	. 1	517		19	26		ĺ	Duilius his vi
	3772	483		1			51		Etory at Sea.	109	Cn. Cornelis
Married Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of the Control of th	1457	496		130			5		Regulus paf-	12	M. Atti. Re
			520		22	29	.		leth into A- frick:	2 2	Cn. Cornelin
ACCORDED TO MAKE A 1	3772	491		4	1		54	Marcus Cary-	Jricks		L. Manlins.
- 60	+458	497		131			6	mensis Prator	Regulus taken	-5	L. Zizuniini.
L.5. c. 1. § S.			521	1	23	30	55	of the Acheans	prisoner.	203	2 Caditus,
	37.6	4.92		132			'	Aratus recovers			L Cacilius.
	1463	803	526	1 *9~	28	35		Sicren ew ionns in		1	ĺ
	3781	497	,	2		-	60	to the Achieurs		-	C. Furius
The Koman Canjuls bea		50+)	132		Ī	1 2		no to the	19	C. Attlins.
ten 21 Lilyhoum.		1	427		29	36			Regulus his death.	209	T Maulina
The beginning of the Tar that Kingdom,	3782	498		2			61	·	Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of the Contract of th		L. Manlius.
	4465	504		132		,	13	}	Shiptorack & un- happy fight of the		Pulcher, and
	Į.	1	528		30	27	62		Romans at Sea.		L. Junius.
	3783	490	i	1 4		1	15	İ	[L.Cacilins.
	4+67	506	530	133	32	1. Piole myEner-	٠,	Ì	1	ĺ
	3785	501	350	3	9-	geies. 26	64			212	M. Fabius.
		508		133	1		4		1	2.4	M. Fabins.
Amilcar the Cartha	4407	300	532	1 2)	34	3	1. Selencus Calli-	j
ginian in Sicil. L. 5. c.1. § .11.	3787	505	J /-	4			66	1			C. Atilins.
	4472	511		134	2		4		Luctatius his great victoryal		C. Luct.Cati
	17/2		5 35		Deme-	6	40	1	Egateis,	217	A. Postbums
	1790	506			trius10		69	1			2. Luctatin
The war of the Mer-	4473	512		134		_	5	Aratus Wine	Peace grantea		1 - Lancation
cenaries with the Car-	1		536		2	7	70	Corinth.	to Carthage.	218	A. Manlins thaginians. L 5.c.2.	3791	507	1	4	1	8	6	i i		ı Simon	C.Claudius.
	4473	513	1 ., .	135	3	Nabon			ĺ	ibe juft 28
	3792	5c8	537	1	1	08.22	71			-	u. Sempronia
		1 515		135	i	1	8	1	The Romans take Sard nia from the	3	Gracchus.
The war with the Mercenaries ended.	1+470)1)	539	1 - 27	5	10			Sard nia from the Carthaginians.	221	Falco.
Mercenarus enaca.	3794	510	,,,,	3			73	1		-	Lepidus,
	4182	521	1	137	1 Antigo		14			9	Lepians.
	17705		545		nus Do	16				227	Mallcolus.
	3800'	516		-	fan, 10		79	 	A Roman Embaf		M. Emylia
	14183	521		137			15.	1	fadour flain by
	1	1	546		2	17	80		Диеен Тенва		M. Junius.
	3801	517		2			17	1	Теша, дисен о		L. Posthuma
	4485	524	0	137	4	19	- /		Illyria fubdaed by	1	a Enlaine
L.5. c. 2. 8.7.	1.0	1	548	1	4	1 *2	8 2		the Romans	234	C. Fulvins.
	13803	528		138		i	S Colombia Ca		1	16	L. Emylius
T = 0 = 0 =	4489	1 320	552	1,50	8	23	s. Selencus Ce-	1	1	2,4	C. Atilius.
I .5. C. 5. S. 1.	3807	523	//-	4		1	86	1	Marcellas his vi		C. Cornelius
Flaminius was also		531		139	Ī		1. Antiochus the		Hav aver the	1	1
Conful this year.	ì	1	555	1	II	26	Great, 36.	1	Gaules about	237	M Marcell
See L. 5. c. 2. § 8	. 3810	516		3			89	-	Milan,	20	P. Cornelins
	4493	532		139]	1. Prule	2	1		1	t .
L.5. c.5. §.2.	(t	555		12	my Philo	ń			238	M. Minutin
	3811	527	 	4	1	paier		-	1	20	L. Veturins.
	4494	533	1	140	4		3	1		1	C. Luctatius.
		1	1 557	1	1. Phi-	2	1	1 .	i	1 220	L. LBCCRIO
	3812	528	1 377	1	lip. 42	1	91	ł.	1	1 -2-world.	37./	ipnu.	Olymp.	Maceden,	Egypt	dom of the	Greece	Rome.	and

	IVagon				-5/1	Grubs,	Tarrett.			Cenfuls
4495			1 110	1			America.		Deniel
		558		2	3	1 4	Parison eleful ration		1 22	L. Emylin.
			2			92				M. Livius.
4590	534	550	140			5	L.s.c	The battails of	23	P.Cor. Scipi
3814	529	339	1 3	3	+	0:	3.5.4.		243	7" C
4497	536	i	140	4. Sol Ecial Lin	i II'ar I		There and			T. Sempronis C. Flaminis
		560	l	La Feb 11 reck	inten de	r. G	nite :40	Thrafymene.	. 24	C. Panisan
					·	·	Asiet.		242	Cn.Scroilin
	337	561	141	! 5	Natonaje Jari 3ter	7	1 1	The great bal-	25	C. Terent. V.
3816	532		I	,	b.r., 16.	95		TOTAL C. CASSE.	2.13	Lo Em Pas
14499	538	1	141			, δ		Posthumius the	26	L. Pefthamas
	522	502	1 2	6	7			Ricenful flain		T.Scmp.Gra
							PHHS and	by the Ganis.	244	2. Febius,
	İ	569	1 42	0	10	1 11	Irde Arecan	Syrattife wen	il 247 11 Ouies	Ap. Clandius
3829			1	1		99	Simen in Greece,	Capua bi fiegea	15 Prief	2 Fulvius
4503	542	r66	142			12		Young Seip o fem	2	Cn.Fulvius
3821	537	300	2	10	11	100	i	Capita tron by
4507						The second second			248	P. Sulpitins.
	1	570		14	15	ì	1		0	C. Clau. Nei
				ł	l	104	1		252	M. Livius.
4508	547		143	1		17	1		7	2 Cecilius.
3826	542	3/1	2	1	10	105			1
4510	549	1	144	1	1. 1. 1.		 		, -, 25	L.Veturius.
.0.0		573		17	my Epi-	1	1		1 9	Cethegus.
				1	phanes.	107	Ļ		255	P. Sempronis
النزو	3)0	574	144	1 18	١,	20			10	Servilins,
3829	545		2		1	108		taren.	256	and Servins.
4512	551		144	1	i	2 I	ì	Hannibal van-		T.Clandins,
1810	216	575	1 -	19	3	1	Į.	quistra by Sci-	1	1
		¦			ļ		-	THE RESIDENCE OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY.		M . Fervili
		576	177	20	4	2.2	1		12	Lentulus.
3831	547		4			110			258	Patus.
4516	555		145		,t	25	1			T. 2. Flam
2824	650	3579		Abfus, by the Ro		i	-	L.5.c.5.8.1.3.	1	· · Z.I tum
				4 40000	!		L'Agety of		261	Sex. Elins.
		580		Cynofcephalæ.	8	20	Green pro- elsimed by	1	16	Cethegus, 2 Minutiu
3835						114	man.		$262	~ winatia
4518	557	1 601	146			27			17	L. Furias.
383 6	572	301	,		9	11.5	1 (
							War upon		203	Marcellus,
		582		26	10	1	Nabis	j	10	M.Cato.
-		1				116	rant,		264	L.Valerius.
4523	561	• Re	147	20			1	ľ		L. Quintins.
3840 l	556	,0,	T	29	• 3		1	. !	- 1
·	562		147			f)		he great willary of L.	207 1	Cno Domitius. Acil. Gla-
1		586		30		quithed at Ther	1	The which game be-		brio. Gla-
						mayyla. 1:0		thury,		Nasica.
4524	563	587	147	31	15	33	c 5 § 8	- 1	23	L. Scipios
	3813 4506 3814 4497 3815 4498 3816 4499 3829 4507 3825 4508 3826 4510 3828 4511 3836 4512 3836 4518 3834 4518 3836 4518 3836 4518 3837 4512 3837	3813 529 4506 534 3814 520 4497 530 3815 530 4498 537 3816 532 4499 538 3817 533 4503 542 4503 542 4507 549 3826 542 4510 549 3828 544 4511 550 3828 544 4511 550 3829 545 4512 551 3830 546 4513 552 3811 547 4510 553 3834 550 3835 551 3836 552 4518 557 3836 552 4519 558 3840 564 4523 562	1813 529 558 4506 514 3814 520 3814 520 559 4497 536 560 4498 537 561 4499 538 562 4499 538 562 4499 538 562 4499 538 562 4499 538 562 4503 544 570 4508 547 571 4510 549 4520 546 4511 550 3828 544 573 4511 550 3829 545 4513 552 3810 546 4513 552 3811 547 4516 555 3836 553 4519 558 3849 556 3836 553 4519 558 3847 556 3837 552 4512 561 3842 561 3843 550 4518 557 3836 553 4519 558 3847 556 3837 552 4523 561 3840 556 3853 551 4519 558 586	1813 529 558 2 4596 534 559 7 3814 529 558 7 4497 530 560 4 4498 537 561 141 3816 532 561 141 3816 532 561 141 3816 532 562 141 3829 536 542 4502 547 570 4503 542 4503 542 561 570 7 4510 549 573 4511 550 574 3829 545 574 3829 545 574 3829 545 574 3829 545 574 3829 545 574 3820 542 575 3830 542 575 3831 552 576 4510 555 576 4510 555 576 4510 555 576 4510 555 576 4510 555 576 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 580 4510 555 585 4523 560 585 4523 560 585 585 586 585 586 586 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 586 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585 585	1813 529 558 2 2 4490 534 539 2 3 3814 520 559 2 3 3815 530 6 4 140 4.581 https://doi.org/line 3815 530 6 4 Interior bit larek 141 5 3816 537 561 1 5 4 141 5 4499 538 562 1 4 6 6 6 6 142 1 6 6 142 1 6 1 4 9 1 4 9 1 4 9 1 4 1 9 1 4 1 9 1 4 1 1 1 1 1 1 4 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	1813 529 558 2 2 3 4 530 534 539 2 3 4 530 534 539 2 3 4 530 534 530 2 3 4 530 530 4 530 530 500 4 530 500 4 530 500 4 530 500 4 530 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500 500	1813 529 558 2	1813 529 558 2 2 5 92 151 152 153 154 157 158 159 158 159 158 159 158 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159 159	1813 529 558 2	1813 529 558 2

590 591 594 595 596 597 598	Olymp. 118 2 148 3 149 2 149 4 150 1 150	34 35 38 39 The tyring of Polity, Mr. 39 The tyring of Polity and State of Polity and June (are not) 40 41 42 1. Perfens, 11. or 1 June 15.	18	Greeks. 36 124 6 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1.	1	Scipes beinglich himilief from Rome Scippoyllam nibal, and Philippemen Jie, Tally placets Sci gives Jess Land two years earlier.	Danie. 26 272 27 273 30 276 31 277 32	Confult. Lepidus. Flaminius S. Postkami Q. Marin Marcellus. Paulus. Cn. Babius. (Cethegus. M. Babius. A. Posthumi Piso. Piso.
591 594 595 596 597	148 149 2 149 3 149 4 150 150 2	35 38 The tyring of Public Miles 100 Description and plant to most 40 41 42 1. Perfens, 11. or 1 Jears.	22 23 24 1. Piolemeus Phi lemetor, and his	124 1, Selenen Rhi- 1, Selenen Rhi- 1, Selenen Rhi- 1, Selenen Rhi- 128 5 129 6 130 7 131 8	Callicrates Satrayer the Assents,	nificili from Roma ScippoyHam nibal y ant Psitogeness die, Tally placets Sel fore death resoluter.	272 272 273 30 276 31 277 32 278 33 279	Flaminin S. Postkem Q. Martin Marcellus, P. Febius, Paulus, Cn. B. ebius, Cethingus, A. Bofthumh
594 595 596 597	148 2 149 2 149 3 149 4 150 1 150 2	38 The tyring of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May	22 23 24 1. Piolemeus Phi lometor, and bis brother Physican	1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Selencus Phi- 1. Sel	Callicrates Satrayer the Assents,	StipingHam mbal; ant Philopamen Jie, Tally placets Sci (test diath two year earlier.	27 273 30 276 31 277 32 278 35 279	S. Poßkem Q. Marin Marcelius, Q. Fabius, Paulus, Cen, Babius, (cethegus, M. Babius, A. Poßkumi Piso,
594 595 596 597	149 2 149 3 149 4 150 1	38 The tyring of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May 18 of Palify, May	22 23 24 1. Piolemeus Phi lometor, and bis brother Physican	logator, 12. 4 12.8 5 12.9 6 13.0 7 13.1 8	Callicrates Satrayer the Assents,	earlier.	30 276 31 277 32 278 33 279	Marcellus, Q. Fabius, Paulus, Cn. Babius, Cethegus, M. Babius, A. Pofthumi
595 596 5 97 598	149 2 149 3 149 4 150 1 150 2	The firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the fi	2.4 1. Peolemeus Phi lometor-, and his brother Physican	128 5 129 6 130 7 131 8	Callicrates Satrayes the Assems,	earlier.	31 277 32 278 33 279	2. Fabius, Paulus, Cn. Babius, Cethegus, M. Babius, A. Posthumi
595 596 5 97 598	149 3 149 4 150 1 50 2 151	The firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the firement of pulses, the fi	2.4 1. Profements Phi tometors, and his brother Physican 35	5 129 6 130 7 131 8	Callicrates Satrayes the Assems,	earlier.	31 277 32 278 33 279	Paulus, Cn. Babius, Cethegus, M. Babius, A. Posthumi
596 597 598	3 149 4 150 150 2 151	(18) transport Polity Market Polity (18) (18) (18) (18) (18) (18) (18) (18)	2.4 1. Profements Phi tometors, and his brother Physican 35	1 29 6 130 7 131 8	detrayer the		277 3 ² 278 35 279	Cn. Bebins. Cethegus. M. Bebins. A. Bofthumi. Pifo.
5 97	149 4 150 1 150 2 2	40 41 4. Perfeus, 11. or . 1 years.	2.4 1. Profemeus Phi lometor-, and his brother Physcon	6 130 7 131 8	detrayer the		31 278 35 279	Cethegus. M. Babins. A. Bosthumi Piso.
5 97	4 150 T 150 2 151	41 42 1. Perfeus, 11. or 1. years.	1. Piolemeus Phi lomesor-, and his brother Physcon	7 131 8	and all the		278 35 279	M. Babins. A. Posthumi
598	150 1 150 2	1. Perfeus, 11.	lomesor-, and his brother Physican.	7 131 8			35 279	Pife.
598	2	1. Perfeus, 11.	brother Physcon	8			of market and	Total Control
	2	or years.	2				34	P1/0.
	151	1		132		1	1 0
603		1		7		1		Manlius. Sp.Posthum
		6	7	. Antiochus Epi- phanes 12.		ľ		Scavela.
	3			3		Seel, 5	Fafor buy-	L. Post humi
604	151	7	8	138		cap. 6. §. 11.	Prinfibons, and after bim Mess- Laur,	M.Popilins
	152	9		4	1	1	i i	P.Licinins.
666	3	The beginning of the mar of Pe fee	10	140		c.6.§6	288	C.Cassius.
ഗേട	152		Har on an expressed	6			290	Martius.
	4				1	Centine		Servilius.
609	153	Perfeus amagui-	Arricabut erniman. 31.1 out of Ex-pr by the Rational footles the Tem-	}	$.8,9.	King of }	CHILDS IN
	1 - 1	2		8	The capti-
610	1	a Acres Pro-	14		the best arming the Greater		10. &	? เมาเมร.
		voince.	T		1		1. Judas	Torquatus.
612		ĺ	16				Масса.	OEtavius.
_	610	608 4 153 610 2 153	608 11 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	608 11 11 11 12 12 12 13 14 15 15 15 15 15 15 15	608 11 11 11 11 12 13 14 14 15 16 16 17 16 17 16 17 17	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	1

ALPHABETICAL TABLE

OF THE

Principal Contents of the First and Second Books of the First Part of the HISTORY of the WORLD.

A Brahams age before Noah died, 62.
He was the first instructer of the Chaldwans, Phenicians, and Egyptians, in Astrology and divine knowledge, 158. Was contemporary with Ni-nus, 167. His journey from Haran to Canaan, 172. His first entry into Canaan, 174. Is childless, till about ten years after his arrival in Canaan, ibid.
His age when he rescued Lot. 179 Abacuc his Monument, feen by S. Hierome.
Abijah his victory against Jeroboam, 401 Acesines one of the Rivers that fall into Indus where Alexander built his Floot of Gallies, 46

Ariflus and Danae, 33A
Adams free power in his first creation, anignatically described in the Person of Proteus. 279
Adombezek his Tyranny, 279
Adrianus his Edict against the Jewr, 324 Egyptians, at what time they first took that name, 122. How they may be said to have flory for 13000. years, ibid. Egypt it self denominated from Agyptus the son of Belus, ibid. A flourishing kingdom in the time of Abraham, 184. Anciently called the land of Ham, 187. Egyptians god for all turns, 203. Egyptian wisdom,

253. &c. Egyptian Babylon not in the beginning of Nimrods Empire, 147. The manner of the ancient Egyptian Kings government. 187 Equivocating oaths, how dangerous, 257 Æthiopias diftance from Arabia and Palæfiina. 49 Against the over-much curiosity of some in searching how God wrought in the Creation of the World, Against the inexcusable excuses of this latter time.

An

Agag, a general name of the Kings of the Amalekites, 247

Agenor his proceeding, 283 Agamemnon and Menelaus at variance,

Aide forraign ill invited, 457 All forms are in the first Mover, 11 All Kings called Jupiters by the ancient,

Aleppo, anciently called Magog,
Alba longa, founded by Alcanius, Amphiaraus his destiny,
Amazia his dissimulation,
422

His bafe Idolatry, 433. His quarrel againft ffael, 434. his overthrow 433. his exprobratours, 439. his Flatterers, 438. he is generally hated,

Ambition the first sin,

Annius, quite contrary to Moses, in the sin planating Gomer in Italy and Tubal in Spain in the twelfth of Nimrods reign, 105 Contraditory to himself, 104. How to be credited,

His Philo, 420
An answer to some few objections against certain particulars in the sourth and sight chapters of Geness, 58

Answer of a German Prince to those that perswaded him to become a Lutheran,

An Indian, presented unto Solyman the Turks General, in Anno 1570, who had out-lived three hundred years, 61 Andro

Macedon and Thrace; and how far it casts Andromeda her delivery by Perseus, ! An enemies approbation, the best witness; Androclus, the Founder of Ephefus, Anaftafius the Emperour flain by Light-Antioch upon the River Orontes, whereof S. Peter was Bifhop, Apollo his Temple at Delphus, consumed with fire from beaven, under Julian Apoltata: with the divers ruins it suffer-Armenia and Mesopotamia, first of all known by the name of Eden, Araxea, a Nation of Annius his making, Ararats misprission cleared, Aradus, a City in the Ile of Arados, where S. Peter preached (according to Clement) and founded a Church in honour of our Lady, Aram Naharajim, now McCopotamia, 138 Argives, how they came to be called Danai. Aristides his Ephemerides of Dreams, Armeus, otherwise Danaus, King of Egypt, expelled thence by his brother Egyptus, 192. Afterwards King of Argos in Arad, King of the Canaanites, surprised dimers Ilraelites. Areas. the fin of Orchomenus, of whom Areadia took name. Arias Wontanus his derivation of the name Heber, Arbaces definored Ninive, 446. his too much tenity. Aristodemus his blind zeal, with the fruits thereof. Affitocrates his perfidie, 489. Worthily remarded, Aristomenes his valour during the siege of Era. His strange escape out of prison, 490. his death and buriall: Ascania, a Lake bordering on Phrigia: Affur: the name thereof diverfly taken, 149 Allyrians demand aid of Croclus, Aftarte, Afcalus, one of the fons of Hymenæus, 296. Ascalon, the birth City of Herod, Christs persecutor, 297. Repaired by Richard K. of England, Asclepius his practice to cure the Frenzie, Asychis his sharp Law.

Athos, an exceeding high mount ain between

Made. Athenians true Originall, 112. pride. Atlas, divers of that name, Athalia, her practices, 413. Her cruelty, 416. Her sacriledge, 419. Her indiscretion and death, Atossa her wantonnesse. Augustines answer to those that take the Tree of Life allegorically, 53. His difcourse on the Arke, 87. His Millanois, 161 His opinion concerning Baal and Aftar-Dabel was forty years in building, 92. Not walled till Semiramis time, 169, Babylonians Dove, Balonimus invested in the Kingdome of Basan, an exceeding fertill Region, 310. Bdellium, growing plentifully in Havilah or Before the beginning, there was neither primary matter to be informed, nor forme to inform, nor any being but Eternall, 1. Belus (properly) the first that peaceably and with generall allowance exercised soveraign power, 146. His sepulchre, 152. Bel; the signification thereof Bellonius his report of the Pyramides in Bellerephon and Pegafus moralized, 221. Bel zebubs Temple, Benhadad, twice overthrown by Ahab, 315. Beroaldus his folution of the doubts arifing of the difficulty of the Text, that a River ment out of Eden, Berfabe, why not named by St. Matthew, Bethfaida, the native City of the Apostles Peter, Andrew, and Philip, Bethleem, the native City of Ibzan, Elimelec and Christ, Bethfan, anciently Nyfa, built by Liber Pa-288. Bozius his indiferetion, 228. Boreas his rape of Orithya, Britains Boats in the time of the Romans, Their manner of fight, 406. Briareus moralized, Abala, what it importeth,

Cadmus, the first that brought letters

into Boetia, Cain, his departure from Gods prefence, not to be understood literally, A Vagabond, how understood, Caponi his resolution. Cardans mortal Devils, Carthaginians anciently Tyrians. Carthaginians butchery. Caftle of Pilgrims, Cataractæ Coeli, probably expounded Cause of Adam and Eves disobedience, 56 Cethim, afterward called Macedon, 116 Cedes, the native City of Barac, Chaldaa, Babylonia, Shinaar: three names of one Country, Chaldwans, descended of Arphaxad, 133 Chalybes, and their condition of life, 108 | Jews Cham, intituled Jupiter Hammon by the Egyptians, Charran, Sometime called Charre, Haran, tremity and remedy, and Aran; are the same Charran in Mesopotamia, 38. Famous by the overthrow of Craffus, Chebar, mentioned by Ezechiel, but a branch of Euphrates, Chemmis his Pyramis. Cheops his Daughter, Chifon, on whose banks the Idolatrous Priests of Achab were slaughtered, Persian Kings. Cimbri, whence so named, Cimmerians invade Asia, Civil Law defined, attributes and properties, Codrus bis resolution, Collis Achillæ, a steep Mountain. Comestors tale of Moses and Tharbis, Flood, and Phaetons conflagration, Contemporaries with Joshua, Contemporaries with Othoniel, Brethren. Confidence in signs, in stead of the sub-Stance. Corall in the Red Sea, Correction of the Julian year by Pope Gregory the Thirteenth, Cornelius Tacitus contradictory unto batane, Countest of Desmond her long life

Creon his cruelty, Cruelty the chief cause of the Flood, Curfing of Parents. ibid. Cush, the son of Ham, with his sons Sheba, Havilah, &c. first seated in the valley of Shinaar : which Region was afterwards denominated after the name of Ha-456 Cush, and the Region of the Ismaelites, extended directly North from Athiopia, 48 Cush, miftaken for Athiopia, proved, Cush, being taken for Ethiopia, is the 274 cause of much mistaking in Scriptures, Custome of Tanistry in Ireland, Cyril his comparison of Cain and the Cyaxares forceth Ninive, 500. Is compelled to abandon Allyria, ibid. His ex-Agon, the Idol of the Philiftims, de-Dalaqua, an Island in the Red Sea, Dardania, built by Dardanus, David his election to the Kingdom, Cidarim, a garment belonging unto the 370. His combate with Goliah, ibid. His 182 many dangers in Sauls time, 374. His Ju-109 stice on the fellow that avowed himself to 491 have slain Saul, 375. His imprecation against Joab, 377. His justice on Rechab and Baan-Cleanthes his description of GOD by his ah, for murdering Isboseth, ibid. His 75 dancing before the Ark, and deriding by 239 Micol, 378. He is prohibited to build the Temple, ibid. His taking and demolishing of Gath, ibid, Endangered by Ishbibenob, ibid. His destruction of the Moabites; Conjectures of the time of Deucalions 379. His ambassage to Hanum, ibid. His lood, and Phaetons conflagration, 85 Prittory at Helam, 380. His crosses after Continency, not a vertue, but a degree unto his adultery with Barlheba, 381. His ex-224 treme forrow for the death of Absalom, 382. Congo, diverted from Christian Religion, His reason for delivering Sauls Sons or 230 Kinsmen to the Gibeonites, 383. His love to Jonathan, expressed in sparing his Son 327 Mephibosheth, ibid. His speech in Parlia-Conjectural Reasons, why Succoth and ment, and the approbation thereof, 385. His Penuel refused to aid the Ifraelites their advice to Salomon concerning Shimei, ibid. His death personage, and internal gifts, ibid. Debts of cruelty and mercy never left un-361 Satisfied. Deceit in all Professions. Deioces his strict Form of Government . 201 491. He built Tauris, formerly called Ec Decreto's Temple, Deucalion and Phaeton contemporaries Hbbbbbbb with

with Mofes, 249	Epl
Devils policy, 161	Epi
Diagonas his three Sons, 455	truth
Difference of Translations about the Henri	gorica
fication of Gopher, whereof the Ark was	Era
made, 86	Err
Difference of Authors, concerning the	God,
Mountains of Ararat, 96	Efa
Difference between Necromancers and	Efi
Witches, 104	Fleet,
Difference between Emath and Hamath,	Ev.
reconciled. 128	Eu
Diffidence, the Bar to Moles and Aarons	36. E
entry into the Land of Promise, 237	the Ri
Diedorus his report for the original of the	Eu
Gods. 70	branc
Distance between the Flood and Abra-	Eu
ham, 178. And between the Flood of Ogy-	Ez
ges, and that of Noah, 78
Distance between Tyre and Zidon, 263	deliv
Divers repaired from Age to Youth, 61	l
Divers computations of years, 200
Divers appellations of the Red-Sea, 204
Divers things in the Scripture referred to	LI
the reading of other Books, which by injury	I.
of time are lost or perished, 240	Fi
Divers Mercuries	who 1
Dodanim, the fourth Son of Javan, the	Fo
first Planter of Rhodes, 116	1 177
Dogs first brought by the Spaniards into Hilpagnola, changed into Wolves, 87
Domitian bis Jhameles spectacle, 335
Doubts concerning the time of the Earths	begin division after the Flood, 135	their
E
Asse to draw those men back, whom rage without reason hath led on.	G

Afte to draw those men back, whom without reason hath led on. Eden of Paradise, described by Country bordering it, 39. An Island of	the name in Tygris, described, 41. Know	n bu
by the name of Geferta,	42
Education inverteth influence,	13
Effects of fear,	244
Eglon Subdueth Ifrael,	305
Elius or Sol his pedigree,	72
Emaus overthrown by Earthquake,	229
Emims, Giants of huge stature,	241
Enoch and Elias at the time of the
could not be in the terrestrial Paradise,	35
Enoch, the first City of the world, bu
Cain,	57
Epaphus, Founder of Memphis in E
-r-r, J - 1	192
Epaminondas, Author of the M

ans replantation in their old possessions.

Ephori in Lacedæmon, the time of their experience, beginning.

Ephraimites quarrel with Gideon	334
Epiphanius his answer to such as dr	aw the truth of the story of Paradile, to a mee.	r Allegorical understanding,	29
Era, betrayed by a slave,	490
Errour of such as understood the S	ons of
God, Gen. 5. 24. to be Angels,	64
Elay the Prophet, his cruel death,	483
Efiongaber, where Solomon but	ilt his
Fleet,	236
Evangelion diverfly taken.	220

phrates & Tygris, two guides to Eden, leing two of the four heads whereinto ver of Paradife is divided, phrates it self is divided into four febius his errour.

ekiah his godly beginning, 465. Is beby Sennacherib, 468. Miraculoufly ered, ibid. His overlight.

cus Indica described, 53. Allegorized, rst or last naming in Scripture, no proof vas first or last born. rtescue his report of a Judgment given lifbury ederick Barbarossa bis end and buom the same place where man had his ginning, from thence again had Men	Traion we Tartar Jurcen Damaicus, eir increase.	Halmatan Ali un Cur C Hack line de Halyattes his reason for defending the

G	Scythians against Cyaxares, 504
G	Ham, Father of the Egyptians, 117
CA A A Anna City formed by You	Haran, the eldelt Son of Terah. 177
Amala a strong City, forced by Ves-	Havilah, one of Joctans Sons , seated in
J palian, 311	the Continent of the East India, 138
Ganges falleth into the Ocean divers de-	Hebron, where Adam, Abraham, Isaac,
rees to the Eastward from Indus, 46	and Jacob were buried, 299
Gaza, agoodly City, Surprized by Alexan-	Helen the Empress her sumptuous Chapel, er Janneus King of the Jews, 311
Gehazites and Simonians, 293	Hollow with the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the contr
Gehoar, Founder of Cairo, 476	Hellen and Melantho, Sons of Deucali-
Gehon diffroved to be Nilus, 48. So con-	on, 249
effed by Pererius, ibid.	Henoch was not dissolved as the rest,
Geometrical cubit not used in Scripture,	63
88	Henricus Mechliniensis his observations touching the general Flood, 83
Gergescus, the fifth son of Canaan, first	Hercules, native of Tyrinthia, to whom ounder of Berytus (afterward called Fœ-	the twelve Labours are ascribed.
ix Julia) in Phœnicia,	Herod his Harborow, 281
Geographers Maps, 453	Herodium a magnificent Castle, built by
Georgians, from what place they take their	Herod.
name s. 97	Herodotus his testimony of Eden, and Giants, men of great stature and strength,	the Country adjourning Q III and to have been before the Flood, proved by	the Country adjoyning, 48. His arguments,
Somittures: and that there are like now, by	that Helen was not at Troy during the siege,

Gideon his overfight and overthrow, 335. of her first building, His Contemporaries, Hippones his cruel Justice, 47 I God foreknew and comprehended the be-Hiram his displeasure against Solomon, ginning and end before they were, 25. He 268. His policy in holding league with worketh the greatest things by the weakest Israel, means, 197, His first punishment of the Historians, borrowers of Poets, 422. Hi-Agyptians, was in changing those Rivers storical caution, into blood, whereinto formerly their Fathers Homer and F Homer and Hefiod, placed in Hell (for had thrown the Hebrews innocent children, their sictions) by Pythagoras, 73, Hispar-198. His secret hand in all manner of ac- tiality in Achilles praise, cidents, 243. His punishment of places for Hooker's definition of Law. the peoples fakes. Horatii and Curiatii their combate Godly use to be made of praying toward the How the Text, Speaking of four heads Gog and Magog , what is understood by (into which the River of Paradise was divided) is to be understood, Good spirits not to be constrained, How the Tree of Life is understood by the Golden Age, Hebrews, 143 Great flaughter of the Ifraelites, How ridiculous their resolution is , that Greeks vanity in holding, that no Flood reckon the Ages of the first Patriarchs by Lupreceded that of Ogyges, 77. Their manary or Egyptian years, How far the education and simplicity of Gyges obtaineth the Kingdom of Lydia, thefe times differ from former Ages. How the certain knowledge of the Creation came to Mofes. How the appointed number of creatures to H be saved, might have place in the Ark, Abdon, Judge of Israel; in whose I time happened the destruction of Troy. How the West part of America, to the South of Panoma, came to be called Peru, Father of forty Sons, and thirty Grand-Hus, the Country of Job, how bounded, Halon the Tartar forceth Damascus, lyattes his reason for defending the

Hillus and Echenus their Combate, 373

Apha, a strong place forced by Titus, Idanthura bis Answer to Darius bis Let-Idle Chroniclers, Idolaters vanity, Jehojada his godly care, 419. his policy, 425. He proclaimeth Joas, ibid. His hollen and Melantho, Sons of Deucali- nourable interment, Jehojakim his impiety, 509. He revolnoch was not dissolved as the rest, teth from Nabuchodonosor, 510. His death 63 and burial Jehoram his cruelty towards his Brethren, 411. and was the first that creeted rcules, native of Tyrinthia, to whom | irreligion by force, ibidem. He lofeth Libna, 412. is oppressed by the Philistims and Arabians, ibidem. His wretched end, rodium a magnificent Castle, built by Jehoshaphat his great numbers of Soulrodotus his testimony of Eden, and diers, 2 Chron. 17. how to be understood, untry adjoyning, 48. His arguments, 407. Is reprehended for aiding Ahab, 408 elen was not at Troy during the fiege, Loseth his Fleet by shipwrack, ibid. In great 355 extremity for want of Water, ibid. His Mo-Hierusalem, how uncertain the time is nument, Hbbbbbbb 2

65 Gideon

Deluge in rerum natura,

Jehu and his proceedings, 413. His exe-Joppa in Judæa, founded before the cution of Baals Priests, 418. His ingrati- Flood. tude and punishment, ibid. Burnt to the ground by the Romans Jephta his just defence against the Am-Joseph his reason in favouring the Egypmonites. Jeremy the Prophet, his death and burial, tian Priefts, 189. Esteemed the first Mer-Josephus, the first Author of mistaking Jericho, one of the Toparchies of Judaa, 320 Pilon for Ganges, 47. Mistaken in his Jeroboam his wicked policy, 292. His end, own tale, 117. Condemned together with ibid. Apollinaris, for avowing Moles to have Jestael, where Naboth was stoned, marryed both Tharbis and Sippora, Joseph Scaliger his short answer, 449. 2801 Jethro or Jothor, Raguel or Revel, and His Retractation. Josias his zeal to God, 495. His fidelity Hobab, all one person, 209. His departure to the King of Babel, 496. His death, ibid. from Moles, Josua his remove from Sittim unto the Tewift Impiety, Improbability of their conjecture, who banks of Jordan, 255. His paffage thorow 34 it, ibid. His skill in War, 256. His place Paradise beyond the Ocean, Improbability of the confusion of Tongues keeping faith with the Gibeonites, ibid. at the birth of Peleg, His death, 558. His Sepulchre, 290 Jotapata, a strong City, fortified by Jo-Improbability of the flort time of ten years. allowed by Some for the finishing of Babel, Jotham his Encomion, by Josephus. Improbability of the waters standing up-Irreligious cavilling, 280. and irreligious right (like walls) in the Red Sea, as some policy, schoolmen have funcied. Ilaac his birth, rather a miracle wrought upon Sarah than upon Abraham, 174. His Image and Similitude taken in one sense Prophecy. by S. Paul and S. James . 18 Iscah and Sarah, two names of one figni-Indus descent into the Ocean. India, the first peopled Country after the fication, Isles of Eliza, mentioned by Ezekiel, Flood. In whose time it was that Moses led Israel Ismaelites and Amalekites, possest of the Countries between Havilah and Sur, wasted out of Egypt, Invention of Alcinous Gardens drawn by afterwards by Saul, Israel punisht in Saul's time for slaughter Homer from Moles his description of Paraof the Gibeonites, contrary to the faith before given by Josua . Invention of Ethnick sacrifice, ascribed to Ifraelites overthrown by the Philistims, Cain, Joab his jealousie of his place and dignity. Jupiter Belus, the Son of Nimrod, Jupiter, renowned among the Greeks Joas, King of Juda (in probability) not the natural Son of Ahazia, His forwardand Romans, born not long before the War ness to repair the Temple, 427. Is forced to of Troy. ibid. Justice vendible. buy his peace, 428. His cowardise, 430. His 363 Joas, King of Ifrael, his triumphant entry into Jerusalem, 435. His errour, 436. His TEnites and Madianites of two forts, Job his sepulchre, 312. Who he was,

Jonas, the ftory of his Prophecy, Jonathan, his happy resolution,

Whence were his friends, Elihu and the Kethura, wife to Abraham, the maibid. ternal Ancestor of the Kenites, John, the Son of Levi, his commotions Kingdom gained by an Asses loss, Kingdom of Argos translated to Mycx-268 Kings made by God and Laws Divine; 368 Iones and Medes, from whom descendby humane Laws only so declared. ed, 110. Iones expelled Peloponnesus,

Lactantius

	Marefa, the Native City of Michaes
L	1
T Actanting his indeamont of all Co	wargiæna, where Alexander fealted him
Actantius his judgement of the first	Jeij and his Army
- 0.1 -	Marus his Labyrinth, 484
Law among it the Romans, 161 Law humane defined, 226	Wears which the Greeks move four 1.
Law national defined, 227 Law abused grievously punished, 364	256
Law of Moles diversly taken, 218 Law-makers, no less beneficial to their Countries, than the greatest Conquerours,	death.
210
Laws, not imposed as a burthen, but a blef-	Ninus were one and the same person, answer-fing, 225	ed.
Lehabim, the Son of Mizraim, called	Merchants of Eden traded with the City
Hercules Lybius, 188	ly Tyre,
Letters among the Chinois long before ei-	Mercurius Trismegistus his writings, in ther Ægyptians or Phænicians, 91	Jome places (probably) corrupted 250 His Licentious disorder, proved (upon better	two last speeches, 251. His many books, tryal) no less perillous than an unindurable	252
bondage. 140	Merodach investeth himself in the King-
Lords of Thoron, whence denominated,	aom of Babylon,
Lucion his GanoCel communica Helica	Messene in Sicily, by what occasion so na-
Lucian his supposal concerning Helen, 355. His errand to Hell to speak with Ho-	mcd, 531
mor	Minæus and Menis, names or titles of
Ludim, the eldest son of Mizraim, first	dignity, 190
Progenitor of the Lybians in Africa. 331	Miriam her Sepulchre, 236
Lycurgus his Law, 214	Mock-Divinity, 160 Moloch described with his sacrifice, Lyda, (aftermard Diospolis) where S.Peter cured Aneas of the Palsie. 131	Mony, not used in Greece in Homer's time, 341
M	Monuments of Jupiter's Tomb in the
- Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - Carlon - C	Mount Jalius, remaining in Epiphanius his
Accabees Sepulchre, 269 Machanajim, where the Angels met	time, 70
Ly M Machanajim, where the Angels met	Mosal, or Mozal, anciently called Seleucia
Jacob for his defence, 308	Parthorum,
Macharus, a strong City and Castle, where John Baptista was beheaded,	Muscovians, from whence descended,
74 15 14 16 1 16 11	Their maging III
Magdalum, the habitation of Mary Mag-	Their wooing, 506 Moles Bar-cephas his opinion concerning the Tree of Knowledge, 52
Magick, according to Plato, 157. Im-	Moses did not number the generations before the Flood precifely, 59. His preservahelper in knowing the Divinity of Christ,	tion, 196. His birth-time, 207. His com-
ibid.	pass by the Rivers of Zared and Arnon, Mahometane Arabians descended of the	239. His mellage to Schon King of the Ifmaelites, 49	Amorites, ibid. His reason for not entring
Man, wherein he chiefly resembleth God, or	immediately into Judea, after his Victory may be called the shadow of God, 21	against Sehon, 241. His death, 242.
Manner of fight at the Trojan War,	Mountains and Rivers, formerly named
Manus thou Can J House or sound to Jan J	of the Ancient after their own names, or their
Many thousand fews overwhelmed in re- building the Temple under Julian Apostata,	Ancestors names: and the cause why, 116. Mountains of Paria, their length.
76	7. C TY
Many of the Species, which now feem	24 (
differing mouse at at the time of the governal	Mouje-magick, 164

Myris a great Lake in Egypt.

Naboth

Aboth, the eldeft Son of Ismael, Nabuchodonofor overthroweth Necho, 508. His peremptory mejlage to Jehojakim, ibid. His Conquest of Egypt, 509. He the Temple,

Nahas, a cruel King of the Ammonites,

Nebo, the Idol-Oracle of the Moubites,

Nectar and Ambrolia, alluding in the Poets to the Tree of Life,

Neftorians, part of their general Epiftle to the Pope .

Nimrod, feated in the confluence of those Rivers which matered Paradile, 43. The first founder of Ninive, 44. 103. His build-

Ninias, Son to Semiramis, an effeminate

Ninive formerly called Campfor. Ninus his time of Government, after the Flood, 123. The first notorious facrificer to

Noah his fundry appellations, 84. Analogically conferred with Janus, 109. A City of that name upon the banks of the Red Sea, He never came so far Westward as Babyion, 93. Is no more remembred in Scripture after his facrifice, and the cause, ibid. His children came not altogether to Shi-

Nobility in Parchment, Noema, or Naamath, the Sifter of Tubalcain, expounded by Saint Augustine, 68 ment, Numa his Law, his Grave, his Books,

Ak of Mambre. Obedience to Princes commanded not deaf at all, without distinction;

Occasion of obscurity in the Egyptian stories, 185. And of the Supplicatory Letters of the Nestorians to the Pope, in the His Army wherewith he pursued the Israegear, 1552.

Oceanus and Hesperus, Contemporaries with Moses,

Of the Mass, indigested matter, or Chaos, created in the beginning,

Offences punished without form of judge-

Ogyges Contemporary with Jacob, Olympiads, whence so called, One of the Pillars erected by Seth, the third from Adam, was by Josephus testimony to be seen in his dayes, Ophir, one of Joctans Sons, feated in the Moluceas in the East India. Opinions concerning the length of mans befregeth Tyre, ibid. He puts Jehojakim life, 61. And concerning Jupiter, the son to death, 540. He befiegeth Jerusalem, of Saturne and Ops, 69. And concerning ibid. And forceth it, 511. He destroyeth Moles his birth-time, 193. And concern-512 ing Nimrod, Oracles of Amphiaraus, Origen his Sepulchre.

Orofius his report of Pharaohs Chariot-

Orpheus his instruction to Musaus concerning God.

Orus the second, (or Busiris) Author of the Edict for drowning the Hebrew Chil-

Ofiris, the eldeft Son of Cham. Oyfters growing on Trees, 54

Activities his wife carriage with the Commons in Capua, Painters wives Island, Palm-trees, whereof the people do make Bread, Hony, Wine, Vinegar, and fine Flax, Paradife of Eden, truly taken for the proper name of a place, 28. By knowing the place whereof, we may better judge of the beginning, 40. A City of that name in Coelo-

Paternal Authority in transferring birth-Paternity and Eldership, the first Govern-

360 Patience wounded, 247 Pelafgus, King of Arcadia,

Pelufium, a great City upon the branch of Nilus, next Arabia , People in the Indies, near far greater water-falls than the Catadupæ of Nilus, are

507 Periander a cruel Tyrant, 304 Petra, the Native City of Ruth, Pharaoh his Sorcerers Froggs, Pharaoh his devilish policy, 195. 248 ground of his cruelty, Pharaoh Vaphres; Father in-law to Sa-

4 lomon, Pheron, Son to Sefostris, assumeth his ment , cause the offenders to seem innocent, Fathers name, 190. is strucken blind, ib-405 Recovered, philistims.

Philiftims destroyed with Thunder, 263. | the Red Sea. Their policy in not profecuting the Victory after Sauls death,

Philosophers ignorant in nature, and the wayes of her working,

found true, though fabuloufly exprest,

Phineus, and the Harpies, Phanicians navigation about Africk.

Phraortes, overthrown in his attempt of Phunon, sometime a principal City of the kept their treasures, Edomites, Phut, the third Son of Ham, first planted Egyptians, in Lybia, Piety punished, Pineda bis Miracle, Pison, fallly taken for Ganges; and Ge- thia.

hon, fallly for Nilus. Pilon and Tigris joyning under Apamia, retain one name of Pilo-Tigris, to this day,

Plato his differing from Moses in that place where God made answer by his Angel: Existens misst me ad vos, 73. His judgment concerning God; Pluto his Rape of Proferpina, Power severed from Picty, pernicious, 364 Pride, foolish and wretched, Princes ruling in divers parts of the world at the time of the Law given in Mount Si-

Probability that Nahor and Haran, did not persist in Idolatry, 175. And that Job lived in the time of Moses, 197. And that the Greeks lay not before Troy, the first nine with a discourse thereon.

His Fire,

Proteus, what he was probably, Pfammiticus, abandoned by his own followers and Country-men, 485. His long 289. Subverted by the Sons of Hircanus, slege of Azotus, ibidem. His provident ibid. Where Helisaus, Abdias, and John course to divert the Scythians from Egypt, the Baptist were buried, Ptolemæus Lathurus defeateth Alexander King of the Tews.

Pygmalion, King of Tyre, in whose time Dido Sailed into Africk, and built Car-

Pythagoras bis Eagle, 164. His golden precept.

Abba, where Urias was slain, 309 Rameses, a City in Gosen, from whence the Israelites made their first march towards

Ramesses or Ægyptus, under whom Mo-276 fes was born,

Reasons why the Jews omitted Circumci-11 Sion during their abode in the wilderness. Philostratus in vita Apollonii Tianai, And proving the Tyrians to have been Originally Idolaters, 255. And Reasons moving 337 the Ammonites to make War upon Jabes Gi-

> Recem, now called Crac and Mozera, a strong City, where the Soldanes of Egypt Red colour superstitionsly observed by the

> Reges Arabum & Saba, in Pfal. 72. ex-

479 pounded according to the Hebrew. Regions lying between Armenia and Scy-Reineccius his conceit of the names of Troes, Teucri, and Thraces.

Romulus his description, Ruth and Janus Contemporaries,

CAba, the son of Joctan, seated in India Saffa, the birth-City of Zebedeus, Alpheus, James, and John, Sages of Greece, in whose time they flourished. Saint George his Sepulchre, Saladine dishonourably repulsed, 268 He acquireth the Soveraignty of Egypt, Salomon anointed King, 385. His edu-356 cation, 391. His reasons for Adonijahs Prodigie, preceding the Flood of Ogyges: death, ibid. Wherein the chief excellency of 78 his wisdom consisted, 392. His Letter to Prometheus his Vulture moralized, 82. Hiram, ibid. The answer to it, 393. His 248 Garrisons, 395. His Ring dispossessed evil fbirits, 397. His frailty.

Samar a founded by Amri, or Homri,

Samaritans a perfidious Nation, Sanar, the first bringer of the Turks into

Saul, elected (probably) by lot, His disobedience, 369. His cruelty, 370. His end, and dishonour after his death, 371

School-men, all groß, in holding the 215 Countries under the Aguinoctial uninhabitable,

Scorners rewarded, Scriptures more ancient than all other An-309 tiquity, 102

Scultet his calculation. 465 Scythia Saga, or Sacæ, under the Moun-

T "Alus, destroyed by Medea, Tamberlain his Trophee of Victory Tanais and Volga, whence they truly

Table.
arise: with the vanity of the Riphæ, and Hyperboret Mountains, 95
Tantalus moralized,
Tarichia, a City, forced by Vespasian, 277 Taurus, whereon the Ark rested, 89
Taurus, whereon the Ark refted, 89
Taurus his stealth of Europa, 83 Telassar, inhabited by the Edenites, 39.
canea I muthe by Am, Marcellinus lame.
times a Garrison-Town against the Assyrians,
Teman, the City whence Eliphaz came to reason with Job, where situate, 287
Touchou of the language of the 1 enerifie in the Canaries, the highest Mountain known in the world,
Tereus his rape of Philomel. 228 Testimonies of the Ancients concerning Moles,
Tharfus in Cilicia, the native City of Saint Paul, founded by Tharfis the second Son of Javan.
That which feemeth most casual and subject to fortune, is yet disposed by the ordinance of God,
That the Flood made no such alteration as is generally received, The means that David grewrich by, 387
Thirst of Covetousness, 262
Thoughts, unlearchable to the Devil,
Three general opinions of Paradile. 20
Three things especially are the natural causes of a long and an healthful life, 6x Three causes why Moses forbare to conduct the Israelites thereon Arabia, 202
Thura and Sephora, famous Midwives, 196 Thulis an Egyptian King, of whom strange matters are reported, 477
Thuoris, supposed to be Proteus, ibid.
Thuras the first Mars, 152 Tiber, whence it took the name, 462
Tiberius restraineth humane sacrifices, 143 Tygris, separated from Danubius by the Sea of Hellespont and all Asia the less. It overflowed Ninive, 441
Time, wherein men might attain to be such as they ought, oft-times mis-spent in seeking to be such as they are not, 439
Tiras, Father of the Thracians, 113
Tohu opprest by Hadadezer, and succoured by David.
Token of liberty with the wicked, to despise the fervice of God, 427 Torniellus his pains to prove the Book of a Ormemus was pains to prove the book of

Judith Canonical,

Tostatus his opinion of Ophir,

Treachery rightly rewarded,

Traditional oblations.

137

141

490

Treason

381	1.
Treasure anciently used to be buryed with	dear
the dead, 388	V
Trees of Life and Knowledge, 52	the:
Tree of life how understood by the Hebrews	7
ibid.	when
Tree of knowledge, so called of the event,	7
	dang
Tribute denged, causeth Sennacherib to	V.
make war on Ezcchias, 467	U
Troy, when destroyed, 352	tera
Two forts of Kenites and Madianites, 209
Tmo Edm.	u
Tydeus bis quarrel with Polynices; and	Prief
	7
Tyranny of Saul towards Jonathan, 369.	28.
	Flood
Trust in worldly prosperity; how vain,	. 0
415	ciall
Tyrants are the last that hear of any mis-	. u
corej againjt ivem, 425	the P
Tyrannous dominion of the Seythians in Afia, 505
Tyre besieged by the Chaldwans, 509
Tyrrhenus, the first bringer of Vines into	M
France, 95	V
	blifbi
V	pire,
	Wa
7 Agabond, how to be understood, 57	break
Valour of the Cimmerians, 502	w
Valour of the Cimmerians, 502 Vanity of Homer, in description of the Vanity of Homer, in description of the	Wi Ships Wi
Vanity of Homer, in description of the	Ships W
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of supersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in va-	Ships
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Superstition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly.	Ships Wi called Wh
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Superstition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly.	Ships We called Wh ly to
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Jupershitton, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia,	Ships Who called Who ly to Ifrae
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Superstition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64	Ships We called Wh ly to Ifrae fon o
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178	Ships called Wh ly to Ifrae fion o
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178	Ships We called Wh ly to Ifrae fon o
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the Olymvanity of the	Ships Called White If to If the Whom Whom
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357. Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455	Ships called Wh ly to Ifrae fion o
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amaphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in law to Salomon, 478	Ships We called White ly to Ifraction of Whom
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, used in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of	Ships We called White to the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the state of the s
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vantty of the Greeks, yield in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354	Ships Wing called Wing ly to Ifract fion of whom Wing laam
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chrowologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354	Ships Wing called Wing ly to Ifract fron of whom Wing laam Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Wing Win
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amaphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian gamer, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasco de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497	Ships Walled Walled Walled If race fron o Walled Walled Walled Laam Walled tione
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasco de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden,	Ships W called Wk ly to Ifrac fion o W whon W laam W tione
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amnaphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasico de Gama, the first finder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden,	Ships Who called Who lift act from o who make the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the wor
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of hipershition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amaaphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Valee de Gama, the first finder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Varablus his opinion concerning Eden, 497	Ships W. called Wh ly to Usac Whon W whon W Laam W, tione W thoro W
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasco de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 498 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418	Ships Who called Who lift act from o who make the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the work of the wor
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of pipershition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chrowologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Case of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 40 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratinde of Jehu, 418 Virtue truly beroical, 434	Ships Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Walled Wal
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amaphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomou, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasico de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 498 Vengeance cast upon Urael for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Virtue truly heroical, 418 Virtue of Josias in his child-bood, 496	Ships Wing called William College William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William William Will
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of Inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasco de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 498 Vengeance cast upon Urael for the impraiting of John, 478 Virtue trust beroical, 434 Virtue of Josia in his child-hood, 495 Venetians, probably descended from the	Ships Vocallee Vice Vice Vice Vice Vice Vice Vice Vi
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Osympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vashee Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 456 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Virtue truly beroical, 434 Virtue of Josias in his child-bood, 495 Venetians, probably descended from the	Ships Wallec Wh Is to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vannty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Valco de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 498 Veneus his report of lapan, 359 Veneus his report of lapan, 91	Ships Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocallee Vocall
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of persistion, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Becanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Eecanus his Gigantomachia, 178 Vanyty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 470 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasco de Gama, the first sinder of the Case of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 470 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratinde of Jehu, 418 Virtue of Josas in his child-hood, 495 Venetians, probably descended from the Trojans, 359 Venetus his report of Japan, 359 Venetus his report of Japan, 359 Venetus his report of Japan, 359	Ships Wallec Wh Is to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a life to a
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vashee Gama, the first finder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 400 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Virtue of Josias in his child-hood, 495 Venetiums, probably desended from the Trojans, 549 Venetus his report of Japan, 91 Vistory of Jephta, energed by the Epphaimiter; and the issue the report of Japan, 91 Vistory of Jephta, energed by the Epphaimiter; and the issue the serverse.	Ships We called Wh. ly to Wh. ly to Ifrace for o W. whom W. laam W. tione W. takin, Wh. fiodu Heav. W. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. w. world w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w.
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of inpersition, 361 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 178 Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 178 Vanity of the Greeks, nsed in the Osympian games, 455 Vaphres Father-in-law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vasico de Gama, the first sinder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 498 Venetaus his opinion livael for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Virtue truly heroical, 418 Virtue of Josias in his child-bood, 495 Venetus his report of Japan, 91 Vistory of Jephta, energed by the Ephraimites; and the lisse thereof, 345 Vistory begetteth security, 380	Ships We called We ly to Ifract from o W whom W laam W tione W takin What field world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world world worl
Vanity of Homer, in description of the fight between Hector and Achilles, 357 Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of many great men of War in valuing themselves too highly. Vanity of Eccanus his Gigantomachia, 64 Vanity of Chronologers, in taking Amraphel for Nimrod, 178 Vanty of the Greeks, nsed in the Olympian games, 455 Vaphres Father in law to Salomon, 478 Variety of opinions concerning the rape of Helen, 354 Vashee Gama, the first finder of the Cape of good hope, 497 Vatablus his opinion concerning Eden, 400 Vengeance cast upon Israel for the ingratitude of Jehu, 418 Virtue of Josias in his child-hood, 495 Venetiums, probably desended from the Trojans, 549 Venetus his report of Japan, 91 Vistory of Jephta, energed by the Epphaimiter; and the issue the report of Japan, 91 Vistory of Jephta, energed by the Epphaimiter; and the issue the serverse.	Ships We called Wh. ly to Wh. ly to Ifrace for o W. whom W. laam W. tione W. takin, Wh. fiodu Heav. W. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. world w. w. world w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w. w.

Violence towards Parents punished with Virgils opinion touching the Original of the Trojans, Uncertainty of Authors, about the time when Homer lived, Unwarlike people bardened by custom of danger. Voluptuousness of Sardanapalus, Uriah his death, confidered with the flaughter done by Salomon upon his elder brother. Urim and Thummim of the Jewish riefts, Use to be made of praying toward the East, 28. Use of Letters found out before the Vies of the Atoral, Ceremonial, and Judiial Laws. Uzziah punished by God, for medling with he Priests Office, W Antonness of Atossa, 423 Weariness of the Romans in estalishing Rome for the Seat of the Em. War concluded upon uneven terms, eftfoons reaketh out with greater violence, Way attempted to be made for passage of hips from Nilus into the Red Sea, 497 West part of America, how it came to be alled Peru, What S. Paul may probably bethought chiefto intend, in the account of time from raels comming out of Egypt to the divion of the promised Land. What kind of Prophets they were, with phom Saul encountred and prophesyed, What year of the world David died in. What Cinxi they were, against whom Baaam prophefied, Josh. 19. 33. What kind of Kings those five were, menioned, Gen. 14. What part of the Red Sea Moses past What might be the cause of Jehosaphats iking his Son to be partner in his Kingdom, Whence the conceit of Orpheus and Heodus sprang, that Giants were the Sons of leaven and Earth. Whence the fable arose, of dividing the orld between the three Sons of Saturn, Whence the word (Slave) had its origi-

Ti iiii i

Where

The Table.

Where it was that Christ remained, whilest	Wisdom better than all worldly riches,
Joseph and Mary feared Herod, 195	392
Il bich Magog Ezechiel had reference to,
108	Counsel of God, 422
Which Havilah it is that Pilon compasseth,	Wife at home, and foolish abroad, 435
138
Which Belus was the more ancient, 150	Woman given to man for a Comforter, not
11 ho they were that first instituted the Ne	Warran mith I later 56
mean Games, 343 Who were supposed to be the first Inventors	Women, with Idolatry pervert Salomon, of Navigation, 105	Wonder of a Nation, 397
Wholesome severity rather desired than re-	Wondring at any thing in this world, is
miß liberty, 491	tolly, confidering the falls of the ment
Why the Eabylonians gave a Dove in their	Words of Image and Similitude, taken in Ensigns, 169	one and the self same sense by Saint Paul and Wickedness quickly planted, but not easily	Saint James, 18
rooted up again, 498	Worldly men, and their condition 26"
Wicked Instigators, 413	Worlds first written received Law. 216
William of Tyre his report, concerning	Worship done to Christ by the Magi. 120
the Egyptian Caliph, 473	\ VV reiched Vride
Wine and strong drink, prohibited to	refiters on the place of Paradile, divertly
teeming women, 360	conceived, 26

FINIS.

Alphabetical TABLE OF THE PRINCIPAL CONTENTS

Third, Fourth, and Fifth Books of the First Part

HISTORY of the WORLD.

Brocomas his cowardize, Arbaces, 534. His progeny, Acrocorinthus, a strong Citadel of Co- disloyalty, 632. His death, against the Romans.

Advantage of absolute Lords, above such Mother, as are served by Voluntaries.

Adversity is alwayes sure to hear of her er-Advisedness and rashness, through greedines of spoil 869. His encouragement to his Souldiers, exiled, 594. His friendship and good coun-871. His care to prevent the mischief, immi- selis rejected, 592. His death, nent through the head-strong conduct of his vain glorious Colleague, 873. Is flain in Macedon, his magnanimity and prudence, battel.

Ætolians ingratitude, 833. Their pride necks are galled with their voke.

self shortly after besieged by them, with the Greece, 648. His easie passage thorow the strange course he takes to raise the siege, ibid. Straights of Cilicia, 649. His many good His perfidy toward Ophellas, 787. His er- fortunes at once, 653. His answer to Darius

His wretched end.

Agefilaus his facrifice thrown down from 600 the Altar, 616. He deludeth Tiffaphernes, Achæmenes his affociation with ibid. He driveth Pharnabazus out of his 535 Camp, 617. He wasteth Bocotia, 620. His

Agis his great care for the good of Sparta, Adherbal his notable Victory at Sea unworthily recompensed with the lamentable 804 death of himself, his Mother, and Grand-

Alcetas his unhappy end, Alcibiades his cunning dealing with the rours, 812. It rectifies the understanding, 456 Spartan Embassadours, 588. Is forced to 766 banish himself, 589. And seeketh revenue Agira taken by surprize, and lost again upon his own Citizens, 590. He is revoked 989 from banishment, 591. His great favour Emylius Paulus his great circumspection, with Tislaphernes, ibid. Again unjustly

Alexander the Son of Amyntas King of Alexander M. chosen Captain General of abated, 589. Who being the first drawers of the the Greeks, 643. He winneth Thebes, 644. Romans into Greece, are the first whose His clemency to the race of Pindarus, 645. 502 His cruelty to his Mother-in-laws Kinfmen, Agathocles his degrees, whereby he obtain- ibid. His gracious dealing with the Cities of ed the Kingdom of Syracuse, 787. He over- his first Conquest in Asia, 647. His policy in throweth the Carthaginians, 785. Is him- sending the Persian Targets to the Cities of rour in not making timely peace with the his Letter after the Battel of Issus, ibid. He Carthaginians, ibid. His amazed flight in- releaseth Apollo,654. His Vision in Dio, ibid. to Sicil, ibid. His bloody nature, 788. His affectation of Deity, 655. His passage Iiiiiii 2; eruelty to a Colony of Greeks, 675. His ditions, munificence to Omphis, ibid. He lofeth Antigonus the younger, the Son of Defor Ephelions death, 679. His last dours, ibid. Is forced to abandon his Camp.

Alterations of time,

Altinius his Treason worthily punished, getting Acrocorinthus, konour of the War in Africk, out of Scipio's bands,

Ambition, malignant of others vertue, is a vile quality in a great Counsellor.

invadeth and wasteth Italy, 806. He re-fueth to Ptolomy for peace after his over-figneth his charge to Ocsoo, 809. His past throw to Raphi, 1031. He taketh Sardes, Jage over the River Bagradas, 821. His ibid. His expedition against the Parthians, first Victory over the Mercenaries, 822. His 1040. His passage to the Indians, ibid. He humanity to his prisoners, affrights the Cap- re-edifieth Lysimachia, 1044. His Embastains of the Mutiners, ibid. His notable en- fage to the Romans, 1046. His vain brags, trapping of the Rebels; and the terrible exe- 1058. His Ambassage to the Achaans, 1059. Tunes, ibid. Is made General in the Spanish utterly defeated by the Romans, Expedition, 828. His fingular virtue acknowledged by his most deadly enemies, ibid. 684. Is besieged in Lamia, ibid. He com-His death, Andronodorus his subtilty in resigning His qualities, his Protectorship, 923. His close dealing to attain the Soveraignty, 925. His death, 993. Happily discovered, ibid. His conspi-

Angra, a strong Fort. from Perdiccas, 689. Is made General of of his company, by a simple check from the the Macedonian Army, 694. His bar- King, ibid. And is imprisoned where he barous usage to the dead corps of Alcetas, dyes, 6.95. His reasons for not entring Macedon, 701. His politick surprize of Eumenes his carriages, 709. His subtle plot in betraying Eumenes, 710. His just pay- vour of the Mamertines, 764. He giveth an ment of the Traitors, 711. His prepara- overthrow unto the Carthaginians, over Tigris, 658. His answer to Davius tion against Ptolomy, 713. He enforceth bis Embaffadours, 660. The number of his Tyre, by famine, to render it felf, 714. His Army, 661. Hath Arbela, with a great journey into Phrygia, 716. He forceth Mals of treasure, reelded unto him, 662. Cassander to retire into Macedon, 717. His Waxeth contemptible among this followers, intent to marry with Cleopatra, Sifter 664. His happy temerity, 668. His stra- to Alexander, 726. His Fleet in great tagem to win the passage of a Rock, ibid. extremity, 731. His departure out of His groß affectation of flattery, 671. His Egypt, ibid. His vain oftentation, 733. His passage over the River Oxus, ibid. His unwonted sadness, 735. His end, and con-

most part of his Army, 678. His marri- metrius, is made King of Macedon, 751. age with Statira, ibid. His lamentation His fond oftentation to the Gauls Embaffa. ibid. ibid. Is forfaken of his own Souldiers 1001 and expelled his Kingdom, 753. He raifeth Alliance between Hannibal and the Cam- a new Army against Pyrrhus, ibid. And reobtaineth his Kingdom, ibid. His policy in Antigonus, furnamed Tutor, made Pro-Amasis his entry to the Kingdome of tector to Philip the Son of Demetrius, ibid, 530 His expedition into Achaia, 838. Is made Ambition making hafte to her own ruine, Captain General over the Achaans, and 860 their Confederates, ibid. He vanquish-Ambition of divers Confuls, to wrest the eth Cleomenes at Selasia, 841. His death, Antiochus the Great, marcheth against Molo, his Rebel, 1034. Wins the Victory by his name and presence, ibid. He winneth Amilcar, Father of the great Hannibal, Seleucia from the Egyptian, 1035. He cution done upon them, 825. He besiegeth He is driven out of Greece, 1062. And is Antipater fends to Craterus for Succour, ibid. eth to the aid of the Macedonian Camp, Amyntas (almost) expelled out of Mace- 686. His subtle dealing with the Greeks 622 in the treaty of peace, 687. He changeth Amyrtaus obtaineth the Kingdome of the government of Athens, ibid. He re-595 turneth with the King into Macedon, 694.

Apelles, his device to supplant Aratus, ibid. racy against the King, 994. His arrogancy, 803 and treachery towards the King, 996. He Antigonus the Great, his politick escape is dasht out of countenance, and forfaken

Apollo's Oracle concerning Cyrus, 520 Apollonides his treachery, App. Claudius arrives at Messana infa-

Apries, the King of Egypt put to death by , his Subjects. Apfus, or Aous, a great River in the

Straights of Epirus,

Aratus expelleth the Tyrant of Sicyon, rinth, ibid. Being led with private pafsion, he makes a bad bargain for his Country, 835. His violent opposition against the League with Cleomenes, 837. His obstinacy against all the gentle offers of Cleomenes, ibid. His many diffraces by Antigonus, 839. His revenge taken on Mantinea, the Syracufians, ibid. Their last Sea-fight ibid. Is overthrown by the Atolians, 987. He procureth Philip to invade Ato- whole Army lia, 995. By his good counsels he diverteth Philip from his practice upon Mellene, Carthaginians, 1002. And is afterwards poysoned by Philip,

Arcadians Embassie to Athens, and Sparta, Archimedes his strange Engines in defence of Syracuse, 929. His death and se-Argives at diffention among themselves, Argos, the name of an Altar in Greece,

Aridæus his weakness,

Aristagoras surprizeth the Persian Fleet, ibid. Is affifted by the Athenians, 554. He Surprizeth Sardes, and burneth it, ibid. Is overthrown by the Edonians, Aristides his integrity, Aristodemus bis fruitless flattery, Art of quarrel, 962 Art of Tyrants, Artabatus his bootless counsel, 558. He flyeth into Thrace, 569. Is together with his whole family put to death by exquisite torments,

Artabazus highly favoured by Alexander, for his fidelity to Darius, 666. And is made Governour of Bactria, Artaxerxes his vain oftentation, 602. His message to the Greeks, ibid. His base

Artemisia, her found advice to Xerxes,

Afdrubal, the Son of Amilcar, his strange flight towards Italy, 900. His terrible entry into Italy , 943. His main overfight, ibid. His death and commendations, Afdrubal the son of Gesco, is chosen General of the Carthaginians, 963. Is the building of the City and Temple of Jefired out of his Camp by Scipio, 965. And rusalem, 543. He marrieth his own Sisters, Syeth to Carthage, 966. He raiseth new 544. His cruelty to the dead, 547. His Forces, 967. And is put to flight by the attempt against the Temple of Jupiter Romans, Assembly of the Grecian Estates, upon the treaty of peace with Philip, Athenians constancy, 567. They fend a 796 Fleet into Egypt against the Persian, 576.

They enforce Agina to render upon most 831. And Surprizeth the Citadel of Co- base conditions, 578. They invade Samos, 579. And Subdue Mitylene, 582. Their rough answer to the Spartan Embassadours, 587. Their perverse obstinacy, 590. Their stratagem against Syracuse, 774. They besiege it, ibid. Their obstinacy in the War of Sicil, 775. Are beaten at Sea by in Sicil, 776. The miserable end of their

> Attilius M. his Victory by Sea, against the Aulis in Bocotia, a goodly Haven, 616

Abylon, the greatness thereof, Bagoas his malicious cruelty, Balthafar, not the Son, but the Grandchild of Nabuchodonosor, 520. Miserably 589 Slain by his own people. Bantius his easie nature, Barbarous resolution. 607 Battel of Metaurus. 945 Battel of Nadagara, 979 Battel of Magnefia, 1019 Benefit and Grace. 538 Benefits arifing from wrongs done, make not injustice the more excusable, Baotians re-enter their own Land, and recover their liberty, Bravery, of all qualities, is the least requilite unto Soveraign command, Britomarus, flain in single fight by Mar-Britons policy against the French. : 761 Brutus his over-great feverity, Burrough his waftage of the English tho-row the Straights of the Elfenour,

Alamities of War, in some cases rather enable than weaken Kingdomes

Calpas, a goodly Haven, Callinicus his bloody entry to the Kingdome of Asia: and his unfortunate reign, Cambyses his chief reason, in hindering ibid. Ammon, ibid. His dream, and the issue thereof, His death.

Camillus F. his integrity, 746. Unjustly banished, ibid. His notable service against the Gauls, Campanians submit to the Romans, 747 Captains unhappy, but happy Clerks.

causes of her destruction, ibid.

Carthaginians policy to separate the Syracusians from the Selinuntines, 777. Their facrifice to Saturne, with the event thereof, 787. Their woful oversight, 810. Their consternation, 967. They assail the Romans in the haven of Utica, 968. Their great joy upon a small occasion, ibid. Their dishonourable Embassage to Scipio, 971. Their impatience loseth them many helps, 974. Their bootless forrow, ibid. Their envy to the Barchines repayed with advantage.

Carthalo his fortunate success against the Romans

Cassander his secret conference with Antigonus, 696. His entry into Piræus, 699. He reduceth Athens to obedience, 700. He builds Cassandria, and re-edifies Thebes, 705. His politick dealing with Alexander the son of Polysperchon, 715. He vanquisheth Glaucias King of the Illyrians, ibid. He putteth Roxane and her Son to death. 724. His cruelty repayed on his own house,

C. Caffius his wife answer, Cato his general conclusion in Senate, 468. His condition.

Ceraunus repaireth to Seleucus, 742. His treachery against him, 743. His good success in Macedon and Thrace, 749. Perfidious love to his Sifter, ibid. His fooliff pride and miserable end.

Cctaphim, or Hagiographa of the Jews,

Charidemus his good counsel to Darius ill rewarded, Charls the Fifth, his advice to his Son

Philip, Choice ill made. 1102

Cimon, General of the Athenians, 574. He reduceth Phaselis to their Subjection, 575. He obtaineth two Victories in one day, ibid. He overthroweth the Phanicians Fleet, ibid. And is sent with a strong Navy, to take in the Isle of Cyprus, 576. His death, 578 Cincinnatus his noble expedition against the Volscians.

Cleadas his bootless perswasion, Cleander and his Complices, worthily re-

Camp, 603. His confident message to the sion, ibid. Contemns Sandanes his good Persian, ibid. His overmuch credulity and Cleomenes his Victory against Aratus, 825. He restoreth the ancient discipline of Lycurgus, ibid. His great spirit and good carriage in managing his affairs, ibid. His Care taken to avoid good admonition, 812 great Victory at Dymes, 836. His winning Carthage described, 762. The Special of Argos, 838. Is enforced to abandon Acrocorinthus, 839. His bold affront given to Antigonus, ibid. Is put to flight by Antigonus, and lovingly entertained by Ptolomy Euergetes, 840. His unfortunate end

> Clypea a Port-Town on Africk fide, 794. Cocles his admirable resolution, 745 Combates of divers kinds. Commodity of a retrait, is a great advancement to flat running away, Conditions of Truce between the Athenians and Lacedamonians, Concolitanus and Aneroestus, with a mighty Army of Gauls invaded the Romans, 845. But are overthrown, together with the greatest part of their forces,

Congruity of natures in a rare couple,

Conon his famous retrait, Conquest of revenge, what it is truly, 954 Consultation rightly Cretical, Contempt used against Princes, les pardenable thun ill deeds.

Contradictions in the Romish history about the Wars of the two Scipio's in Spain, 890 Convenience and inconvenience of an Army confifting of divers Nations and Lan-

Coriolanus his dangerous War against

Counsel prevaileth nothing, where opportunities are neglected, Courage not answerable to good will, Court-Wars,

Cowardize and courage strangely inter-Craft of the Romans in obscure covenants, Craterus his malice, He is sent back into Macedon, and made Lieutenant thereof, 679. He joyneth with Antipater, 686. His marriage with the Daughter of Antipater, 688. He reduceth the Ætolians unto hard terms, ibid. His over-much hafte to encounter Eumenes, 692. Is deceived in his expectation, ibid. His death, Cratippus Answer to Pompey, Croefus his cause of enmity with the 678 Medes, 534. His Pedigree, 537. His ma-Clearchus driveth the Persians out of their ny Conquests, ibid. His security and delucounsel, ibid. Flyeth to Sardes, 538. Is there tence, ibidem. He repelleth Pyrrhus, 741.

Cruelty in Lords, begetteth hatred in sub- passage over Lycus, anders arrival on the banks of Tanais, 672 rhus, out of Macedon and Epirus, Custom of conquered Nations, 168 Cyna, Mother to Euridice.

Cyneas, a principal Counsellor to Pyrrhus, 747. Is fent Embassadour to the Ro- dom by the Romans, and entertained by King overthroweth the Assprians, 534. His name observer of Philips humours, 1000. Is slain made reverend by his goodness, 536. His in attempting of Messene, policy in pursuing Cracsus, 538. His great Demosthenes his temerity corrected, 775. mercy, ibid. His War in Scythia, 539. His His good counsel rejected, 776. Is abanfege of Babylon, ibid. His forcible entry doned by Nicias , 777. And basely murinto it, 541. His Sepulchre and Epitaph, 542 thered, Cyrus Brother to Artaxerxes, his policy in levying Souldiers, 599. His unfortunate of Reason, valour.

the Tarquinii. Danger in constituting two Generals of contrary factions hope of future Victory.

Darius, the son of Hystaspes, his meffage to the Scythians , 550. Strangely an-fwered, ibid. His difficult escape, 551. His jealousie of Histiaus.

Darius Nothus Seizeth the Kingdom of Persia, 595. He recovereth all that his Father and Grandfather had loft in Asia, ibid. His death,

Darius his vain insolency, 645. His Army, and their condition, ibid. Is discomfited at Islus, 652. He offereth conditions of persons, peace to Alexander, 660. His retrait into Media, 661. His hard destiny still to follow the worst counsel, 665. His woful dejection, ibid. His last speech to Polystratus,

Deceit over-reacht by fraud, Decius Magius his constancy toward the fiege of Segesta,

Delay, the sharpest Enemy to an invading

Demetrius the Son of Antigonus the elder, his love to Eumenes, 711. His vain journey into Cilicia, 717. He taketh Cilles, with his Camp and Army, 720. His wantonneß well punisht, 727. He translateth Sicyon, | Spain, and calleth it Demetrias, 733. His hapless succes, 735. He obtaineth Cilicia, 737. His bal and Marcellus, gentle dealing with the ungrateful Athenians, 738. His weakness most apparent in ibid. Is bardly purfued by Agathocles, ibid. His

Demetrius the Son of Antigonus Gona-Curtius and Trogus mistaken in Alex- tas, expelleth Alexander the Son of Pyr-Decayed in virtue, after he became King, Demetrius Pharius, expelled his King-748 Philip, 900. He procureth Philip to make Cyrus his first military service, 530. He a league with Hannibal, 998. A cunning

Desire of rule belongeth to the nobler part Desperation derided by obdurateness, 1009

Dieneces his resolute answer. Dion, banisht for his good meaning, 781. He returneth with an Army, and entreth Amaratus, the paternal Ancestour of Syracuse, 782. Is again expelled, ibid. His death, with the revenge thereof, ibid. Dionyfius the elder, affireth to the Kingdom of Syracuse, 778. His revenge taken Danger at hand neglected, through vain on his revolted followers, ibid. Is excluded, and recovereth Syracuse, 779. His powerful Navy, ibid. His perfidious dealing with Himilco, patterned, 780. He sacketh Tauromentum, ibid. His fiege of Rhegium, ib. His death, and his condition, Dionyfius the younger, his barbarous cruelty, 781. His hard dealing against Dion, 782. Is expelled Syracuse, ib. He recovereth it again, ibid. He furrendreth the same to Timoleon .

Disease common to Frinces and private Diffention between Commanders, Doctrine of policy 122 Dreams sometimes too true, ibid.

Duilius his policy in fighting with the Carthaginian Gallies, 79%. He raiseth the Duty out of feafon.

Loquence dearly bought, 641 Emperour of Congo his Guard. 668 Emporiæ. a Town of great importance in Enterchange of Victory between Hanni-Envy of the Spartans, Epaminondas driveth his enemies from his most Greatness, 740, His unprincely sen- thei fortifications, 626. He invadeth Peloponnesus, ibid. His politick dealing with the Spartans and Mantineans, 629. His notable proweff, 631. His death,

Epicides his crafty dealing with the Leontines, 926, His costly feating of the Syracustans, Errour of mans judgement, in valuing things according to common opinion, 818 Erroises that are effectally to be avoided by a General.

Euergetes, and the cause of such his deno-

Eumenes is made Governour of Cappadocia, 685. His open dealing, 691. His policy in preventing Craterus, ibid. He kil- battel of Agincourt, leth Neoptolemus in single fight, ibid. His wildom in redeeming the love of his people, 693. The condition of his Army, 694. His admirable resolution, ibid. Is set at liberty Victory against the Carthaginians, ibid. His by Antigonus, 701. His Country and con- Dog dition, 702. His profitable use of a fained dream, 706. His paffage into Persia, ibid. ing the Carthaginian Army from Sicil to He fortifieth the Castle of Susa, ibid. His singular elexterity in ordering his Army, tiners, 810. Is detained prisoner by them. 707. His politick delusion of Antigonus, ibid. His provident circumspection, 708. His meer virtue the fole cause of his overthrow, ibid. His unfortunate end, 710

Eumenes King of Pergamus his policy to animate his Souldiers, 1105. He waxeth contemptible, 1106. His voyage to Rome to complain against Perseus, Euridice berincett and murder, Euridice her title to the Empire of Macedon after Alexanders death, 680. She calleth Cassander to ker succour, 703. Is abandoned by her own followers,

Expectation is alwayes tedious, when the event is of most importance,

867. His grave counsel to Amylius, with the Gauls, 861. His dealing with the Rohis answer thereunto, 871. His unanswer- mans after a trick of their own, 863. His able objection to Scipio, 890. His tryal of stratagem in passing the Hills of Collicula Tarentum, and by what means, 937. His his Souldiers, 873. His order in the mar-His opinion touching Hannibals departure 874. His intelligence in Nola, 884. His out of Italy, 975. He dyeth much about the fiege of Casiline, 885. His Army at Capua, Same time.

Fayal taken by the English,

Flaminius his costly jealousie, Flatterers the basest of slaves, Flattery beyond baseness, Flight is sometimes commendable. 858 Fons Solis of a strange Nature, 656 Fortitude is a diligent preserver of it self, Friends taken for enemies,

Friendship . Sought after a strange manner. Fruit of popular jealousie, 862 Fury of a multitude, 1024

Ades is yeelded to the Romans, I Gam's report to Henry 5. at the Gauls, their furious invalion of Rome, 46. Overthrown by Antigonus, Gelon, Prince of Syracuse, 771. His Gelco his provident course in transport-Carthage , 809. Is fent to pacifie the My-

God bereaveth a man of half his virtue that day, when he casteth him into bondage, 820 Greeks terrible to the Barbarians, 600 Gracehus his Victory at Beneventum, Gylippus cometh to the relief of Syracuse, 774. He wins the Athenians Fort, 775. He 636 taketh Nicias prisoner.

Annibal his great valour and wisdom, 1 850. His hereditary hatred against 777 the Romans, 853. His paffage over Rhodanus, 854. And over the Alps, 855. He vanquifbeth the Taurini, and forceth their Town, 857. His exemplary Rhetorick, 858. His Abius his advised temporizing, 865. politick dissimulation to the Gauls, 859. His He divideth the Legions with Minutius, taking of Clastidium, ibid. His peril amongst his Sons judgement, 913. His recovery of and Casiline, 865. His encouragement to envy at the growing virtue of Scipio, 959. Shalling of his Army at the battel of Canna, 976 not so effeminate as is supposed, 886. His Faith of the Petilians toward the Ro- bootless attempt upon Cuma, 908. The fear 901 of the Romans at his approach to their City, 801 919. He dislodgeth from before it, 920. His Fear pretended, where War is inten-over-much credulity, 936. His Victory 663 against Cn. Fulvius, ibid. His stratagem 862 against Fabius, discovered, 938. His poliibid. tick surprize of Marcellus, 940. His notable commendations, with an inscription of his Victories, 960. His speech at his departure from Italy, 975. He landeth at Leptis, and winneth many to his party, 976. His steech to Scipio upon their meeting in Africk, 978. His refolved dealing with a vain Oratour, 983. His ibid. Is taken by Timoleon, and put to laughing in a general calamity, 984. His death, escape from Carthage. His conference with the Romans. His free speech to Antiochus, 1067. His death, Hanno, Admiral of the Carthaginian Fleet, 806. Is intercepted and overthrown History, by Catulus, 807. He is a bitter enemy to Amilcar, 810. His ill conduct of the Carthaginian Army, 821. His malicious jests at Hannibals Victories, 887. His unjust accusation of Hannibal,

Hardiness is unworthy of the name of valour, which bath no regard of honesty or friendship,

Hermias his unreasonable counsel unto Antiochus.

Hermocrates his policy to detain the Athenians, 776. His unjust banishment and Feast of Purim, death,

Hieroms Woman-Cow, Hieron the elder chosen King of Syracuse, 764. His league with the Carthaginians for exterminating the Mamertines out of Sicil, ibid. His great overfight in encountring with Claudius, 766. He dislodgeth from bounty and honour conferred upon martial

Hieron the younger relieveth Carthage, 824. His wife forecast in relieving the Carthaginians and Romans, when they were oppressed. Hieronymus, the last King of Syracuse, his qualities, 922. His death, Himilco recovereth many Towns in Sicil, 779. He besiegeth Syracuse, ibid. His treacherous peace with Dionysius repayed driven to hard terms, ibid. Their vain overwith like perfidie, the Success thereof.

His Majesties prudence, and kingly power, 946. His justice, ibid. His great boun- punished. ty and honour conferred upon martial men, Histiaus his practices against the Persian, 554. His escape from Darius his Liente- Etolians, nants, and death,

Historians general affection, Hollanders passage by the mouth of the Duke of Parma's Cannon,

Honour without truft, 662. Honour that is acquired by detracting from others And is slain in fight against the Athenians, morth, seldome thriveth with the posses-commendations, 948. He raiseth an Altar,

1091 fians, Incoherences in the relation of the Roman Inequality of rigour, Infidelity finds no fure harbour.

Injuries newly received abolift the memory of old good turns, 1020 Infolency well rewarded, 795 Insolency of a mutinous Army, 810

Cetes his crafty dealing with the Corin-

He besiegeth them in the Castle of Syracuse,

Inarus, King of Lybia, hanged by the Per-

Impudence of Roman fallhood,

Inter-regnum among the Romans, and the nature thereof . 869 John Lord Talbot, and Æmylius Paulus

Jojachim the High Prieft instituteth the Isaurians desperate resolution,

Ing James his prudence, and kingly power, 956. His justice, ibid. His Knowledge, in a Commander, what his

Enemy ought to do, is a special means to prevent all hostile attempts,

Acedamonians, their patient valour, ___568. Their condition of life, 583. Are 780 weening, 584. They lose their old true Hippocrates his counterfeit Epistle, with friends for new false ones, 585. Their Em-927 baffie to Corinth, Landice her malicious revenge, worthily

> League between the Romans and Ætoli-League between the Lacedamonians and Lemnia, a Curtizan, her notable resolu-

Lentulus his speech to Amylius, at the 803 battel of Canna, with the Comment, Leonatus departeth out of Babylon, 682

> Leonidas his admirable promes. Leontius his quarrel with Aratus; and KKKKKKK the issue thereof, 996. He raiseth sedition stege of Nola, 885. His dishonourable adin the Army, 997. Being detected, is put vantage taken upon Cafiline, 912. He Leptines his great loss at Sea, Letters from the Carthaginians in Capua, directed to Hannibal, intercepted by the Romans, with the iffue thereof ,

Leutychides his successeful stratagem, 570 Liberty in counfel,

Liberty chained.

Lye: from what ground it is become for terrible a word, 953. Their conditions serve every ones fame and reputation, 955 that are most tender in taking it, ibid.

Lyers by Record, 954 Ligarians, their Nature and Condition. Loray-Law.

Love purchased by mild Governours without empairing a jot of Majesty, wife, and children.

Lycophron expelled Theffaly, Lycurgus buyes his election to the Kingdom of Sparta, 987. He expelleth his fellow-King, and establisheth his own tyranny, Lysimachus murdereth bis Son-in Law, 739. Is taken prisoner by the Thracians, 740. His City Lysimachia ruined by earthquake, and himfelf with his whole Family, shortly after extirpated, Achiavel his observation upon mer-cenary Souldiers, 815. His Lesson to Cafar Borgia.

Magnificence of the Plateans, Mago cometh to succour Icetes, 782. Abandons him through fear, and hangeth him-

Mago, the Brother of Hannibal, his joyful mellage of the Victory at Canna, 886. His departure from Gades towards Italy, 958. He winneth Genua, 459. He fighteth a battel with a Roman Proconful, wherein he receiveth his deaths wound, 974

Mamertines treachery to the Messenians, 763. Are besieged in Messena, 764. Their impudent request to the Romans, 765 Mandevile his Monument, Mandonius rebelleth against the Romans, 957. And being overthrown is gently pardoned.

998 taketh Leontium, 927. He besiegeth Sy-Leosthenes levieth an Army against the racule, 928. His profitable circumspection, Macedonians, 683. He overthroweth An- 630. His under-hand dealing against tipater, 684. Is flain at the fiege of La- the Syracustans, during treaty of peace. 686 932. His winning of Syracuse, 931. His 779 death.

Mardonius, General of Xerxes Army against the Greeks, 558. His fearful flat-921 tery, 566. His Embassage to Athens, ibid. He invadeth Attica, 567. He burneth 652 Athens, 568. Is flain with many thousand Persians, Marshal of England, his power to pre-Martius his miraculous Victories , proved idle dreams. 986, &c.

Martyrs. Malanifia proffereth his fervice to Scipio against the Carthaginians, 961. The cause of his revolt from them to the Romans, Lycidas, the woful end of himself, his ibid. He defeateth Hanno and his company, 963. He pursueth Syphax, 967. Is 639 restored to his Kingdom, 968. He leadeth Syphax bound unto Cirta, where he marrieth Sophonisba, 969. His heavie Message and Present unto her, ibid. Is highly magnified by the Romans, and proclaimed

Masistes and his wives unfortunate ends,

Matho his mutinous Oration against the Carthaginians, 811. Is chosen by the mutiners for one of their chief Captains, 812. His furious Sally upon the Carthaginians, 825. Is utterly defeated and taken priso-

Mazeus his tre scherous cowardize, 662. Megasthenes his report of Nabuchodo-

Meleager proclaimeth Aridaus King, 682. His plot against Perdiccas, is discovered, ibid. ibid. His death.

> Men that lye in wait for others, are feldom heedful of what may befull themselves. Menedemus and his Army overthrown by Spitamenes, > Menelaus his great indifcretion, 728. Is besteged in Salamis, 729. Is forced to yield up the Town and his Army, Metapontines and Thurines yield to Hannibal. Midias his detestable murther, Miltiades good service ill rewarded, 557 Minos his pursuit of Dædalus, Molo rebelleth against Antiochus, 1033. Manlius his Victory against the Sardini- Is forced to retire towards Media, 1034. 923 Opon advertisement returns, and by sur-Marcellus repelleth Hannibal from the prize overthroweth Xœnetas and his mhole Army, ibid. Is abandoned by his followers, and layeth hands on himself, 1034 founded. Murder by guile, Mufter of the Macedonians, with the ancient manner thereof.

Mutines his good service procures him en-His wrongful disgrace by the Carthaginians, lofeth them Sicil, Abis defeated by Philopoemen, 1052. And is flain by treachers of the Atolians . 1053

ward Darius, Nature mischievous,

Mercenaries in the Wars of the Netherlands

Neoptolemus his diffinulation with Eumenes, 691. Is Shamefully beaten, ibid. Nicanor timely put into Athens by Caf-

His Victory at Sea against Clitus, 700 Nicias abandoneth the Athenian Gallies, 776. Is entangled in his passage to Camerina, 777. Tecldeth himself, and is barbaroufly murdered, Nitocris a Magnificent Trinces.

Bservations of calestial bodies, the su-Frest marks of Time, 720 Observations in the change of Empires,

Offenders are alwayes afraid of their fel-

Office of the Roman Cenfors. Olympias, enemy to Antipater, 684. Is revoked into Maccdon, 696. Her inhumane | Antigonus, 707. His base retrait from the cruelty, 703. Is condemned unto death, Army. 709. Worthily rewarded for his 705. Her great Estate, and perverse condi- treachery to Eumenes, tions,

Orchards in the Air, 528 Orestes murdered by his Tutour Æropus,

Oftentation checked by unexpected neces-

Acuvius Calavius, an ambitious Noble man of Capua, 880. His politick course taken to oblige both the Senate and People of Capua unto him, Panick terrours

Panormus, now ealled Palermo, by whom

Papyrius his encouragement to the Romans against the Sammites, Parsimonie without thrift, 892 Paffion in extremity, 538 Patience of the Spaniards, Patience of waiting a convenient scason, 934 is of great importance for obtaining Victo-

Paulanias advanceth to Succour the Athemians, 568. He recovereth Bizantium from the Persians, 574. Is condemned as a Traitor, and dyeth in banishment, Perdiccas bis Nature and Quality, 681. Naburzanes his infolent behaviour to. His fond over-weening, ibid. He joyneth 664 with Leonatus, 682. His policy to entrap 532 Meleager, ibid. Is made the Kings Pro-Neeffity, and other reasons of imploying tellor, and Commander of his Forces, 683. He conquereth Cappadocia, 685. His un 816 fortunate paffage over Nilus, Persepolis burnt at the request of an Har. lot, 536. an opulent City,

Perseus is sent by his Father against the fander, 697. He Surprizeth Piræus, ibid. Dardanians, 1095. His timorous Nature, 1100. Is blamed by the Romans for reducing his rebellious subjects to obedience 1101. His Journey to Delphi, 1104, &c. A good Treasurer for the Romans, 1116, &c. ibid. Refolveth to fight with the Romans, 1125. Is 531 there overthrown, and the first that fled thence, 1127. He takes Sanchuary, 1128. His fond conceit in preserving his Treasures, ibid. Is conzened by Cretians, 1129. His base dejection before Æmylius, ibid. Is led Captive to Rome; where he dies miserably, Persians overthrown by their own policy. 571. Their barbarous cruelty towards their lows, if more innocent than themselves, prisoners, 663. Their slavish subjection,

> Petellia, a strong City in Italy, Peucestes affrighted at the approach of Phalanx of the Macedonians. Phalaris his just Tyranny, 771. His death.

Pharnabazus affifteth the Thracians against the Greeks, 612. He repelleth Age-924 filaus, 616. His politick dealing among the Greeks, 620. He marrieth one of Artaxerxes his Daughters, Pharnus and his feven Sons, 532 Phidippides his familiar Devil. Philadelphus the first of the Egyptian Kings that made league with the Romans.

Philetærus his fortunate mishap. Philip of Macedon is left for an Hoftage K & & & & & & 2

His worthy reprehension of Fabius the

His dishonourable departure from Alegalo-

Polyxenidas Surprizeth the Rhodian

Poyet, Chancellor to Francis the first,

Preferment acquired, by courting the mul-

Pride beaten with her own weapons , 883

of the 695

697

699

ibid.

926

Python

Polysperchon is made Protector

King and Empire of Macedon,

His cruelty to his old friend,

His Treachery unto his Soveraign,

His unthankful Nature,

And to his young Pupill,

Power of the Medes.

Porcius Cato his condition. Porus his manly answer to Alexander.

porthily punished for his falshood.

Prænestines honest resolution,

Their admirable patience,

Philip, King of Macedon, Son of De. Fleet. metrius, expelleth Attalus out of Opus, 905. his callant demeanour towards the Achaans his Confederates, ibid. his Embaf- 675. Is restored to his estate, with a great fige to the Romans, 906. is forced to quit enlargement, Atolia, for the defence of his own Countrey, 507. His Juccessfull expedition against the Eleans and Atolians, ibid. is forced to rife from before Palaa, by the Treason of one of his own Captains, 996. he wasteth Ætolia, and carryeth away a great booty, ibid. &c. he granteth peace to the Ætolians, 998. and enters into League with Hannibal, ibidem, His double hand dealing with the Nobility and Commons of Messene, 1000. Enemies. 1001. his odious dissimulation, 1006. his stratagem in the winning of Alexander, Prinassus, ibid. his unkilfulness or un-Philistus, a notable Parasite, 781. is taken and executed.

Philopremen his first military action, 1002. his great dexterity and sufficiency in War, ibid. he killeth Machanidas the Tyrant of Lacedemon, 1004 he was God. a bad Sea-man, 1059 his policy to over-compelled to fly for his life, 698 the Romans, with their answer, 747. His 688 Tyranny in Sicil, and departure thence, His Commendation. 623,&c. 750. He re-calls his forces out of Italy, Phyllides his Stratagem.

Pilistratus his divers changes of fortune, 752. his excuse for his dissembling with 552 Sparta, 753. His fatal surprize of Argos, 754 Polybius his impartial dealing, and punifit with contempt. Provisions of War, and absolute power of command, are of greater use in need, than By his unfult courses makes his Friends his the willing readiness of Friends, Plammones his gentle reprehension of Ptolomy Lagus his fubtile dealing, to apiness to retain old Friends, and his for- debar all claim to the Macedonian Empire, wardness in seeking new Enemies, 1007. 681. Is greatly beloved of the Egyptihe subdueth the Countrey of Athamania, ans, 689. He sideth with Antipater, ibid. 1071. his magnanimity construed by the His happy compassion, 693. He scowres Romans, as want of reverence to their the Sea with his Fleet, under the conduct of Estate; He is enforced to abandon divers Seleucus, 714. He subdueth Cyprus, 717. Towns by him conquered, with leave of the He surprizeth Gaza, and taketh Tyre and Romans, his cruelty towards the Maro- Sidon, 718. He retireth into Egypt, 721. 1089, &c. He obtaineth Sicyon and Corinth, 725. He growes jealous of his son Demetri- His politick course against Antigonus,731. us, 1098. whom he puts to death, his end, He besiegeth Salamis, 738. His Vertues, Ptolomy Euergetes, King of Egypt, who 782 taketh part with Cleomenes, Publicola his sincerity, Punick Faith Purpose intended by men, but disposed by Pyrrhus his hard beginning, 739. His throw Nabis, 1060, &c. his lamentable end, personal valour, 740. Is made Patron of 1091 the Athenians , 741. is for saken by the Phocion is made chief Ruler in Athens, Macedonians, 742. is called into Italy by 688. his just dealing; is deprived, and the Tarentines, 746. His offer of peace to Python employed against the Rebels in Their imperious answer to Antiochus Lis Afia, 685. Is deluded, and flain by Anti- Embaffadors, Mintius his quipping answer to Philip, 1018. his profitable observation, 1024 His check given to the infolent Ætolians, 1026. His triumph, 1054. His grief mix- parents over their children, ed with gladness, ibid. His peremptory command and power.

Easons moving the Romans to under-I take the war in Sicil, Rebellion of divers Provinces against the Perfians.

vain a thing it is. Retchlesness of the Campanes.

Regulus his encounter with a monstrous Serpent, He forceth Tunes, 795. His death, 796 Retreat in the head of an Enemies Army, how dangerous.

Rhodians recover Peraa from the Macedo-

Their stout message to Antiochus, 1043. are flighted by the Romans,

1050 dustry, 797. Their great loss by Sea, 798. by the people in his African voyage, against the liking of the Senate, 96c. He recovenick War, 808. Their answer in Se- reth Locri, 961. The politick use he made nate to one of Privernum, ibidem. Their of Syphax his Embassage, 962. He lan-policy to pick a quarrell, 829. Their deth in Africk, 963. The manner of his confederacy with the Saguntines, ibid. Their winter-Camp, 964. His firstageme to great forces at the time of Concolitanus fire the Camps of Syphax and Aldrubal, his invasion, 846. Their Embassage to 965. His fight with the Carthaginians Carthage, 852. Their precipitate affecti- in the Haven of Otica, 968. His diffike on, 869. Their magnanimity in the mid- taken at Masanissa his marriage with dest of their greatest troubles, 870. Their Sophonisba , 970. His Embassage to miscrable condition immediately after the the Carthaginians, 973. His courteous battel of Canna, 882. The hard shifts usage of the Carthaginian Embassadors, they were driven to, 883. Their policy in 977. His answer to Hannibal upon their upholding, in their several Provinces, the meeting in Africk,978, &c. Histriumphant greatness and reputation of such (and their return through Italy to Rome, 985. Is families) as had first subdued them to their enforced to abandon Rome, through the ma-Empire, ibid. &c. Their general affection to lice of the Tribnnes, 1085. His death, the good of the Common-weal, 937. Are abandoned by twelve of their own Colonies, 938. Their imaginary Prerogative, 971. Surprizeth Nicanors Camp, 719. &c. Their custome when they took a Town by He overthroweth Antigonus, 735, his assalt, 977. Their colourable thanks to marriage with Stratonica, 736. bis jeathe Athenians 1010. Their first use of Ele- louse of Demetrius , 742. his pretence phants in fight,

Their answer to the Embassadors of At- Short joy,

Their reasons not to be sorry for Hannibal's Rome nothing fo tyrannous as Carthage.

Rowing after a strange fashion, Roxane paged with her own coin, 269 Rule of the husband over the wife, and of

Rumours cast out of purpose, to give an hoibid. neft colour to the war against Philip. 1007

CAguntines fear of Hannibal, Saguntum recovered by the Romans 627 Saguntum found out in Athens, Rebels considence in the multitude, how Samnites and Hetrurians become Tributary 997 to Rome,

Sark, near Garnley, taken by the French, and again recovered, Scaliger his opinion concerning Naboni-dus, Scipio P. is sent Proconsul into Spain, 898. He winneth Carthage, 899. His victory against Hanno and Mago, 948. His wary use of his spanish friends, 949. He 1026 expelleth the Carthaginians out of the Continent of Spain, 952. His exempliry justice upon his mutinous Souldiers, 958. Romans, their admirable courage and in Is chosen Conful, ibidem. Is furthered

> Seleucus flyeth to Ptolomy, 712. he 1014 of quarrell against Lysimachus, ibid. his

1018,&c. | Sempronius recalled with his Army

Senones, a people of the Gauls, expelled out of their Country by the Romans,

Sicil, whence so named, slaves in Nature, though not in Law,

Sophonisba her tragical end, Spaniards (mothered to death,

Field against Amilear, 825. Is crucified Embassage to Lacedamon, 573. His planeibid. tree. before Tunis, Sphodrias his fond attempt upon the haven of Athens, Spitamenes murdered by his wife,

Spoil and riches, of most force with the common Souldier fully held a point of honour,

Stipenclaries of Tyrants, fight more conragiously than those of free Cities or States,

Cumæ,

Is enforced to retire to Apollonia, 1015 Sicil of all her Tyrants, Superstition of the Persians, 556 mans, 951. But afterwards sideth with conditions, ibid. His treacherous Embassage the Carthaginians against them, 962. He to the Grecian Army, 604. He burneth the bringeth aid to Carthage, 964. His retch. Country about the Greeks, 606. His cowarless manner of encamping, ibid. Is fired dize, 615. Is finally overtaken by his own thence by Scipio, 965. Is driven home into cunning, his own Kingdom, 967. He fighteth a battel with Malanisla and Lalius, wherein he Greeks, is taken prisoner, 969. His exclamation against Sophonisba, 970. And is sent pri-through the false accusation of a principal foner to Rome, Syraculians Petalifm, 772. Their unfortunate expedition against Ducetius, ibid. T. Quintius, 1021. And between the Ro-Their war with the Athenians, 773. They mans and Antiochus, lock up the Athenians Fleet in their Ha-

T

Anistry a Custom in Ireland, Navy,

Temerity of the Roman Consuls, Terentius Varro his base carriage of himfelf towwards the Campan Embassadours, Teuta, Queen of Illyria, her insolent handling the Roman Embassadours, 843. Is from his determined voyage into Africk for enforced to beg peace of the Romans, 847 Thanks ill bestowed but in may of policy,

Thebans fent Embassadours to Athens, 768 619. Their Army before Sparta, Thebes glad to be rid of her founder, 717 Themistocles his policy to alienate the Ionians from the Persians, 562, His sharp 668 answer to an unbeseeming taunt, 564. His Spendius, a principal Ring leader of the predominating virtue, 566. His policy to Carthaginian Mutiners, 811. He takes the rid Xerxes out of Greece, ibid. Is fent on

> Theocles his discovery of Sicil, Theramenesenforced to drink poylon, 597 Thimbro affifteth the Ionians against the Persian, 613. Is flain by Struthas Thrafybulus furprizeth Phila, 597. And Spoil divided before Victory gotten, 842 taketh Piræus, ibid. He taketh part with State of great spirit, but Small force, 615 the Thebans, 619. Recovereth Bizantium Stedfastness in taking revenge, is wrong- from the Lacedemonians, 620. And is slain 823 at Aspendus, Thrasybulus his just punishment. Tiberius his vain curiofity,

Timolcon is fent to the aid of Syracufe, Stratagem of the Capuans against those of 783. His stratagem to free himself from the 908 Carthaginian Gallies, ibid. He furprizeth 1007 | Icetes his Army, ibid. He demolisheth the Sulpitius the Roman Conful, invadeth Ma- Caftle of Syracuse, ibid. His great Victory cedon, 1010. Forceth Antipatria, 1012. over the Carthaginians, ibid. He freeth

Tiflaphernes his perfidious dealing with Syphax entreth into league with the Ro- Cyrus, 599. Becomes odious for his base

Tithraustes his wife course against the Treason obtruded upon guiltless persons, 972 conspirator.

Treaty between. Philip of Macedon and Trust reposed in known Traitors, well wor-775 thy to be betrayed,

Truth of good tydings many times not presently enquired, through the sudden joy a vain report.

Tyranny persecuted by its own power, 812. Teleutius Surprizeth the Athenian Properly defined, ibid. It is a distinct vice 622 from all others, 817. The true names thereof,

T Alour of small force without advised-Valour scorns to hunt after opinion, 956

The Table.

Vanity for a Prince to ingage himself in a business of a dangerous importance upon the promised assurance of a State meerly popular,

Varro T. his invective against Fabius, 867. His vain boafting, 869. His obstinacy against his Colleagues good counsel, 872. His manner of embattailing the Roman Army, 875. His chiefest wisdom intimely flight by the Romans.

Virtue unfortunately contemned, Virtue justly termed Heroical, Victory never friendless.

Victory to generous minds, is only an inducement to moderation. Victory beyond hope, upon [mall Towns or Forts, Ultica, a goodly City in Africk.

Water of Styx,

not moved with every rumour, Wisdom often taught by necessity, Wretchedness of Subjects, living under the government of a tyrannical City, Wrongs that are infolent, are most grievous, Antippus made General of the Car-A thaginians, 795. He vanquisheth the Romans , Xoenetas is fent with Forces by Antiochus, to suppress Molo, 1033 His politick passage over Tygris, 1034. But is made fruitless through his own folly

Xenophon his wife answer to the Embas-Vermina, the Son of Syphax, overthrown | Sadors of Tillaphernes, 605. His providence for safety of the Army, 606. He conducteth 585 the Army over the River Gentrites, ibid. 819 | He defeateth Teribazus, 607. His advised answer unto the Sinopian Embassadours 600. His speech to his Souldiers, 612. He ransacks Bithynia, Xerxes his barbarous ingratitude, 559. Violence of great Armies is often broken His resolution on awrong ground, 560. His 900 distraction, beholding the Greeks resolution, 561. He refuseth the counsel of Artemisia, and followeth worse, 565. His dishonourable Ant of mony finds many blind ex-return to Persia, 566. It fortunate against cuses, 882 the Fourtime Later of the second 883 the Egyptians, but not against the Greeks, 1007 572. His dishonourable peace with the Wisdom with the latest, 538. Wife men are Greeks, 575. His own Son executed for his 865 death, which was contrived by another, ibid.

> 814 Opyrus his dear love to Darius, 549 Zioberis, a very great River in Par-813 thia.

FINIS.